Shepharding the flock from the wolves

By Capt. Eric Venema

Chief of Staff, Joint Task Force Guantanamo

Capt. Eric Venema

I was recently reminded about a book titled "On Combat," by Lt. Col. TC Dave Grossman. In his book, Grossman introduces his theory of sheep, wolves and sheepdogs. It is a good analogy on life, and especially pertinent to our mission as Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, Airmen, and Coast Guardsmen. As Grossman states:

"Most people are sheep. They are kind, decent people who are not capable of hurting each other, except by accident or under extreme provocation.

"Then there are the wolves. The wolves feed on the sheep without mercy. There are evil men in this world and they are capable of evil deeds. The moment you forget that or pretend it is not so, you become a sheep. There is no safety in denial.

"Then there are sheepdogs. Sheepdogs live to protect the flock and confront the wolf.

"In nature, the sheep, real sheep, are born as sheep. Sheepdogs are born that way, and so are wolves. They didn't have a choice. But you are not a critter. As a human being, you can be whatever you want to be. It is a conscious, moral decision. If you want to be a sheep, then you can be a sheep and that is okay, but you must understand the price you pay if there is not a sheepdog there to protect you. If you want to be a wolf, you can be one, but the sheepdogs are going to hunt you down and you will never have rest, safety, trust or love. But if you want to be a sheepdog and walk the Warrior's path, then you must make a conscious and moral decision every day to dedicate, equip and prepare yourself to thrive in that toxic, corrosive moment when the wolf comes knocking at the door."

I'm proud serve with all you sheepdogs! Honor Bound!

Keeping in touch with family while deployed

By 1st. Sgt. Roland A. Ellis III

First Sergeant, 591st Military Police Co.

Military life can be tough, demanding and very rewarding. As Warriors we are often required to spend time away from our families and loved ones in order to meet training and deployment requirements. As such, it is imperative that we devise a way to stay connected with our loved ones while serving in this challenging and unique career.

My deployment to Guantanamo Bay this past June marked my fifth deployment, and second since returning from Afghanistan in September 2012. Deployments are part of military life. However, what sets this one apart is that it marks the first Christmas and anniversary I will spend away from my family since marrying in 2007.

1SG Roland Ellis

Careful planning, creativity, and maintaining a good sense of humor has been essential to making this deployment a smooth one.

Thanks to modern technology and the Internet, my wife and I have made it a point to FaceTime almost daily, if only for 10 to 15 minutes. If a picture speaks 1,000 words, then a FaceTime session speaks volumes. So far, I have been able to watch "live coverage" of the children's basketball games and the always intense Xbox Live sessions. We're never out of touch and this isn't the only available option as other possibilities are presented via Facebook and Gmail with their text, chat and video messaging capabilities. Many MWR/Liberty facilities and most company or unit offices have Internet capabilities that provide varying degrees of access to those in Cuba.

In our highly technical, 21st-century world, you don't have to be tech savvy in order to stay in touch, as phone calls and "snail mail" are valid alternatives.

Upon arrival to Guantanamo, our Soldiers were issued Moral PINs that facilitate phone calls to friends and family. For many, the two, 15 minute calls per week have done wonders for morale. There are several phone banks available and calling cards can be purchased at the NEX and Mini Marts. It's surprising just how much of an impact a phone call, card or letter can have on your family. Just think, a decade ago this was the only option available to forward deployed troops.

The "GTMO Experience" varies from person to person and there are a number of available resources. Your time away doesn't last forever and with a bit of creativity and drive, you and your family can remain connected whether this is your first or fifteenth trip away from home. Keeping in touch with your family makes the time away much smoother.

Story and photos by Sgt. David Bolton

In the hushed morning hours of Dec. 20, Soldiers of the 525th Military Police Battalion gathered in the parking lot of the Downtown Lyceum, decked to the halls in holiday regalia. With a mere five days before the arrival of Santa, the Soldiers donned red and green shirts, reindeer antlers, holiday lights, gifts and, of course, jingle bells on their running shoes for a battalion-wide holiday run. The run itself, little more than two miles, took the jolly joggers up to the U.S. Naval Station Commander's, Navy Capt. J.R. Nettleton, house and back down to the lyceum.

One Soldier, Army Staff Sgt. Michael Chesney, military police, 189th MP Co., went so far as to dress up in a box, wrapped in wrapping paper, for the Esprit De Corps run.

"I hope I have enough morale in this box for the troops. It doesn't start with Staff Sgt. Chesney, but it ends with the troops," said Chesney.

Chesney added the idea behind the box represented the presents that children will get this year. Others in the battalion also enjoyed the chance to wear more festive personal decorations for this bonding event.

"We all get to dress up and have unit cohesion," said Army 2nd Lt. Thelma Teal, personnel officer in charge, 525th MP Bn. Headquarters and Headquarters Company. "It's fun to do, especially here with no snow. It's good to celebrate."

As the Soldiers of the 525th neared the end point, family members joined their Service members to come across the finish line to sound of holiday songs played over the parking lot speakers. Once the battalion had formed up, the commander gave a few closing words of praise to her Warriors.

"Vigilant Warriors, you look awesome," said Army Lt. Col. Darcy Overbey, commander, 525th MP Bn. "Together, this Warrior spirit is what brings us back together and this is why we will always persevere, and accomplish the mission. I am so proud to be part of this organization, you truly are amazing." 🌟

Soldiers of the 525th Military Police Battalion assigned to Joint Task Force Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, line up for a battalion-wide jingle bell run at the Downtown Lyceum Dec. 20. All runners wore jingle bells on their shoes as they ran around the naval base.

OPSEC is a process

What is the 5-step process? First you identify what information is sensitive to you or your work, this is called critical information. Second you analyze the threat and third figure out how vulnerable your information is. If someone were to get your information, what is the risk involved? The fifth step is to emplace countermeasures. Countermeasures can range from shredding your important paperwork to changing your routine. It's easy to do and protects everyone. Use the OPSEC process both personally and professionally. It pays to be a hard target.

Choose a password that is hard to crack

When choosing a password, try to make it by writing a sentence that you can easily remember. For example: "Los Angeles Lakers will win the NBA tournament this year". Then pick up the first letters of each word and also add at the beginning or at the end (or at both parts) some special characters and numbers. For example, with the last sentence you could get the password: =3LALwvtNtty$. This method lets you come up with easy-to-remember passwords that are also hard to crack. And you avoid the need to write such a long password down in order to remember it.

"Anchorman 2," a legend laced with perfection

Review by Staff Sgt. Rebecca Wood

JTF-PAO, thewire@jtfgtmo.southcom.mil

I am a huge "Anchorman" fan. However, I still dreaded the day when "Anchorman 2" would hit the theater. But mark my words, moviegoers, I forgot something very important - Ron Burgundy is kind of a big deal!

This movie keeps the same structure and brings back many of the same unforgettable characters and inside jokes found in its predecessor. For you movie analyzers out there, there are still undertones of gender and race equality in this film which concentrate on the changes, whether good or bad, that took place in the news world in the 1980s.

Though this flick didn't have as many memorable moments as the first one, I feel I would be lynched by an angry mob of reporters with good hair if I didn't give this movie five banana rats. 🍌

Hustle in the holiday with con artists

Review by Sgt. Katherine Forbes

JTF-PAO, thewire@jtfgtmo.southcom.mil

I love a good movie about con artists. The connecting factor is that the world of lies relies on something real. Every con artist must have someone to trust with the actual truth.

If this trust is ruined, the whole game is up.

This hustle begins with a simple love story; Irving Rosenfeld (Christian Bale) meets Sydney Prosser (Amy Adams) at a pool party. Bale and Adams' chemistry is electric, which is necessary to convince us to root for them as partners in crime. They get entangled with Richie DiMaso (Bradley Cooper), an overly ambitious FBI agent. The question of how they get out of it, without going to jail, getting killed or abandoning their mutual trust, is what hooks you.

I was going to give this film four banana rats, but it hustled the fifth one out of me! 🍌

Award-winning acting in "Dallas"

Review by Sgt. Cody Stagner

JTF-PAO, thewire@jtfgtmo.southcom.mil

This biographical drama follows real-life struggles of Ron Woodroof (Matthew McConaughey), a drug-addicted bull rider who contracted the AIDS virus in the mid-1980s.

McConaughey and supporting actor, Jared Leto (Rayon) were barely recognizable, both actors lost more than 30 pounds to add to the blatant realism within their Oscar-worthy performances.

On the other hand, the film's pace is somewhat slow and its repetitive scenes showing drugs, sex and alcohol use could easily turn viewers' interest.

For method-acting at its finest, but an overall experience lacking a compelling storyline, I give this film three banana rats. 🍌

A punny walk with Dinos gets 2 rats, saves movie from extinction

Review by Sgt. 1st Class Gina Vaile-Nelson

Editor, thewire@jtfgtmo.southcom.mil

I knew what would happen when I went "Walking with Dinosaurs," (I did pass grade school).

Parents get killed off, young hero fights adversity to win the love of his life. But getting there was a little painful – enter the puns and immature jokes about poo, vomit and snot (for the kids ... of course).

They really saved the movie. It had a big budget to bring the CGI dinos to the big screen. I wish they'd have used some of that money on sound – there's nothing worse than listening to a dino "telepathically" talk, with no facial expressions to match the tone or the fact that they sound animated, yet look real.

BUT, if it gets kids interested in the prehistoric period, and interested in learning – then I guess it's mission success.

There were several kids there, but most of them seemed more interested in the poop and snot jokes than the dinos. For that, I give this movie two banana rats. 🍌

Troopers give back to GTMO kids

Story and photos by Spc. Lerone Simmons

Staff Writer, thewire@jftgtmo.southcom.mil

Most of us have been blessed with at least one toy during our childhood; whether it was a bicycle, Barbie doll, building blocks or sports equipment.

Troopers from Joint Task Force Guantanamo Bay, remembering their own feelings of Christmas past, stood outside the Naval Exchange atrium Dec. 19, and helped Santa distribute gifts.

"Many of us have children who are not here with us and this is our way to give back to GTMO's children community," said Navy Petty Officer 2nd Class Rigel Martinez, the admin leading petty officer, assigned to Joint Medical Group, and organizer of the event.

Many JTF units and Troopers donated the gifts for the children of GTMO.

Martinez is the father of a two-year-old and understands how important it is to bring everyone together to bring smiles to children's faces.

"It was a community effort, comprised of JTF GTMO Military Police Units, along with civilians that took about two months to collect all the toys, and two hours of gift wrapping to get to where we are," he said. "It's the All-American spirit – we do the best with what we have."

Andrew Teal, 3, with the assistance of his father Brian, shared his excitement about the toy drive.

"I am excited, I like seeing Santa," he said. He was very appreciative of his toy, saying "thank you," as he shook the box to guess what he received.

After a few shakes and several smiles, Andrew opted to open his gift once he was home.

"Seeing kids light up makes it feel good to give back," said Navy Lt. jg. Jaime Shurden, a registered nurse assigned to the JMG. "It helps bring cheer."

Shurden assisted with the organizing, wrapping, and distribution for the duration of the event.

"This allows everyone to come together, celebrate the holiday season and create life-long memories," she said.
