Legacy continues with focus

By Col James Moulton

407th Air Expeditionary Group Commander

Fellow Tuskegee Airmen, welcome to Ali Air Base, and welcome to the 407th Air Expeditionary Group. I wanted to take a quick minute to remind you of the legacy you are inheriting and the importance of the work you will be accomplishing over the coming months. The next few weeks and months will prove as fulfilling as they will be challenging, and I'm adamant that we set off on this journey on the right track.

The 407th is part of the 332nd Air Expeditionary Wing, headquartered at Balad Air Base. As I stressed at this week's Right Start briefings, the first airmen to fall under the banner of the 332nd were the Tuskegee Airmen of World War II fame. These proud warriors personified Air Force core values at a time when most airmen only dreamed of serving in an independent service. First, the original Tuskegee Airmen served the country during a period of tremendous inequality and discrimination. No one could have faulted them had they chosen to stay behind and forego placing themselves in harm's way on behalf of the United States. Yet these selfless men still stepped forward, serving this nation far better than the nation served them. There may not be a better example of 'service before self' in military history.

Secondly, the Tuskegee Airmen were not only valiant and noble warriors, they were also pretty darned good at what they did. The combat record of the 332nd throughout campaigns in North Africa and Europe is almost unfathomable: 11,000 sorties, 111 enemy aircraft shot down; zero bomber escort losses — at a time when combat attrition in the air most closely resembled World War I trench warfare in terms of casualties and attrition. In doing so, they earned the respect of a nation under the harshest conditions — combat! If you told one of the original Tuskegee Airmen that “Excellence in all we do” is a core value of today’s Air Force, he’d probably say, “Hmmm, so tell me something I didn’t know!”

As we set out to stake our claim in the legacy of the Tuskegee Airmen who went before us, I want everyone to remember that these core values, service before self and excellence, are more important than ever! Just as I said in our initial get-togethers, it's not negotiable. So let's set the right tone, roll our sleeves up (figuratively speaking), and get some momentum rolling for the AEF 3/4 team. I'm thrilled to have the opportunity to serve every one of you. Take care, and God Bless the United States.

Cherishing the Present—Making a Difference!

By Col Dave Orr

Former 407th Air Expeditionary Group Commander

AEF 1/2 Ali Warriors, Thank you for your service on the frontlines of freedom! You have proudly and steadfastly accomplished the mission of preserving our nation's freedom and sustaining a democratic Iraq. I cannot begin to express how grateful I am for your service; from the many young 1-stripe airmen who accepted the obligation of military service at a time of war, to the NCOs, SNCOs, and officers who carry on with fervor despite mounting family sacrifices from multiple deployments and finally our seasoned warriors (Chaplain Chuck Perry and MSgt Joe Collins) who served in Vietnam and demanded to be part of history in the 407 AEG!

Every member of the 407 AEG made a positive difference in securing our nation's liberties. Believe it, cherish the moment and recognize your role at this critical time in the Long War. You can probably recite my 'Past, Present, Future' speech but I want you to reflect on your time at Ali and live your life with its tenets in mind. Recognizing the Past is so important. It shapes our military character and allows us to understand our founding fathers' vision for freedom, who "swore eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man." It allows us to remember Americans in war

"who gave what it took" to ensure our freedom. The examples of courage, integrity, character and distinctive American spirit exemplified by our Medal of Honor winners and by extraordinary Airmen, Soldiers, Marines and Sailors in so many epic battles shaped today's military and our United States Air Force.

The Future we cannot control. Many had plans change during this deployment. We have no guarantee of what will happen tomorrow in our profession and in our lives. We all know that just a few days ago one of our squadron commander's returned home to honor his father's passing. He certainly did not expect that homecoming in concluding his tour of duty in Iraq. So we have the past that is done and cannot be changed and the future that is often out of our hands. Ali Airmen, it really comes down to today, the Present, a great Gift to cherish and gain fulfillment with zeal!

You can look back on AEF 1/2 with great pride and exhilaration, making a positive difference for your family, your Air Force, your Nation and future generations on this earth. Iraq is considered the epicenter in this Long War for freedom and you were directly in the middle. Your actions today shaped and sustained the world's desire to realize a democratic, free Iraq. Today, your expertise and discipline in accomplishing the 407 AEG mission made Ali/Adder a more effective base of operations. More importantly, your professional example was infectious and it made 10,000 Army and Coalition partners better military warriors and better human beings — that's making a far reaching, positive difference!

Believe me, your actions in the Present, today in Iraq, will be a grand source of reflection and have paved the way for a free and democratic Iraq.

Ali warriors, I cannot thank you enough for allowing me the honor of being your Commander. Observing you in action has been a source of tremendous fulfillment. I am rejuvenated in the American spirit, having watched both young and wise professional airmen from the 407 AEG showcase all that is good in our United States of America. I cannot wait for the bright future ahead, knowing that your actions and example today have ensured our freedom and happiness for tomorrow. Please accept my best wishes for continued health, success and fulfillment. I salute you, the military warriors of the 407 AEG, "First Among Equals"!

Col Dave Orr

What story will you tell?

By Lt Col Richard Converse

Former 407 AEG Deputy Commander

What a great Dining-in last Sunday night! From Fire Chief doing his best "Major Payne" impression to the barrage of water balloons and water cannons flying in the Big Top, it was a great opportunity for all of us to relax and just "let your hair down". For those of you that attended, I am sure it is an experience you will never forget.

During his speech that evening, Brigadier General Rand asked each of us to tell our story to our family, friends and co-workers when we get home. He gave several accomplishments of the 407th Air Expeditionary Group and the 332d Air Expeditionary Wing for you to use. Although I am not nearly as articulate as General Rand, I ask each of you what story will you tell?

As for me, I will tell everyone about our support in detaining the largest IED builder in Southern Iraq. Many of you probably didn't know this occurred during our rotation, but our team helped keep a very dangerous insurgent off the Iraqi highways and increased the safety of our Soldiers and Airmen driving convoys to and from Baghdad. Also, this same terrorist gave us very important information about planned attacks in the United States which aided in arresting several individuals in the US.

I will talk about the amazing Defenders we were very fortunate to have patrolling 260 square kilometers of battle space outside our gates for more than half our rotation. During their missions, our Defenders thwarted 7 rocket attacks against the base, reducing the possibility of injuries to more than 10,000 coalition personnel. I certainly don't thank them enough for their dedication and professionalism in defending us every day.

I will ensure everyone knows about the sensational emergency response teams that kept us safe. If you haven't heard, they responded to more than 400 requests for assistance during AEF 1/2. From the major Hospital fire at Camp Mittica, to the almost daily EOD calls to neutralize UXOs or IEDs, our team saved lives and prevented injuries for countless personnel.

I will tell my friends about the tireless efforts of our combat communicators who fixed the base Land Mobile Radio problems that had perplexed the prior two AEFs. Their efforts ensured the safety and security of our Defenders and OSI agents working outside the wire to defend us.

I will tell my family about the amazing vehicle operations and maintenance team who kept our Humvees, combat SUVs and cargo vehicles running. As a result, OSI and our Defenders ensured we had the intelligence we needed to confiscate several munitions and arrest multiple insurgents planning attacks against the base.

I will tell my co-workers about the Air Traffic Control and Ali Center teams that ensured the safety of more than 39,000 in-transit sorties, some of which I am sure delivered supplies and personnel that took out Mohammed Al-Zarqawi on 23 Jun 06.

I will tell everyone about the multitude of morale events our services team put together for us. From the Tops in Blue to the Dining-In this past weekend, every event was superb. In fact, the most fun I had during the AEF was at the Apollo night watching Col Orr and the Sandman dancing to close out the show.

But most of all, I will tell the story of the outstanding professional Airmen of AEF 1/2. Friendships made in combat are the strongest of all. Thank you for your service to our great country in preserving freedom around the globe and the sacrifices you made to ensure a democratic and free Iraq. God bless each of you.

“Women of Professional Concept” meet at Ali

By MSgt Ruby Zarzyczny

407 AEG public affairs

“Thoughts can take you anywhere you long to be” is the slogan for the newest professional organization at Ali. What started out as a simple notion, women meeting for fun and fellowship, has grown to become the Ali “Women of Professional Concept” professional organization.

The founders of this organization are SSgt Rebecca Woollard, 407 ECES fire fighter; SSgt Michelle Stocker, 407 ESVS services technician; and MSgt Deborah Marshall, 407 ECES first sergeant. They took an idea and formed the first women’s professional organization at Ali Base.

During a Focus 5-6 meeting, MSgt Marshall talked about the “Band of Brothers,” a group focused on men’s issues and asked if there was a similar women’s group. There was none.

“This meeting put the idea of forming a women’s group into my head,” SSgt Woollard said. “So, after a spinning class, I started talking to SSgt Stocker about starting a group. We decided we needed to put a group together for the women here that focused on support, trust, leadership and mentorship.”

Sergeants Woollard and Stocker continued to put their ideas together to form this group that they hoped would provide support to women for issues like: female camaraderie, sexual harassment, deployment life, stresses of work, family life and being away from home. They also hoped that the older (more mature) women could provide mentorship to the younger women. Their vision was to make this group a place where the women at Ali could talk freely to other women about personal issues and concerns unique to women that they might experience during the deployment. To make these ideas a reality, they knew they would need help, so they asked C MSgt Walter Lilley, 407 AEG/CEM for advice and counsel.

“We asked the Chief what he thought about our idea,” SSgt Woollard explained. “He thought it was a great idea and supported us in forming the group. We asked MSgt Marshall if she would like to join us in our venture so she could help mentor and guide us through the process of forming the group.”

After researching the other organizations on the base, SSgt Woollard and SSgt Stocker emailed flyers inviting the Ali women to meet at the Chapel Annex for their first meeting to drink coffee and talk. The informal group was originally called “Coffee Talk.”

“The “Coffee Talk” group met for the first time, and we decided to let the women who came to the meetings tell us where they wanted the group to go and what they wanted to get out of the group,” SSgt Woollard said. “During our meetings we talked about issues, the future of the group and then played games, watched movies and talked some more. We have also put together a humanitarian mission to support the Bediouns and orphanages in An Nasiriyah. We have collected school supplies, shoes, toys, clothing and toiletries. We have formed networks with other women on base who are able to facilitate our humanitarian mission."

For SSgt Woollard and other women in the group, being part of this group has given them many different kinds of experiences.

"When I first got here, everyone was doing their own thing," SSgt Woollard said. "And now with this group, I have many women I can go to for support."

"Forming this group has given me leadership and networking experience," SSgt Woollard said. "I have learned that it's not easy to try and get everyone together at one time or to decide what subject to talk about at the meeting."

TSgt Tina Harmon, passes out crayons to put inside bags of school supplies the "Women of Professional Concept" are assembling for orphans in An Nasiriyah.

"I like meeting with the other women to relax and enjoy conversations and discuss issues that uniquely affect women in a deployed environment," TSgt Schelaundye Owens said. "I like how we have come together to help change the "hearts and minds" through our humanitarian mission. It also gives me the opportunity to be a role model and mentor while enjoying personal interaction and fellowship with the other women at Ali."

"I enjoy it for the relaxed atmosphere," MSgt Martina Schmidt said. "We have fun just chit chatting but we are very dedicated with our humanitarian mission of providing needed supplies to local Bedouin families and the An Nasiriyah orphanages."

After several meetings the group decided to form a professional organization.

"We have formalized the group," SSgt Woollard said. "Chief Lilley provide guidance and the constitution for the group. We have a design for a t-wall that we will pass on to the next AEF group and SSgt Cidelia Hagan (407 AEG/CSA) is working to put together a website for the organization."

"We have formal meetings, we have officers, we take role, we talk about issues and after the issues are discussed we enjoy each others company and build relationships that will be the foundation for a healthy deployment."

The future for the "Women of Professional Concept" is to continue throughout the other AEF rotations in order to be part of the support system for women of Ali Base. Possibly, this will also prove to be an organization for Airmen that can also be adopted at other bases in the AOR and at home stations.

407 AEG holds Dining-In

By MSgt Ruby Zarzyczny

407 AEG public affairs

More than 300 Airmen and coalition forces attended the 407 AEG Combat Dining-In at the Big Top on Sep. 3.

Colonel Dave Orr, former 407 AEG Commander, was the president and Brig Gen Robin Rand, 332 AEW Commander was the guest speaker of the esprit de corps inspiring event of camaraderie.

The theme of the event was Combat Showers, and it was hosted by the Ali Top Three Association. Members from all Ali Professional Organizations helped bring the Combat Dining-In together.

The event started early in the evening at the Bedrock Pavilion that was decorated with a patriotic theme. The volunteers who served cocktails at the event dressed up and wore ascots while they served bottles of Gatorade like they were serving guests at a five-star restaurant. Outside the pavilion guests ran through an obstacle course while other guests tested their water weaponry and artillery (balloons) on them.

After cocktails were served, the guests transitioned to the Big Top where the rules of the grog and the mess were reviewed, then Col Orr opened the Mess.

After the meal and several Airmen made trips to the grog bowl, Brig Gen Rand gave a closing speech. He urged Airmen to learn the heritage of the "Tuskegee Airmen" and the accomplishments of the 407 AEG, so they could go home and tell their story of how they helped preserve a free Iraq.

AF's largest rescue squadron now in Iraq

By Senior Airman Kerry Solan-Johnson

332nd Air Expeditionary Wing Public Affairs

BALAD AIR BASE, Iraq — A one-of-a-kind operation in Iraq is now the largest unit of its type in the world, making the 64th Expeditionary Rescue Squadron the largest combat search and rescue unit since the Vietnam conflict.

The squadron bolstered their assets to accommodate an expanded mission, adding five additional HH-60G Pave Hawks to their inventory, which nearly tripled the squadron's number of aircraft. Crews, consisting of aircrew, pararescue and combat rescue officers known as the "Guardian Angels," grew in number from five to 12, and the squadron's manning doubled to support the mission.

Before the expansion, the 64 ERQS solely supported the combined Air Forces component; their business relied on the misfortune of downed aircrews. Now with added aircraft and crews, they provide combat search and rescue support to Special Operations Command Central, which plans special operations in Iraq.

What these additional missions mean to the squadron is a bigger role in combat while maintaining the current combat search and rescue capability.

The squadron is on high-alert status and operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Additional manning, however, means there are enough crews to pull day and night shifts, without pulling a crew out of bed, said Lt Col James McElhenney, 64 ERQS commander. "These crews mean we have the flexibility to support all of our customers," the colonel said.

The special operation forces-designated component of the 64 ERQS will allow for a faster response time as crews stage at forward areas to support SOF missions.

Staff Sgt Jason Parker, an aerial gunner with the squadron, believes the expansion is a force enabler for the 64 ERQS.

"The more people we have, the better," said Sergeant Parker, who is deployed from Nellis Air Force Base, Nev. "It means more work, but the extra help is better for flying and accomplishing the mission."

The integration of additional Airmen and aircraft took six weeks from the initial request of forces to their arrival at Balad Air Base.

"We worked closely with our home unit to determine what would meet the need," said Colonel McElhenney, who is deployed from Nellis Air Force Base, Nev. "It definitely takes the right combination of people and aircraft; you can't use one without the other."

The Air Force, designated by the Defense Department as the lead service for combat search and rescue missions, provides the Defense secretary's office with military planning options for personnel recovery.

Airmen from the 64 ERQS comprise the only CSAR unit in the country. They are a specialized field, made up of a small community of highly-trained professionals who save the people no one else can reach, Colonel McElhenney said.

"It's all part of our mission," said Maj Kyle Cowherd, 64 ERQS Pave Hawk pilot. "We come in the dark, alone and unafraid, to deliver life."

Why other Airmen think she's a warrior:

SSgt Messer is the epitome of what an NCO should be. Her constant dedication to the mission and all Airmen make her stand out above the rest. This is her fourth deployment in only six years.

Michelle constantly strives to improve her personal and professional growth by completing six CLEPS and recently being certified in L.I.N.E. combatives.

Why did you join the Air Force? I wanted to enjoy and protect the freedoms that Americans have.

What inspires you? My airmen

What is your most memorable Air Force experience? My first deployment to Masirah Island, Oman. It was a short notice deployment and we supported the PJs who were going into Afghanistan when Enduring Freedom first kicked off.
