Our Founding Fathers Pledged Their Lives, Fortunes, Honor for America

By Chaplain C. J. Griffin

And unto this end we mutually pledge our lives; our fortunes, and our sacred honor

These are the closing words of our Founding Fathers submitted on July 4, 1776 to his Majesty King George III of England as contained in our most treasured: Declaration of Independence.

right of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Inalienable simply means that no man may unjustly take these rights from man-kind, nor on the other hand may mankind ever divest it-self from these rights; for they are inherent in the very nature of all men everywhere.

The noble signers of the Declaration of Independence knew clearly the price which must at all times be paid by themselves and by those who would follow after them to preserve these rights.

And from the very core and sinew of their manhood they generously brought to the Altar of Freedom their most noble and precious possessions, namely, their very lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor.

Though one hundred and eighty-eight years have pass-ed since the ink was fresh on this precious document, those words must be ever fresh in our hearts and in the hearts of our children if their meaning and purpose will have life. On this our Nation's greatest holiday, truly a HOLY-DAY, may Almighty God give us the grace to renew In His presence, and mutually to one another, the sac-red pledge of our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.
