Credit Profitable When Used Wisely; Can Spread Like Fire If Uncontrolled

(A revised article reprinted from th STEWART SALUTE, U. S. Army, Ft. Stewart, Ga.)

Credit is somewhat like fire. Fire cooks food and heats homes and generates the force in factories. But fire also can destroy food homes and factories-if it is used unwisely.

Similarly, credit - if it is to be productive and profit-able — must be used rationally and with due regard to certain important guidelines. A nation-wide representative for the state regulated small loan companies, has for many years conducted an educational program designed to teach Americans how to use credit sensibly and safely.

To this end, it has developed a quiz which every person should be able to answer in order to manager his money better and use credit wisely. Here are some questions from the quiz: How much is it costing me to buy this item on credit? Consider two factors here. One, what is the difference between the cash price and the total amount you will pay if you buy it "on time"? The difference is the cost of credit.

Two, could you buy some-thing you like just as well at a lower price if you had the cash? Maybe a secondhand items would do you just as well.

I want to pay cash for a purchase. Should I borrow the money or take it from my savings account?

It will cost you to borrow the money. But remember, it will cost you'to take it from your savings account too. For one thing, you'll lose interest your money is earning in a savings account.

More importantly, you'll probably repay the money you borrow on schedule-but if you're like most people you won't repay your savings account nearly so faithfully. That "rainy day" fund will be gone.

What is a credit rating and how important is it? Your credit rating is a permanent record of how well you met your obligation to pay whenever you used credit. Like your employment record, it follows you wherever you go

It is important that your record be kept clean because it is available to potential credit grantors everytime you request credit from them.

If you have a bad record f paying your bills, this of will show up in your credit bating and could influence a credit grantor to refuse extend credit to you

When should i buy on Credit? Only when you're sure that you can handle the monthly credit payments— that is, in order to buy a product that will cost you "only $25 a month", mak sure that you have at least $25 left over from your monthly take-home pay after all other essential costs have been deducted.

If you don't have the $25 left over, don't buy. How can I tell how much credit I can safely carry?

The best way to tell- at all times — is by keeping to a planned budget of family income and expenditures What should I do if I get 'over my head'' in debt?

Don't hide from creditors. Go to each of them and tell them your problem. Work out with them a satisfactory payment plan. They'll be much happier than if you try to avoid themand so will you.

Love, Kindness, Good Will Only True Christmas Gifts

By Chapiain P. W. Power In these waiting days before Christmas, we look forward to a day of giving and receiving. Anxious minutes are spent in selecting the right gift, and patiently wondering what present we will receive. Yet Christmas happiness consists not so much in getting, but the giving of our love, our kindness, and our good-will toward others.

Genuine love on Christmas morning cannot be confined to a brightly-wrapped present, but to the all-embracing words of Charity and sweeping actions of graciousness.

To bring happiness these holidays may mean that we must take something away.

A sour attitude toward others, a coolness toward wife or children, a gnawing hostility toward our fellow Marines: all bave to be removed to find the unique joy on Christmas day. The message this Christmas will be and has always been: Glory to God in the highesi, and on earth peace to men of good-will. The promise will come, not only to those who worship, but also to those who show love and good-will toward their fellow man.

ment. The caddies were assigned to the golfers through a drawing held at the Royal Kaanapali Course prior to the beginning of play in the tournament.

LCpl. McElhaney drew the names for both of K-Bay's participants. He drew for himself first and produced the name of Salas. He then an-nounced that he was drawing for SSgt. Schott. Arnold Palmer was the next name to come out of the hat.

This was not the first try at caddying for either of the Marines. As a youngster, Sgt. Schott carried the clubs of many golfers including professional Billy Maxwell in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Sgt. Schott was a golfer before he became a caddy. He played his first round of golf at the age of 3. "The clubs were taller than I was," says Sgt. Schott. LCpl. McElhaney's first experience with golf came as a caddy on the Bois De Souix Country Club in Breckenridge, Minn. He played his first round of golf there at the age of 14.

Sgt. Schott is now a one handicapper while LCpl. Mc-Elhaney plays to a two handicap.

When they were notified that they had been selected as caddies, they received round-trip airline tickets to Maui. Their expenses were also paid with tournament funds. Each received $8.50 per day for caddying.

When asked what kind of helpful hints he passed on to Palmer, Sgt. Schott had this to say, "Palmer seldom asked to say, "Palmer seldom asked anyone for advice. He and Nicklaus discussed shots on many of the holes and he sometimes asked me about the pin placement, but he was pretty self-confident throughout the tournament." Sgt. Schott had coffee ev ery morning with Arnold Palmer. While relaxing they discussed the pin placement of the upcoming round. Sgt. Schott, who looks a bit like Jack Nicklaus, was mistaken for Nicklaus on several occasions. "Several times photographers wanted to take my picture on the first tee in the morn-ings," stated Sgt. Schott.

LCpl. McElhaney said he supplied Mr. Salas with quite a bit of information on the greens. "I would advise him on pin placement, how the greens slanted and how the ball would break on putts, said LCpl. McElhaney.

"During the tournament 1 learned one secret that I think will help my game," said LCpl. McElhaney. "This is one thing I an not going to tell to anyone but I'll use it in local competition."

Both men spent their eve-nings meeting world-famous golfers. They spent quite a bit of time with Canadians Al Balding and George Knudson and Carl Poulsen of Denmark. At the close of the tourna-ment they received cash bonuses from their pros. Along with money they also received golf balls.

Both agreed that, "It was a lot of hard work, but fun and very rewarding."

Christmas Mailing Deadline Announced by Post Office

Have you completed your Christmas mailing?

If not, your packages and letters may not reach their destination before the holiday.

According to WO W. K. Wilsmann, Station-Brigade Postal Officer, airmail letters addressed to the East Coast should be mailed today.

Airmail letters destined for the Central States should be posted not later than tomorrow, and for those enroute to West Coast areas, Tuesday is the deadline.

Parcels sent airmail, addressed to Central States must be mailed today to ensure delivery before Christmas.

However, airmail parcels addressed to West Coast addresses may be sent as late as Monday. Mr. Wilsmann recommends that Christmas cards be sent via First Class Mail, which enables the sender to enclose letters and include his return address.

Mr. Wilsmann also recommends that valuable packages be insured and letters containing money orders or checks be sent via registered mail.

Packages containing hard or fragile objects should be marked "hand stamp" to insure that neither the contents nor the machines used to stamp mail are damaged.

Mr. Wilsmann also points out that proper addressing of packages consists of complete addresses, and must be readable to facilitate speed in mail processing. Zip Codes should be used on both letters and packages.

The Zip Code for K-Bay residents is 96641. Kaneohe Zip Code is 96744 and Kailua Code is 96734.
