Wingless bird 'flies' for Brigade

Most people have seen the latest bumper sticker, "Fighter Pilots Do It Better." Now, with the new added attraction of the 2F55J Device (Weapons Systems Trainer) to 1st Marine Brigade's inventory, pilots should do it better than ever.

The new device, housed in two air-conditioned mobile vans, was officially accepted into the Brigade Jan. 15 at Station Training by Brigadier General George W. Smith, Commanding General, 1st MarBrig., after a presentation by John Cheney, Marine Corps Liaison Officer.

One van, an operational flight trailer, contains the flight computer, tactics and flight instructor stations and the trainee compartment, merging the pilot and radar intercept officer (RIO) cockpits. The second van, a tactics trailer, contains the tactics computer, a ground control intercept (GCI) station, and room for future expansion.

In keeping with the mission to provide maximum training capability at the lowest dollar cost, the fuel/misile modifications of the trainer were designed not only to better train the flight crews (pilot/RIO), but also to obtain increased training value through the added feature of enabling user activities to demonstrate proper operation of aircraft systems to flight line crews.

The pilot in Device 2F55J may be taught to perform his cockpit checks, engine starting, taxiing and takeoff procedures. Once "in the air" under simulation, the pilot "flies" the aircraft on a particular mission, during which various aircraft systems and equipment may be disabled or degraded by the instructor requiring the pilot to take appropriate corrective action.

A pilot and RIO may fly a mission as a team to seek and destroy a target thus using the full capability of the training device from pre-flight through flight crew coordination to weapon delivery procedures. This training develops the necessary expertise required of the three individuals to complete a successful mission.

Saving money was a big factor in the acquisition program. The modification program that added the device to the Corps' inventory saved about $3.6 million by not acquiring a brand-new trainer which would have cost $5 million.

Officially presented to the Brigade Jan. 15, the trainer is designed to save the Marine Corps a lot of money as well as train pilots and radar intercept officers in numerous emergency procedures in the F-4J Phantom aircraft. This is only the second such trainer in use by the Corps. The other unit is in Beaufort, S.C.

What types of things would you like to see more of in the Hawaii Marine?

CPL. VICKI BROWN
FORCE ENG., FMFPac

"I would like to see more articles about Camp Smith, although I realize that it can be quite limited. Also, I'd like to see a game section added, such as crossword puzzles, etc. As a final thought, how about male pinups?"

MGYSGT. SY HUGHES
MACS-2, SERVICES OFFICER

"I would like to see more personal interviews, such as the one with the Enlisted Club manager. Also, I would definitely like to see the return of the pinups. It's good for morale; plus, it gives a lovely young lady a chance for exposure. Before, when I picked up the Hawaii Marine, the pinup was the first thing my eyes focused on."

LCPL. DAVID BROWN
PSB, MECHANIC

"From my mechanic's point of view, I would like to see more ads from people who are junking old cars. I would also like to see pinups and stories about corporals and lance corporals and what they could do on weekends instead of what they are presently doing."

PVT. JOHN MILLER
COMM SUPPORT, WIREMAN

"I think it is alright as it is. I like the ads but they ought to put concert ads in the paper, so the Marines can find something to do out in town. They ought to tell about the sports in town, too."

SGT. DONNIE RAMSEY
VMFA-235, FLIGHT LINE

"I'd like to see what's happening now. I think it should be more widespread. Frankly, I would like to see a few words from the Commandant, like what he puts out in the Hotline. "The newspaper is supposed to tell me what is happening on this base since I read the last copy."

Chants cause complaints

It's inevitable, when a Marine dons his jock gear and sets his feet in a double time motion, his mouth is going to have something to say about it, whether it be good or bad.

This type of behavior is usually evidenced on the Air Station when companies or platoons make early morning runs and bellow out into the sleeping community sometimes spirited and colorful chants.

While some super jocks believe that yelling chants helps the cardiovascular and respiratory systems, and still others feel that it takes one's mind off running, thereby lessening the pain, it does nothing for the non-participating individual who is forced to learn of one certain lady who lives on a hill or her peer who is an Eskimo.

In fact, some residents of the Air Station AND Kaneohe town have been disturbed and offended to the point where they are phoning in complaints to the Military Police. The reactions might not be so heated if the incidents occurred during normal working hours instead of early morning when most residents are still asleep or in the process of facing another day.

While a platoon of Marines bellowing bawdy ballads make different impressions on different folks, there is one fellow who operates solo and has his own distinct brand of logic, you might call him the Lone Ranger.

His motto is "lick that three-mile run by cutting it off at the pass" or, more commonly, the neighbor's yard, through a hole in the fence or if nothing else, the inside of a curve.

He is sometimes recognized by the colors he bears; red running shorts over a pair of grey sweat pants, a yellow shirt and black socks wilted over his favorite pair of Adidas.

This spectacle of color becomes especially unattractive to the green-thumbed resident who sees the runner cruising across his well-manicured yard and leaping over his hedge. It seems that if the process is repeated enough, a trail is naturally formed and other runners get the same idea, thereby contributing to the problem.

Although not every Lone Ranger or Marine platoon exercises such questionable manners during their daily jaunts, a bit of common courtesy should be applied whenever anyone places their track shoes on property other than his own.

LOUD AND ROWDY, this runner is apparently unaware that his untasteful actions reflect upon other Marines.

OF imbalances released

WASHINGTON — The quarterly listing of grade and occupational field imbalances governing lateral movement through March has been released by HQMC.

Lateral movement assists the Corps in meeting grade requirements for all occupational fields, while improving promotion opportunity for individual Marines.

Essentially, career Marines serving in overpopulated fields must switch to an OF that is short when it comes time to reenlist. Full details are contained in MCO 1220.5C.

The quarterly listing, Marine Corps Bulletin 1220 of Dec. 8, 1975, also contains deficient MOSs, from which no lateral movement can be made regardless of the condition of the OF.

An OF is considered over when the career NCO population exceeds 105 per cent of authorization, by grade. It's balanced if the percentage is between 85 and 105, and short if under 85 per cent.

The following by rank are the deficient MOSs within the enlisted career force:

Prayer breakfasts scheduled at Camp Smith and KMCAS

Each year as January draws to a close, Government Officials in high positions pause for a moment of reflection. This pause has come to be called the National Prayer Breakfast and local observances are also held in conjunction with the National event.

The 1st Marine Brigade and Camp Smith will each sponsor a Prayer Breakfast Thursday at 7 p.m. in their respective Staff Noncommissioned Officers Clubs.

Brigadier General George W. Smith, commanding general, 1st Marine Brigade, will be the guest speaker at K-Bay while Colonel V.L. De Boever, commanding officer, Headquarters and Service

Buttalion, FMFPac, will speak at Camp Smith. Also included in the programs will be special music, prayers and, at K-Bay, a taped message by the Secretary of the Navy.

Attendance at the breakfasts will be by invitation and reservation only. Brigade personnel wishing to attend should call the Commanding General's Aide at 257-2591 and Station Marines should call Captain Daugherty at 257-3234.

The breakfast is founded on the idea that persons in positions of responsibility can meet together in prayer to rededicate themselves to the moral and spiritual values upon which our Nation was founded.

Rotations reexamined

WASHINGTON — The Marine Corps is taking a hard look at its forces in the Western Pacific with an eye on seeking means to increase combat readiness and shorten family separations.

Unit rotation had often been proposed as a means to accomplish this; however, basic imbalances in structure and size between the forces in the Western Pacific and the forces in the Continental United States and Hawaii, which could provide the supporting base, have prevented detailed planning. Recent decisions by the Commandant, however, have allowed a fresh approach.

Preliminary staff analysis has concluded that a six-month unit rotation system appears to be an attractive possibility. A Unit Rotation Analysis Group has been formally established at Headquarters Marine Corps to coordinate detailed assessment and planning, with six-month deployments serving as the focal point for the group.

The analysis group will be operating on a full time basis for the next several months to consider areas such as: units which can be rotated; the impact on total Marine Corps readiness; the best way of moving Marines into the units which will be rotated; and the method of transporting the units.

Should a system of unit rotation be approved, the Marine Corps anticipates total implementation will not be possible until after October 1977.

News summary

Aircraft expected

WASHINGTON — Four Naval fighter squadrons are scheduled to transition to the F-14 during the next year. This will bring the number of F-14 equipped squadrons to 12.

The decision to proceed with full-scale development of the F-18 was reached last month, with the first flight scheduled for 1979 and introduction into the Fleet expected in 1982.

Vertical/Short Takeoff and Landing (VSTOL) development continues. The first flight of the XV-F-12A (Thrust Augmented Wing Aircraft) is expected in September. The AV-8B for the Marine Corps is now scheduled for test and evaluation.

Tuition assistance

WASHINGTON — The tuition assistance program has been given the green light for Marine officers although it has been discontinued for Navy officers for the remainder of fiscal year 1976.

Marine officers who have served on active duty for more than 180 days are eligible for tuition assistance under the in-service provisions of the GI Bill. Individuals are encouraged to use this program to continue off-duty education.

Promotions

WASHINGTON — With retention at a favorable high and vacancies virtually nil among the top two pay grades, only one Marine will receive a "super grade" promotion and that will be to master gunnery sergeant. There are 14 promotions to sergeant major yet to be executed; five are awaiting the first sergeant's diamond; and 252 are on the list for master sergeant.

There is better news for gunnery sergeant selectees. A total of 758 will get the second rocker with a Jan. 1 date of rank. That will leave 1,440 on the selection list.

Elsewhere, a board to select sergeants for advancement to staff sergeant meets this month. The first promotions are expected to be made April 1.

Marine radio program

CAMP SMITH — The Marine Watch, featuring Sergeant Don Long, is a new radio program for Marines aired on KORL radio, 650 on the dial, which features news for and about Marines plus the latest in music. The show airs from 6 to 6:30 a.m. every Sunday.

The Marine Watch is the second radio show presented by Sgt. Long. He also hosts The Marine Showcase each Saturday afternoon from 3:30 to 4 p.m. on KNDD radio, 1270 on the dial.

License plates

K-BAY — The Provost Marshal's Office requests that all personnel who have vehicles registered aboard KMCAS advise them of their new Hawaii license plate numbers once they receive them. Individuals with mainland plates whose numbers will also change should also notify PMO at 257-2047.

MARS calls clarified

By Sgt. Ross Winkelmann

"M-M-C-Zero-H-M-K, this is M-M-C-Zero-K-G-A; we have a phone patch whenever you are ready," are the first words echoed over the intercom at the Military Affiliated Radio System (MARS) station here.

Staff Sergeants James P. Tacker and Henry J. Hugly of the MARS station perform a multitude of operations over the air to such places as California, Okinawa, Japan, Guam, Midway Island and other countries and states throughout the world.

The local MARS station provides Marine Corps-sponsored emergency communications on a local, national and international basis. They also provide auxiliary communications to military and civilian officials during times of disaster.

In addition to their regular mission and functions, MARS provides communications between service personnel and their friends and relatives.

Staff Sergeant Tacker explained that at the present time, an individual placing a call to the mainland will only be charged for a collect call from Granada Hills, Calif. There is, however, a three-minute time limit. For calls to an overseas area from a MARS station, there is no time limit.

"If a Marine would like to send an anniversary message to his parents or some other type of message to someone he knows, he can do this by using a MARSGRAM, which is actually a telegram," revealed SSgt. Hugly.

Marine Corps/Naval MARSGRAM are sent free of charge between military personnel and their families or friends throughout the world.

However, MARSGRAM cannot be sent to ships except in a very few cases which MARS station personnel will describe upon request.

The only restrictions on sending messages through the MARS system are that they must be in English, addressed to Active Duty or Retired military personnel and their dependents and must not pertain to legislative or military matters.

For further information about the MARS station contact SSgt. Hugly or SSgt. Tacker at the MARS station from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. or call 257-2797 or 257-2581.

For K-Bay family

Dirty diaper dilemma

By Sgt. Gordy Coe

A family of five isn't generally considered a large one, but when a family grows from two to five in three minutes as did one K-Bayite household, it is very unique.

Dec. 22, 1975, was a very thrilling and important day for Sergeant Federico Cortez and his wife Pat, when she gave birth to triplets, (two girls and a boy). The babies were born within a three minute time span with the first, Laura Christina, born at 12:23 a.m. and weighing three pounds two ounces. Second to be born at 12:25 and weighing exactly one pound more than Laura was Marcus Federico. Sixty seconds later Amy Marie, weighing three pounds fourteen ounces, was born ending the Cortez couple's long and frustrating wait.

During most of Mrs. Cortez's pregnancy, both parents were under the impression that she was going to have twins. Just two weeks before delivery she was taken to Tripler Army Hospital for X-rays to make sure that it was two babies or to find out if there were more than two. The X-rays revealed a third bundle.

"I just couldn't believe it," said the jubilant father. "You read about things happening like that with other people, but I never thought it would happen to us."

Since all the babies were under five pounds, a considerable amount of weight had to be gained before they could come home.

After a smooth recovery, Mrs. Cortez left the hospital and then had to wait four days to bring home the largest of the triplets. Another four days passed before a second child was ready to join the incomplete family at home. Finally, almost a month after the triplets were born, the family was complete as the last of the triplets joined the household.

The proud parents are both natives of Texas and have been married for three years. This was to be their first child but it turned out to be a bit more than that. Sgt. Cortez, with four and one half years in the Marine Corps, is presently attached to Marine Fighter Attack Squadron-212.

The chances of triplets are about one in 10,000 according to pediatricians, but according to Mrs. Cortez there were two more women waiting to deliver multiple births when she left the hospital.

Triplets were a great surprise to the Cortez family since neither husband nor wife had any past history of multiple births.

Navy Relief offers course; military life to be discussed

Annually, the Navy Relief Society conducts an information course dealing with a variety of subjects of interest to military families. It also covers aspects of the Navy Relief Society and what it has to offer.

This year the course will be conducted over a two-week period beginning Feb. 2 at the Family Services Auditorium (Bldg. 455) from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. each day. Subjects to be covered will include military pay and allowances, CHAMPUS, survivor benefits and the military in general.

The course offers an outstanding vehicle for drawing Navy and Marine Corps families together by providing wives the opportunity to learn more about the military way of life.

Registration for the course must be completed by Wednesday at the Navy Relief office in the Family Services Center (phone 254-1327 or 254-1328). Free baby-sitting services will be provided at the Child Care Center for those who attend. All wives are cordially invited to attend.

Captain's army odd lot

By SSgt. Margarette Chavez

Captain Jack Thompson has a model army. Within its ranks stand soldiers from a dozen different eras. Fierce warriors that are the height of military decorum. Bearing and dignity etched on their faces.

It would be difficult at best to select the most outstanding military man in the group. For unlike other armies where members are a diversified lot, Capt. Thompson's men are literally cast from the same mold.

"The modeler is the one who must give each figure its personality," explained Capt. Thompson, a skillful dioramist (scale model builder) assigned to Search and Rescue. "It's up to the modeler to change the pose, expression... The challenge is to make the figure unique."

Capt. Thompson's interest in building models started while he was in high school. At the time, he was primarily interested in railroads. However, he discovered that the hobby required a growing amount of space.

So shortly after reading a book about the Revolutionary War, he decided to try his hand at miniatures. He found that unlike trains and railroads, modeling offered him creativity plus mobility.

"They're so portable I've even taken them overseas," said the captain.

Besides his interest in models, Capt. Thompson shows a definite enthusiasm for military history. Half of the work he puts into his models involves researching units and battles for technical details.

To date he has made 30 military figures. A sizable amount considering the complexity of the subject and the amount of time it takes to film two weeks to a month working two evenings a week to complete a model.

Often he works on two or three figures at the same time. The reason being that as he paints one, he must let it dry before painting another.

According to Capt. Thompson, building models is a satisfying and relatively inexpensive hobby. A plastic kit, which includes a body and several limbs, runs about $1.98. The more expensive kits, metal castings, are still reasonable at $3 to $5.

Tools are also relatively inexpensive. The only implements really required are: a file, a sharp modeling knife, brushes and paints. Tools can all be purchased at the Station hobby retail store.

The Captain uses special paints, however, they're not necessary. But since he likes authenticity, he often buys German field gray, Polish crimson, etc.

"When you do it well, painting a figure is like painting a portrait in three dimensions," commented Capt. Thompson.

Perhaps the only difficulty with modeling is trying to keep from losing your temper. This hobby is only for patient folks. Since the figures measure 54 to 77 millimeters, about the size of a thumb, every stroke of the brush, every cut and every addition must be made with extreme care.

The one other prerequisite for the modeler is imagination. A modeler should locate a figure he likes then modify it to fit his idea.

"A friend of mine saw a Scottish highlander model. He thought the expression and stance of the figure would be perfect for his idea of an Apache. After he finished, to look at the Indian no one would have thought he was once a Scot," said Capt. Thompson.

Capt. Thompson feels he has no special talent. In fact, he calls his earlier efforts "crude." But as a winner of six Blue Ribbons, he has developed technique and style in working with miniatures. He thinks it would be an ideal hobby for the man in the barracks. And why not. Shouldn't every sergeant have a model platoon?

Marine varsity nails top spot

By Sgt. Bill Jack

The Hawaii Marines' basketball team closed out their season Jan. 16 with a 12-4 record, capturing top spot for military teams in the Hawaiian Armed Forces Senior Invitational Basketball League by defeating Brigham Young University of Hawaii, 103-87.

The team suffered two losses each to the Jolly Roger Pirates and Mikilua Gamecocks, two semi-professional civilian teams.

"From the beginning," explained Coach John Clendenin, "I knew we had the potential of being a strong club. We had a lot of raw talent to choose from to make up the team."

The team's high scorer of the season is Clide Roberson, who finished with a 29 point average per game, followed by the other half of the Marines' Back Court Duo, Norris Chappell with a 23 point game average. "I felt that Roberson and Chappell are the finest guards in the Corps," bragged Clendenin.

Considered to be the most progressive member of the team is Marlon Davis in the forward position. Davis has been praised as the key to success during the second half of the season. During the first half he averaged 17 rebounds per game and later succeeded in pulling down 20 rebounds per game with a 25 point average.

Tuesday night will set the stage for the league's All-Star game to be held at Hangar 103 starting at 7:30 p.m. The Hawaii Marines will field a 10-man team plus one player from each varsity service team in the league to play against their civilian counterparts. According to Coach Clendenin, the additional players, Junior Barnes, All-Air Force, Hickam; Mike Haruki, Barbers Point; and Ricardo Ogata, All-Army from Schofield Barracks, should provide the extra strength on the boards to give them a strong reserve bench to beat the civilians. "I will not predict a score for the game, but I'll be satisfied if we win by one point."

Coach Clendenin pointed out that one potential weak point in their game plan is the lack of support from the fans. True, the team has a small group of followers, but the fact is this, a winning team should bring out supporters "en masse." "There will not be any home advantage unless the team is supported by a mass turnout," Clendenin added.

2/3 wipes out Air Controllers, 62-35

By Sgt. Bill Jack

In the division two intramural basketball game played Tuesday night, the cagers from Second Battalion, Third Marines, stormed over Marine Air Control Squadron (MACS)-2 in a one-sided high scoring game.

Second Battalion jumped ahead, 7-2, in the first minutes of the contest. MACS-2 missed 10 field goal attempts before closing the gap to 7-6 in the waning minutes of the first quarter. In the second quarter, MACS-2 pulled themselves together and scooted past 2/3 to lead 16-11 before 2/3 realized what had happened. With less than five minutes left in the quarter half, 2/3 trailed 18-11 before they began their running attack to close the lead to 20-19 at the half.

According to Coach John Powell of the 2/3 team, the first half his team was sluggish and unable to effectively run and play the type of game he desired. A factor which affected all the teams playing that night was the rain leaking in through the ceiling onto the floor.

The second half got under way and Coach Powell's team returned to the floor hungry for the ball and more points on the scoreboard, within three minutes they leaped to a seven point lead and forced MACS-2 to play their type of game.

"We believe in a sound running game," explained Coach Powell. Along with a strong man to man defense, MACS-2 was held to 15 points scoring during the second half.

Once 2/3 established a 15 point lead, the starting five for the half retired to the bench and the real fun began. Larry Coates began hotdogging the ball as though it were an extension of his arm. Zipping in and around MACS-2 sagging defense, he put on an exciting and entertaining one-man show. It is impossible to explain what happened during the fourth quarter, except that 2/3 ran, scored and intimidated their opponents at random.

Forrest Baxter and Coates dropped in 17 and 14 points, respectively, to lead 2/3, while Paul Lyons and Napoleon Melton each scored 10 points for MACS-2.

GOING UP - PMO's Anthony (Bowlegs) Carr goes in to lay up one of his game high 19 points in PMO's 79-30 victory over Motor "T" Monday

Military Police scotch wheels for Motor T

By SSgt. Will Henson

Camp Smith's intramural basketball action saw a doubleheader Monday night with the Comm Raiders downing the Comm Comets 50-39, in the first game, and the Motor Transport, 79-30, in the second.

The first game between the two Comm teams proved to be an even match with the Raiders picking up their second victory against one defeat, and the Comets going down for their third defeat without a victory. The high scoring duo of Butler with 18 points for game scoring honors, and Baker with 15 points, to lead the Raiders.

At the start of the game Motor T attempted to surprise the PMO team with a deliberate ball control game, trying for the good percentage shot. Five minutes had passed in the first quarter when PMO called a time out to assess the situation.

After the time out, PMO came out in a trapping 2-1-2 zone defense that shut the door on Motor T. PMO streaked to an 11-4 first quarter advantage. As Motor T began committing turnovers in the second period, PMO caused more turnovers and stretched their lead to 21-6 with Anthony (Bowlegs) Carr leading the way with dazzling speed, stealing the ball and going in for on driving layups. Motor T called time to set up a defense in the hope of stopping a rout, but to no avail.

PMO jumped to a 33-11 halftime lead on the hot outside shooting of Frank Dunn, Keith Arnett and C. Ellis.

The second half started with Motor T awarded a free throw and the ball as a result of a technical foul called at the half. But the trio of Ellis, Carr and Houston scored 19 points, while the Motor T team could only pump in seven as third quarter action ended with PMO in command, 56-18. PMO's second string started the fourth quarter and dominated Motor T the rest of the way. Lynwood (Pink Panther) Johnson of Motor T was high scorer for his team with 12 points, while Carr led all scorers with 17 points for PMO.
