Gen. McLaughlin to retire soon

By MGySgt. Jack Butts

When John N. McLaughlin was offered an assignment to the Caribbean area for a "rest" 24 years ago, he turned it down flat.

Having spent the previous three years confined in a Chinese Prisoner of War Camp just South of the Yalu River, he had no time to waste.

In typical McLaughlin style he instead volunteered for duty at Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.

Today, with 36 years as an outstanding Marine under his belt, he heads the Marine Corps' largest field command, the Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, a post from which he will soon retire.

While on the rise from second lieutenant to lieutenant general in a career that spans three wars and a number of peacetime insurrections, the square-jawed McLaughlin has been both in the fore-front of Marine action and prominent in Marine dealings with other services.

It was while he served with the operations section of the Army's X Corps Headquarters in the Chosin Reservoir that the general, then a major, was captured by the Chinese Communist forces.

The same firm determination which characterizes his entire career made him a leader among the prisoners, and he was awarded the Legion of Merit for exceptional performance of duty while confined for nearly three years.

The prisoners could see Manchuria across the Yalu River, and although there was a reason for concern that their northward movement might breed a feeling of total isolation and subsequently harm morale, McLaughlin looked at it in another way. He contended that, "The other side of the coin is that supply lines would be shorter, and perhaps the food supply would be better for all prisoners."

His positive approach to what could have been a problem of monumental proportions reflects McLaughlin's common sense, fortitude, and leadership. These traits were developed early during his Georgia youth; forged, after graduation from Emory University in Officer's Candidate School in 1941; tempered in South Pacific Operations at Guadalcanal, New Guinea, New Britain and the Palau Islands; and ably demonstrated when he led his assault company ashore at Peleliu in September 1944. For the latter action he was awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action.

The general's particular brand of leadership was conspicuous in Vietnam. He was assistant division commander of the 1st Marine Division at Danang in 1968, and he directed Task Force X-Ray in its combat operations around Phu Bai in the Northern provinces during the Spring of that year. He remained in Vietnam through August 1969, and served a tour in the operations section of the Military Assistance Command at Saigon for which he was awarded a Distinguished Service Medal.

His career encompasses a gamut of assignments. He has commanded at every level from the platoon through the division, including a recruit depot. Additionally, he has served on joint staffs; as liaison officer to the Chief of Naval Operations; and, just before coming to Hawaii, as Chief of Staff at Headquarters Marine Corps, Washington, D.C.

As his well rounded career draws to a close on June 30, Lieutenant General McLaughlin firmly believes the Marine Corps' state of combat readiness is higher today than at any other point, in peacetime, in his 36 year tour. In his own words, "It has been enormously satisfying, particularly this last tour with FMFPac."

Although the General and Mrs. McLaughlin, the former Marilee Clark Hicks of Charlotte, N.C., have not yet decided where they will settle upon retirement, they do have definite plans to travel this summer. Their itinerary includes a leisurely tour of mainland areas previously visited, with stops to visit friends and relatives, and to play golf and tennis. A key stop on their journey is his home town, Savannah, Ga.

BUY U.S. SAVINGS BONDS

Bullwinkle

Lieutenant General John N. McLaughlin, commanding general, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, kicked off the 1977 Federal Savings Bond Campaign recently and urged all Marines to take part.

Marines have traditionally led the other services in percentage participation and Gen. McLaughlin voiced hopes that Marines in his command will do their share to attain a new high level of participation in this important program.

Gen. McLaughlin pointed out that buying bonds for a child's education is not only a good investment but also a smart one.

The General went on to explain, "When bonds are bought in a child's name (with a parent as beneficiary rather than co-owner), federal tax returns may be filed in the child's name the first year, listing the accrued interest as income. If the child's total income does not exceed his or her personal income tax exemption, no tax will be due."

"You can also wait to start filing returns until the child enters college and begins cashing bonds for expenses", he said. "As long as the accrued interest on the bonds cashed each year plus other income, does not exceed the exemption, no tax will be due."

Series E Bonds earn six per-cent interest compounded semi-annually when held to maturity. Furthermore, the interest earned on these bonds is free of state and local taxes.

No matter what your reasons, buying bonds is a good, sound investment in your future, as well as our country.

IN TIME OF NEED — Patty Diviney, a volunteer at the Navy Relief Office, places food items in a box for a needy family. The Navy Relief Food Closet is just one benefit the NRS has to take care of servicemen at K-Bay. You can help by supporting Navy Relief during their annual fund drive now underway.

Nurse needs urgent

The Navy Relief Society here will soon be unable to provide a valuable service to K-Bay personnel unless help arrives. Registered Nurses are needed to continue the volunteer nursing program on the windward side of the island. Two nurses are presently working but both will leave soon due to rotation.

Care given by volunteer nurses usually includes counselling new mothers at their home on proper care of newborn babies, regular checks on infants, visiting accident victims at home to change bandages or check on their condition and teaching classes on first aid procedures. A nurse usually works an area near her home but would still need an automobile.

Nursing care is only one service provided by volunteers at Navy Relief. Budget counselling is sometimes the most valuable assistance the Society can provide and it involves extensive time and effort.

This type of assistance helps the serviceman make a realistic pattern for the use of his funds. For instance, a young man may plan to get married and bring his bride to Hawaii and doesn't realize all the pitfalls. A budget will show whether or not the service couple can make it on his pay alone while living here. The Society feels this type of service will teach couples, regardless of rank, how to properly budget their money.

Lights on is the law

You won't win any economy metals for trying to squeeze the last bit of daylight driving out of the setting sun.

In that early evening twilight zone when it's not quite dark, you'll be much safer if you switch your lights on even if they don't help you to see or drive much better.

Consider the other driver. He may be able to see you better with your lights on than off against the faded background. An vice versa. Thus, the danger is minimized. It also happens to be the law. The law states that lights are to be turned on one-half hour after sunset.

Experienced drivers may be familiar with these techniques, but the younger driver has to be taught. For the best training for the teenage driver, enroll him or her in the driver education classes conducted at the Pearl Harbor Dependent Activity Center. For information, call Mrs. Riley at 471-0392.

MABS-24 gets new CO

Lieutenant Colonel P. McLaughlin will become commanding officer of Marine Air Base Squadron (MABS)-24 at 1:30 this afternoon on the MABS parade deck.

The former commanding officer, Major Wesley Birt, a lieutenant colonel selectee, goes on to work at the Marine Corps Development and Education Command in Quantico.

Prior to taking his new post with the squadron, LtCol. McLaughlin served here at K-Bay first as executive officer of 1st Battalion, Twelfth Marines and then as the G-3 (Operations) officer for the First Marine Brigade.

Hailing from Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, LtCol. McLaughlin was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1960 and commissioned a second lieutenant. After completion of The Basic School and the Artillery Officer's Orientation Course at Quantico, the colonel served with the First Bn., Twelfth Marines in the western Pacific. Returning stateside in 1962, LtCol. McLaughlin was assigned to Marine Barracks, Naval Air Station, Cecil Field, Fla., where he served as assistant guard officer, guard officer and subsequently as executive officer.

In December 1965, he was transferred to the 2d Marine Division where he served as Commanding Officer of Battery "L", 4th Bn., Tenth Marines and deployed to Vieques, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Ordered to Vietnam in 1967, LtCol. McLaughlin commanded Battery "C", 1st Bn., Eleventh Marines from May 1967 until April the following year.

The colonel served as Inspector-Instructor, Battery "H", 3d Bn., Fourteenth Marines from June 1968 to July 1971. He then attended the Marine Corps Command and Staff College at Quantico.

In August 1974 he was transferred to Officer Candidate School where he was the academics officer until March 1975 and the S-3 until leaving in May of 1976 for duty here with the First Marine Brigade.

Lieutenant Colonel McLaughlin's personal decorations include the Bronze Star Medal with Combat "V," the Combat Action Ribbon, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Bronze Star and the Vietnamese Staff Service Honor Medal First Class.

Bart Canada, junior assistant scoutmaster with Boy Scout Troop 225 here, received his Eagle Scout Award during a Court of Honor last week.

The presentation of Scouting's highest honor was the culmination of Bart's eight-year advancement through the Scout ranks. Bart earned 36 merit badges during his progress to Eagle Scout, and is a member of the Order of the Arrow and Leadership Corps.

He has also received numerous skill awards in various fields including conservation, physical fitness, first aid and citizenship.

Bart is attending Windward Community College, working toward a liberal arts degree. He is an avid outdoorsman, and includes camping, hiking, fishing and hunting among his hobbies. Bart is the son of Master Sergeant and Mrs. Ernest Canada who reside aboard the Air Station.

New Aliamanu housing opens

Major General Frank C. Lang and Sergeant Major Mike Mervosh represented the U.S. Marines in the opening of new quarters June 1 at Aliamanu.

Staff Sergeant Ronald Mitchell, from Camp Smith, and his wife, Yvonne, were the first Marine family to move into the new quarters.

The Aliamanu subdivision marks a first for military housing in Hawaii. Marine, Army and Navy families will live in the new housing with no attempt to segregate them into individual service quarters.

Aliamanu will consist of approximately 2,600 units when completed in 1979 at a cost of more than 100 million dollars.

All Marine requests for the new housing will go through their individual housing office. In most cases this will be Camp Smith.

All dwellings have color-coordinated appliances as well as drapes and smoke detectors.

There will be some two bedroom units but most have three and four bedrooms.

The Army will manage the site and provide security while the Navy's Public Works Center will be responsible for general maintenance.

Variety is not only the spice of life — but of hobbies as well. Colonel Vaughn De Boever, headquarters commandant at Camp Smith, has a hobby that is new to many but rapidly growing in popularity. Colonel De Boever collects dolls. This in itself is not so unusual, but he also repairs them.

With a collection numbering about fifty from around the world, the majority of his dolls came from the Orient.

As a young sergeant stationed in the Orient twenty-five years ago, the colonel developed an interest in dolls but was unable to collect any because as he put it, "We just didn't make enough money for any extras at that time."

In 1970, he and his wife, Dolores, were browsing in an antique shop in downtown San Francisco. Finding a little doll approximately fifty years old, they bought it and began the active collection of his rekindled love for dolls. Though classified as dolls, they present the appearance of little figurines to the uninitiated. The colonel's favorite is, not surprisingly, the little statue purchased in San Francisco with his wife more than seven years ago. Standing approximately six inches in height, the little farmer eating rice is made with such life-like qualities it's an experience just to view it.

When asked about his doll repairing, the colonel related an incident that happened to him about four years ago at Camp Pendleton, Calif. "A good friend of ours whose husband was also stationed at Camp Pendleton had her 150 piece doll collection broken when their household goods were moved," said the colonel. "Using toothpicks, pins and assorted household items to re-anchor feet, hands, and heads, I was able to reassemble the dolls using an Epoxy glue and wood-filler to round out their appearance," he said. "I then sanded and repainted them and their owner was quite pleased with the finished product. It gave me an ample amount of experience and a ton of confidence to tackle bigger and better things."

The colonel prizes his Hakata Dolls, a class uniquely oriental. He feels the workmanship has really declined in the past few years, with the pre WW-II dolls far exceeding the newer ones in value.

The colonel and his wife plan to travel extensively in the Orient after his retirement and collect information for a book he plans to write. The book will be on cataloging the 10,000 Hakata Dolls in existence, with chapters on how to repair and maintain them.

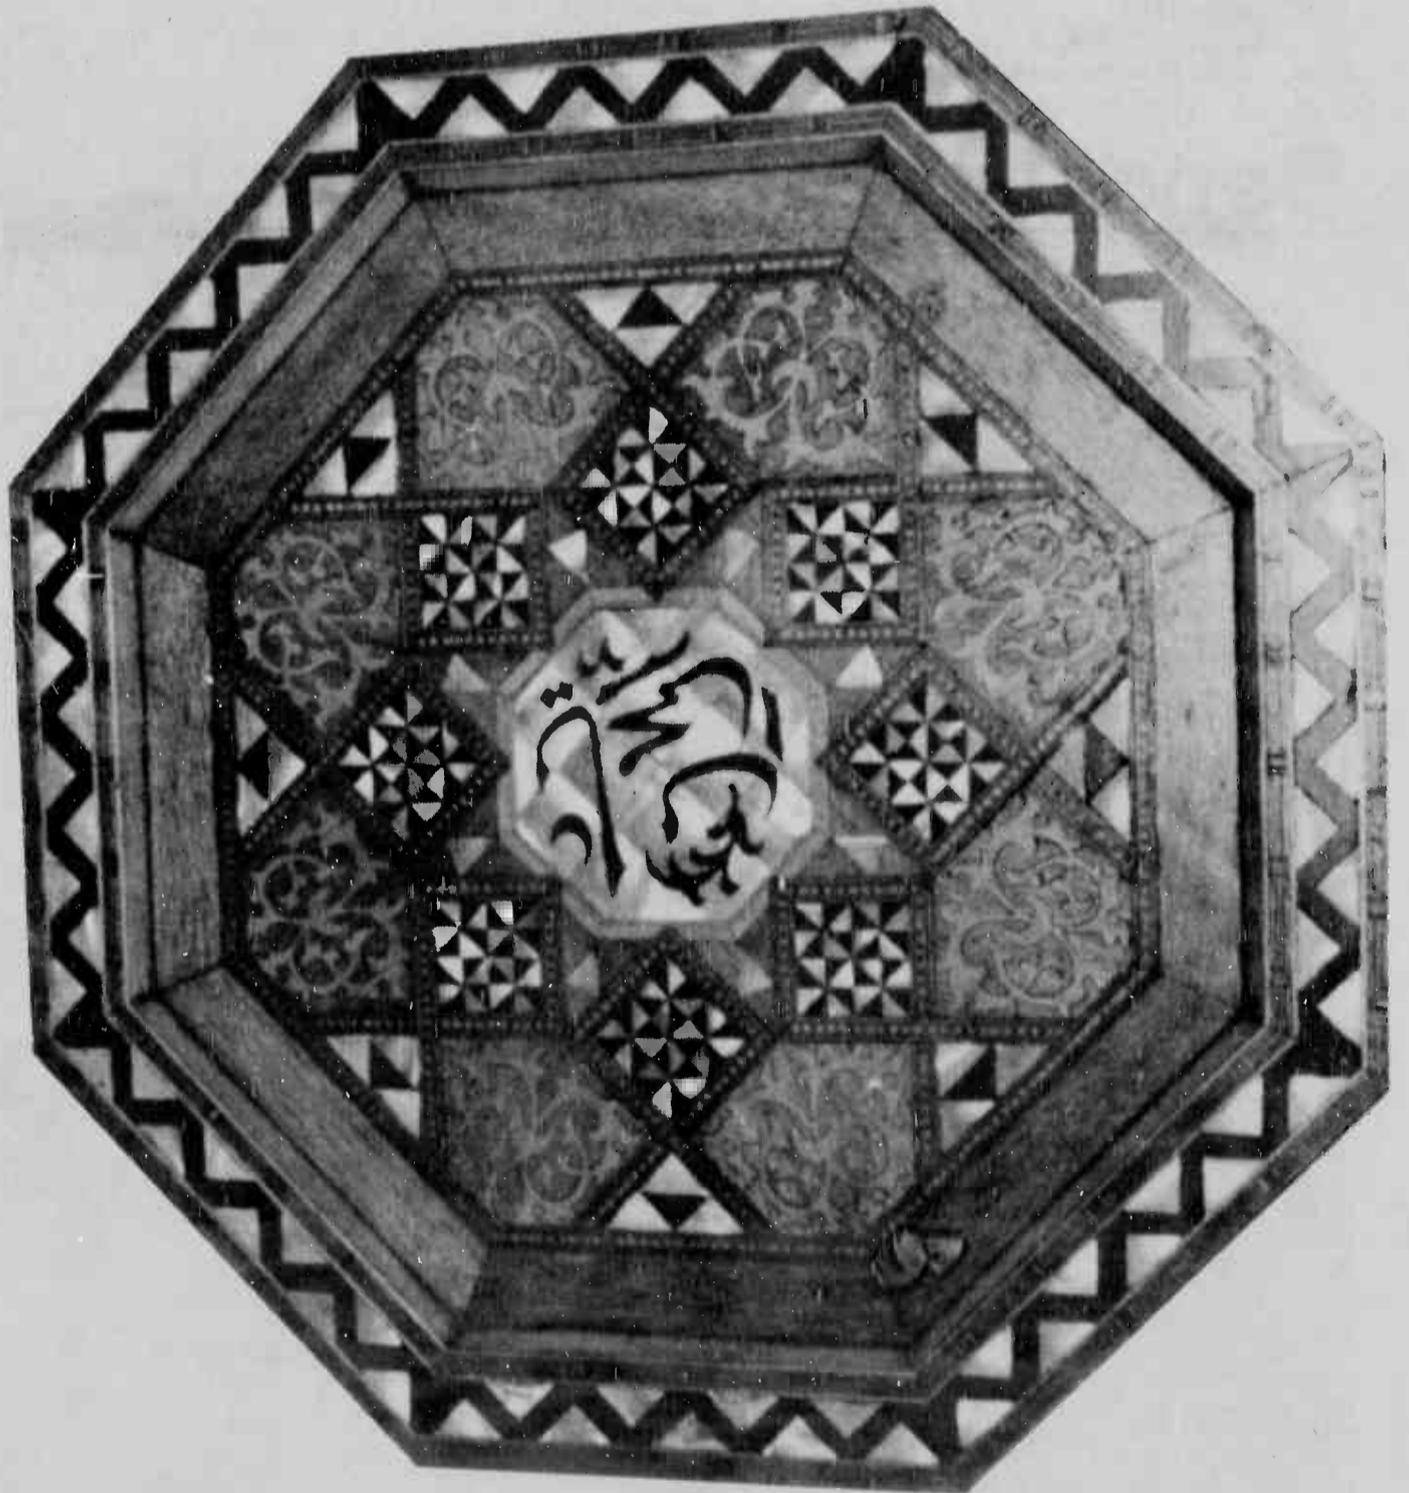

The colonel says a private collection of Hakata Dolls in Texas, which numbers in excess of 1,000, is probably the largest collection in the United States.

Col. De Boever urges anyone to contact him if they have broken dolls. He'll gladly assist with repairs.

The Hakata Doll is not a hobby just for the rich, Col. De Boever quickly points out. Many fine dolls may be purchased in swap meets or in antique shops around the islands or on the mainland.

Story by LCpl. Chuck Henry

Talk to most people about MARS and visions of little green men pop into their heads. But here at K-Bay, and throughout the world, MARS (the Military Affiliated Radio System) stands for something much closer to home.

Operating in Building 565 (behind the Station Communications Center), Staff Sergeant Hank Hugley and Sergeant Steve Murawski provide a vital link between servicemen and women throughout the Pacific.

Working in cooperation with a network of civilian "ham" radio operators on the Mainland, NNNOMHK, the radio station here sends personal messages from military personnel and dependents to friends and family back home free of charge. They can also arrange "radio-patched" telephone calls which help save you money on those long-distance bills.

How does a Marine, sailor or dependent go about taking advantage of this program? It's easy. Message forms and collection boxes for MARS-Grams are located in the Station Communications Center and at the pharmacy in the Kaneohe Branch Clinic. You simply fill out a form which contains the message along with address information and place it in the collection box. Once a day the boxes are emptied and the Marines of MARS radio the messages to a civilian "ham" station nearest the message's final destination. The ham operator will then phone the recipient and read them the message. If phone contact can't be made, the message goes into an envelope and is mailed immediately. Even if this happens, though, it will get where it's going much quicker than if it was mailed from here on the island. And the best part of all is that there is no cost to the sender.

Besides handling MARS-Grams, the station can help reduce your long-distance phone bill by radioing your call to the MARS station at El Toro, California. They will then telephone from there and you will only have to pay for a call from the California air station. That's quite a savings, especially for people from the West Coast.

And in case you're wondering, MARS is a two-way affair. Friends and relatives back home can send MARS-Grams or call via radio by simply getting in touch with the nearest "ham" radio club.

Most all the messages handled by MARS are of a personal nature. Phrases like "I love you," "I can't wait to get home," and "I really miss you and the kids," are the standard MARS fare. Sending messages like these and returning morale-building responses from home is what MARS is all about. Thousands are handled every year and the two K-Bay Marines in charge of the system here say they receive a "great amount of personal satisfaction" from their job.

Why don't you discover MARS? Make use of the MARS-Gram or talk to one of the Marines involved with the program about their phone-patch service. Just call them at 257-2586 or 257-2797. If anybody asks what you're doing, tell them you're calling MARS.

FINE TUNING — Staff Sergeant Hank Hugley (the "Man from MARS") adjusts some of the equipment used to relay messages to and from service personnel all over the Pacific. Thousands of messages are handled every year.

Kickers get revenge on Hong Kong

By Cpl. Gil Fulgencio

It was sweet revenge for the Kaneohe Bay Marines soccer team at Kapiolani Park Sunday morning. The Leathernecks advanced closer in their quest for the Challenge Cup by outplaying the Hong Kong Student Association 4-1.

Not only was this victory significant in respect to the tournament, but it gave K-Bay the opportunity to pay back Hong Kong for handing the Marines their first season loss. In that encounter the Leathernecks dropped a 4-3 heartbreaker. So when Sunday's game opened the Marines' performance let Hong Kong know they should never have won the first game, and weren't about to take this one.

K-Bay's offense exploded behind the accurate feet of their big guns, John Hatfield and Mike Riley. Hatfield was the first to display his scoring prowess ripping a shot past the Association's goalie midway into the first half. However Riley was the main entertainer of the day, putting on a scoring show that left Hong Kong wishing he had never shown up.

Riley's first goal came in the closing minutes of the half when he snagged a pass from Hatfield and slipped it in for the score.

What was Hong Kong doing while K-Bay "Bogarted" the show? They were trying to stop the green machine and score against the Marines' stonewall defense. But the Leatherneck's defense had other plans and when the half ended Hong Kong went to the sidelines trailing 2-0.

Since K-Bay was leading by two goals and doing a fine job of keeping that distance, their only problem was overconfidence. Well, when the second half opened the Marines didn't quite follow their halftime strategy as Hong Kong's Michael Ing outraced the K-Bay goalie and pushed in his team's only score.

This made the Leathernecks clean up their act. They came back with an aggressive offensive attack with Riley spearheading the assault. Taking a pass from teammate Art Gerow, Riley blasted in his second score.

However, Mike wasn't through yet. He wanted to make sure Hong Kong learned their lesson when he took another Gerow pass and fired in his final score, for sweet 4-1 revenge.

Sunday is another grudge match for the Leathernecks as they try to redeem themselves against Army at Kapiolani Park. Army teamed up with the Air Force to shut out the Marine/Navy all-stars 3-0, to capture the Team Hawaii Soccer Challenge Cup at Aloha Stadium May 13. The battle is at 1 p.m.

FOLLOW THE BOUNCING BALL — K-Bay Marine Ray Peretin (far left) finds he has to move quickly to trap the ascending ball as a Hong Kong player converges on him during the Leatherneck soccer match at Kapiolani Park Sunday. It's a physical battle for Marine Mike Riley (right) as he and a Hong Kong player try desperately to reach the ball first. Riley was the big gun for the Leathernecks drilling in three goals as K-Bay overpowered Hong Kong 4-1.

K-Bay slips past Army, 3-2

By Cpl. Gil Fulgencio

In any athletic confrontation between the Marines and the Army it has been more than just a game. It is always a battle for supremacy. If one were to ask who has the most victories the Marines would say they did and the Army likewise. But whether or not either side can come to an accurate conclusion, it is safe to say that the record is "close". And close it was again at the end of the Marines' victory over Schofield Barracks, 3-2, at the Station Gym June 3.

Before a crowd of about 900 the Leathernecks kept their unbeaten record intact in team martial arts competition.

It was the first time the teams had met in martial arts competition and the Army was the first to score a victory in the first of five matches. Schofield's Mike Fern found that his feet were the only way he could take Marine Paul Hittle. Hittle tagged Fern on a number of occasions but couldn't receive points for his blows since there had to be more than one judge to verify the point. At the end of the match Fern had kicked his way to a 4-1 win.

However, Leatherneck John Herod wasn't about to let Jorge Cooper get away easy. Herod came up with the first points in a double overtime sudden death period to defeat Cooper 4-3 in an important lightweight match.

Not everyone had to kick and punch their way to victory as Rich Takahashi scored a win for the Marines when his opponent was unable to compete.

Then the decisive point came in the middleweight match between Marine Wayne Thomas and Soldier Ernest Fraizier. After the first round the score was tied 1-1. But Thomas came back to take the match with a kick to the head.

With the Marine victory secured, Clarence Rasberry tried to give the Leathernecks some extra points but Wayne Williams had other ideas. Williams' strong leg techniques had Rasberry falling short of his goal, 2-1.

At the end of the competition the Marines had slipped past Army 3-2. But Army will try to even the score with the Leathernecks in a return match to be scheduled later at Schofield.
