

Maj. Gen. P.X. Kelley

Task force commander nominated

Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, announced December 27, 1979, that President Jimmy Carter has nominated Major General Paul X. Kelley for promotion to lieutenant general and assignment as Commander, Rapid Deployment Joint Task Force, MacDill Air Force Base, Florida. General Kelley is currently serving as the Deputy Chief of Staff, Requirements and Programs, Headquarters, Marine Corps.

A Silver Star winner, General Kelley was born in Boston, Massachusetts on November 11, 1928 and graduated from Villanova University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, with a Bachelor of Sciences Degree in Economics. General Kelley's military academic achievements include graduation from the Commando School, England; the U.S. Army's Pathfinder School; and the Air War College at Maxwell A.F.B., Alabama.

Early in his career, General Kelley was assigned as Commander of a British Commando Unit in Singapore, Malaya, and Borneo as a Marine Corps exchange officer with the British Royal Marines. From 1955 through 1956, General Kelley served as the Aide-de-Camp to the Deputy Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, at Camp H.M. Smith.

The official Marine Corps comment on the nomination is one that, "... welcomes the renewed attention given to the national capability to rapidly deploy the U.S. military forces wherever needed around the world. With the Corps heavily committed to providing forces to the new Rapid Deployment Joint Task Force, we are particularly pleased that the President nominated a Marine as that task forces' first commander. We are confident that Major General Kelley will fully justify the President's trust in his abilities."

SSgt. board set for '80

The good news out of Headquarters Marine Corps these days is that there will be a staff sergeant selection board in 1980.

The board is scheduled to convene from May 29 through July 7, to make between 800 and 1,000 selections. The board traditionally meets each January, but was postponed earlier this year due to promotion slowdowns in every pay grade.

Promotions of Marines from the 1979 staff sergeant selection list should be completed by next August or September, projections by officials at Headquarters now indicate. Consequently, a selection board will be needed to fill vacancies occurring between the completion of the 1979 list and the 1981 staff sergeant selection board.

Complete promotion allocations and zone breakdowns for the 1980 board will be published before the board meets.

In a related Staff NCO board policy decision, officials announced a change to eligibility zone selection policies. In the past, selection boards could make up to five percent of their picks from eligibility zones within each Occupational Field (OF). But if, for instance, a smaller OF had less than 20 Marines in the promotion zone, the boards could not pick a Marine from the eligibility zone. The policy, thought by officials at Headquarters to be unfair for Marines in smaller OFs, has been changed.

Selection boards are now authorized to pick one Marine from eligibility zones of OFs with less than 20 Marines in the promotion zone. That policy will apply to gunnery sergeant through sergeant major selection boards.

Staff sergeant selection boards will be able to pick up to two for promotion from eligibility zones of OFs with less than 20 Marines in the promotion zone. They will be instructed, however, to ensure that across-the-board eligibility zone picks do not exceed five percent of the total promoted.

Even though it will make far fewer picks than boards of recent years, the news of a staff sergeant selection board next year is good. Staff sergeants selected by the 1979 board were perhaps the hardest hit when Marine promotions were slowed down earlier this year in order for the Corps to meet Department of Defense (DoD) guidelines governing time in service at time of promotion. Officials at Headquarters were uncertain then as to whether or not there would be a staff sergeant selection board in 1980. MC News

TO SHOW WE CARE — Major Arthur Seaman (left), of Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron (SOMS) and Lieutenant Colonel John Alexander (center), SOMS commanding officer, present Station Commanding Officer Colonel Mel Sautter with a check worth $664.20 for the Alamo Chapter Marine Corps League. The money is to help the chapter care for families of Marines burned in the tragic Camp Fuji, Japan fire October 19. Several of the victims are still at the Brooke Army Medical Center's burn center where doctors felt it necessary for the victims' families to be present. The money came from donations from SOMS, Headquarters and Headquarters Squadron and Facilities Department.

Change

Hawaii Marine takes on new look

The Hawaii Marine is starting off the new year with a new look. Beginning with today's issue, the Hawaii Marine will carry paid commercial advertising.

The Hawaii Marine will now be published in cooperation with the Joint Public Affairs Office, Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii and American Publishers Inc., Honolulu.

What this means, in simple terms, is that American Publishers will bear all costs of printing the Hawaii Marine with revenues obtained from advertisements. This also means that the paper will no longer be funded by the Department of Defense.

Some improvements you can expect to see in the coming months are: color issues, expanded coverage of all areas due to an increase in the number of pages, advertising inserts, and discount coupons.

We are confident that our new association with American Publishers Inc. will enable us to provide a quality newspaper which meets the needs of our readers.

Non-citizens required to report their addresses

Non-citizens who are in the United States on January 1 must report their addresses to the Immigration and Naturalization Service during the month of January.

According to a provision of the United States Code, aliens residing in the United States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands are required to go to a post office or immigration office and obtain an alien address report form. The card must be filled out, signed, and delivered to a postal clerk or immigration official. The card should not be mailed by the individual completing it.

In addition to their address, non-citizens are required to report their nationality, place and date of entry into the country, place and date of birth, and alien registration number. This number appears on the alien registration receipt card which the non-citizen should have with them at all times. Individuals who have lost their cards should apply for another at the nearest immigration office.

Aliens serving aboard ship or in a command outside the U.S. on the first of the year are required to report their address within 10 days of their return to the states. If they return during the month of January, they can report through any U.S. Post office.

Penalties for willfully or inexcusably failing to report non-citizen addresses include being taken into custody and deported. In addition, a fine and imprisonment may be levied before deportation.

READY FOR A SWIM — Members of the Marine Corps Air Station team struggle to stay dry during the 2nd Annual Track and Field Meet Friday at Pop Warner Field. This is one struggle which was lost. There were many other struggles, winning and losing, during the track and field meet celebrating the 79th anniversary of the 1st Marine Brigade. For story and photos see page 4.

TWO-WHEELED TROUBLE — As the number of abandoned bicycles grows larger, Sergeant Mark Moerschell, Provost Marshal's Office, keeps a record of how many have accumulated over the past few months. Unclaimed bikes are kept by PMO for 120 days before being turned over to a property disposal unit for auction.

Abandoned bicycles kept in 'graveyard'

Are you missing a bicycle? If you are, there's a better than good chance that it'll end up here, in the "bicycle graveyard" behind the Provost Marshal's Office (PMO) aboard Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay.

The bicycles find their way to PMO through residents and personnel of the air station who happen to find one abandoned aboard the air station. Occasionally, a patrolling MP will happen across one lying on the beach or in the bushes.

When an abandoned bike is turned into PMO, it's kept for 120 days. During that time every effort is made to contact the owner.

One of the MP's tasked with that job is Sergeant Mark Moerschell, evidence custodian for the Criminal Investigation Division section. "The easiest solution to this 'bike problem,'" emphasized Moerschell, "would be for everyone aboard the air station to register their bicycle with PMO."

"That way, when an abandoned bike is turned in, the owner can be contacted immediately with little or no problem. Whenever a bike, moped or motorcycle is purchased, they're automatically registered with the city and county of Honolulu, but that extra effort of also registering one's bike through PMO would save immeasurable hassles."

If you want to register your bike with PMO, go to the "Pass & ID" section at the Main Gate (H-3).

Bikes are collected behind PMO quite often. The last bunch collected numbered some 150. Since no one claimed them, they were turned over to the Property Disposal Unit, in Pearl City, for auction.

If you should become a victim of a bike rip-off, call PMO first. Chances are they've already got it.

Marines needed to man Auxiliary Police Force

The Security Department, Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay, is looking for a few good Marines and sailors to serve in a new program being established as an auxiliary military police force.

The purpose of the Auxiliary Military Police Force program is to train and equip a group of military personnel from K-Bay, who are willing and eligible to devote some of their off-duty hours to volunteer law enforcement service with the Security Department. This program would also provide a pool of trained personnel for service during emergencies or disasters.

Members of the Auxiliary Military Police Force will be military personnel stationed at Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay, and members of tenant activities. They must be 21 years of age or over and their rank may be corporal through captain. The program can best be described as community resource oriented with emphasis on training toward public service.

Auxiliary Military Police Force membership would signify a desire on the part of the individual Marine/sailor to devote time, effort, and attained skills toward community improvement. After successful completion of interviews, screening and a basic course of instruction, the auxiliary patrolman will stand along side his counterpart in the execution of law enforcement aboard the station.

What is in it for you? The Auxiliary Military Police Force will be manned by volunteers on their off-duty hours. The only pay offered is the feeling of self-satisfaction from trying to make your community a safer and better place to live.

You will receive training in all facets of police work, weapons, community relations, emergency vehicles and self defense. Upon completion of the training program the volunteer will be given a certificate of completion. Volunteers serving honorably for six months or longer will be presented a letter of appreciation signed by the commanding officer.

Interested personnel should familiarize themselves with Station Order 5800.7 and apply by means of an Administrative Action form to the Provost Marshal via their department head and commanding officer.

TOY RECALL

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) has announced that certain stuffed toy mobiles manufactured in South Korea have been identified by the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) as potentially hazardous. According to CPSC, approximately 422,000 stuffed mobile toys may pose a strangulation hazard to infants and are being recalled by their importer, R. Dakin & Company, of San Francisco.

The recall applies to eight different types of stuffed animal mobiles which are intended to be suspended from ceilings by means of three elastic cords.

Parents should return the toys to the stores where they were purchased for a full refund. Consumers who wish to keep the toy should cut off the three elastic cords in order to eliminate the potential safety hazard.

For more information call 800/638-8333.

Rental facts

Landlord and tenant repair requirements outlined

By MSgt. Bill Buck

Money consciousness is the key to survival in these days of runaway inflation. To help you use these keys to open the door to a better quality of life, the station Provost Marshal's Office has instituted this consumer's protection column.

Not every Marine who is assigned in Hawaii will be eligible for or move into government quarters, and will probably have to rent a place in which to live. Hawaii's economy is extremely high and rental costs reflect this fact.

When you're putting out good money for a place for you and your family to live, you don't expect to put up with leaky roofs and faulty plumbing and the State Office of Consumer Protection agrees with you.

If you're living in a dwelling where a health or safety condition exists, you should ask your landlord to repair the condition immediately. According to the state's Office of Consumer Protection Handbook for the Hawaii Residential Landlord-Tenant Code, you should tell the landlord three things. First, that if repairs are not made immediately, you will call the Department of Health or the appropriate county agency. Second, that if an inspection shows that a violation exists, the repairs must start within five business days of the notification and finally, if the repairs are not started with five days after notification, you will fix the problem yourself. In most cases, going into this kind of detail won't be necessary. After all, as a businessman, the landlord will more than likely comply with your request as soon as possible.

If you can't notify the landlord, you should notify the Department of Health or appropriate county agency. You should still continue to try to notify the landlord.

If an inspector finds that repairs are needed, but that they do not create a health or safety problem, you should notify the landlord with a written list of the things that need repairing. Make sure you include what condition the item is in that needs repairs. If you don't, the landlord cannot be required to fix it within six months. Since a tenant may deduct only up to three months rent for repairs every six months, make sure you decide which repairs are most important.

The landlord must start repairs within 12 days after receiving written notice, if the repairs are not related to health or safety conditions. If for some reason he can't he must let the tenant know why and what date repairs will start.

In an event where an inspector finds a health or safety violation, the landlord will be notified by the inspector and will have five business days within which to start repairs. If he can't, he must let the tenant know why and when he can expect repairs to start.

If the landlord does not comply with any of the above mentioned provisions, then the tenant may make the repairs himself and deduct up to $200 from the next month's rent for the cost of repairs. (No. You can't replace a washer in a faucet and deduct $200. You must provide receipts to the landlord). Or, you may give the landlord two written estimates from qualified workmen five days before the repairs will begin. The tenant may deduct $200 or one month's rent, whichever is greater, for the cost of repairs based on the lower estimate. One important note here. When the landlord is given the estimates, the landlord may have the work done by a workman of his own choice.

There are certain requirements that the tenant must meet when renting a dwelling. He must keep the dwelling in a clean, fit condition and obey the laws and regulations governing health and safety. This includes such things as garbage disposal and proper use of appliances and plumbing. It also includes other family members as well as friends.

All rules brought to a tenant's attention before he moves in that are for all tenants' welfare and preservation of the landlord's property must be obeyed. All rules must apply to all tenants of a building and they must comply with the law.

The tenant must pay rent on time and allow the landlord reasonable entry to inspect, make repairs or show the dwelling to prospective purchasers and tenants.

Except in emergencies, the landlord must give the tenant two day's notice and enter only during reasonable hours.

If a landlord requires, a tenant must notify him of any extended absence from the premises. A tenant must also promptly inform the landlord of defective conditions and anything needing repair.

Under no circumstances may a landlord require a tenant to be responsible for correcting defects which violate any state or county law or regulation relating to health or safety.

However, the landlord and tenant may agree that the tenant will do certain minor repairs, minor remodeling or maintenance tasks as long as the agreement is made in good faith by both parties and not for the landlord to avoid his obligations. Additionally, the agreement must not reduce the obligation of the landlord to other tenants.

A landlord may demand payment of rent anytime after it is due. He may notify the tenant in writing that unless payment is made within five business days after receipt of the notice, the rental agreement will be terminated. If the tenant does not pay the past-due rent in full after receiving the notice, the landlord may sue to evict the tenant.

It is suggested that the landlord provide notice to the tenant by certified mail or by hand delivery. If this is not possible, the law allows the landlord to post a notice in a conspicuous place on the dwelling unit.

A landlord may sue for rent alone anytime after he has demanded payment of past-due rent and notified the tenant of his intention to bring such action.

After an action involving a dispute concerning the payment or non-payment of rent has been initiated in court, section 78 of the landlord-tenant code provides that upon request of either the landlord or the tenant, the court shall order the tenant to pay the disputed rent to the court as it becomes due.

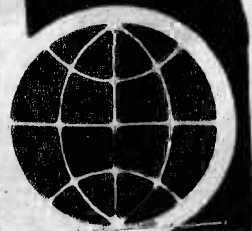

The tenant need not make such payments to the court if he can show the rent has already been paid to the landlord or a written agreement exists between the parties providing that rent can be withheld or deducted.

If the tenant fails to comply with the court's order to make payments to the Rent Trust Fund (Section 78 of the Code), the landlord shall be entitled to a judgement for possession. Execution will be issued accordingly and the tenant and his personal property will be removed from the premises by the appropriate officials.

The court can pay the landlord out of the court funds if it determines that rent was not paid. It may pay the tenant if rent was paid or properly withheld or deducted.

A party acting in bad faith shall be liable for reasonable interest on the rent deposited with the court.

Second annual field meet held

The 1st Marine Brigade, Fleet Marine Force, commemorated its 79th anniversary with the Second Annual Track and Field Meet Friday at Pop Warner Field.

The brigade, which is the only permanent brigade in the Corps, combining both air and ground elements into one force in readiness, was founded on January 1, 1901. The major ground element of the brigade, the 3rd Marines, is the largest infantry regiment in the Corps. Air support is provided by Marine Aircraft Group-24 (MAG-24) comprised of three aircraft support squadrons, three fixed wing squadrons and four helicopter squadrons. Logistical support for the brigade, comes from the Brigade Service Support Group (BSSG).

The track and field meet with its 700 individual/team participants drew an estimated crowd of 5,000 people. Marines representing the five major commands aboard the air station competed in such events as the 880-yard relay, greased pole climb, dizzy-izzy, Staff Noncommissioned Officer's beer and soda trailer race, tug-of-wars and a talent competition.

Brigadier General Harry Hagaman, commanding general of the 1st Marine Brigade, fired the shot that began the first event of the field meet, the three-mile run.

Colonel Mel Sautter, commanding officer, Marine Corps Air Station (MCAS) started the 100-yard dash, which was the second event of the meet.

The 3d Marines ran away with first place, compiling 12 first place awards for an overall score of 105 points. Marine Aircraft Group-24 grabbed second place from BSSG by a one and one half point lead, with the final scores 84½ to 83 respectively. Headquarters Company, 1st Marine Brigade, placed fourth with a score of 46½ points and fifth was MCAS with 32 points.

The photos on this page depict the effort, sometimes excruciating, sometimes frustrating, that was made by the participants, winners and losers alike.

Mind teasing game stimulates imagination

Story by Cpl. Lamar Johnson

A continuous battle against hobbits, orcs, berserks and all sorts of strange creatures took place at the Station Library at Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay in early December of 1979.

In actuality Eugene Luster, a student at the University of Hawaii, presented a very colorful and imaginative game to members of the Air Station, called 'Dungeons and Dragons.'

The game is normally played with six players but, on the day of December 8, fifteen people showed up at the library for Luster's demonstration, and learned to play the game.

The game itself is quite baffling and mind teasing for someone who has never played it. But since the game really has no end once you begin playing, unless you are exterminated by one of the creatures created by the Dungeon Master (DM), eventually the newcomer will catch on.

The participants in the game begin by filling out a character record sheet. This is done by rolling dice. The total number combined on each die will determine a numerical level of characteristics that the player will possess, which in turn determines what role the player will have in the game. It doesn't matter if you are a fighting man, a magician, cleric, dwarf, human or a nonhuman. Everyone will have to play their part in order to stay "alive" in the game.

'Dungeons and Dragons' (D&D) is a game where all fantasies come true. The imagination of the players and the DM will constantly increase as the game goes on only to make it more interesting and perilous for the players. "I automatically have the imagination and ethics to play this game," Luster said.

The DM must be even more devious and creative than the players in this game because each peril will hopefully be defeated as the game goes on. Creatures like dragons and hobbits come to the DM's mind to stifle the players through the dungeon corridors. The players have only two thoughts; to survive and to get out of the dungeon. Points are scored and chalked up to experience and the player will gain more knowledge depending on his or her own strategy in helping the group as a whole defeat the foes in the dungeon.

Some DMs are sadistic and the game becomes totally evil and torturous. Luster said, "You need a theory of ethics to play the game. It can be played sadistically or masochistically, of course in imaginary being. Nonetheless, I stay in the middle as the dungeon master." He continued "When you play the game this way you don't force it to go one way or the other. It just goes on forever or as long as there are players. I try to leave the game's course in the hands of the players, even though I'm the DM who is the leader.

He said he tries to make the player feel as though it is him or her going through the dungeon. "The player gives the character portrayed a soul. The character becomes a thinking, reacting creature. Whatever the players actions are in the game, is what the character will do because that is what the player has said he would do or in fact is doing.

Paying the strictest attention to the dungeon master is very important in the game. Eugene (DM) Luster explained, "I use my words and descriptions of monsters very well, and if the players understand my words then they'll understand what is going on in the game."

A game like D&D does something for the players sense of reality, as Luster pointed out, "I don't think D&D does anything more than let the players release frustrations and add a little fun into their lives. It does give them definite experiences that they normally would not have. Even if it's in the mind, it is still an experience and the players do understand what is happening."

There are points scored in the game. Awarded to the player by the DM, points are given in certain instances. "Say a 'thief' character survives my perils. I would give him base amount of points for the amount of locks he picked, his scheming abilities used and how many monsters he killed. Plus he would also get points for all the treasures he finds on his journey through the dungeon," explained Luster.

All the points in the point system are added up on the DM's scale for the players level of experience. Then it is possible in the next game the player will have to use a higher level of imagination to get out of the next D&D game he plays.

All in all Luster claims, "D&D is a game where most DMs play on a small scale where 20 to 40 games is the highest level you can normally go. I have 75 different choices of the game which is more than the original game by far." He continued, "I've incorporated levels, much higher than those described by the original D&D creators."

He said the main reason for this is because the game should be fun for anyone who can use their imagination. "The regular games sometimes do not apply to a lot of people, with stronger imaginations, so I added such things as galactic dungeons and dragons type games to bring it up to date," he stated.

According to Luster, "The person playing the character in D&D must have a vivid imagination, because in order to get out of the dungeon you have to out wit the DM who is creating a new monster for every one the player defeats. Staying alive and having fun is the total objective of the game."

On January 19, Eugene Luster will be returning to the Station Library at K-Bay for another D&D demonstration.

Luster will, on his return visit, conduct the demonstration a little differently. On the day of his demonstration he will begin with inexperienced players from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and then from 1 to 4 p.m. the experienced and most progressive beginners will have a chance to defeat the DM himself.

Registration for the D&D demonstration is at the Station Library and the only cost is a full imagination.

Youth Friendship Bowl displays sportsmanship

By GySgt. Steve Manuel

It was a day that would make any community relations expert green with envy. But more importantly, it was a day in which the highest degree of sportsmanship possible was exhibited by the youth of Hawaii.

The day was Saturday, December 15; the place was Aloha Stadium; and the event was the 1979 Pan American International Friendship Bowl of Hawaii.

There, playing before a cheering crowd of parents, friends, and relatives, 22 football teams from local and military communities met head-to-head in the annual games.

In addition to the local teams, two teams traveled from Woodland, Calif. to participate in bowl games.

One of those 22 teams, the Leeward Chargers 11, was coached by First Sergeant Greg Piceno; Staff Sergeant Brad Graham and SSgt. Ken Herrmann, all from Camp Smith. The Chargers teamed up with the Ewa Beach Cardinals to defeat the Makakilo Warriors and Schofield Rams by a score of 6-0.

The Chargers finished second overall during regular season play with a 10-2 record behind first place Makakilo with an 11-1 record.

Camp Smith is just one of eight military installations on Oahu sponsoring teams in the island-wide league, and who participated in the Friendship Bowl.

The Recreation Service Division, United States Army Support Command, Hawaii, first initiated the football program in an effort to induce better community relations between the military and civilian communities here. Three years ago the Pan American Organization started the annual Friendship Bowl in an effort to promote good sportsmanship among Hawaii's youth.

And since it is this trait that inspired the birth of these games, it is only fitting that the same trait be instrumental in the selection of the teams. In addition to the youth's sportsmanship qualities, their coaches conduct and parental participation in the sports program is also important in the judging committee's eyes. The records of the teams selected play no part in their selection.

And since their records didn't matter, neither did the score to most fans on hand. With the exception of the game clock, the scoreboard was quite academic. It was simply a time when everyone got together to watch laterals turn into squirting fumbles, and fumbles turn into a major chase of the bouncing pigskin that seemed impossible to hold on to. But with all the excitement of screaming parents and blaring bands, it's no wonder the "steel curtains" of tomorrow had trouble holding on to the ball once it was jostled loose.

When the final gun had sounded, the season had ended and something else had begun — new friendships and a new understanding between members of two communities that have been rocked with numerous unfortunate incidents throughout the year making it difficult for parents to practice what their children have been working on all season long — friendship.

Aloha Classic

Wrestling season opens

By GySgt. Steve Manuel

The Navy-Marine wrestling team kicked off its 1979-80 season December 27 at Fort Shafter, and the turnout of competitors was so great that the more than 50 Navy and Marine wrestlers had to be divided into their respective service teams.

Last week's season opener, the Aloha Classic, won by the Army team, saw more than 70 competitors from the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marines compete with wrestlers from Punahou and Kaiser High School as well as several independent civilian wrestlers.

The Marines, coached by Captain Jim Adams, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific G-1, finished second overall with the Navy team right behind in third place.

The Navy and Marine wrestlers put on a pretty good show, and in spite of an obvious lack of experience in competitive wrestling, Lance Corporal Lewis Dorrance, Guard Company, Marine Barracks Hawaii and Private First Class Chuck Harsh, Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay, both finished in first place in their respective weight classes (105-pound and Unlimited respectively). PFC Harsh also finished second in the 220-pound weight class, while Lance Corporal Tim Guthery finished second in the 136-pound class to Navy wrestler Steve Cook.

Navy wrestlers picked up one other first place finish in the 198-pound class by Mike Shudinis, USS Conserver. Second place finishes went to Rick Brazney, USS Sample, in the 163-pound weight class, and Ronald Woods, USS Barbel in the 180-pound class.

The more experienced Army wrestlers won four of the 10 weight classes and finished second in three others, while the Air Force captured one first place slot in the 220-pound class.

The Navy and Marine wrestlers will take to the mats again tomorrow in the Navy-Marine Open at Barbers Point. Weigh-ins begin at 8 a.m. with the action starting at 10 a.m. For more information contact Captain Jim Adams at 499-2585.
