to sit in cockpits of aircraft such as the F-4 Phantom jet aircraft and TA-4 Skyhawk and to walk through the world's largest cargo plane, the C-5 Galaxy. Also on display were transport and attack helicopters from the Army and the Marine Corps. Other military hardware was on display by servicemembers.

SNCO promotion standards set for FY83 regarding promotion policies for staff noncommissioned officers. That is good news for all SNCOs at MCAS Kancohe Bay.

First, the time-in-service standards announced in ALMAR 101-79 will not be implemented for SNCO promotions.

THE ALMAR states that in order to ensure that Department of Defense minimum time-in-service requirements for promotion are met by fiscal year 1983, actions are being 1983, actions are being introduced to increase time-in-grade and time-in-service standards. That, combined with the already imposed restrictions on meritorious promotions, will control promotion flow and result in a more obvious maturity of the

In a more obvious maturity of the enlisted force. During a review of occupation-al fields, DoD officials noted that certain fields cannot meet the established time in service plan and still be able to provide a sufficient number of qualified SNCOs for promotion.

A WAIVER to the time-inservice minimums established for those occupational fields was considered. However, this did not seem fair to Marines in other fields who were promoted ahead heids who were promoted Ahead of their contemporaries, usually as the result of outstanding performance. Under former time-in-service standards, these Marines would have been withheld from the promotion zone because they did not meet the requirements.

zone because they did not meet the requirements. Although implementation of the change to the time-in-service standards for SNCOs will not occur, action by staff agencies will ensure that DoD minimum standards are met by FY-83. Eligibility zones are, at times, substantial compared to the number of promotions allocated.

This was due to the policy causing Marines to enter the zone immediately upon attaining the minimum time-in-grade required for promotion. Plans now call for the eligibility zone of each OF to be the same size as the next year's expected promotion zone.

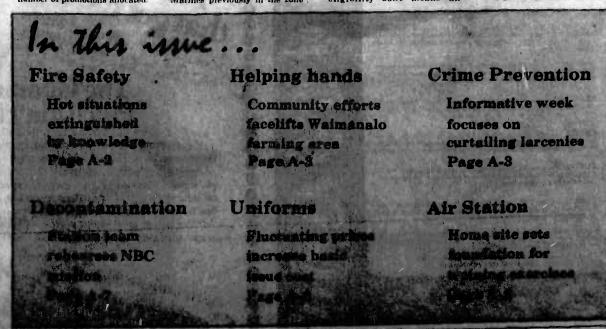

SOME OFs will not see an immediate reduction in the size of their eligibility zone. Marines who have been in an eligibility zone before will not be eliminated zone before will not be eliminated under the new zone structure but rather there will be a gradual reduction of the zone over a period of time to allow those Marines previously in the zone an opportunity to be considered for promotion. Marines will enter the eligiblity the promotion zone. This will ensure that each Marine is considered for promotion at least once while in the eligibility zone.

IN ADDITION, recommendations from commanding mendations from commanding officers for accelerated promotions will have more meaning. The recommended Marines will be advanced ahead of their contemporaries and placed at the bottom of the eligibility zone. A small eligibility zone means an increased selection opportunity for Marines recommended for for Marines recommended to accelerated promotion. Actual promotion standards will not change. A reduced eligibility zone will not mean promotions will speed up or slow down in any one occupational field. It will mean Marines can now determine when promotions can be expected, using eligibility zones as a guide. More information concerning the time-in-service standards can be obtained by reading ALMAR 47-80. Information regarding the establishments of the new eligibility zones will be found in a change to MCO 1400.30B.

Combest gave a fire safety presentation to approximately 60 people from the supply depart-ment aboard MCAS Kaneohe Bay Tuesday, May 13.

Smoke detectors should be placed in hallways outside bed-rooms. They are an early warning device that makes a lot of noise in order to wake you up or get your attention," he continued.

some day? If the answer to any of these questions is yes—read on. I would like to pass on some tips about what I learned while serving recently on a promotion board. First of all, the board was run with impeccable fairness from start to finish.

We could have had a crew filming the entire proceeding and I would have felt completely at ease. There were no secret Instructions, no special favors; from start to finish, it was a sincere effort to pick the most deserving men and

Now, how do you help insure that the promotion process works for you or the people under your supervision? • Supervisors: You have significant control over whether or not a person will be promoted. How you write those performance reports is very important to the promotion board's rating. If a person deserves a promotion, you owe it to him or her to write a solid evaluation based on facts and specifics.

This may be more difficult than your present system, but nothing stops you from sitting down before composing a performance report and discussing with the individual what he considers his contributions were during the reporting period. Be sure to ask about outside and civic involvement.

After you gather the facts, that report will not be so hard to write. Incidentally, you will feel better, too, about adequately rewarding someone who has worked hard for you.

• Noncommissioned Officers: Take a hard look at your records and work toward improvement, especially in the area of professional military education.

• Lower Grade Servicemembers: Lower Grade Servicemembers: Set your sights for promotion to the super grades now. Don't wait until you are halfway up the ladder to start worrying about making it to the op. You can't go back and rewrite history.

The main ingredient to a good performance evaluation is hard work. Be the person who puts out that extra effort; if you are, you will be rewarded.

Job performance, awards and decorations, education-work toward achievement in these areas, and make sure that after attainment they are entered into your records. Make the commitment and work toward your goal; it is attainable.

SSgt Dave Glamuzina, Headquarters Company, Brigade: "I like the classified ad pages in the new format. Plus sports are being covered more thoroughly and look a little bit better. There's no better way to get people into intramural sports than through the Hawali Marine."

Donna Evans, dependent: "I like it. The new Hawali Marine tells you more ways of saving money and the stories are a lot more indepth."

Marines execute nuclear, biological and chemical exercise

by LCpl Charles Marshall

The quarterly meeting of MCAS Kaneohe Bay's Nuclear, biological, and Chemical Defense Team was held Thursday, May 8 to inform and train the station representatives in the latest NBC procedures.

Classroom training and protective gear issue was followed by field exercises.

The team is designed to locate and identify enemy toxic agents by means of a detection kit. CWO-2 Vern Chute, officer-in-charge, said, "The team practiced essential procedures that all Marines are supposed to be familiar with." GySgt Cecilio Lindo presented classes in techniques of self-

"Field training is only half of what it takes to ready a platoon for deployment," says 2dLt Jack Blundell, a platoon commander in Company G, 2d Battalion, 3d Marines. "Marines who are going to be gone for six months must take care of their personnel effects. It is my job to see that this is done.

After many monthe of field firaining a platoon is certified 'combat ready.' While in garrison the platoon attends the platoon attends classroom training for briefings on policy, essential subjects and assigned duties.

"I MUST prepare my men individually for their upcoming float," Blundell continued. "Details are constantly going to the rifle range to qualify. Swimming qualifications must be taken care of. I have Marines being trained in driver's school and helicopter support training. Details of Marines are constantly taking the essential subjects test. Nuclear, biological and chemical gear is issued and inspections are held to ensure its serviceability. "One of the biggest problems is squaring away administration which is handled at the company level. Identifi-cation cards and tags have to be checked for accuracy. Service record books have to be updated will be living in close quarters I can't afford sickness aboard ship. All my men will receive their shots or vaccinations. I stress to my Marines to keep their dental appointments for healthy teeth."

Platoon preparation is only a part of the picture when prepping for a deployment. Platoons support companies, the subject of the next deployment story.

Effective October 1, 1980 prices of uniform items will decrease in price. The price adjustments are a result of new contracts and inflation. A scabag issue price increase of 20 percent for male Marines and 5 percent for women Marines will result. MSgt Arden Adelgais, station supply noncommissioned officer-in-charge, explained policies at the clothing sales section. "First of all let me clear up one item. Director Robert Wise and Producer Gene Roddenberry have taken a tried and true success formula from the success formula from the classic late sixties' television series, "Star Trek" and attempted to give the story an updated, modern look. sort of odd intergalactic homecoming. The story opens with Admiral James Kirk (William Shatner) regaining command of his beloved starship the USS Enterprise. Shat-ner's recreation of Kirk scorme awbward and seems awkward and stilted. The fiery young leader so familiar to cult followers of the old TV tollowers of the old IV series has vanished, replaced by a vain, uncertain caricature. It's not until the last five minutes of the film that Shatner finally appears-comfortable as James comfortable as James Kirk again. By then it's too late. The movie has gone so far down the proverbial tubes nothing can salvage it. After a long, drawn-out reuniting of the old crew, the newly gussied-up Enterprise (is nothing sacred?) departs to rendezvous with a mysterious spacecraft in а an attempt to prevent it from attacking Earth. However I don't believe they should be used to plug gaping holes in a weak story. The old familiar characters are back, but characters are back, but each seems out of focus. The spectacle of seeing Mr. Spock, Bones and Scotty behave like strangers is especially remarkable considering how well-defined each of them once was. The biggest offender is Mr.

Spock (Leonard Nimoy) who seems more con-cerned with finding himself (I recommend yoga, jogging or at least a hot tub) than with the mission at hand. The old Spock would never have placed himself above his job. It would be illogical for him to do so. Then job. It would be illegical for him to do so. Then again, in this film nothing makes sense. Even the old "logic versus emotion" argu-ments between Spock and Bones have dis-appeared. Deforest Kelley takes the ship

Spock (Leonard Nimoy) who seems more con-doctor so well-loved by devoted trekkies and turns him into a wise-cracking, irritating old coot who acts like he's battling male meno-pause. And losing. The only bright spot I may have been exceptionally rough on this film, but believe me the people responsible the people responsible for this turkey deserve it. You have to be a totally burned-out, fanatical trekkie to like this movie. The only similarity between this and the old 'TV show is the title.

an afternoon of In friendly rivalry and rugged international competition Sunday, May 11 at Pop Warner Field, MCAS Kaneohe Bay, a determined team of French sailors came from behind to tie their Maximum and the sailors to be their Marine opponents 1515 in a spirited rugby match. The Marine team included men from several different units, most of whom are novice players, while the visitors are crew-members of the French escort ship Balny.

THE GAME itself was a bruiser, involving very little finesse. The Marine team was physically bigger and stronger but the French sailors had the advantage of being more familiar with the game. On occasion the Marines looked tremendously confused-by some of the plays the Frenchmen executed but made up for their lack of expertise with loads of enthusiasm.

The frantic tempo of the game seemed perfect-ly matched by the heavy metal rock and roll blaring from the stands as the teams went head to head to the strains of Cat Scratch Fever and other foot-stomping

RUGBY IS traditiontime with the Marines: RUGBY IS tradition-ally a social as well as a physical game and the Americans honored that custom by holding a celebration for their new friends after the game. The Balny is home-based in Tahiti and has been in Hawaiian waters for three weeks underplaying a mixed rugby game, diving at Hanauma Bay and playing host to their Marine friends aboard ship.

THOUGH THERE was a language barrier between them, the two groups got along well. The atmosphere of good will omens the Main will among the Marines and French sailors was typified by the end of the match when the Americans gave the French three cheers. The Frenchmen returned the compliment and the spectators in the standa gleefully shouted "Vive la France!"

FLEET FOOTED FRENCHMAN-A sailor from the French escort ship Balny break faway from Marine defenders during a rugby match at Pop Warner Field. After trailing for most of the game, the Frenchmen battled back and held their leatherneck opponents to a 15-15 tie in the Sunday, May 11 contest.

BATTLING FOR THE BALL—A Marine rugby player doggedly holds the ball as an opposing player attemps to regain possession. The extremely physical contest was a battle of erience. Marines used their strength versus en size, to advantage while the sailors concentrated on executing plays that often caught their American adversaries unaware.

people here. Several members of the Camp Staff Non-commissioned Officers' Club each decided to sponsor several senior citizens for dinner, and chartered a commercial bus to transport them from their residences to the club.

EVERYONE waited anxiously for the bus, which ran about an hour behind schedule, making the sponsors a bit nervous. But when the bus finally arrived, it was a heartwarming occasion. Their appreciation was evidenced by their tear-filled eyes and food intelligently is just part of the battle in getting the most out of your food dollar. For hetter or worse meet of better or worse, most of us spend that dollar in the supermarket—that American institution where scores of statisti-cians and market researchers study conresearchers study con-sumers quite closely to find out what sells and why. The object of the game is for marketers to get you to buy things you didn't know you needed. Let's look at three primary factors dealing with the money you with the money you spend and how you spend it.

First of all, believe it or rist of all, believe it or not, groceries are the least profitable mer-chandise in the super-market. The gross profit margin on someromfood items is almost twice the riems is almost twice the profit on groceries. This explains the reasons why you can now go into local supermarkets today and find expanded greeting card sections, clothing departments, cosmetics and plants. you'll notice that high profit items are usually at eye level, when they're aimed at child-In 1974, when the throes of a recession ren, the display case is arranged at a child's eye were upon us, some 74 percent of shoppers used level. a list while shopping. But in 1977 studies indicated that the marketing techniques work on the consumers' percentage has dropped back to 1969 levels and only 40 percent of subconscious. Most shoppers think while they are shopping rational decisions are being made as far as huying power. This isn't luway the case unless today's consumers are now using lists. This makes good news for always the case unless the consumer realizes consciously what the marketers, for it means that more unplanned. purchasing is going on. And to prove this the same study cited show that about half our supermarket purchases are unplanued, or made "on impulse". Super-markets have developed lots of ways to encourage us to make those impulsive purchases. impulsive purchases. For example, most stores are arranged so that, in order to find necessary tems such as lettuce, milk, bread, and ment, abe shopper must walk around the perimeter of the shopper must walk are exposed to the aisle profit items such as junk-food or munchles. The marketers have even found that special displays may sell nearly as well at regular prices as similar 'displays hype sales. Experts know that Experts know that display space in the supermarket plays a major role in adverti-sing. The more rows of the product, the more the product, the more sales. It's also a fact that people can absorb and process only so much information during any given time period. The cereal aisle, for example, may display 76 different kinds of cereal. On each box are at least 30 different pieces of information. Making a rational decision under these circumstances requires a strong preplanned strategy,

Being able to outsmart the marketer and get the most from your hard earned food dollars isn't always easy but if you choose to be a wise consumer you have taken the first step taken the first step being a conscious buyer. The best way to get more for your money in the supermarket is to avoid impulse buying by using a prepared shopping list and shop specials when they renily are specials.
