Angels replace Devils in Western Pacific sky

by Sgt Inez J. Stoner

For the past six months, devils with Marine Corps emblems on their covers have been spotted in the skies over the Far East. Recently, those devils were replaced in the Western Pacific by angels with the same Marine Corps emblem.

The Death Angels of Marine Fighter Attack Squadron-235 left the Air Station early this month to replace the Red Devils of VMFA-232 on a six-month unit deployment of the Western Pacific.

The Red Devils began arriving back at the Air Station Feb. 17. The main body of the squadron arrived March 6 and the pilots, radar intercept officers and the F-4S Phantoms are scheduled to arrive Thursday and Friday.

Approximately 230 enlisted Marines and 35 officers from VMFA-232 left the Air Station last September. While in the Far East, the Red Devils were based out of Marine Corps Air Station, Iwakuni, Japan, for a time, and also Kadena Air Base on Okinawa.

During the six-month period, the squadron redeployed to the Naval Air Station at Cebu Point in the Republic of the Philippines. There, they participated in the joint service exercise, Cope Thunder, with the United States Air Force and Navy, the Philippine air force and forces from Australia.

The Red Devils of VMFA-232 also participated in two operations in the Sea of Japan, protecting American aircraft carriers. The squadron flew air patrols with the USS Midway last November and with the USS Constellation in February 1982.

Protecting American interests in the Far East is a 24-hour-a-day endeavor, even on the holidays. The nearly 300 Marines of VMFA-232 spent both Christmas and New Year's far from family and friends, on duty at Kadena Air Base.

The Red Devils of VMFA-232 are home now. They have been replaced in the Far East by the Death Angels of VMFA-235, due to return home sometime next fall.

Assistant Commandant visits

The state of the Corps is good, and the future outlook is promising. This was the theme of a speech delivered by General Paul X. Kelley, Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps to a group of 1st Marine Brigade officers last week.

During his visit to the 1st Marine Brigade and MCAS Kaneohe Bay March 8, Gen Kelley offered some insight into the future of the Corps. He suggested that some changes may include rebuilding and reorganizing certain areas to more effectively use manpower and equipment.

Following his brief, Gen Kelley, accompanied by Brigadier General

Bain McClintock, Commanding General, 1st Marine Brigade, set out to tour the command.

At Marine Fighter Attack Squadron-212, the 32-year leatherneck strolled through work areas, occasionally pausing to chat with Marines. His candor and jovial attitude quickly eased the tension of many who were meeting him for the first time.

As the tour continued, Gen Kelley stopped at brigade Service Support group's Maintenance Facility, where he quizzed several Marines about their jobs and equipment.

Then it was on to the 3d Marines'

Combat Movement Course. There the Corps' second in command observed an anti-tank demonstration. Afterwards, he talked with the assembled Marines, and encouraged them to continue carrying the Marine banner proudly.

Gen Kelley then called on Colonel Charles Robinson, Air Station Commander, who accompanied him to the Family Service Center. Gen Kelley exchanged greetings with the center's workers, and sat in on an operational brief.

A joint reception at the Commissioned Officers' Club concluded the General's visit.

Women

Female military enlistments increase

by Sgt Corrina Martell

A platoon sergeant has a soft voice. A parachute rigger smells like Chanel No. 5, and a motor transport driver wears mascara. No, the rough, tough Marine image isn't changing. That's a description of women Marines, who are rapidly increasing in number.

From an enlistment of 305 women Marines in World War I to a total enlistment of 7,500 as of February 1982, women have expanded in the Marine Corps — and are continuing to enlist.

According to Assistant Secretary of Defense Lawrence J. Korb, in the January 1982 issue of "Defense 82" magazine, the dramatic increase in the number of military women is the result of two developments: the women's movement throughout our society, and the All-Volunteer Force (AVF). Korb states that the expansion of opportunities for women in the military is wise if we are to maintain the AVF while the male youth population is shrinking.

The February issue of "SSAM" revealed that by 1985 there will be 91 percent fewer 18-year-old males in America than in 1975. By 1987, there will be 13 percent fewer.

Women will be increasingly needed in the military to fill the roles of our country's depleting male population. However, because of its mission and status as a fighting organization, the combat exclusion will continue to limit the number of women the Marine Corps can effectively utilize, states an article published by the Division of Public Affairs, HQMC. But, the Corps' ultimate goal is to take full advantage of the contribution women can make to mission accomplishment.

Nov. 8, 1967, President Johnson signed Public Law 90-130, which repealed the legal limitations on the number of women in the armed services; permitted the permanent promotion of women to colonel; and provided for the temporary appointment of a woman to rear admiral or brigadier general while serving in a specified "flag rank" billet in the Navy or Marine Corps.

In his remarks that day, the President noted:

"Our Armed Forces literally could not operate effectively or efficiently without our women... So, both as President and as Commander in Chief, I am very pleased and very proud to have this measure sent to me by the Congress."

Promotion and career opportunities open to women in the military have increased as their numbers have grown. And, women Marines have moved into a more fully integrated role in the Marine Corps. June 30, 1977, the Office of the Director of Women Marines was disestablished and its functions transferred to other Marine Corps staff agencies.

The training curricula at Officer Candidates School, Quantico, Va., now places all officer candidates in the same military environment where they can be judged fairly and uniformly on their performance under stress. Men and women are tested in similar environments which duplicate, to a degree, the stress they will encounter in carrying out their demanding assignments in the field and in garrison.

Women officers participate in all phases of training in separate woman Marine platoons. However, this participation in tactical field training exercises is limited to the defensive role, and to support and staff functions on the offense.

Enlisted woman Marines receive initial training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S.C. The female training program is eight weeks long, compared to male recruit training, which is 10.3 weeks in length.

Male and female recruits are assigned the same learning objectives only in those subjects covered in both programs of instruction. Only male recruits are taught battlefield skills, such as weapons employment and tactics.

Both programs of instruction are continuously reviewed. However, there are no plans to integrate the two programs. The woman Marine's motto, "To Free a Man to Fight", is the same today as it was in 1918 when the first woman raised her hand to enlist.

Exactly how many Marines the women have freed to fight has often been a topic of speculation. Their peak strength — nearly 19,000 — approximated the strength of a Marine Corps division. General Alexander A. Vandegrift, the second wartime Commandant, once remarked that women Marines could "feel responsible for putting the 6th Marine Division in the field; for without the women filling jobs throughout the Marine Corps, there would not have been sufficient men available to form that division."

For women Marines on active duty, the '80s signal a period of unprecedented opportunity.

Women Marines serve on an interchangeable basis with male Marines in noncombatant positions, subject to restrictions imposed by current laws. Women now serve in 90 percent of all Marine occupational fields, and hold positions of responsibility in combat support and combat service support units throughout the Marine operating forces.

Major Beverly A. Short, Manpower, HQMC, stated March 10 that the Marine Corps has set a goal of 9,100 women Marines by 1986. This goal has recently been reduced because of women Marine retention.

Currently, women Marines come under the same policies as male Marines at all levels of command, except where legal or physical differences warrant separate treatment. To meet the needs of the service — it is Marine Corps policy to assign women Marines to billets commensurate with their capabilities to the maximum extent practicable.

In non-Fleet Marine Force assignments, women may be assigned to any unit or duty station for which qualified. In addition, they may be designated as enlisted crewmembers and assigned to base and command support aircraft, states the HQMC article.

Within the Fleet Marine Forces, women Marines may be assigned to combat support and combat service support units. However, women may not be assigned to a unit that could become involved in direct combat, such as infantry units; artillery, tank, assault amphibian, combat engineer, reconnaissance, and light anti-aircraft missile battalions; force reconnaissance and air/naval gunfire liaison companies; forward anti-aircraft defense batteries and platoons; and Marine air support squadrons.

Women assigned to deployable units in the Western Pacific (WestPac) may deploy with their units only if the units go to and from WestPac by air. They may not participate in Marine Amphibious Unit deployments to WestPac or the Mediterranean since these deployments are made by ship and involve units on combat standby.

Women Marines may comprise no more than 10 percent of a Fleet Marine Force unit's actual strength — a change from previous practice which was based on organizational strength rather than actual strength, the HQMC article states.

Almost 40 years ago, in the midst of war, legislation and the needs of America created the women Marines. Later, laws ensured their existence. Current laws provide equality of opportunity. But the contribution made by women Marines, past and present, could not be legislated — or predicted — 40 years ago.

Today, as in the past, women Marines are demonstrating the capacity and the willingness to meet the challenges facing the Marine Corps and to voluntarily assume a larger share of the responsibilities, state the HQMC article.

Their role in today's Marine Corps was made possible by the sustained efforts of thousands of Marines, both men and women. In December, 1980, the Commandant wrote:

"Women Marines and male Marines serve side by side in our ranks... They deserve nothing less than outstanding leadership, equal treatment, and equal opportunity for professional development."

According to the HQMC article this commitment binds both ways. Nothing less than outstanding service is expected in return.

Armored vehicles give leathernecks leading edge

Story and photos by Sgt Greg Berry

Smoke drifts lazily across Kailua from numerous battle-town buildings. Kaneohe isn't in any better shape. The enemy is in control. An enemy motorized rifle battalion reinforced with one tank company defends Windward Oahu, while Mokapu Peninsula is believed to be defended by one motorized rifle platoon supported by two tanks. And, the Marines have landed. That's part of the scenario with which 3d Battalion, 3d Marines worked during their mechanized training Feb. 23 to March 2 with the 3d Assault Amphibian Battalion, Detachment, Company A here. India, Kilo and Lima companies each spent two days working with and learning about the Landing Vehicle Tracked Personnel carriers, which will take them from ship to shore, and 100 miles inland. The 3/3 leathernecks learned "to take advantage of the speed, shock and fire power of armored vehicles," commented Captain Richard Roan, officer in charge of the detachment. He explained that the training starts in the classroom, but "most of the time is spent in actual mechanized combat problems. "The training we've been doing is preparing 3/3 for their upcoming deployment," Capt Roan said. The Marines learn both offensive and defensive tactics involving tracked vehicles. "I feel that the mechanized threat is growing everyday," Capt Roan added. "The use of mechanized firepower will gain victory on the battlefield." Training helps the drivers to be ready for the battle as much as it does the infantry troops. "We're learning how to go up to our objective, and let off the infantry," explained Lance Corporal Steven Bates, a crew chief with the detachment. "We're also getting in a lot of driving time." LVTP-7s aren't cheap to drive. Operating costs for the 26-ton tractor run more than $100 per hour. The mechanized marvel travels about 40 mph on the beach, and about 7 to 12 knots in the water. The quarter-of-a-million-dollar beast can also scale three-foot high walls and carry three crewmen along with 25 combat ready troops. Corporal Dennis Wolterding, Company L 3/3, was one of those combat ready troops during the field exercise and, despite the jarring and heavy vibrations, appreciated the LVTP for what it is — a vehicle that goes from shipboard to the enemy's front door.

Street Scoop

In your opinion, what would be the ideal hours of operation for the exchange gas station?

Pvt Tye Johnson, 2/3: "I feel that it should be open later hours and on Sundays."

HM3 George Miklas, Co. A, 3dMedBn: "I would like to see the exchange gas station open from 7 a.m. to at least 10 p.m. weekdays and 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekends."

Cpl Vivian Taylor, H&HS: "I feel that the gas station should stay open longer on weekends to accommodate those personnel who do not have a normal work day and the weekend hours are inconvenient."

LCpl Clydell Washington, 1/12: "I think it should be open 24 hours a day on weekends."

Sgt Jose Garcia, Det., Co. A, 3dAAVBn: "I would like to see the gas station stay open longer on Saturdays and Sundays, at least half of the day. Gas out in town is more expensive and a longer drive."

Sgt James Puckett, CommSptCo: "I would like to see the gas station stay open on the weekends from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., and on the weekdays from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m."

Weather conditions call for safety measures

HQMC, WASHINGTON — Knowing what to do when faced with unusual or severe cold weather could make the difference between comfort and survival or discomfort and death.

Practicing safety during winter weather is paramount in preventing accidents before they occur and unusual and severe conditions around the world have contributed to numerous accidents involving Marines and their families, according to ALMAR 033/82: Safety Alert 1-82.

EVEN IF A MARINE is currently stationed in a warm place such as Hawaii, it is not farfetched that he may someday be stationed in a much colder climate. According to safety officials here, Marines should be aware of the dangers caused by cold temperatures and inclement weather in five areas: fire safety, power failure, motor vehicle operation, personal safety and flooding.

Improper or malfunctioning heating devices are major causes of fires during cold weather, according to officials. Heating systems should be checked and filters changed regularly. Extreme caution should be exercised when using fireplaces and wood-burning stoves — ensuring chimneys are clear and combustible material of any type is removed from the vicinity.

Portable electric heaters should be checked for electrical problems and kept away from curtains, furniture and other combustibles. Kerosene heaters are especially dangerous and should not be refilled indoors or while in use. Fumes from heaters or charcoal burners in an enclosed area can cause asphyxiation.

Smoke detectors provide an early warning system and dramatically reduce risk of death, serious injury or major property loss. If a fire occurs, immediate evacuation of the structure should be a top priority. Attempts to save personal belongings have often resulted in unnecessary deaths.

BROWN-OUTS OR A reduction in electrical power can cause motors to overheat. During brown-outs, major appliances should be unplugged and unnecessary electrical use avoided. All appliances, lights and electrical devices should be turned off in event of a total power failure. Drawn curtains will help retain heat in a building during a power outage. A portable radio should be kept handy to get the latest emergency information.

Hazardous driving conditions require extreme caution. Unnecessary trips should be avoided. During snowy or icy weather, keeping a shovel and a box of sand in the vehicle luggage compartment is wise. Windshield washers and wipers should be in good working condition and snow tires or chains will provide additional traction in heavy snow. To avoid running out of gas and to help provide traction, the fuel tank should be kept at least half full. Careful driving is the ultimate solution, according to officials.

Layered clothing provides more heat than a single heavy item and a hat prevents significant loss of body heat. A balanced diet with warm liquids helps to maintain body temperature; alcohol actually accelerates loss of body heat. Marines exercising outdoors in cold weather should be alert to the dangers of frostbite and hypothermia.

HEAVY RAINS IN some geographical areas, and spring thaws and rains in colder climates result in an increased danger of flooding. Marines residing at low elevations along waterways should be especially watchful for conditions that might lead to flooding and should monitor a local radio station for weather reports and flash flood warnings.

Marines and their families should acquaint themselves with specific dangers and proper precautions for their geographical areas.

Danger

Red flags warn unauthorized personnel of restricted areas

by Sgt Corrina Martell

Wandering across the runway on the western side of the Air Station to West Field and the Combat-Aircraft Loading Area, could be dangerous, if the little red flags hovering above various "restricted area" signs are not observed.

This is a high explosive area, and for those not familiar with these flags, as well as for those who are — it means to keep out while the flags are flying.

When the red flags are up, the squadrons are conducting flight operations with high explosive bombs. Unauthorized personnel, who wander in, are putting their lives in danger, as well as distracting the workers in the squadron.

"People have been known to look at the flags, read the sign, and still continue on in," said Master Sergeant Donald Henderson, ordnance chief. To keep unauthorized personnel out, squadron workers have been continually drawing their attention to the flags and asking them to leave. But what started as a small problem has gotten out of hand. It's irritating for the squadron to have to constantly interrupt its work to get the trespassers out of danger.

Then the flags are down, anyone may come into the area, but when the flags are put up the only people authorized to be in the area are squadron members essential to the operation. "Although there are some military trespassers, MSgt Henderson said, a lot of people wandering in are civilians and dependents.

MSgt Henderson feels that most of the people are walking near the beach or fishing and are just not aware of what's out there in the restricted area. "They wander in at all hours," he explained, "and it is especially dangerous at night, when it is hard for the squadron workers to see them. Most people are cooperative when asked to leave, and so far no one has been hurt. Ordnance has a safe record and is proud of it," he concluded.

Be a little more attentive to the safety precautions and help keep it that way.

Cryogenics Marines manufacture life-giving oxygen

by LCpl Todd Ramsburg

Without the oxygen supplied by the Cryogenics Section of Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron-24, the air-wing would probably never get off the ground. Pilots are required to be on oxygen even before they take off, and it's the responsibility of the Cryogenics Section to manufacture and inspect the oxygen before it is needed.

"OUR MISSION is to support the various aircraft within the Brigade," said Sergeant John Keiser, noncommissioned officer in charge. "We do this with the help of the GB-1A Liquid Oxygen/Liquid Nitrogen Generating Plant," he added.

As the name of the generating plant implies, the Marines of the Cryogenics Section also manufacture nitrogen. The liquid nitrogen is put to a variety of uses. It is reverted back into a gaseous state to be used in hydraulic systems, struts, tires and to cool avionic systems.

"The reason nitrogen is used instead of oxygen in aircraft tires is because the nitrogen is a much more stable gas," explained Sgt Keiser.

CRYOGENICS is defined as a branch of physics that deals with the production and effects of very low temperatures. The liquefied gases produced by these Marines are manufactured under extremely low temperatures.

Air is drawn into the GB-1A using a turbine engine. The air then travels to a water separator which extracts most of the moisture. From there, the air goes through a refrigeration system that removes all of the dirt, moisture and any other contaminants. While in the refrigeration system, the air is dramatically cooled to a temperature of 285 degrees below zero. From here it is passed on to the distillation system.

Once within the distillation system, the air is liquefied and the oxygen and nitrogen are separated and purified by using the different boiling points, minus 297 degrees F for liquid oxygen and minus 321 degrees F for liquid nitrogen.

AFTER THIS PROCESS is complete, the finished product is transferred to 500-gallon storage tanks and then eventually into the 50-gallon tanks which are issued to the various squadrons aboard the Air Station.

The squadrons use the oxygen and nitrogen in its gaseous state. The AM 26A12 recharger changes the liquid gases back into their original form. Ten liters of oxygen will supply pilots for approximately four to five hours of flying. The oxygen must also be at least 99.5 percent pure. Anything less than that could spell disaster for a pilot. He has more important things to worry about than nausea and dizziness.

Safety is an important factor that the Cryogenics Section deals with on a daily basis.

"IF THE LIQUEFIED gases come in contact with our skin or clothing, it will cause severe burns," said Sgt Keiser. "We must wear protective clothing treated with a special repellent that doesn't absorb the liquids. Besides this, we wear face shields and thick leather gloves," he added.

Each month the cryogenic Marines participate in an operational run which lasts 10 days and nights. During this exercise, the Marines produce 18 to 20 gallons of liquefied gas an hour. When the operation is complete, 3,700 gallons of oxygen and nitrogen are produced.

It's enough to keep the wheels rolling and the pilots flying until the next operational run.

The One Place Where Freedom and Super Prices Meet

Body builder sets sights on Mr. Hawaiian Pacific

by Sgt Corrina Martell

Proper diet, training and dedication have earned Lance Corporal Doug Seykowski of Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron's Ordnance, the title of Mr. Aloha State.

The 21-year-old Marine from Massachusetts, who prepared two years for the event, won first place in the Mr. Aloha competition Feb. 12 against 14 other body builders.

The 5-foot 11-inch Marine, who weighed 182 pounds in the competition, said, "Size doesn't mean you will win. It's a combination of size, proportion, definition and presentation."

BODY BUILDING has always been LCpl Seykowski's goal. In high school he played all sports, but did not enter body building competitions, although he worked out occasionally.

LCpl Seykowski said that he wasn't able then to give body building the full dedication it needed. "The Marine Corps disciplined me so that I could meet my goal," he said.

LCpl Seykowski explained that although it took him two years to reach his present condition, it is different for each person. "You're born with certain qualities. The time it takes to get to a certain point varies from person to person," he said.

LCpl Seykowski begins training for a competition six weeks before the event. During that time, he eats a special diet consisting of baked or broiled chicken, fish, vegetables, salad, and fruit. He works out twice a day, from 4:30 to 6 a.m. and from 4:30 to 6 p.m.

WHEN HE'S NOT training for a competition, he works out once a day from 4:30 to 6 a.m. "Any more than that is over-training if you're not training for a competition," said LCpl Seykowski. He also eats four to six meals a day consisting of anything he wants.

Some of LCpl Seykowski's exercises include curls, bench presses, squats, rowing and pressing behind the neck. "There aren't that many different exercises to do," he said. "You just have to get yourself over there to the gym. The biggest thing is dedication."

When he first started body building, LCpl Seykowski trained with Corporal Don Shubert, who is now out of the Marine Corps. Shubert helped him in training and diet and was a great asset to him.

NOW LCPL SEYKOWSKI trains with Corporal John Montchal of Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron-24.

Presently weighing 200 pounds, LCpl Seykowski says, "You have to devote yourself 24 hours a day to this sport." LCpl Seykowski explained that even on his off duty hours, he takes care of his body. He said that he doesn't drink, smoke or party. Instead, he occasionally goes to the movies or the beach.

LCpl Seykowski said he never gets bored since body building is important to him. "There is no way you can be good in this sport if you want to go out and get drunk all the time," he stated.

BEFORE WINNING the title of Mr. Aloha, LCpl Seykowski was in three other competitions. He was third in Mr. Waikiki in July 1981 and fifth in Mr. Hawaiian Pacific in August 1981. In the National Armed Forces Body Building Championship on Feb. 6, 1982, he won first place in the light heavyweight competition and came in second overall.

LCpl Seykowski's next goal will be Mr. Hawaiian Pacific of 1982 in August. He plans to weigh 187 pounds for the competition.

Eventually he wants to compete for Mr. America. "I want to be 215 pounds for the Mr. America competition with 4 percent to 6 percent body fat," said LCpl Seykowski, explaining that the average person has as much as 18 percent body fat.

WHEN LCPL SEYKOWSKI gets out of the Marine Corps in August 1983, he plans to live in California. "I want to train at Gold's Gym," he said, explaining that it's one of the most famous gyms for body builders.

LCpl Seykowski said he is satisfied with his accomplishments and feels he is meeting his goals sooner than he expected. He also feels grateful to his work section for allowing him the necessary time off to train and enter competitions.

Surfers romp in waves

by Sgt Greg Berry

It was intended to be a competitive bodysurfing contest, but Sunday's romp in the water became more of a fun meet with wave riders and their families enjoying a pleasant day at Pyramid Rock Beach.

More than 30 members of local bodysurfing clubs participated in the day-long event, which included hand board, boogie board and open bodysurfing contests.

RILEY SMITH, a professional bodysurfer from Honolulu, took top honors in both the hand board and open events — despite working waves which were best described as choppy.

Bill Lewin, Makapuu Bodysurfing Club, placed second in the hand board competition followed by Frank Ross in third. Ross also took third in the bodysurfing competition (behind Jim Lindow) to make him the only other person to place in more than one event.

The boogie board finals ended with John Patterson in first, followed by Bob Thomas and Mike Wong.

The athletes were judged by three of their peers, with the person collecting the most points winning. Points, up to 20, were awarded by how well they worked the waves. Extra points were given for "tricks," which normally consist of spinning and back slides.

Sunday's waves didn't allow much in the way of tricks, though some of the more experienced riders managed a few.

"The waves today are 3 to 5 feet high and choppy," commented Bob Thomas, president of the Honolulu Bodysurfing Club. "The riders are the best we can do under the circumstances."

THE HBC SPONSORS about six meets a year and Sunday's contest was the first conducted here, Thomas said. The professional bodysurfer added that February normally offers better wave conditions.

"We hope to return in February next year for another contest," Thomas added. "Although the waves haven't cooperated, I still feel that the area here is one of the best on the island."

Windward Marathon set

Race plans on track

by LCpl Charlie Marshall

As the gunshot echoes through the sleepy town of Kailua May 16, an estimated 1000 Holokiki O' Alele (swift runners of the plain of Alele) will step off on their 26-mile trek marking the start of the Second Annual Windward Marathon.

One half hours later, at 5:30 a.m., a second shot will signal the beginning of the half-marathon.

Jointly sponsored by the communities of Kailua, Kaneohe and the Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay, this year's footrace is being run a month earlier and a few modifications have been made over last year's route.

ON YOUR MARKS

Instead of having the marathoners trotting along the runway on the Air Station, the course will travel through its housing area.

Last year runners found the pavement of the airstrip very hot from the sun constantly beating down on it, and the openness of the area led to strong gusts of wind and lack of shade. This three-mile portion of the race has been re-routed and participants will now travel through the Air Station's housing area.

Nearly 1400 runners started last year's marathon and half-marathon with more than 1000 finishers completing the event. This year officials predict a better participation and are forced to limit each race to 1000 entrants.

GET SET

Sergeant Ron Welch, 1st Battalion, 12th Marines crossed the finish line of last year's marathon first in a time of 2:40:59. The first woman marathon finisher Sharon Given, from North Point, N.Y., completed the course in 3:03:15.

The half-marathon winners were Doug Linsay of the Big Island, 1:12:58, and Honolulu's Connie Del Rosario in 1:29:45.

GO

The 26-mile, 385-yard course has been laid out although it has not yet been officially certified by the marathon association. But, the Windward Marathon Association assures that the race will be certified before starting day.

The entry fee, like that of last year, is $9; however, all entries must be postmarked no later than midnight April 16. On that date or after the 1000 entry quota is reached, applications will no longer be accepted.

All marathon and half-marathon finishers will receive T-shirts.

Volunteers are needed.

A part of the success of last year's races can be attributed to the more than 200 volunteers who helped set up the race, man the numerous aid stations and marshal the races.

They are needed again.

Everyone interested in becoming involved and making this year's event as successful as last year's are urged to call Judy Mangan at 261-2460 or write to the Windward Marathon Association, P.O. Box 1274, Kailua, HI 96734 or contact Runners Windward.

Leathernecks keep artillery rolling

Story and photos by Sgt Pepper Davis

During the Vietnam conflict, Marine infantry units kept the Viet Cong at bay and on the move with the help of some precise, heavy firepower — artillery.

But success probably would not have been possible if the big guns malfunctioned due to improper maintenance. That is why an expert repair section is as vital as the firepower itself.

MAINTENANCE Company, Brigade Service Support Group is the home of the 1st Marine Brigade's Artillery Repair Section. Their mission is simple: ensure that the 105mm and 155mm howitzers work.

According to Sergeant Ray Parris, section noncommissioned officer in charge, his repairmen are tasked with servicing six howitzers on a rotating basis every six months. "We tear the guns down to the axles and start from there. The main thing is to make sure that all parts are serviceable," he explained.

The Artillery Repair Section is comprised of seven Marines. They perform primarily third echelon work, but occasionally dabble on the fourth level. If a repair job is too complicated, the defected part or, in some cases, the entire gun is shipped to the Marine Corps Logistics Base in Barstow, Calif.

Sgt Parris said that three repairmen can easily disassemble a 4,980-pound 105mm gun, check the parts and reassemble it in three days. "But a 155 would require four to five days of work since the parts are bigger and heavier," he said. A 155mm howitzer weighs in at more than 13,000 pounds.

'Your spiritual gym is the chapel but you can work out any place'

by Father John Newton

We've all seen motion pictures featuring muscular men depicting legendary strongmen such as Hercules and Goliath. These films invariably pit the well-built young athlete against fierce real and mythical enemies over whom they always triumph. The female viewers sigh and the males go to their local gyms and start working out.

It is a fine thing to "stay in shape" physically... but it is even finer (and much more difficult) to stay in good spiritual shape. Let us forget it let us be reminded that the soul has "muscles" too. They are the virtues... faith, hope, charity, humility, purity, honesty, patience, etc. Like the muscles of the body, the "muscles" of the soul also show the lack of exercise and get "out of shape" easily.

The President has justifiably expressed concern over the "flabbiness" of American youth. Well, he might be concerned over it. The physical fiber of our youth, to a great degree, determines the future strength of our nation. However, to an even greater degree the spiritual stamina of a nation will determine its survival or downfall.

Next time someone says "let's see your muscle," don't be so quick to roll up your sleeve and flex your bicep. Look in the mirror of your conscience and take stock of your spiritual "bicep," the virtue of faith. Check your spiritual leg muscles, the virtues of hope and charity, your abdominal muscles of purity. Give them all a check and if your "mirror" image does not please you, get to work. Your spiritual "gym" is your chapel but you can "work out" any place where you can "lift the weights" of charity, humility, purity, faith, hope, etc. "Let's see your muscle."

Here's Kimo to explain

How to Fly a Kite Safely.

- 1 Always use wood and paper in your kite ... not wire or metal.
- 2 Always use dry string ... not wire or anything metallic.
- 3 Always fly your kite on days when there is no rain.
- 4 Always fly your kite FAR FROM ELECTRIC POWER LINES ... and remember these rules when flying your model airplane, too.
- 5 Always avoid busy streets and highways while flying your kite.
- 6 Always keep away from fallen wires.
- 7 Always fly your kite far from TV and radio antennas.
- 8 Always call us if your kite gets snagged in a power line. Do not pull the string or climb power poles.

Easy payments prove costly

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is part of a series prepared by the Mobilization Training Unit (Law) VA-05, Fredericksburg, Va.

One of the most important products purchased by Marines or their dependents is credit — in simple terms, the use of someone else's money today in exchange for a promise of repayment tomorrow.

There is no question that credit can be both a boon and a necessity, and laws exist to protect your right to obtain credit without being unfairly discriminated against on account of race, sex, age, or marital status.

WISELY HANDLED, credit can be a valuable tool, enabling you to purchase needed items or services now and pay for them at a later time, usually in installments.

While there is nothing inherently wrong about credit — indeed government and business would come to a standstill without it — consumer credit presents numerous pitfalls for the unwary. It is all too easy to let the lure of "easy payments" obligate you to a growing level of repayments, to the point where you may no longer be able to afford the necessities of life, let alone the luxuries you were asked to sign for on the dotted line.

The key to avoiding this kind of trap is to scrutinize your need for credit very closely. Ask yourself whether you really need the item you are purchasing and whether you can really afford to make the required monthly payments.

As with any other product, if you need credit, shop around. Credit costs money, and often quite a bit of money. For example, to purchase an $8,000 automobile by financing the purchase price at 18 percent interest in 48 monthly installments means that the total amount of your payments will be $11,280, or nearly $3,280 more than the cash price. At 21 percent, the same car will cost you a total of $11,890 in payments, or $611 more than the same car financed at 18 percent.

THE DIFFERENCE between the cash price and what you pay if you buy on credit is called a finance charge. The important thing to know is that not all sources of credit have the same finance charge, and you can often save a great deal of money by shopping around.

Fortunately, a Federal law called the Truth in Lending Act makes this easier by requiring creditors to tell you, among other things, the true interest rate (called the Annual Percentage Rate) and the total amount of the finance charge. When shopping for credit, you should always insist on a written truth-in-lending disclosure before you obligate yourself to make a purchase.

By shopping around, you may find, for example, that you can save considerably by borrowing the purchase price of needed household furniture from a credit union rather than charging it on a charge card or using the store's own time-payment plan. Sometimes, on the other hand, a dealer may offer very attractive financing.

The point is that you really cannot tell whether you are being offered a good deal without comparing truth-in-lending disclosures.

Stay Marine.

You can count on the Corps.

Don't miss the boat on bonuses up to $16,000.

Qualified Marines can make from $2,000 to $16,000 in reenlistment bonuses in both the Selective Reenlistment Bonus Program and the Agreement to Train Options Program. That may be $2,000 to $16,000 more than you'll get for taking a civilian job.

There are a few other things you should consider, too. Like low-cost medical care for the whole family. A chance to retire at half base-pay after 20 years...the day you retire. And considerable educational benefits. Take a long hard look, then.

Stay Marine.
