What is the measure of a man's greatness? Does it lie in his ability to save lives? Can it be found in being a husband and father? Does complete devotion and dedication to the Marine Corps make a man great?

Perhaps it is a combination of all of those that makes Staff Sergeant Dennis M. Minderman, Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron, the Marine Corps Serviceman of the Year for 1983.

On June 29, the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce presented the award to Minderman at a dinner at the Hale Koa Hotel. He earned the award for his proficiency and dedication to the Marine Corps. Minderman serves as noncommissioned officer-incharge of the hydraulics shop, SOMS, and as a quality assurance representative.

As a search and rescue crew chief, Minderman was instrumental in a life saving rescue of a 16-man reconnaissance team stranded in the Kahukus Training Area, 2,400 feet above sea level. The team was without food, water, and had an injured man. With no possible means of escape, they sent a radio measage for nesistance.

Minderman had just gone over the search and rescue helicopter to make sure everything was in good working order. "As a search and rescue crew chief, safety is my major concern," he said. "If anything goes wrong with the helicopter while in the middle of a mission, it's my responsibility."

Turbulence made flight difficult, and a landing was next to impossible. "They had marked their position with a smoke grenade, and I guided the pilots down to the trapped men," said Minderman. "Because of the dangerous air conditions, we were only able to set two wheels down on a narrow ridgeline. It was very difficult to keep the helicopter steady in the high wind. I opened the rear hatch and helped the men into the helicopter. It was a very dangerous rescue - anything could have gone wrong.

Minderman, a Covington, Ky. native, moved to Cincinnati, Ohio with his grandmother when he was 15. He became Golden Gloves boxing champ for three years in Cincinnati, and for two years in Cleveland, Ohio. "I really wanted to win the national title," confessed Minderman, "but I was getting older, and all my

Enrollment slated for all dependents

Representatives from the Electronic Data Systems Corp., Inc. have been contracted by the U.S. government to conduct the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System intensified enrollment. They will be conducting enrollment here until Sept. 16.

During this period of intensified enrollment, all service members needing to update their dependent enrollment in the data base are required to report to the DEERS office.

Printouts which contain information on sponsors and dependents enrolled in DEERS have been provided to the reporting units. These rosters will be of assistance to admin personnel in determining which members need to update their information in the data base. When reporting to the DEERS office, members need their military ID and dependent documentation, such as marriage certificate/birth certificates.

The DEERS office is located in Building 1096 (PMO) on the first deck, in the rear of the building. Hours of operation are from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. On the average, 60 cases can be handled daily.

The following schedule is being used by commanding officers in sending members of their units to the DEERS office:

3d Marines	8-17 Aug. 83

"Headquarters Company! Be advised this is an UNSECURE line, Pfc. Doe speaking, may I help you sir _

"What's happening Doe? I just got back from stateside leave," said the caller "Welcome back. Bet you'll never guess where I'm headed next week! Korea!" said Doe, "We're going to be there for a whole month, and I know we'll be pulling liberty in the capital city.

"Sounds great, but why are you taking so much leave?" asked the caller.

"It's not leave, the whole regiment is deploying for a combined arms exercise. They're even flying us there by aircraft."

The above conversation probably sounds familiar to many, not only from personal experiences but also from commercialization. It's obvious this fictional conversation abuses a most important principle of national security --Operation Security (OPSEC).

We need to pay more attention to what is said on our telephone lines," said Major General Robert E. Haebel, commanding general of the 3d Marine Amphibious Force. "Today we live in an era of microwave communications - very efficient, high density, directional radio links. This method of communicating is very susceptible to carefully the security implications of any monitoring by a number of people.

Telephone conversations pose security menace

According to the general, recent monitoring of phone lines by the Naval Security Group, which holds the charter for monitoring phone lines by request, has shown the need for increased education and implementation of OPSEC.

The tempo of operations and exercises involving units on Okinawa requires a lot of preparation. This leads to even more of a chance of security leaks through phone conversations.

"Any telephone that is used to discuss operational or logistical matters, and is not secured by 'speech cipher' equipment becomes a 'target conversation,' regardless of whether information passed is actually classified or not," stated Haebel.

Because of recent after-hours security inspections and telephone monitoring within the 3d Marine Division, an urgent need to "tighten up" on the telephone security has evolved

According to the general, several corrective actions are needed to combat the threat of security leakage.

First, do not discuss sensitive information over the telephone. Prior to using it, consider information that you intend to discuss. If classi-"Thus, these microwave radio links, which fied information must be discussed, use only Regularly brief all personnel of the vulnerability of telephone conversations and the threat to national security. In short, units should develop security education programs.

Utilize unit couriers, mail and secure message facilities whenever possible as a primary means of communicating with classified information.

Avoid the practice of leaving the phone offits cradle while searching for additional information. Background information could be overheard by the unsecure receiver.

The former Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Robert H. Barrow said: "The element of surprise is a fundamental principle of war and can represent the decisive advantage in military operations. Tactical or strategical surprise requires effective denial of infomration to the enemy through continuous concealment of capabilities and intentions. OPSEC is the principal means of achieving this end."

File claims fast

WASHINGTON - Claims for loss and damage to household goods should be filed as quickly as possible say officials of the Military Traffic Management Command.

There are several reasons behind MTMC's recommendation for prompt claim filing. Chief among them is quick reimbursement for loss and damage determined to be the fault of the mover. This claims information assists quality assurance specialists at the local transportation office in evaluating the performance of carriers, and forms the basis of denying future shipments to those firms with a history of high claims.

Additionally, there is less likelihood of misplacing important papers essential to substantiate a claim.

MTMC officials recommend early filing of a claim against the government because it is more convenient, less time consuming, and provides the government with timely claim information to evaluate household goods carriers.

SOMS air controllers return to home base

The last group of military air traffic controllers returned to military duties following two years of assistance to the Federal Aviation Administration at civilian airports and air traffic control facilities, according to a Navy message.

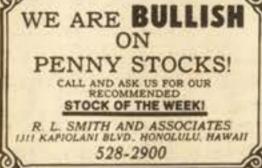

During that period, which begin in August 1981, the military controllers played a key role, working side by side, with nonstriking controllers and supervisors in maintaining safe travel by air through an effective air traffic control system.

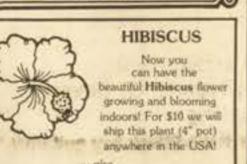

At the height of the deployment, 868 military controllers from the Navy, Marine Corps, Army and Air Force were assigned to 65 locations.

Gunnery Sergeant L.T. Martin and Staff Sergeant S.J. Swanson of Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron were assigned to the Honolulu International Airport. They returned to SOMS June 30

During the two years of deployment, 1,024 individual military air traffic controllers, including 164 Navy and Marine Corps. controllers, were assigned to support the nation's air transportation system.

The military controllers carned the respect of FAA controllers and supervisors for their job performance. Chester Anderson, tower manager at Chicago's O'Hare Airport, said the military controllers assigned to him "fit in perfectly" and he was "proud to have had them in his crew." FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms said, "I can't say enough about the performance of the military controllers as a we received the benefit of their capability and group performance.

"We've got every activity from athletics to zoonosis, and you can be a part of it all though Special Services," said Lieutenant Colonel David Pedersen, Special Services director here.

"Providing a well-rounded morale, welfare and recreation program for Marines and their dependents is what we're all about," he said. "It helps everyone enjoy the fine opportunities we have here in Hawaii."

Special Services is broken down into three branches: recreation, activities and athletics.

"People are not going to participate in activities if they don't get anything out of it," said John Daniels, recreation branch head. "We provide challenging and creative things to do, with directive and non-directive activities. Our goal is to give people the opportunity to develop new interests and meet other people of like interests."

The activities branch serves the personal needs of dependents. 'We have facilities available for children of working parents," said Bill Lang, activities branch head. "We have a Child Care Center, open six days a week; a Keiki Drop-in Center, open five days a week and a pre-school. There's also a Zoonosis Clinic which involves animal care and food inspections."

Dependent recreation also falls under the activities branch and includes body dynamics, martial arts, gymnastics, softball, jazzercise, youth athletics and the Teen Club.

"Recreational housing is available through the activities branch," said Lang. "There are 14 guest cottages and a 24-unit temporary lodging facility for active duty and retired members and their families." The Station Library has a full gamut of fiction and non-fiction books. Recreational tickets for concerts, dinner shows and tourist attractions throughout the island are also available through the activities branch.

The athletic branch serves primarily active duty Marines. "We have intramural and varsity programs for Marines in all major sports," said Captain Robert Johnson, athletics branch head.

'Motor T' keeps birds flying

Marine aircraft can't fly without the help of motor transport trucks.

The trucks aren't used to pull the aircraft with long ropes or to push them fast enough to clear the ground, but, "We do everything from hauling aircraft parts and ordnance to refueling transpac aircraft," said Gunnery Sergeant Stanley Watts, noncommissioned officer-in-charge of Motor Transport Section, Marine Air Base Squadron-24.

And, when MABS-24 needs something hauled, the unit calls on its motor transport section. Statistics indicate that the paperwork drill and phone calls have been sizzling for the past nine months,

From October 1982 until June 1983, the section logged in 132,966 miles, carried approximately 3,369,820 pounds of cargo and transported 36,585 passengers. MABS-24 motor transport section is a detachment of Marine Wing Support Group-17 based in Okinawa, Japan The detachment's primary mission is to provide motor transport support to Marine Aircraft Groop 21.

It's tasked with direct support of deployed squadrons and support of the brigade in garrison "We also conduct an M-970 refueler/ defueler operator's course for brigade personnel every six months," said Watts.

MABS-24 motor transport is broken down into three sections: operations, maintenance and headquarters. "There are 53 persons assigned to this motor pool," said Watta. Thirty three work with vehicles," he continued. 'Out of that 33, 16 are in the operations section.

Operations handles a 24 vehicle per day commitment Monday through Friday with a duty drive standing by 24 hours a day. "Whenever the drivers are in the compound, most of their time is apent attending to their vehicles, then it's out and about again," said Sergeant Johnny Turner, dispatcher.

The maintenance section performs second echelon maintenance on the vehicles. Second echelon maintenance includes brake jobs, minor engine repairs and tuneups," said Sergeant Daniel Gay, shop chief 'We make sure the vehicles are sufe before they go out," he continued. "The maintenance section performs their task with four mechanics," said Watts.

Headquarters section handles all administrative matters, such as maintenance management procedures, records and filing, ordering parts, and maintaining and apdating all publications

The section also conducts driving classes for pick-ups and jeeps.

Watts joked that the motor transport Marines do not believe in holidays because, being on call any day of the week, those days are the same as any other.

Watts' sentiments are not complaints. They are realities that motor transport Marines must live with because the MAG must move, and their job is to keep it mobile.

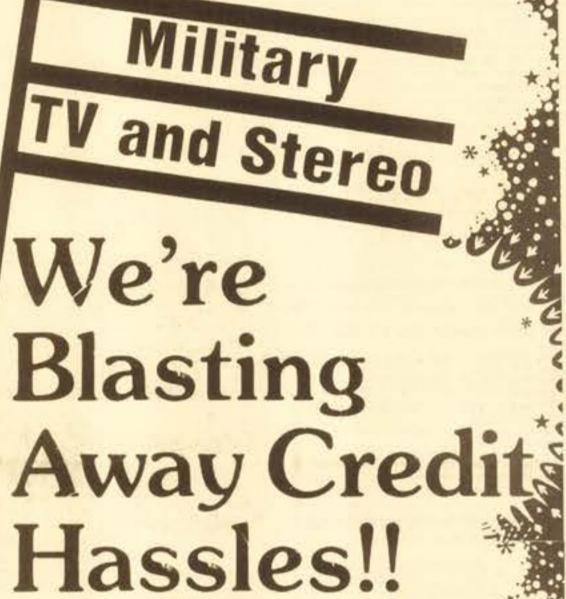

If oftens appears to be a thankless task for the drivers and mechanics. As a morale booster and competitive incentive, the unit presents two monthly recognition awards; Driver of the Month and Mechanic of the Month. The awards are based on daily personal appearance. knowledge of motor transport and driving and mechanical skills. The awards are designed to let the Marines know that their efforts are not ignored - they're very much appreciated.

Beirut in '58 - same as today

Twenty-five years ago, Marines were in Beirut, Lebanon, a Middle East hot spot, for the same reason they are today, to help stabilize the Mediterranean country where hostilities between warring factions are a way of life.

They stormed ashore July 15, 1958, unopposed but under a death threat. 'You tell those Marines that if one Marine sets foot on the soil of my country, I will regard it as an act of aggression and commit forces against them," said a Beirut rebel leader. The Marines landed anyway.

Khalde Beach was the chosen site for the landing and was very near where Marines would land a quarter of a century later. Four miles from the city of Beirut and 700 yards from Beirut International Airport, it soldier replied he had no such orders but would have to check with his captain.

As this situation developed, another incident brewed at the BLT 3/6 sector. A company commanding officer and his first sergeant were surrounded by excited Lebanese troops, who kept their weapons trained on the pair. The Lebanese refused to allow the captain's company to occupy the position. They then released the company first sergeant, who was to bring back the battalion commander. The battalion commander and the Lebanese decided the two forces would remain in place and await further orders.

Meanwhile, top level officials worked out a solution for BLT 2/2 to

One of the most potentially dangerous incidents occurred July 19 at the airfield. Bebels had been firing on American aircraft as they landed. A Marine patrol searched for them and became involved in a three cornered fire fight, not only with rebels but with the Lehanese police who had mistaken the Marines for rebels. Lebanese army units moved into the area and halted the rebel harrassment.

By the end of July, Marines and U.S. Army troops had consolidated their final positions. It was a defense perimeter extending 20 miles and protecting Beirut from attack in any direction

Marines aid in sea rescues

by Cpl Randy D. Dewey

"This is the Joint Rescue Center, Honolulu; we have a mayday from a sailing ship, north, northeast of Lihue, Kauai, Both of our helicopters are down; we need your assistance.'

The call goes out, bring in the Marines. This time the United States Coast Guard requests aid from Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron. SOMS has long since held search and rescue coast responsibility for the Windward side of Oahu, from Waimea Bay to Hanauma Bay. However, when the only two helicopters operated by the Coast Guard are grounded, SOMS is requested to take island-wide SAR.

Everyone was already off duty when the call from the Coast Guard-operated Joint Rescue Center came into the Weather Center at SOMS, They had received a mayday from the sailing ship "Mariko" which was shipping water. The SOMS-operated HH46A, known as Pedro, arrived at the scene at approximately 8:45 p.m.

A parachute flare fired from the survivor marked his position. Pedro made a low pass and dropped three MK-58 water flares to further distinguish survivor position. The rescue maneuvers were hampered by darkness, no visible horizon, and gusting winds. Once in a stable hover, Sergeant Mike Romero, SAR qualified swimmer, was lowered by hoist to the survivor's position. Upon securing the survivor. Romero sank the life raft, and he and the survivor were hoisted to safety.

"We have to be able to assume responsibility for any emergency the Coast Guard is unable to handle, as well as have a qualified crew in the rear, in case a military emergency should arise," said Captain Raymond Betros.

During one military emergency, a 16-man reconnaissance team was trapped on a ledge 2,800 feet high, with no food or water and an injured man. They had been on maneuvers on the Kahuku Training Area when their trail had been washed away. They called Search and Rescue and a team was dispatched immediately. With only enough room for two wheels on a narrow ridge line, the 16 men were successfully rescued.

The SAR team is usually made up of four individuals - pilot, copilot, crew chief and swimmer. Each crew member on a SAR mission receives a rescue award tie pin from the Boeing Company in appreciation of life saving service.

Although search and rescue is an important facet, the primary mission of SOMS is just as important. That mission is to support the flight operations of tenant units and commands, providing them with a "ready deck" and all the auxillary support necessary to conduct flight operations safely and efficiently.

To insure the safety and effectiveness of this operation, the squadron provides crash boat service, crash crew firefighting. weapons service, explosive ordnance service, air traffic control, communication, ground electronics maintenance, telephone service and aircraft maintenance. In addition, SOMS is tasked to provide flight support for aircrew combat readiness training for Headquarters, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, and the nir station, and other aviators as requested.

Is the responsibility too great for the Marines at SOMS to handle? Not according to Captain Glenn Cox, SOMS pilot, who puts it into perspective, "Whonever we save a life, it all becomes worthwhile.

State sets restraint law

A new Hawaiian state law became effective July 1 requiring all children younger than 4 to be properly restrained in motor vehicles.

If the child is younger than 3 he should be properly restrained in a car seat approved by the Department of Transportation. If the child is 3, but less than 4, he should be properly restrained in a child car seat or seat belt.

The Family Service Center, Building 255, has a limited number of car seats available for 30 day loan period on a first come, first serve basis. Interested people may call 257-2179 for information.

Enforcement of the law started Aug. 1 aboard the air station. The delay from July 1 to Aug. 1 was to provide sufficient time for service members to purchase car seats. For further information, contact either the Station Safety Office at 257-2096 or the Provost Marshal's Office at 257-2103.

competition was getting younger. I can still hold my own when I have to, though.

Because he always liked the Marines, Minderman joined in 1972. He was a seagoing Marine aboard the USS Chicago for 21/2 years, during which time he was married. After approximately seven years in New River Air Station, Jacksonville, N.C., he arrived in Hawaii.

When asked what the Marine Corps' major asset is, Minderman replied, "The best discipline is in the Marine Corps, and we can do more with what we have than any other branch of the armed forces.

He also has a great admiration for the new Marine Corps drug policy, "I don't believe in giving drug users a second chance. If they get busted for urinalysis, get rid of them. I like to see people in the Marine Corps who really want to be here.

Minderman is an avid builder of plastic model cars, planes, ships, and helicopters, which he sometimes makes for his two sons and daughter. "I've got a duplicate of the search and rescue Minderman also plays intramural softball with the SOMS' team, but coaches most of the time. His team has two wins and no losses.

His favorite sport is a type of golf known as "catfighting," A group of players tee off regularly. but whichever ball is closest to the hole, is the spot at which they all play the ball next. To add a little interest, there are liquid refreshments every few holes to quench a catfighter's parching thirst.

Although he's serviceman of the year, this 30-year-old Marine has far to go. He'll be on his way to Okinawa, Japan in September. "I'm not happy about leaving my wife and kids for a year, but it's something that has to be done. I did it before when I was on sea duty and didn't like it any more then, but my duty lies with the Marine Corps."

Minderman plans to be a career Marine with a goal of becoming a Master Gunnery Sergeant by retirement. He also dreams about some day being a pilot and flying jets that he can only build models of now.

MTD riding lawn mowers pose potential fire hazard

Exchange customers who own a MTD Riding Lawn Mower (Model 133-504A) should be aware of a potential fire hazard due to improper battery installation by themselves or the dealer.

The manufacturer has advised that a short circuit may occur if the battery cable fittings at the positive post come in contact with the mower's metal battery hold-down bracket. The result can energize the throttle control cable and melt the fuel line.

The hazard can be corrected by installing a new insulated replacement bracket available free from MTD. Owners of the model affected should not use their mowers until they have obtained and replaced the brackets.

Mower owners may obtain a new bracket by calling MTD at (216) 225-2600, ext. 548 or by writing to MTD Products Inc., P.O. Box 36900, Cleveland, OH 44136, All MTD mowers manufactured after April 19, 1983 have the new bracket and do not need a replacement.

Elections:

Illinois lauds voters

The Illinois State Board of Elections is lauding the success of the state's new consolidated election law.

The April 12 consolidated election saw 45 percent of the state's registered voters go to the polls to vote for a variety of municipal offices.

The odd-numbered year elections, for a multitude of local offices and referenda, are consolidated into three elections during the 12month period.

The Illinois consolidation was designed to improve voter participation in local elections and make the voting process more uniform by using the same poll hours and the same polling places.

The final consolidation election for 1983 will be Nov. 8, when school hoard members, community college trustees, township land commissioners, and fire protection district trustees are elected.

The Illinois "Consolidation Election Law" is complex and voters who wish to have more details should write to the election official in their county of residence.

Other questions pertaining to voting procedures can be answered by the voting officer or counselor in each military unit or by writing the Director, Federal Voting Assistance Program. Department of Defense, Washington, D.C. 20301 or by calling Autovon 224-4960/4928 or (202) 694-4960/4928.

Utah conducts elections

Cities and towns throughout the state of Utah will conduct primary elections on Oct. 4, with the general election set for Nov. 2. Military personnel and civilians who maintain a legal residence is. Utah, except those persons claiming voting rights under the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act, are entitled to cast absentee ballots in these elections.

A single federal post card application (FPCA), mailed to the county clerk in the county of voting residence serves as a request for temporary registration and an absentee ballot. Those permanently registered to vote in Utah may request an absentee ballot by submitting a completed FPCA to their county clerk.

Persons within the United States must apply for an absentee ballot not later than five days before the election and those overseas not later than 20 days before. Normally, absentee ballots requested by FPCA will be processed not earlier than 30 days before an election.

Absentee ballots must be returned to the county clerk by the close of polls on election day or be clearly postmarked not later than the day before the election and received by election officials not later than noon on the day of the official vote count following the election.

Alabamans cast ballots

A special election prompted by reapportionment in Alabama is set for Sept. 27. All seats in the state House and Senate won by the incumbents in the 1982 election will be at stake. The winners will serve a three year term as a result of this election only.

Alabama residents who have not already registered may apply simultaneously for registration and an absentee ballot by mailing a single completed Federal Post Card Application to the board of registrars in the county of their voting residence. Residents who are already registered should send an FPCA for an absentee ballot to the absentee election manager in the county of their voting residence not earlier than 60 days and not less than five days before the election.

Contact your local voting officer for additional information on voter eligibility and procedures.

31st MAU participates in Cobra Gold '83

A joint training exercise, "Cobra Gold 83," involving the armed forces of Thailand and the United States, ended Aug. 1.

The exercise was conducted in a variety of locations in and around the gulf of Thailand. This year's exercise was the second in the Cobra Gold series and the latest in a continuing series of Thai/U.S. military exercises designed to strengthen the ability of Thailand's armed forces to defend its country.

The exercises provide training for participating Thai and U.S. commanders and their staffs in planning, command and control, and execution of air, sea and amphibious operations.

Thai and U.S. military personnel were also involved in mine-laying and sweeping, explosive ordnance disposal and special warfare operations. "Cobra Gold 83" included multi-threat operations at sea and ended with an amphibious assault by Thai and U.S. Marines with subsequent operations ashore.

Seventh Fleet Navy and Marine Corps units participating in "Cobra Gold 83" included Commander Amphibious Squadron 1; Commander Destroyer Squadron 25; The 31st Marina Amphibious unit, embarked aboard the USS Tarawa, Duluth and Frederick; USS New Jersey; USS Elliott; USS John A. Moore; USS Badger; USS Callaghan; USNS Spica; USNS Passumpsic; Bravo Company, 1st Battalion, 7th Marines; detachments from Fleet Composite Squadron 5 and Patrol Squadron 6; and detachments from Explosive Ordnance Disposal Group 1, Mobile Mine Assembly Group 9 and Navy Special Warfare Unit 1.

Lepers

remained uncommercialized over the years, the history of the colony has been difficult and sometimes violent.

In Jan. 6, 1866, the first patients arrived on Molokai. This was a few months after the passage of the segregation act under King Kamehameha V and 31 years after the first reported case of leprosy in Hawaii.

The patients were first located on the north coast penninsula of Kalawao, until the early 1930s when it moved to Kalaupapa. In 1890, there were more than 1,200 active cases of the disease at the small settlement.

Living conditions in the early days were extremely bad. Patients were expected to grow their own food and pretty much take care of themselves and their every need. This failed miserably as patients were frequently not capable of performing these tasks. Housing was very poor and unsanitary, food was often in short supply, medical cure was irregular and water was not readily available as they had to hike many miles to draw fresh water.

In 1871, a Protestant church was constructed and the first religious services were held. Since then, many faiths have started missions on the island to lend a hand in spiritual comfort. Probably the most famous of the religious missionaries to come to the island and the settlement arrived in 1872.

Father Dumien de Veuster arrived on the island at that time to work and live among the patients and provide spiritual guidance. He was responsible for many significant improvemments at the settlement. Among them was the installation of the first pipeline to the village which made possible the first running supply of fresh water to the patients.

He also established the island's first Catholic church, which be built by hand, He unfortunately, fell victim to leprosy in 1899 and was buried alongside the church he had built. In 1936, as a result of a request from King Leopold of Belgium, Father Damien's remains were moved to that country.

Today, the government provides all necessities at no cost to the patients. Many of the patients earn wages for work performed at various jobs in the operation and maintenance of the settlement. About 80 percent of the patients receive an allowance for food and do their own cooking, housekeeping and gardening. The remainder of the patients live to unit houses with a central dining facility.

Although this may seem like an isolation area for the patients who can no longer fit into society. Halstead insists that the patients are just as clear-minded as any other healthy person.

Lance Corporat Charland Izbinski, a clarines concurrent dist said, "I can't wan to make back here next year. I really had a good time.

Former Marine writes way to fame

by GySgt Judy Vina

There are a lot of corporais around the administrative field who don't know about the astounding success of a former USMC "Remington Raider." Back in 1957, Corporal Joseph

Wambaugh was released from active duty and has been pounding out best-selling novels and screenplays ever since. His successes include "The New Centurians," "The Choirboys," "The Blue Knight," "The Onion Field" and "The Black Marble."

On July 8, 1954, Wambaugh, an East Pittsburgh native, enlisted in Los Angeles, where his family lived for three years. "It was n great experience for a 17-year-old lad just out o f high school," Wambaugh said in a recent letter to Parcis Island about his San Diego boot camp days.

His first assignment came that October when he joined a Marine aviation unit al Jacksonville. N.C. He left there in January 1955 and served in the administrative capacity with Marine Aircraft Group-15, at Macine Corps Air. Station, El Toro.

About 15 months later. Wambaugh arrived at Camp Pendloton where he performed administrative clork daties with Headquarters Company, Headquarters Battalion Cpl. Wambaugh left the active ranks on April 30, 1962 and stayed with the Reserves until July 7, 1962

After his discharge, he first worked in a steel mill studying at might, with hopes of becoming a teacher. Then in 1900 he joined the Los Angeles Police Department, following in his father's botsteps, In his 14 years with the LAPD, Warnbaugh reached the runk of detective sergeant, and kept drawers full of notes about his experiences and observations. He thought the information would make interesting ceading.

When he finally attempted writing short stories, however, the rejection ships flowed in. But the Atlantic Monthly was impressed and offered him words of encouragement. Wambaugh took that advice and wrote "The New Centurians," published in 1971, about the daily lives of three policemen and how they faced the "front line" against crime and corruption. More than two million copies were sold.

The next year, his second effort sold more than one million copies in paperback alone. "The Blue Knight" told the story of Bumper Morgan, a lonely and dedicated 50-year-old policeman. William Holden played the character in a 1973 television mini-series adaptation of the novel, and George Kennedy later hundled the role in a cegular TV series.

Wambaugh resigned from the police force in 1974, citing his "celebrity" status as reason for resigning. It greatly saddened him to leave police work. "There were so many telephone calls that the other detectives had to screen them for mo. I had to stop it all," he explained in an interview.

Shortly thereafter he started writing "The Choirboys," the biggest seller of all his novels. Southern Humanities Review of Auburn University called it a 'darkly comic work.'

His next novel, "The Onion Field," required meticulous research. Wambaugh wrote a shocking story about two thugs who killed a policeman in coldblood in an onion field near Bakersfield, Calif. The 1979 movie was praised by citics as one of the best of the year.

Wambaugh's most recent work includes "The Glitter Dome," published in 1981 and "The Delta Star," published this year.

New sergeant learns meaning of 'wet dow

by Sgt Wendy A. McCort

MARINE CORPS AIR STA-TION, YUMA, Ariz - 1 was promoted recently and immediately after the guys forcefully pinned on my new stripe, talk began about my "wet down" party.

This was all kind of new to me, so in an effort 10 keep with proper Marine Corps traditions, I set out to learn what a "wet down" really was and where it came from

My first source of reference was an individual to whom all good Marines turn when they face a seemingly unanswerable question: the sergeant major."

From SgtMaj N.G. Adamson, station sergeant major, I learned that the term "wet down' originated from the tradition of physically drenching a newly promoted staff NCO. This could be done with a garden hose, a convenient ocean, or a lot of. buckets. Following the wetting down, the promotee was taken to the staff NCO rlub for the first time, treated to two drinks, and given instructions on how to be an effective staff NCO; Adamson talked with pride of his wet down, which followed these traditions.

Another source that was useful in determining the origin of this deep-rooted tradition was a book I found in the Station Library entitled "Welcome Aboard - An Informal Guide for the Naval Officer's Wife."

In this book I found a short but informative section on the wet down party. It was in the chapter labeled "Social Do's and Don'ts." Author Jean Ebbert writes, from the Naval tradition of pouring a drink or some sait water on the new stripe so as to render it. less shiny, more in keeping with its older companion stripes."

Ebbert continues by explaining that in more contemporary times. the wet down is a celebration of a promotion, held at either the home of the promotee or the appropriate club, Usually a wet down is held on the first payday following the promotion, according to Ebbert.

According to the "Officer's Wive's Handbook" - an instructional guide given to the wives of newly commissioned Marine Corps officers - the custom began "when a newly promoted officer had his new insignia placed in a glass of 'spirity' to 'wet it down.' He was given the order to drink every drop until it (the insignia) was dry."

Finally I presented Second

Lieutenant J.G. Smith, station protocal officer and adjutant, with my problem. She spent three and a half hours searching through her reference guides and manuals before telling me, "it's safe to assume that any newly promoted Marine can have a 'wet down' in celebration of their promotion."

SPORTS Marine wins sailing race

It was victory at sea - Marine style — for Captain Mike Atwell, Marine Fighter Attack Squadron 212, as he sailed to first place in the Hawaii Hobie Cat State Championship Regatta, conducted Saturday and Sunday on Knneohe Bay.

Atwell and his wife, Judi, guided their "Phantom II" boat to the "C" fleet (beginner) championship.

"It's kind of ironic," Atwell remarked. "I fly F-4s (Phantom jets) during the week, and I fly my boat 'Phantom II' across the water during the weekends. This time, it flew us to victory for the first time in three years.

Capturing second place in the beginners' category were Tony Rodrigues and Russell Orrick. Alec and Jim Orrick took third.

"A" fleet spoils fell to Dean Froome and Danny McFauil, followed by John and Anikka Driscoll, with John Myhre and Patti Paul taking third.

In the "B" fleet, Dean Mailheau and Dan Lackey finished first, with Tom and John Burke taking second, and Sam Holden and Bonnie Castongarry capturing third.

Racers and officials were pleased with the physical features of Kancohe Bay. "It's like a big lake." said Dee Palama, association secretary. "Places like Kailua Beach Park, with its large waves, are not good for sailboat racing because you can't pick up speed.

"The racers can reach speeds of 20-25 miles per hour here," she added, "enough to pull a water skier behind them.

Persons interested in the Hobie Cat Association should contact Palama at 836-4533.

Former Marine golfer becomes 'people's pro'

by GySgt Judy Vina

In 1958, long before Lee Trevino became one of the most colorful and popular golfers in history, the 17-year-old Texan joined the Marine Corps. For two years he was a machine-gunner until it. became obvious his aiming skills were far more deadly on a fairway than a firing range. So, Trevino was transferred from Company D. 3d Battalion, 3d Marine Division to the Division Special Services' Golf 'Team.

His tenure as a military goifer from 1958 to 1959 helped him home in on untapped talents so much so, that his present biography reads, "This taste of golf would later prove to be the initial force to the career of Lee Trevina." Besides being the individual champion of the 1959 Okinawa Chamber of Commerce Tournament, Trevino helped the Marine team to successive victories in Interservice competition.

As a lad in Texas, Trevino's interest in golf was primarily monetary. Raised in a barrio home, the Chicano youngster earned money shining shoes and often gathering golf halls hit into out of bound areas by players from a nearby country club course. The story goes that one day, while he was searching for balls to sell back to golfers, he found an iron tossed over a fence by an angry player. Well, the disgrantled player's loss was Trevino's gain. and the rest is history.

That history was further enriched when Trevino, newly discharged from the Corps in 1960, took the experience he'd gained as a Marine golfer and got a job as a pro for a driving range. He then became an assistant pro for two years at an El Paso club. Trevino went on to win the Texas Open (1965) and the New Mexico Open (1966).

In 1967, Trevino was named Golf Rookie of the Year. The next year, he captured the U.S. and Hawaiian opens, took the Tucson Open in 1969 and 1970, and the World Cup in 1969 and 1971

His charming rapport and jokes with the gallery quickly established him as a crowdpleaser. The crowds gathered around him wherever he played, so much so he once coined them as 'fleas," and the nickname "Lee's fleas" is still used to describe his loyal fans. Once when asked about how it felt to win the $30,000 purse at the U.S. Open, Trevino joked that he just might buy the Alamo and give it back to Mexico. His most remarkable success came in 1971 when, within a period of a month, he captured the U.S. Open plus the British and Canadian titles - the first player to do so. Consequently, he was named AP and PGA Player of the Year and received the Golden Tee Award. Two years later he became the fourth player in history to win more than one million dollars in his career Nicknamed "Super Mex," Lee Trevino is admired by golf lovers for his skills and genuine affection for the fans on the aidelines. It isn't any wonder the former Marine golfer-turned pro has been called "the people's pro.
