Aw, Nuts! That's the nuttiest idea that was ever heard. But not crazy "nuts" if you please — macadamia nuts you see, 1,098 pounds of them on their way to Marines and sailors off the coast of Lebanon as a gift from the 3d Marine Regiment. This exotic gift idea was the brainchild of Colonel

RH: Esau, commanding officer, 3d Marines here, who designed the shipment as a means of expressing Hawaii Marine support for their counterparts from the 22d Marine Amphibious Unit, off the coast of Lebanon.

"To all who shall see these presents greetings," stated the 3d Marine Regiment letter that accompanied the nuts. "Know ye, that reposing special trust and confidence in the fidelity and abilities of our brother Marines and sailors of the 22d abilities of our protiner mannes and sailors of the 22d MAU, the hub of the multinational peacekeeping force off the coast of Lebanon, we, the Marines and sailors of the 3d Marines, 1st Marine Brigade, Kancohe Bay, Hawaii, have joined together to share with you, our brothers in arms, a most delectable and sought-after export of the Hawaiian Islands — macadamia nuts." macadamia nuts.

"I was reading the Public Affairs Summary around Christmastime when I discovered the address for the Marines in Lebanon," said the colonel. "I came upon the idea of sending something uniquely Hawaiian to the Marines of the 22d MAU that would truly bring them joy and happiness as well as express our sincere support. supp

"I decided upon macadamia nuts," he continued, "and so I asked my officers if they could find support. for my proposition among the rest of the 3d Marines. The response was amazing. In the course of only one payday, a total of $2,225 was collected by voluntary donations throughout 3d Marines. The Marines here thought the idea was arrest because if we could d' be thought the idea was great, because if we couldn't be over there with the peacekeeping Marines, then we could at least send a small part of Hawaii to them." The $2,225 was exchanged at Hawaiian Candies and Nuts, Limited, for approximately $4,800 worth of chocolate-covered and plain macadamia nuts.

NEW JERSE

The Marines of the 22d MAU should be enjoying their taste of Hawaii now. And so from the 3d Marines, "This delicacy is a small yet pleasantly palatable expression of our thoughts, prayers, admiration and pride in your collective professional efforts while executing a most challenging mission, far from your loved ones. "Enjoy and share with us, for we, the 3d Marines and countless others here in the islands, appreciate your many sacrifices for country and Corps. Semper Fil"

"The supplier very generously contributed a discount of more than $2,500 as a way to express support for the peacekeeping Marines," said Esau. "There will be enough boxes of macadamia nuts for everyone, and then some." Marine Aircraft Group-24 here arranged for the transportation of the 1,098-pound shipment of macadamia nuts to Brigadier General James Joy, commander, 22d MAU. bySSgt W.S. Saunders

The Air Station has been buzzing with the sounds of construction projects since Feb. 27, when a 50-man detachment of 27, when a 50-man detachment of reserve Seabees swarmed aboard for their annual training. The Seabees, from Reserve Naval Mobile Construction Battalion-18, headquartered in Seattle, Wash., are representa-tives of three Northwestern states: Washington, Oregon, and Idaho. They are the first of two detachments of Seabees to work on a series of construction projects on a series of construction projects here. The projects include the construction of four picnic pavilions. Two of the pavilions will be located in the open field adjacent to Anderson Hall, one at Hale Koa Beach and one along side the Special Services boathouse. The Seabees are also constructing a 600-foot sidewalk east of the bowling alley leading to the termine the track.

They are also repairing the Station's boat launching facility, replacing the steel portion of the ramp with concrete; rebuilding and remodeling the restrooms re located at Fort Hase Beach; erecting two of four pre-enginessed buildings for Marine Aircraft Control Squadron-2 and, putting in a little more than a mile of new golf cart paths on the golf course.

"The new golf paths will be an asset to the course, especially during the rainy sesson," said Terry Young, golf pro atthe course here. "When it rains, the fairways "The new golf paths will be get flooded with as much as 4 feet of water. With the new paths, we

"The projects are going well," said Lieutenant L.W. Starr, officer-in-charge of the detach-ment. "These men are profession-als. They take pride in their work and they want the finished and they want the finished product to reflect favorably on themselves as well as the Navy." "This is really a nice place to work," said Steelworker Ron Sooy, from Spokane, Wash. as he glanced out to the idylic tropic setting of the Koolau mountain range. HAMS-24 celebrates its 42nd anniversary

Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron-24 celebrated its 42nd anniversary Thursday with a family-style cookout attended by more than 400 leathernecks and guests at Fort Hase Beach Beach.

The day's activities were highlighted by a relay run, won by H&MS Ordnance, and a morale-boosting catfight at the Station golf course.

The squadron began its Marine Corps career March 1, 1942, at MCAS Ewa, Oahu, Hawaii, but the devildogs didn't stay there long. World War II found Headquarters and Service Squidron-24 (as it was called then), and its parent command, Marine Aircraft Group-24, in the heat of the Pacific campsign. The unit

The squadron returned to the United States in 1949, and spent the next 19 years with the 2d MAW at MCAS Cherry Point, N.C. The unit received its current designation in 1954, after carrying several other names. H&MS-24 finally came home to roost in 1968, when it became part of the 1st Marine Brigade here. The squadron, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel M.M. Sheedy, provides MAG-24 with administrative, logistical and maintenance support — a job the squadron's been doing for 42 years.

Competitive bidding took place among the federal government and private enterprise companies in accordance with Department of Defense waste elimination guidelines, which were designed in 1982 to ensure the "most ecconomaical method of performance." "In the commercial activities program, we look at functions here on Station as directed by regulations and determine whether it's

"We wrote the contracts and solicited bids from commercial companies interested in coming on Station and doing the work. At the same time, we estimated how much it would cost the government to continue doing it with our own civil servants."

civil servants." Had the government's bid for one of the contracts been higher than any civilian estimate, performance of the work would have been contracted out to civilian companies. "We put our hid in the hid box along with everyone from the civilian community who wanted the job." Morgan said. "And the lowest hid won. If we had not won, then the employment of our civilians would have been terminated, and a civilian contractor would have come on the Station to do the work for us. But since we had the lowest bid, the government is doing its job more efficiently than any contractors could. So, our civilians stay on the payroll."

The competitive bidding process is part of a five-year review of approximately 13 of the mili-tary's commercial activities and is scheduled to conclude in 1987. If enough money is saved; the five-year process may be repeated.

Women in combat? You can bet your combat boots they were

by MSgt Theresa Gallagher

Women in combat is an emotional issue as illustrated by a 1979 Washington Post article about military academies' acceptance of women. The Post reported that a West Point cadet was verhally harrassed and physically threatened after reporting another cadet who said he would never follow a female into battle but would "shoot her in the hack first.

Perhaps the young cadet may have thought differently about his female counterpart if his military history had been more complete

Nevertheless, women have served along side men in combat since this nation's beginning.

In Colonial America when women were legally on a part with criminals, cattle and insang persons, patriots such as Deborah Sampson disguised themselves as men, enlisted and fought in the American Revolution.

Others like Molly Pitcher and Margaret Cobin went into battle to help their husbands. When their men were killed, they and many like them, took over the cannons and continued the Revolutionary War effort.

Staying at home during the War Between the States was out of the question for the more than 400

Twentieth century women in the medical field have been shot at, killed in action and have become prisoners of war. Nearly 100 Army and Navy nurses were POWs for three years in the Philippines during World War II.

Information on women's activities during the Korean conflict is sketchy at best, but even now, Army women share the dangers near the 38th parallel there.

More than 7,000 women earned combat pay in southeast Asia during the Vietnam War. Some were killed, others were wounded,

It doesn't really matter what they were told. Women served in combat in the past — Department of Defense records prove that — and then there's the future.

Women volunteers ree a Marine to fight

During the week of March 4-10, the nation will recognize the vital contribution women have made in the development, progress and the defense of our country.

Stay Marine

Have medical insurance without the big premium.

Civilians might pay $50, $60, $70 or more each month for medical insurance. Whether medical care is needed or not. Whereas, a Marine has absolutely no monthly, yearly or any other kind of medical-insurance premium to pay. If you use the mil-itary medical facilities, you may pay for a few meals but only if you stay over night. If you use CHAMPUS, you pay only a small percentage of the Premium-free medical insurance is something to think about if you're thinking about leaving the Corps. There, the premium comes right out of your pocket. Consider your other benefits like educational assistance, retirement, the pride of being a Marine and security. You'll find ...

dominated the competition, which included four team and five individual events. The five-man team events found four contenders, as City and County A and B teams pitted their skills against a civilian team from Hickam Air Force Base and the leatherneck lifeguards here. The first team event, which also counted as an individual event, set the stage for overall individual winners as the five-man C&C A team finish in the 1,000-meter swim with fins. Thurston Hillen took first, followed by Ryan Fernandez and Kendall Rust. The first Marine to finish was Sergeant Joe Lovan, who came in ninth. ninth

Youth sports open avenues for confidence and competition

Story and photos by Cpl Christopher Wood

It's an athletic tradition. Young It's an athletic tradition. Young men follow in the sneaker steps of their fathers by excelling or at least "getting by" in the sport of their choice. But for members of the Kaneohe Hawks youth basketball team, custom isbut one factor in athletic motivation. "A lot of these kids are loners who are tired of sitting at home twiddling their thumbs," said Master Sergeant Clyde Harrison.

"We have talent here at Kaneohe, but not as much as other teams," said Harrison, disbursing chief for the Air Station. "But I feel that our coaches are just as good as those anywhere else. And, we do have a lot of good athletes — some of whom could become out-standing. But the pickings aren't as good as out in civihan life."

Traveling to compete with some of those other "pickings" is something akin to a Hawalian safari for many of the kids, the parents of whom live relatively isolated lives.

"There are kids whose parents have lived on this base for three years and have rarely gone out the gate," Harrison said. "That's hard to believe, hut it's true! When I take one of these boys to a hase across the island, it's like he's gone to a foreign country. His eyes get hig, and it's like 'wow! Look at that. I didn't know that was there!' He gets very excited and happy about it. And that's what makes these trips so special."

the youth sports program in general. "Everybody gets a chance to play," said Konneth Magoon, son of Gunnery Sergeant Michael Magoon, Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron-463. "You get to know a lot of people better, and you make a lot of feinede and you make a lot of friends. Everybody feels good about themselves after the game, and we talk about how we did."

"It keeps me active and very sports interested," said. Tom Harrison, 14, son of the coach. "It Harrison, 14, son of the coach. It keeps me in pretty good shape. And it's sure better than sitting home and playing the guitar all day long. If I wasn't playing ball, I'd be sitting home, playing my electric guitar, blowing the house down, and keeping my mom awake until midnight."

With a prospect like that hanging over his head, it's no wonder that Coach Harrison is so supportive of the youth sports program. It keeps the peace.

Since the team receives substantial support from Special Services, in addition to the $20 from the parents, every child is guaranteed time on the court. Harrison sees both good and bad in that system.

"The good part about it is that the kid who isn't gifted has an opportunity to play ball," he said.

If the kid is too much trouble, then he won't play ball. You can discipline the kid; you can sit him on the bench or do all sorts of things. I've had kids who skip school and get in trouble with drugs. But they would never miss sports. I'd sit the kid down and say 'if you really like playing ball, then you'd better knock your stuff off, go to school, and keep a C average, or you uren't playing! I've had kids completely change their lifestyle because they can control that. If the kid is too their lifestyle because they wanted to keep playing sports."

"Participating in the CISM games has been one of the goals I've been striving for since I started competing in long-distance races," said Simon, a 28-year-old, born in Grenada, West Indies and raised in Brooklyn, N.Y. 'I had spent so much time and training in preparation for the Marine Corps Marathon and Olympic trials that the CISM games had actually slipped my mind. But, when I received a call from the athletic director at Hendquarters, Marine Corps in Washington and was told I had been selected to compete in the games. I was very excited." According to Simon, selection for the interservice team was comprised of each service finding the fastest runner available. The Marine Corps was selecting nembers for the team by choosing runners with the fastest times in 10-kilometer races. Simon submitted the time he set during the Pepsi Challenge 10-kilometer race held in Honolulu last year. Although Simon finished second to Tom Wysocki, a professional racer from Los Angeles, his 30:29 time qualified him for the games. "I originally thought they would take an

The games are open to military athletes from all nations of the world the ord are extended, comparing the comparing the and are extremely competitive. Originally founded in February 1948, the sole purpose for the games is to bridge the cultural and language barriers that separate military athletes. Although the United States didn't participate in the first games held in Nice, France, U.S. athletes now play an active part in the competition.

competition. Similar to the Olympics, the CISM games host competition in numerous events; swimming, skiing, soccer, basketball, boxing, track and field, wreatling, cycling, fencing and the pentathalon are among them. Each sport is played in a different country making it one of the greatest cultural exchanges next to the Olympice Olympics.
