SecDef expresses views on combat

The commitment of United States forces to combat should be a last resort... but when made, that commitment must have national support, a clear objective and the aim of winning.

That's the main message on the uses of military power delivered by Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger to members of the National Press Club last December.

The Secretary noted that, while the use of military force to defend territory has never been questioned when a democracy has been attacked and its very survival threatened, most democracies have rejected the unilateral aggressive use of force to invade, conquer, or subjugate other nations.

The extent to which the use of force is acceptable remains unresolved for the host of other situations that fall between the extremes of defensive and aggressive use of force.

"We find ourselves, then, face to face with a modern paradox: The most likely challenges to the peace — the gray area conflicts — are precisely the most difficult challenges to which a democracy must respond," he said.

"Yet, while the source and nature of today's challenges are uncertain, our response must be clear and understandable. Unless we are certain that force is essential, we run the risk of inadequate national will to apply the resources needed."

Secretary Weinberger gave a list of six major tests to be applied when weighing the use of U.S. combat forces abroad:

The United States should not commit forces to combat overseas unless the particular engagement or occasion is deemed vital to our national interest or that of our allies.

If we decide it is necessary to put combat troops into a given situation, we should do so wholeheartedly and with the clear intention of winning.

If we decide to commit forces to combat overseas, we should have clearly defined political and military objectives; we should know precisely how our forces can accomplish those clearly defined objectives; and we should have and send the forces needed to do just that.

The relationship between our objectives and the forces we have committed — their size, composition, and disposition — must be continually reassessed and adjusted if necessary.

Before the United States commits combat forces abroad, there must be some reasonable assurance we will have the support of the American people and their elected representative in Congress.

The commitment of U.S. forces to combat should be a last resort.

Spouses surveyed

The Department of Defense is conducting a survey of military servicemembers' spouses to determine what impact military family life has on overall retention and readiness.

The "1985 Department of Defense Survey of Military Spouses" will be mailed to spouses of servicemembers who participate in the "1985 Department of Defense Survey of Officer and Enlisted Personnel," which addresses economic conditions and quality of life issues.

The spouses' survey, mailed worldwide, solicits opinions on relocation, quality and availability of family support services, family separations, spouse employment medical and dental care, and the degree of satisfaction with military family life.

Lawrence J. Korb, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Installations and Logistics, stressed the need for maximum response from individuals who are asked to participate. The information obtained will be used to evaluate the success of the military's quality of life programs.

Currently, the Department of Defense spends almost $10 billion annually on family programs such as health care, child care and family housing.

operations in 1984, pointed out that the Navy operates almost the same in peacetime as it does in war.

Peacetime deterrence

"Naval operations in 1984 reflect the many responsibilities carried in normal peacetime deterrence around the world," he said. "Four years ago, I testified that we were at a higher OpTempo than we were at the height of the Vietnam War and that the fleet was spending more time at sea than it had even averaged in the second world war.

"It is one of my great disappointments that, despite adding some 50 ships to our operational fleet, we have been unable to make an appreciable reduction in OpTempo and the excessive time that naval personnel must spend away from their families. It is a top goal of the next four years to make substantial improvements in the time away from home port required of our sailors."

The Secretary said that the FY-86 budget places personnel readiness at the top of spending priorities and added that "nothing is more important than our personnel." He cited the tremendous turnaround in morale and personnel quality and performance in recent years, but emphasized that adequate compensation and adequate quality of life are essential for maintaining the current high morale and quality of people. In particular, the Navy is asking for a three percent pay raise on July 1, 1985; and sea duty enhancement programs.

"Naval service can be arduous, dangerous and dramatically ill-paid when compared to civilian careers requiring comparable skills," Secretary Lehman said.

He noted that the Navy has been able to partially correct this imbalance through the use of sea pay, selective reenlistment bonuses, nuclear officer incentive pay, submarine duty pay, aviation officer career pay and other special pays.

The FY-86 budget continues these pays and increases their value. The budget also calls for increasing certain travel reimbursements and increasing weight allowances for Navy people transferring from one duty station to another; and increasing the active force end strength by 15,000 people and adding 10,500 reserve billets.

Material readiness

The Navy gives material readiness the next highest funding priority. Major requests in this area include funds to overhaul 35 active and six reserve ships, and a 5.6 percent increase in flight hours to an average of 25 flight hours a month for air crews.

The Navy is asking for funds to build 23 new ships and to convert or reactivate five otherships, including the fourth and final battleship, Wisconsin (BB 64), and the conversion of three auxiliary crane ships.

Requests for new ships include:

One Trident-class submarine; three Aegis-class submarines; two Whidbey Island-class amphibious landing ships; funding for LHD 1, the first of three projected Wasp-class convertible amphibious V-STOL carriers; 12 Air-Cushioned Landing Crafts; four Avenger-class mine countermeasure ships and four smaller and less expensive coastal minehunters.

Also, two oilers; two ocean surveillance ships; long-lead funding for Arleigh Burke-class destroyers; and continued research and development funds for the new SSN 21 attack submarine.

Death Angels trade places with '232

Marine Fighter Attack Squadron (VMFA)-235 and its Marines left their aircraft and temporary home at Naval Air Station Barbers Point behind early Tuesday morning, bound for Marine Corps Air Station, Iwakuni, Japan, to relieve VMFA-232.

The F-4 "Phantom" squadrons are participating in a six-month deployment cycle to the Western Pacific as part of the Unit Deployment Program, to train and to support military operations while there.

In trading places, VMFA-235 Marines are leaving most of their equipment and all of their aircraft here for the first time, and accepted 232's equipment left at Iwakuni when they returned here Wednesday. Even though 235's personnel would have preferred keeping their own aircraft, the changeover helps cut deployment costs and support.

"This program significantly reduces the amount of trans-pacific support and money required for a deployment," said Lieutenant Colonel K.W. Dewey, VMFA-235's Commanding Officer, "and although everyone would like to keep their own equipment, there has been a lot of cooperation between the two squadrons making for an enjoyable turnover."

Weeks of preparation preceded the actual mount-out of gear as aircraft maintenance Marines went over their F-4S Phantoms with a fine tooth comb, looking for any discrepancies and taking care of them well in advance. The aircraft, being signed over by both squadrons, had to be in good flying condition and acceptance teams made sure this happened.

The acceptance teams, which consisted of a handful of duty experts in their respective area, arrived at their new duty sites on March 15 to begin the arduous task of individually inspecting each aircraft for flaws in its various systems, like hydraulics, air frame, communications/navigation and engines.

"Our Marines took a great deal of pride in their aircraft and the way they were maintained, and given a choice, we'd have taken our own birds with us," continued LtCol. Dewey. The aircraft VMFA-235 is accepting at Iwakuni have been recently reworked, so more flight time is left in them before major maintenance is needed.

In addition to aircraft maintenance, the normal preparations for deployment, such as the packing and staging of both administrative gear and tools, or small parts used to maintain the aircraft, kept 235's Marines pretty busy.

Part of the training 235's Marines have scheduled while at Iwakuni will include flying out of Naval Air Station Cubi Point, Philippines. Detachments to other locations are in the planning stages and should keep the "Death Angels" on the move.

"While we certainly enjoy being home," concluded LtCol. Dewey, "we're all looking forward to this WestPac deployment and fulfilling our role in the Air-Ground Marine Team."

Red Cross jobs open

by SSgt. A. Ann Morton-Thompson

Camp H.M. Smith, Hawaii — From a force-in-readiness to a force-in-caring, Marines have been known for their ability to lend a helping hand as well as for hitting the beach.

It is with this thought in mind that the Red Cross Office at Tripler Army Medical Center is offering a challenge to any Marine, active duty or retired, who has free time, to fill it with meaningful, self-satisfying service.

"We need volunteers to do a multitude of things," said Randy E. Ortega, Red Cross station manager. This includes anything from writing letters for patients, to volunteering as a case-worker.

According to Ortega, the office has 110 volunteers from the different service branches. "However, we don't have any Marine volunteers, and we'd like to have them included in our program," he said. "My goal is to put volunteers in areas such as first aid and swimming."

Volunteers can set their own hours, be it a few hours during the day or night, and on weekends. "We can work around anyone's time," Ortega said.

To volunteer, call Ortega or Clara Rothwell, chairman of volunteers, at 433-6632 or visit the Red Cross Office at TAMC, 10th Floor, Wing A.

Uncle Sam says, "Lend a hand to the Red Cross. Donate your time as a volunteer or make a tax-deductible contribution."

Inspectors ensure quality

Customers can now find out who inspects Army and Air Force Exchange Service merchandise — by name. Each inspected item AAFES sells now carries the name of the person who performed the inspection.

In military and civilian clothing, the inspector's name is stamped on blue cards hung from the hangers or in the pockets. Black and gold stickers are used for other merchandise.

"It's a visibility thing," explained Sid Poindexter, of the AAFES Quality Assurance Division. "We want people to know that we're proud of our work; proud enough to put our names on it."

AAFES has 61 inspectors who work at manufacturing plants and central inspection points around the world. They perform random inspections of merchandise lots using the same inspection methods used by civilian retailers. If a high number of defective items in a lot is found, the entire lot is rejected.

Finding a personalized card or sticker on an item means it was checked and cleared as part of the inspection process, and that the entire lot was accepted. "Some customers may get concerned when they see merchandise packaging that appears to have been opened before sale," Poindexter said. "If a black and gold sticker appears on the package or box, it was opened during inspection."

Inspectors check for serviceability, saleability, and customer acceptance, according to Poindexter. They look for defects like open seams, broken zippers, and tears in clothing, and missing parts, dents and broken switches on small appliances. Inspectors look for visible defects and obvious malfunctions.

Navy tapes music videos

by JO1 Ed Thomas

Washington (NES) — The U.S. Navy Band has joined the list of performers making music videos.

But while most musicians act their songs in hopes of selling record albums, Navy Band members are selling a different product — Navy education and reenlistment opportunities.

The "Encore" series, now airing on the Armed Forces Radio and Television Service network, spotlights Navy Band groups and guest celebrities.

In the music videos, country music's Barbara Mandrell introduces "Country Current," the Navy Band's country-bluegrass group. The band's pop-rock group, "Port Authority," is introduced by The Captain and Tennille. "The Commodores," the band's jazz ensemble, is paired with jazz pianist Billy Taylor, and the "Sea Chanters" chorus is seen with entertainer Steve Allen.

The three- to six-minute features inform sailors about Navy career programs while entertaining them with music. In each video, the guest celebrity introduces the music group and concludes the segment with career information.

Music videos now aired by AFRTS are the first 20 in the series. A third set of 10 videos is being distributed, and the band will begin taping the final 10 videos in April.

A PUBLIC SERVICE MESSAGE FROM THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

IRS explains Form 1040

Washington (NES) — Each year, taxpayers make incorrect entries on their federal income tax forms, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

The largest percentage of errors are made on Form 1040, the "long form." To assist people who file Form 1040, IRS has compiled a list of problem areas to double-check:

Figure from Tax Table: This item is always high on the list of the most common errors. Double-check the figure from the tax table for your filing status before entering it on line 38. Check the box indicating use of the tax table.

Child-care credit: You should read instructions carefully and double-check your figures on Form 2441, "Credit for Child and Disabled Dependent Care Expenses." Enter the figure on line 41, and attach Form 2441 to your return.

Balance due/refund: If your total tax (line 56) is larger than your total payments made (line 64), enter the difference on line 68, "Amount You Owe." Follow the instructions for remitting payment. If the reverse is true, enter the difference on line 65, "Overpaid." Enter on line 66, "Refunded to You," the portion of the line 65 overpayment that you want refunded to you.

Dividends: You must complete Schedule B if you have $400 or more in dividend income. Enter your total dividends on line 9a; your exclusion (up to $100 for individual filers, up to $200 for married filing jointly) on line 9b; and enter the difference on line 9c.

Income averaging: Schedule G, Income Averaging, is one of the most complicated forms for individual filers because of the number of tax years covered on the form. Have copies of your returns for the preceding three years to complete this form. Read instructions carefully and double-check all figures.

Need for modern Navy

8Bs, 14 CH-53Es and 22 AH-1Ts for the Marine Corps.
Secretary Lehman emphasized the need for a large, modern Navy and for high-quality people to operate it. He pointed out how the Navy has found ways to save taxpayers more than a billion dollars, primarily through increased use of competition in awarding procurement contracts.
"Despite the misinformation provided by self-appointed experts on defense procurement, the Navy initiated a major reform of its spare parts buying. As a result, the increase of end items to the fleet is substantially more than the increase of funding would suggest," he said.
"No longer do we have ships that cannot deploy on time for lack of trained sailors; no longer do we have a hemorrhage of talent from our career forces; no longer do we have an unending spiral of cost overruns and escalation; no longer does the world perceive the United States as a declining world power," he said.

Lehman, in defending his budget, said the country cannot ignore the lessons of the '70s, when no-growth budgets and pay freezes "impaired national security. Nor" he said, "is the military buildup weakening the economy." He cited as an example the depression of the '30s, when the United States, Britain and France cut military expenses to the bone. "The resulting lack of Western preparedness contributed in no small measure to World War II," he said.
If World War II was fought at 1985 prices, Lehman said, the cost would be more than $4 trillion.
"Those who would argue that defense spending should be curtailed in times of deficit should ponder the cost of war itself, should deterrence fail for want of adequate preparedness," Lehman said.

B Hawaii Marine

April 4, 1985

Sergeant March Burdick, H&MS-24, watches a participant throw in the softball during the Windward Area Special Olympics. Burdick has been involved in working with handicapped children for eight years.

Clown Dian Barker greets a finisher in the 25-meter event in the Windward Area Special Olympics.

Special Olympics

Windward youngsters victorious in games

by SSgt. Virginia Bueno

In a contest of speed and skill, everybody loves a winner. Especially when the victor has to overcome many odds to succeed.

But when an individual is handicapped their odds against succeeding become greater than for a "normal" person. For some, just running a few meters or throwing a softball a few yards, may be the greatest challenge they've ever encountered.

And if these special people can meet their objective, even if it's only halfway, as did about 60 youths at the recent Windward Area Special Olympics, it makes them winners in every sense of the word.

An annual event for the last three years, the Windward Area Special Olympics were held March 23 at Kailua High School. More than 100 volunteers assisted in running the games. Seventy-five of those volunteers were Marines from 3d Battalion, 3d Marines here.

The olympics consisted of the 25, 50, 100, 200 and 400 yard dashes; standing long jump; frisbee distance throw; obstacle course; softball throw; and soccer skills.

Handicapped students, from seven Windward area schools, who are afflicted with different types of debilitating illnesses, from cerebral palsy to Down's syndrome or have severe learning disabilities and developmental delays participated in the games.

The games opened with a 1st Marine Brigade Color Guard and a concert performed by the Fleet Marine Force, Pacific Band. Following the concert, the children paraded on the school track dressed in various homemade costumes.

Major Ed Lesnowicz, executive officer, 3/3 and military coordinator of the games, said there was no problem in getting Marines to help. "The Special Olympics and Marines have a lot in common; they both typify courage. And that's what these games are all about, celebrating courage," he said.

For many of the Marines, it was their first time working with disabled children. Assigned as race starters, escorts, motivators, and some huggers, their reasons for volunteering were basically the same.

"I enjoy seeing the kids enjoy themselves," said Lance Corporal Gary Welsh.

"I like to help little kids," commented Corporal Gabriel Vasquez. All agreed that the games were worthwhile and that they would volunteer again.

One Marine, however, has been helping handicapped children for eight years.

Sergeant Mark Burdick, an avionics technician with Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron-24, is a volunteer coach for handicapped children. He is also on the Windward Area Special Olympics Advisory board. All of his free time, he says, is devoted to these special children.

"I've always been involved with handicapped kids, ever since I was 14. This is what keeps me sane; it makes me feel good," he said. When he's not working with his night crew at NAS Barbers Point, he's teaching physical education to various schools during the day. He also finds time to be a Big Brother to two boys.

The Windward games are a preliminary to the state games, which will be in May, and to the nationals which will be later this year.

According to Pat Webb, publicity chairperson for the games, the children train all year for the Special Olympics. "We have volunteer coaches, some are Marines, who go through all the events with the children. Then the kids practice every week until the actual games."

The children are very motivated by the spirit of the games, Webb said. "Everybody wins here. All the participants leave with something. If somebody comes in sixth place, they are awarded a sixth place ribbon."

There were no losers at the Windward Area Special Olympics. All the children worked hard during the games, and all the Marine and civilian volunteers who gave up their free time to make the games successful, can be considered winners... and everybody loves a winner!

Bobby Vesnefski finds comfort in the lap of Sergeant Mark Burdick during the Windward Area Special Olympics. Burdick, H&MS-24, has spent eight years working with handicapped children. Another young Olympic participant relaxes next to Burdick.

Lance Corporal Gary Welsh, 3/3, congratulates two participants of the Windward Area Special Olympics.

Corps taught discipline, confidence to Leon Spinks

by Sgt. Christopher Wood

Kalakaua Gym, — Leon Spinks took time out from sparring here to toss a thumbs-up and a smile at the Marine sitting in the bleachers. "Semper Fi," Spinks seemed to say.

Later, his face dripping with sweat, former Marine Spinks, in Hawaii for a bout Tuesday with Rick "King Kong" Kellar, talked about his years in the Corps, his regrets and his plans for a comeback in professional boxing.

"I had good years in the Corps," Spinks said. "The Corps taught me discipline and how to depend on myself. I did a lot of stupid, crazy things while in the Marine Corps, but it made me a man."

Spinks' troubles began at MCRD San Diego, which he entered on his 21st birthday in 1973. He wanted to join earlier in life, but he couldn't get permission from his mother.

"I stayed in boot camp for six months," Spinks said. "I spent a lot of time in the 'rose garden' because I kept going UA, smoking, and making phone calls. But even though I did all of those things, I was determined not to let them send me home."

After he graduated, Spinks, who described himself as a "poor black boy from St. Louis," continued to have problems. "I made it up to corporal as a supply man, but I was busted twice," Spinks explained. "What hurt me the most was losing some of my pay."

Spinks' time in the Corps wasn't all bad. He won three straight national titles as a member of the Marine Boxing Team and fought his way to an Olympic gold medal at Montreal in 1976.

He left the Corps later that year and began a professional boxing career that led to an underdog defeat of Muhammed Ali in 1978.

"That was a young man's dream," Spinks remarked. "The discipline and condition the Marine Corps put me in made it so I could beat anybody. I could beat the whole world."

Spinks lost the title to Ali exactly seven months later and began a slow decline in the boxing world. "A lot of things were going on at the time," Spinks said. "I was going through a divorce and it really messed with my head. I didn't know what I wanted to do. To be perfectly serious, I just didn't give a damn. I didn't care what happened."

Spinks disagrees that his rise to the top of professional boxing was too rapid. "I don't think I made it too fast," he said. "The opportunity was there, and I took it."

Now, Spinks is looking for a similar opportunity, one that will allow him to "make a better life for my kids and for myself," he said. "I decided not to let my problems bother me."

"I'm doing the things I didn't do before," he continued. "I'm working with kids in gyms wherever I go. I like them looking up to me, and I like to encourage them. I tell them that if they love what they're doing, then they should go for their dreams."

To those young Marines who aren't going the "right way" — those who are getting into some of the trouble that he did — Spinks has a message. "Cut the nonsense," he said. "Regardless of how hard the Corps is, when it comes right down to it, you're going to appreciate it."

"To all of my Marine Corps buddies, I say hang in there," he continued. "It's gonna be all right. God bless you all."

Combating terrorism top priority

by SSgt. Fred Carr

Washington (MCNews) — "Terrorism is a war without rules and boundaries," Marine Corps Order 3302 — "Combating Terrorism".

Such a war is now being waged, on an international scale, by terrorists striking at their targets, causing loss of life and destruction of property. This growing threat has prompted increasing concern among national and international leaders to take appropriate countermeasures.

The Marine Corps, knowing first-hand the harsh consequences of terrorism, is committed to the development and implementation of protective and deterrent measures. The recently published order on combating terrorism is one item on a wide-ranging list of present and future actions in fighting this violent type of war.

In the wake of the Beirut tragedy, the Commandant directed an in-depth study to evaluate physical security measures and potential terrorist targets at Marine Corps installations worldwide. Simultaneously, several field studies were conducted by major Marine Corps commands, with the findings, coupled with knowledge gleaned from other expert sources, becoming the building blocks of a program monitored and controlled by a new section at Headquarters Marine Corps.

Today, the Special Operations and Terrorism Counteraction Section is involved in a continuous program to reduce the Corps' vulnerability to terrorism.

The program to combat terrorism includes protective and deterrent measures, from the obvious to the nearly invisible. But, according to Lieutenant Colonel Anthony Zinni, who heads SOTCS, the key to the program's success is the individual Marine.

"An aware, alert, well-trained Marine is the number one deterrent," he said. "The terrorist isn't the uniformed, enemy Marine; he's been traditionally trained to fight. He's cold, calculating and often fanatical. It's dangerous to regard him as just a mere criminal. Every Marine must be thoroughly aware of the threat and be provided with realistic training and education on how to counter the threat," Zinni stressed.

The educational program will begin in recruit training where basic classes on terrorist threat awareness will be included in the training cycle. Instructional material for these classes was prepared by personnel at MCDEC Quantico; which also developed courses on combating terrorism to be included in its Professional Military Education Schools. A correspondence course on terrorism is being developed by the Marine Corps Institute.

Training programs are also offered by the other services. Among them are a "Countering Terrorism on Installation Course," conducted by Ft. McClellan, Ala.; and a "Dynamics of International Terrorism Course," taught at Hurlburt Field, Fla.

An increasing number of Marines will be assigned to these courses, tailored for officers and Staff NCOs. Knowledge gained in these schools will become a vital part of subsequent unit level training throughout the Corps.

Training will not be confined to the classroom, according to LtCol. Zinni. Combating terrorism is an operational responsibility, and, will include threat situations, including in unit training exercises. Of particular importance is the defense of rear areas and headquarters elements where a terrorist strike could disrupt command and control functions.

In developing an operational capability that offers an in-depth defense against terrorist attacks, a unit's operational capability should have two major components — interior guard and a crisis management organization.

While the guard is the primary means of preventing and reacting to terrorist acts, the crisis management organization aids a commander in dealing with a terrorist incident until national-level counterterrorist forces are able to take over.

A vital element in successfully combating terrorism is timely and accurate intelligence. In addition to SOTCS, Terrorist Threat Section has been implemented within HQMC's Counterintelligence Branch to gather and analyze information, from all sources, to determine what threats may be directed against Marines, their installations and equipment.

This section works closely with other military and federal agencies and is capable of providing special assistance to commanders in countering terrorist threats.

In addition to information provided by HQMC, commanders can rely on local intelligence reporting assets, such as counterintelligence teams and Naval Investigative Service representatives, all closely linked to share and upgrade information.

Physical security measures are another important part of the Corps' battle plan against terrorism, but there is no standard solution which can be applied to every installation. Each has different security requirements, according to a LtCol. Zinni.

Every base commander must analyze for potential targets for terrorist actions, and what resources are available for protection and deterrence. Special on-site teams of experts can assist commanders by surveys and recommending particular measures which can be taken by the unit.

"Marines can expect to see an overall tightening of security," Zinni predicts; but there won't be an immediate construction of permanent barriers or mass installation of high-tech surveillance equipment.

"If your security is fixed in one place, it's an easy target," said Zinni. "Some of the things we're looking at are portable barriers, explosive detectors for scanning vehicles, and fences, which can't be cut or climbed."

Less glamorous measures, according to Zinni, are increased roving patrols, frequent random searches, and an increase in Military Police billets. Already on the list of approved measures are specially trained working dogs to detect explosive devices.

"But we're not turning our bases into fortresses. The degree of security will depend on the level of the terrorist threat," Zinni said. "It should be obvious that there is no perfect defense against terrorism. Our efforts to obtain and update knowledge must be continuous."

By centralized monitoring and control of efforts in the field, SOTCS will ensure commanders have access to the latest information and techniques, as well as share the information being learned.

Terrorism is not expected to lessen in the near future, as such acts can be carried out in times of peace and war. Today, as so often in the past, the individual Marine continues to be the front line of defense against this latest attack on freedom and human life.

Leadership trophy dedicated

by SSgt. Fred Carr

HQMC (MCNews) — Forty years after Lieutenant Colonel Justice M. Chambers was critically wounded on Iwo Jima, General P.X. Kelley, Commandant of The Marine Corps, presented the Chambers Trophy for Leadership to a Marine reservist from the 1st Battalion, 25th Marines.

Captain Alfred R. Marshall Jr. is the first to have his name inscribed on a trophy destined to become a cherished keepsake of the 25th Marines. It was as the commanding officer of that regiment's 3d Assault Battalion Landing Team, that "Jumping Joe" Chambers led an eight-hour battle against savage enemy resistance on Iwo Jima, earning him the Medal of Honor.

"In the face of heavy casualties and exposed to relentless hostile fire," the Medal of Honor citation reads, "he coolly reorganized his battle-weary men, inspiring them to heroic efforts by his own valor, and leading them in an attack on the critical impregnable high ground from which the enemy was pouring an increasing volume of fire..."

Chambers returned from the war to retire from the Marine Corps Reserve as a colonel in 1946. He then resumed a distinguished civilian career, which included service with several government agencies and ultimately as president of his own consulting firm.

Shortly after his death in 1982, his widow, Barbara Chambers, and close friends conceived the idea of a family-sponsored perpetual trophy in his honor. In June 1984, Marine Corps Order 1650R.35A was published to provide information and instructions on the award designed for annual presentation to a company grade officer of the Marine Corps Reserve.

According to the order, "the officer recommended for the Chambers Trophy should be recognized by seniors, contemporaries and subordinates alike as the officer they use as an example of an outstanding leader." The recipient is chosen from five nominees submitted by the Commanding General, 4th Marine Division.

The ceremony at HQMC last month was a touching one for Barbara Chambers. "Joe was wounded 40 years ago today," she reminisced. "It's good to know that the Marine Corps won't forget him. I'm happy that his memory will be honored, particularly by the 4th Marine Division."

Marshall's selection as the first recipient of the Chambers Trophy was based on the nomination which characterizes him as "extremely effective leadership and commitment" with Company C, 1/25, Plainville, Conn.

Citing his unit's operational accomplishments in several NATO exercises, as well as his strong record of volunteering for additional active duty and pursuit of professional improvement, his nomination ranks Marshall's leadership abilities as exceptional.

"I certainly never dreamed that I would be the one to receive this award," Marshall said after the presentation. "I am very proud to be honored by an award bearing Col. Chambers' name. He was truly a distinguished Marine."

The Chambers Trophy for Leadership, with the winner's name inscribed annually, will remain in the possession of Headquarters, 3/25. Winners receive a replica of the permanent plaque to commemorate the award.

Capt. A. R. Marshall Jr.

Nominations for the award are open to any company grade officer serving in the Selected Marine Corps Reserve or on active duty as a member of the Full-Time Support Program with the 4th Marine Division.

A PUBLIC SERVICE MESSAGE FROM THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

Tax deadline extensions possible

April 15 is the deadline for filing 1984 federal income tax returns. Just about everybody knows that. But what if you can't meet that deadline?

If you are not able to file your 1984 Form 1040 or 1040A on time, you can get an automatic four-month extension for filing, but you must pay the amount of tax you owe by April 15 anyway. (This extension is not available to those who use Form 1040EZ and those who want the IRS to figure their tax.)

The four-month extension is yours for the asking. Nothing has to be justified, and you don't have to give a reason. The extension, using Form 4868 (Application for Automatic Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return), must be filed by April 15.

This only allows you more time to complete your return. It doesn't give you more time to pay any taxes you may owe.

Taxpayers should "rough out" their deductions and income. Internal Revenue officials say it is in your best interest to come as close as possible to the actual tax owed. Once you have made a tentative estimate of the year's taxes, submit any balance due with the extension form to avoid paying interest later on. Taxpayers who substantially underestimate their tax liabilities will be penalized.

If you don't include the tax owed, your request for extension will be denied. If your estimate of the tax due is incorrect and you owe more money to the IRS when you actually file your return, expect to be charged interest from April 15 on the unpaid balance.

In addition to the automatic four-month extension to Aug. 15, another extension is possible. But only if you have a very good reason. And expect that reason to be reviewed by the IRS and accepted or rejected on a case-by-case basis. This additional extension takes a Form 2688 (Application for Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return) and is filed in duplicate on or before Aug. 15. The IRS will send one of the Form 2688s back to you telling you if your extension has been granted. Interest on any unpaid balance is charged from April 15 until the date it is paid.

If your return is completed but you don't have the money to pay your tax, the IRS recommends that you not request an extension. Send as much of the money as you can and they will bill you for the remaining tax due.

All requests for extensions are filed where you normally file your return.

New Japanese 'Super Pill' Insures Rapid Weight-Loss

No Dieting — Eat All You Want, Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe, it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers

Extraordinary Guarantee

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

$19.95—30 day supply, or $35.95—60 day supply. Order immediately by sending a check or money order to DYNALABS, 270 No. Canon Dr., Ste. 1255 (Dept. D-44) Beverly Hills, CA, 90210. (Enclose your return address). Credit card holders can order by simply dialing toll free: (1-800-367-2400) 24 hrs a day, 7 days a week. Either way your order will be promptly sent. Please don't wait. You really do deserve to be thin.
