Adm Hayes takes over Pacific command

Men and women of the U.S. Pacific Command, including a joint-service color guard, pass in review as the past and present U.S. PACOM commanders look on.

Adm. Ronald J. Hayes succeeded Adm. William J. Crowe, Jr., as Commander in Chief, U.S. Pacific Command during ceremonies, Sept. 18.

The ceremony, which included Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps units, was held at Hickam Air Force Base before a crowd of 2,500 local and visiting dignitaries and senior military personnel from Japan, Korea, the United Kingdom, and Bangladesh.

Adm. Hayes, the 13th naval officer to hold the USCINCPAC position, reassured the men and women of the Pacific Command that he fully understands and accepts the responsibilities and challenges they will face together in days ahead. "My first and most urgent obligation," said Hayes, "will be to transition from the U.S. Navy, which I've always served, and to become 'unified.'"

The 35-year Navy veteran and native of Urania, La., went on to say, "I want to assure the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine commanders that there will be no difficulty, no delay in this transition because I firmly believe that we shall succeed in our responsibilities to the nation only with the finest coordination among services."

In his first speech as USCINCPAC, Adm. Hayes lauded Adm. Crowe by quoting Thomas Jefferson as he presented his credentials as U.S. Minister to France, "The French Premier remarked 'I see that you are here to replace Benjamin Franklin; 'No,' corrected Jefferson, 'I've come to succeed him — no one can replace him.'"

During the change of command ceremony, Adm. Crowe, who is to become Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff, said that he was reluctantly leaving Hawaii, but is taking many fond memories with him. He took over as Commander, U.S. PacCom in July 1983.

"The American shield, which we have constructed over the Western Pacific, has allowed our allies to concentrate on internal development, to realize their full potential, and to do so at their own pace," Crowe said. "Overall, we can take pride in the crucial role that our military forces play, or have played, in fostering progress in the Pacific Basin."

After the ceremony, the FMFPac Band led the Army, Marine Corps, Navy and Air Force troops by the reviewing stand. As a final farewell and welcome to Admirals Crowe and Hayes, the band played "Oklahoma" and "The Saints." For his two years as USCINCPAC commander Crowe received the Defense Distinguished Service Medal with oak leaf cluster.

Red Devils celebrate 60th anniversary

by SSgt. Greg Berry

The Red Devils of VMFA-232 celebrated their 60th anniversary, Sept. 9, with a cake cutting ceremony at Naval Air Station, Barbers Point, where the squadron is located while the runways here are renovated.

The Red Devils, hailed as the Corps' oldest and most decorated active squadron, has seen its fair share of changes since Sept. 1, 1925, when the first commanding officer flew above NAS San Diego, Calif., in a Vought single-seat biplane. 2dLt. Clayton D. Jerome commanded the Red Devils, designated then as Division 1, Fighting Plane Squadron 3M, 2d Aviation Group, for 19 days.

Jerome also commanded the Red Devils from Dec. 2, 1925, to March 11, 1926, and again as a first lieutenant from Nov. 1, 1928 to June 30, 1930.

The squadron earned its first unit citation, the Yangtze Service Streamer, in Shanghai, in 1927. The Red Devils were part of BGen. Smedley D. Butler's 3d Brigade.

Through the years, the Red Devils have had almost a dozen designations, with the familiar numerals '232' coming in July 1, 1941, when they were renamed Marine Scout Bombing Squadron-232.

The aircraft have varied more than the unit designations, with Red Devil aviators flying everything from vintage biplanes to the supersonic Phantom II. But one thing hasn't changed... the Red Devil poised in a diamond-shaped field which has been with the squadron since 2ndLt. Jerome flew a biwing "Jenny" in 1925.

The Red Devils' combat record began in Shanghai, and progressed through World War II, Korea and Vietnam. The squadron took heavy losses when the Japanese attacked both Oahu and Wake Island in December 1941. They were back in the air in time to fight at Guadalcanal as the first Marine dive bomber squadron to fly against the Japanese.

The Red Devils also flew during the battles for the Eastern Solomons, Wake Island, Bougainville and Okinawa. They earned two Presidential Unit Citations for gallantry during those campaigns.

The squadron was decommissioned in 1945, and in 1948 became a reserve squadron in New York. The Red Devils were activated in 1950 due to the Korean War.

The squadron was first deployed to Hawaii in 1941, where they were stationed at Ewa Airfield. After they were reactivated, the Red Devils went there for six months, and returned in 1953 for about five years. After a short stint of duty at Atsugi, Japan, they came home again in 1959.

In 1959, the Red Devils were named the "Finest Fighter Squadron in Naval Aviation," and in 1962 they earned the coveted "Commandant's Aviation Efficiency Trophy" and the "Chief of Naval Operations Aviation Safety Award."

The squadron's peacetime record is just as impressive as its wartime record.

The Red Devils added numerous streamers to their colors during Vietnam, including another Presidential Unit Citation; two Navy unit Commendations; a National Defense Service Streamer; Vietnam Service Streamer, with silver star; and the Vietnam Cross of Gallantry, with palm.

During peacetime, the Red Devils continued to serve in the Western Pacific from Cubi Point, Philippines, where they earned the prestigious "Robert M. Hanson Award" in 1974 as the most outstanding fighter squadron in the Marine Corps.

The squadron returned to Kaneohe Bay in October 1977, after an 11-year absence, and began operating with the Unit Deployment Program. They completed their fifth 6-month tour of the Western Pacific in April when they flew into Barbers Point from Japan.

The Red Devil spirit has been with the squadron through 60 years of Marine aviation, and according to Commanding Officer, LtCol. W.L. Nyland, the Red Devils will continue in the traditions started in 1925.

A Red Devils' bi-wing fighter rests on a landing strip at Tientsin, China.

Marines assist Coast Guard with Molokai airlift mission

by SSgt. Greg Berry

The Coast Guard went looking for a few good men to help airlift supplies to a lighthouse at Kahiu Point on Molokai last month, and found the leathernecks at HMH-463 ready and willing to help.

The job required more than willingness, however, as strong backs were needed to load about 400 50-pound sandbags.

"The pallets wouldn't fit on the helicopters," explained Capt. Tim Delaney, one of the CH-53 copilots. "Rather than scratch the mission, the crews loaded them by hand, and off-loaded them on Molokai."

The bags were filled with blasting grit the Coast Guard needed for repainting the lighthouse near Kalaupapa, the isolated settlement where Father Damien cared for thousands of lepers in the late 1800s.

"It was back-breaking work," Cpl. Joe Hassen, crew chief, said. "But it was worth it to get the job done."

The area is inaccessible by land except for a mule trail. A small airfield serves the 100 or so residents.

Two crews assisted in the airlift operation: Capt. Gill Garrison, aircraft helicopter commander; Capt. Delaney; Cpl. Hassen; and LCpl. John Schubert, first mechanic, were the members of one crew; and LtCmdr. Dan Hartwell, helicopter aircraft commander; Capt. J.D. Long, copilot; Cpl. Stephen Kamp, crewchief; and LCpl. Marc Bilodeau, first mechanic, were the members of the second crew.

Pacific Fleet changes helm; Adm Lyons new CincPacFt

Pearl Harbor — Adm. James D. Lyons Jr., relieved Adm. Sylvester R. Foley Jr., as Commander in Chief U.S. Pacific Fleet in ceremonies aboard USS Vincennes (CG-49) at Pearl Harbor Sept. 16.

A New Jersey native, Lyons became the 21st admiral to lead the Pacific Fleet since the command was established and headquartered here in 1941. He reports to Hawaii after having served as Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Plans, Policy and Operations) from July 1983 to September 1985.

His sea tours have been principally in destroyers, cruisers and operational staffs. Lyons' sea commands include the USS Charles S. Sperry (DD-697), the USS Richmond K. Turner (CG-20) and as Chief of Staff of Carrier Group Four. In addition he has commanded Naval Surface Group, Western Pacific; Task Force 73 of the U.S. 7th Fleet; the U.S. 2nd Fleet, the NATO Striking Fleet Atlantic and Joint Task Force 120. He also led the U.S. delegation to the Incidents at Sea Talks held in Moscow, May-June 1984.

Adm. Foley is retiring after 35 years of active naval service. A 1950 Naval Academy graduate, who earned his aviator wings in 1952, Foley became commander of the Pacific Fleet in May 1982. Among other assignments during his Naval career he has been the Commander 7th Fleet; Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Plans and Operations); Commander Carrier Air Wing 11; commanding officer of the USS Midway (CV-41) and USS Coronado (LPD-11) and chief of staff to the Commander 7th Fleet; and Deputy director, Strategic Plans and Policy on the CNO's staff in Washington, D.C.

Adm. James D. Lyons Jr.

As CincPacFt, Admiral Lyons, a 1952 Naval Academy graduate, assumes command of the world's largest naval command including over 220 ships, some 2,600 aircraft and about 238,000 sailors and Marines.

The Pacific Fleet command area covers 102 million square miles, from the west coast of the continental United States to the east coast of Africa, and from the Arctic to the Antarctic, more than half the surface of the earth.

Around the Corps

"Cammie copters" tested

MCAS New River, N.C. — Camouflaged helicopters were added to four squadrons, here, as part of a test of the new paint schemes' ability to conceal the helicopters from ground attacks and high flying tactical aircraft.

"If we determine it decreases our ability to be detected, then we know it will increase our survivability; and that's ultimately what we are after," said Maj. Greg Miller, aircraft maintenance officer for HMH-461.

El Toro SOMS accident-free

MCAS El Toro, Calif. — Station aircraft assigned to SOMS have flown 15,000 hours without an accident, dating back to Aug. 25, 1977. LtCol. Jim Barr, executive officer, MCAS Tustin, and

Maj. Pat Gallagher, commanding officer of H&HS, also at Tustin, passed the milestone while on a mission flying a C12B Super Kingair.

F/A-18 arrives at 2d MAW

MCAS Beaufort — The first F/A-18 Hornet squadron became part of the 2d MAW during a recent ceremony here.

Marine Fighter Attack Squadron-115, commanded by LtCol. J.D. Wojtasel, came on line with 12 of the newest fighters.

The Hornet is a single-seat, twin engine, multi-mission aircraft that will replace the A-7 "Crusader" light attack aircraft and F-4 "Phantom."

San Diego's DI of year

MCRD San Diego, Calif. — SSgt. Fay L. Dalton, a senior drill instructor with Co. G, 2nd Recruit Training Battalion, is San Diego's first "DI of the Year."

Dalton was selected by a board consisting of all RTR's sergeants major. Dalton, who earned his Senior DI's belt while still a sergeant, mastered the fine art of building Marines from civilians, according to the selection board.

"Once you break some of their civilian habits and instill some discipline in the privates, the job of getting them physically fit and basically trained comes much easier," said Dalton. "You've got to let recruits know it's OK to ask a question . . . if they're made to understand they won't be reprimanded for asking legitimate questions, you can save yourself a lot of work," concluded Dalton.

New 4th MAW CG

New Orleans — Major General Jacob W. Moore assumed command of the 4th Marine Aircraft Wing during a change of command ceremony last month.

MajGen. Moore, a native of Catawba, N.C., was the chief of staff, United States Central Command, at MacDill Air Force Base, Florida.

What the MPS program is all about

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article by LtCol. John S. Lowery, of MCDEC, Quantico, appeared in the November 1984 issue of Marines magazine. Two segments of his article have been reprinted in the Hawaii Marine in recent weeks to help local Marines, sailors and their families understand the Brigade's new MPS mission. This is the third and last segment of LtCol. Lowery's article.

Vehicles and equipment staged at the port of Wilmington, N.C., are prepared to be loaded aboard the PFC Eugene A. Obregon, a ship of the MPS-1 squadron, now in service with the 6th MAB.

Education

The University of Southern California is offering a Master of Science program in Systems Management at Hickam and Wheeler Air Force Bases.

After submitting their application and a $40 fee, students will be allowed to enroll in up to four classes. Students must be officially accepted to graduate school before enrolling in their fifth class. The 12 courses that comprise the program are nonsequential, so prerequisites are not required. Classes are held either Monday/Wednesday, or Tuesday/Thursday, from 6 to 9 p.m.

For more information, call Dot Ferjo at the Wheeler Air Force Base Regional Office, 624-2440; or Beverly Marubio at the Hickam Air Force Base Education Office, 449-9702.

MPS challenges

Understanding Maritime Prepositioning — Marines must be educated on the program. They must understand what MPS is and how it can be used. Ships from the first MPS squadron are now ready for deployment.

Training — Marines should be training now to prepare themselves to use MPS. MAC and MSC are two key elements in the MPS program. Most Marines have had little opportunity to train with either command. To properly execute MPS operations, Marines must become proficient in deploying brigade-size forces by MAC aircraft and in loading and offloading MSC ships. Both require education and training.

Standard operating procedures — Introducing 16,500 Marines and sailors by MAC aircraft and bringing them together with their proper equipment and supplies from the MSC ships in an expeditionary area within a few days will be no small type challenge. They developed concepts, doctrine, and SOPs for amphibious operations that enabled them to quickly build ashore from zero to full combat power. Today, similar actions must be taken to ensure that a MPS brigade can be combat ready in the expeditionary area within five days or less after the MPS squadron arrives.

Maintenance requirements — Proper maintenance of the equipment prepositioned aboard ship will be an important aspect when it comes time to offload and use it. It is planned that the equipment and supplies on board the MPS ships will be maintained by civilians, under contract, utilizing maintenance spaces provided aboard ship. Marines will come aboard to conduct periodic inspections. Limited maintenance will be performed by Marines on the equipment offloaded during exercises.

Additionally, all equipment and supplies are scheduled to be offloaded from the ships once every two years. At that time, a thorough maintenance check will be performed and additions and deletions to each set of equipment and supplies will be made. But, regardless of who accomplished the maintenance, it is still a Marine Corps responsibility, because it will be Marines who will have to use the equipment and supplies in battle.

According to the Commandant, the overall challenge for the Corps today is to be even more ready to quickly respond to any assigned mission.

MPS will help the Marine Corps meet the challenge by providing the Corps with a global, rapid response, self-sustaining capability. This adds to the ability of Marines to quickly build to MAI size in the objective area and enhances the Corps' ability to continue as the nation's Force in Readiness.

Special mission requirements

- Anchor offshore in 50-knot wind and 3-knot current
- Discharge cargo with deck cranes in 5-ft waves
- Discharge amphibious craft over partly submerged stern ramp in 5-ft waves
- Provide landing capability for CH-53E helicopter
- Two 18,000 gal/day distilling plants supply drinking water
- Discharge liquid cargoes at distances up to 2 miles
- "Warehouse" mixed cargoes for long periods
- Cargo discharge rates
 - All vehicles and 16-percent of remaining cargo at pier in 12 hours
 - All cargo at pier in 3 days
 - All cargo when anchored off-shore in 5 days

Club cards

Information contained in last week's Hawaii Marine article on club card changes needs to be clarified as it pertains to officers.

Officers club dues will remain at $5 a month and there will be no initial membership fee. When the Officers Club charging card privilege is desired, no additional monthly service fee will be charged to the member's account.

All information regarding the changes to Officers Club cards will be in this month's billing.

An interview with Brigade Sergeant Major J.R. Johnson

Story and photos
by GySgt. Steve Doane

"It would seem that the quality of the Marines coming to the Brigade today, if you want to compare it by degrees, appear to be more qualified, enthusiastic and are more motivated about what they do. They think highly of themselves and have self-confidence," said 1st MAB Sergeant Major J.R. Johnson.

Johnson, who assumed the Brigade's senior enlisted spot in June of this year, commented on several areas of concern within the Brigade. One such concern was the effect on the young Marine of the recent redesignation as the 1st MAB.

"I don't think it will have any impact on the younger Marines at all," said Johnson. "The impact will be felt at the higher headquarters staff level. The average Marine follows; he is going to do his job no matter what it is. To the younger Marine, it's just one more thing to do and will have little impact unless they are directly involved in the planning."

Johnson came to Hawaii from Okinawa where he served as the 9th Marines' sergeant major.

"I served as a first sergeant with H&HS, MCAS, New River, and have been exposed to the air wing," said the New York native. "I gained an appreciation for the air wing and have many close friends who are officers and staff NCOs in the wing. I can appreciate the subtle differences in the missions between the Group, Regiment and BSSG. I am also in the position to appreciate the commonness and importance of all these organizations."

When assigned as an infantry Marine, Johnson indicated he always thought that an assignment as a division sergeant major would be the crowning point of any Marine's career. After coming to the Brigade, and seeing the continuous interaction between Regiment, Group and BSSG, the sergeant major's opinion has changed.

"They are different, yet, they are the same," said Johnson. "Nowhere else in the Marine Corps will you find this unique situation on a day to day basis. I've got more prestige, more influence, than any division sergeant major."

Though the Brigade is a unique unit in the Corps, the business of being a sergeant major of Marines is the same.

"The primary function of a sergeant major, besides being the senior enlisted advisor for all Marines, is to be a constant watchdog of standards," said the 44-year-old Johnson. "He must ensure that the Marines under his purview are constantly reminded that standards have to be upheld."

The sergeant major indicated that through education Marines must be taught and constantly reminded of what is expected of them regardless of rank.

"You could call a sergeant major the 'Guardian of the Standards of the Corps,'" said Johnson. "If you didn't have a sergeant major to ensure that traditions of the Corps are upheld, things would have a tendency to lose focus."

Johnson commented on one such tendency he has noticed not only in Hawaii, but throughout the Corps.

"I think, over the years, we've become very liberal-minded toward the way we look," said Johnson. "We are condoning selective disobedience by allowing the individual Marine and their family members to determine what is socially acceptable as appropriate civilian attire. We have 1,300 staff NCOs. Divide that by the number of troops we have and you've got about a 10 or 11

"The leaderships manual states that a staff NCO or NCO should ideally influence performance."

to one ratio. I'll challenge any staff NCO who can't handle 10 troops.

"Yet, you can go to the exchange, the 7-Day Store or even just walk across the street and you will see Marines in inappropriate clothing, civilian and military. There is no difference between a Marine in uniform or in civilian clothes. We all know what the regulations dictate; it's up to all of us to ensure that the way we appear is reflective of the pride with which we serve," Johnson emphasized.

Persistent, concerned leadership is what the sergeant major thinks will solve this as well as other problems within the Corps' structure.

"The leadership manual states that a staff NCO or NCO should ideally influence performance," said Johnson. "When influence fails, you should be prepared to use your authority to enforce obedience under every circumstance."

"Once some Marines get some 'time in,' they feel that they can lay back," said Johnson. "They don't improve on their education and think they know it all, and they don't take the time to educate their subordinates. This can be caused by circumstances — rushing here, rushing there — and the excuse of 'I don't have the time' comes into play."

"If you can't do it today, you can always do it tomorrow; rationalizing that the lapse will be corrected next time. A truly sincere positive approach is needed so that when you walk away from young Marines, they can and will continue to improve and function on their own without your supervision."

The sergeant major sees the constant application of the Corps' leadership principles as a possible solution to problems some Marines have with alcohol and drugs.

"If just some of the staff NCOs and NCOs would get next to the alcohol or drug abuser and spend additional time with them providing the guidance and support they need," said Johnson, "it might afford them the opportunity to kick that monkey off their back."

Johnson indicated that he didn't see anything wrong with the use of alcohol because of the amount of time it's been in our society. "However," commented Johnson, "I don't sympathize with the abusers of alcohol because Marines must be held responsible for their actions. It disturbs me though when I see the number of alcohol related discharges on our younger Marines which cross my desk."

"Through responsible, involved leadership some Marines can be salvaged and I think they will appreciate that help," said the sergeant major. "Whether they are able to remain in the Corps or not. It goes back to the Marine Family concept and that Marines take care of their own."

Education is one of Johnson's keys to attaining a greater level of leadership potential. "Everyone should have a very solid professional education," said Johnson. "You can't lead or educate from a position of ignorance."

"It should be an ongoing process; and as you progress through the ranks, there are certain levels of schools you should attend. Though it is not entirely practical in every case, I feel that certain courses — such as NCO School, the Staff NCO Academy and other general professional education courses — should be mandatory for promotion," he said.

According to Johnson, advanced civilian education is also important to a Marine's career. "If you don't continually stimulate your thinking processes you stagnate. Marines should take advantage of every opportunity they have to improve themselves," he said.

Johnson has mixed feelings about his assignment to Hawaii. "I am here by choice, not by design," said Johnson. "I was up for transfer and the timing was right."

When offered the assignment, the sergeant major checked with his wife, Paula, who, according to Johnson, said she wouldn't mind a tour in Hawaii.

The sergeant major indicated a desire to see increased interest in a team concept for the Marines of the Brigade.

"What an individual Marine gets out of a tour with the Brigade is basically the results of the amount of sweat, hard work and effort that they want to put into it," said Johnson.

"I believe that we are all expendable. When someone is transferred out of the command, they should be able to go and never leave so much as a ripple. If we have done our homework, someone should be right behind us to fill the gaps. That's what being a Marine is all about."

Selling secrets to Soviets can be costly

"Be it to give your life meaning or to make a political statement; be it to seek adventure or to pay your delinquent alimony; be it for whatever reason, see a lawyer or a psychiatrist or a priest or even a reporter, but don't see a KGB agent. That is the solution to nothing."

Those are the words of convicted spy Christopher Boyce, a former employee of a California aerospace firm who was caught passing secrets to the Soviets and is now serving 40 years in prison on eight counts of espionage.

In this case, Boyce initiated contact with the Soviets. But a Department of Defense spokesman emphasized: "No one is immune from possible approaches from hostile intelligence agents." That includes military personnel.

Since World War II there have been some 40 publicly reported cases in which military personnel have betrayed their country. Among them:

- Capt. J.P. Kauffman provided data on Air Force installations in Greenland and Japan to the East Germans in the 1960s.

- PO1 N.C. Drummond supplied classified Navy documents to the Soviets and collected more than $20,000 before his arrest and trial in 1964.

Obviously, people working in highly sensitive positions are prime targets for hostile agents.

One-third of the DoD employees who were involved in espionage worked in intelligence areas, had previous intelligence training or were affiliated with intelligence organizations.

But anyone who has some kind of weakness is a prime target.

"Just because you don't have access today," said an official, "doesn't mean you won't have it in the future. The KGB will wait."

The major factor in the military espionage cases had been greed... people selling out their country for a few bucks. Sexual perversion and drug use have not been major factors in military people recruited as spies. But the Soviets are famous for using blackmail as a means to get what they want.

In the days after World War II, most people who contacted the Soviets did so out of ideology. That's not true today. A KGB manual explicitly states that Americans can be bought. Some people naively rationalize that selling a few secrets to the enemy won't hurt. That, obviously, is wrong.

William Kampiles, a former CIA employee, sold the KH-11 satellite manual to Soviet agents for $4,000. The Soviets initially thought it was a weather satellite. Actually, it was a powerful intelligence tool. It was "only" one secret, but the damage it caused was significant. And there is no stopping at one secret.

If you are thinking about dabbling in espionage, listen to some more words of wisdom from Christopher Boyce, delivered in testimony before the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations:

"I only wish, Senators, that before more Americans take that irreversible step, (to become involved in espionage) they could know what I now know, that they are bringing down upon themselves headache more heavy than a mountain." AFIS

Are KGB recruiters looking for you?

How would you really know if you are being recruited by a hostile intelligence agency? "Approaches," said a DoD official, "are extremely subtle." In most cases you won't even know it's happening until it's too late.

A contact can take many forms and happen any place — in a bar, a restaurant, a shopping mall. The "agent" can have a foreign accent or might speak English better than you do. Initially, the contact is in the form of a friendly conversation. A relationship is established and rapport carefully built up.

"At some time you will be asked to do something that appears perfectly innocent," said the official. "They will try to put you under some type of obligation." For instance, an agent may ask for an unclassified telephone directory or ask you to write an unclassified paper for publication in a foreign country.

Usually they will ask you to sign a receipt of some kind. All perfectly innocent. But by this time, they have you. Chances are you have been photographed giving an Eastern Bloc agent "something."

"You should be cautious of anyone who asks you for names of friends, weaknesses of friends or activities on your installation," said the official. "That is the time to contact your security people. Until you have turned over sensitive material, you have done nothing wrong."

The armed forces have no desire to have service people spying on each other. There is no profile of the "average" spy. But if an E-3 is driving around in a Jaguar and spending money like there is no end to it, it may be wise to report it.

One Army sergeant assigned to the Defense Intelligence Agency was doing just that. He always had money, lent it freely, and lived a lifestyle far beyond his means. His coworkers didn't report it. Only after he died and was buried was it discovered he had been working for the Soviets.

"Don't be embarrassed to report suspicious situations to the security people," said the official.

Water bottle sparks invention contest

Bright Star '85 fosters originality

When Marines first arrived in Egypt for Exercise Bright Star 85, a joint U.S./Egyptian exercise held in Al Hamman, Egypt, they were introduced to a new friend. That friend was a clear, plastic bottle of water labeled "Baraka, Eau Naturelle."

The bottle provided water for military personnel as an alternative to the water buffalos, but the bottle was valued more for its uses after the 1.5 liters of liquid was consumed.

The uses for the bottle included tent stake guards, a coffee cup when cut, a measuring cup, a funnel, an extra canteen, a tent weight when filled with sand or water, a paper weight, a megaphone, a sun tea jar and a candle holder.

The bottle's uses became such a subject of conversation during the three-week exercise that a contest was devised to find the most unique use for it. Signs and entry boxes were placed around the camp and more than 40 suggestions were collected. Six finalists were selected.

"It was evident throughout the camp that the most versatile piece of gear was the Baraka bottle," said Captain Jerry Broeckert, I MAF. "Marines, by their very nature, have the uncanny ability to modify any item rather than discard it. The Baraka bottle was no exception."

PO1 Michael C. Montoya, from Camp Lejeune, devised an insect motel out of the bottle. Sgt. Timothy J. Estes, Camp Pendleton, and Cpl. Bruce M. Stroka, from Kaneohe Bay, made a spill-proof cuspidor.

Representatives of the 9th Comm. Bn. from Camp Pendleton, designed a golf course made from Baraka parts.

SSgt. Kevin Jobst, from Camp Lejeune, designed and test flew a Baraka rocket which he called the "Screaming Mimi." LCpl. Simpson, of 8th Comm. Bn., made Baraka "Bubble Goggles."

While all the contenders had their moments, the team of Capt. P.A. Brygider and 1stLt. W.S. Evans, from Albany, Ga., ran away with first prize by designing and demonstrating the "Barakman sound resonator, dust inhibitor." The device was a walkman carrier and headphone protector.

"When we heard about the contest we were excited because, in our job, we naturally research and develop," said Capt. Brygider. "We normally stick to logistics systems on computers, but when we heard of this contest, we decided to branch out," remarked 1stLt. Evans.

During the three-week exercise, the two men worked in an 8x8x20-foot steel van field-testing computers and keeping them clean, with temperatures rising as high as 138 degrees inside the van.

"I guess the heat starts to play with your mind and makes you creative," Evans said. The two men said they had found many practical uses for the bottle during the exercise, but found the contest a creative outlet and a morale builder.

"The competition was keen. There were a lot of good ideas, but we feel our attention to detail made the difference for us," Capt. Brygider said.

by Sgt. Mike Badoh, MCB, Camp Pendleton

Capt. P.A. Brygider (l) and 1stLt. W.S. Evans, of MCLB, Albany, Ga., demonstrate the "Barakman sound resonator, dust inhibitor" in the Sahara Desert.

Antiterrorist countermeasures

Military service members and DoD civilian employees, as representatives of the United States, face the risk of being victimized during a hijacking or hostage situation.

Despite pride in service and country, military members must keep a low profile to increase their chances of surviving a terrorist incident.

Navy-sponsored travel to, from and through Middle East countries and other high risk areas is now restricted to mission essential travel. When travel in these areas is necessary, every effort should be made to use military airlift.

When commercial aircraft must be used, get direct routing arrangements where possible. Also, you should observe anti-terrorist countermeasures such as wearing civilian attire and not carrying any documents or other items which indicate government affiliation — and don't discuss your military status with anyone.

Check with your command's travel and security offices for additional guidelines.

Services encourage citizenship efforts

Each year, about 6,000 non-U.S. citizens take an oath of allegiance to support and defend the United States as members of the armed forces.

They have different origins — Hispanic, Filipino, Japanese. What they have in common is a desire to better themselves; and, for many to become naturalized citizens.

U.S. laws allow immigrant aliens to enlist in the military and encourage service members to gain citizenship by waiving standard residency requirements.

Generally, an alien must be a permanent resident for five years before gaining citizenship. For service members on active duty, the waiting period is three years.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service reports that more than 3,000 service members and veterans gain U.S. citizenship each year.

The services have become strong supporters of service members' citizenship efforts.

ALONE?

A major psychological problem that most of us face at one-time or another, is the depression that results from feelings of loneliness. It's possible to feel lonely even when surrounded by friends and family. More often, however, the depression is the result of a dysfunctioning or nonexistent one-to-one relationship. It seems paradoxical. If such a great percentage of the population suffers from this dilemma, why don't these lonely people simply get together and keep each other company? The problem is not with the lack of available people. The problem rests with the difficulty in making contact. The family based social networks have all but disappeared. The single's bar and social clubs are not a satisfactory alternative for many.

One completely new system that has come on the scene is called PACIFIC RIM CONNECTION. PRC deals with all types of one-to-one relationships; from romantic to business. If you are curious about this unique concept, you can listen to a 24 hour recorded message by dialing 955-0011.

Fly Delta nonstop to Dallas/Ft. Worth, nonstop to Atlanta or straight through to Houston. Make fast connections for dozens of other cities.

Fly nonstop to Dallas/Ft. Worth any evening for arrival the next morning. Or we'll fly you right on through to Houston's Intercontinental Airport.

Our new nonstop to Atlanta leaves every evening except Monday and Friday. Arrive in Atlanta the next morning.

Save with Delta's discount fares. Be sure to ask about our big discounts off regular Day Tourist Fares. Discount fare seats are limited and there are special requirements, so make your reservations early. We also have Military Fares that save you 25%. There are no restrictions — leave on any flight that has available space.

Security deposits

by Maj. Maurice Daniels

When you enter into a residential rental agreement in the State of Hawaii, you may be required to pay the landlord a security deposit. It remains your property and is only held in trust by the landlord until part of it, or all, is kept by the landlord for specific purposes:

Purposes of security deposit

The only lawful purposes for which a security deposit may be kept by the landlord are:

To repair accidental or intentional damages caused by the tenant's failure to properly maintain the rental unit; recover rent due; pay for the tenant's failure to return all keys provided by the landlord upon termination of the rental agreement; clean the premises, or have them cleaned, in order to put them in as fit a condition as when the tenant took possession; and recover costs caused by a tenant who wrongfully leaves the premises — advertising and preparation expenses for a new occupant.

The security deposit cannot be more than one month's rent. At the beginning of a rental agreement, the landlord cannot require more money than the first month's rent and the security deposit. And, the security deposit cannot be considered as payment for the last month's rent.

Use of security deposit

Upon termination of the rental agreement, the landlord must give you written notice of all reasons for keeping any of your security deposit. You must be provided written estimates, invoices and receipts for materials, supplies, and equipment, services and cleaning costs.

After taking out authorized amounts from the security deposit, the landlord must return the remainder to you no later than 14 days after termination of the rental agreement. If the landlord fails to comply with this 14-day requirement, then he or she will not be allowed to keep any of your security deposit. The entire amount must be returned to you.

Absentee tenant

If you are going to be absent from your rental unit for 30 consecutive days, or more, you should notify the landlord in writing; otherwise, you may be considered to have wrongfully "quit" the premises. In this event, the landlord does not have to give written notice, and the landlord may keep all of the security deposit.

Sale or transfer of premises

If the landlord sells or transfers your rental unit, or dies, his or her successor landlord must comply with the rules concerning the security deposit. The new landlord must give you written notice of the amount of the security deposit credited to your account within 20 days of receiving the unit.

If the new landlord fails to give you the required notice, then it will be presumed that you paid a security deposit in an amount equal to at least one month's rent at the rental rate charged when you first rented the unit. The new landlord will be bound by this amount in any future dealings concerning the security deposit.

How to figure reserve points for your retirement entitlements

Figuring out your future retirement entitlements is relatively easy when you're on active duty. But how do you keep track of them when you're a member of the Reserve components?

The nearly 150,000 retired reservists drawing retirement pay and 1.5 million members of the Reserve components take this matter very seriously.

It takes 50 points to make a "good" year — one creditable toward a reserve retirement. Former active duty members can count their active service toward reserve retirement, as long as the last eight years of creditable service were in the reserve or National Guard.

Rules about the number of retirement points reserve personnel can earn are outlined in Title 10 of the U.S. Code:

- Fifteen points per year for belonging to a reserve component, whether it's with a drilling unit or in an active status with the Individual Ready Reserve or the Standby Reserve;
- One point for every four-hour drill attended with a reserve or Guard unit — that amounts to four points for a standard weekend drill, with a typical total of 48 points a year;

- One point for every day of active duty, including annual training, training above and beyond drill attendance, service on an Active Guard and reserve tour, or attendance at a resident service school;
- One point for every three hours of military correspondence course work completed successfully.

While it's relatively easy to chalk up enough points for a "good" year, these points don't necessarily count toward retirement pay. The U.S. Code says members of the Reserve components can count no more than 60 points a year earned through "inactive duty" — drill attendance, correspondence courses, and reserve or Guard membership — toward retirement.

Only points earned from "active" service, such as annual training or other active duty, can be counted above this 60 point cutoff. Retired pay is computed by totaling the number of qualifying points earned and dividing by 360. This figure represents an equivalent number of years of continuous active duty service, which is then multiplied by 2.5 to determine the percentage of active duty basic pay an individual will receive as Reserve retired pay.

That means that after his 60th birthday, a reservist or Guardsman with 3,600 retirement points will receive 25 percent of the basic pay of an active duty soldier of comparable grade and years of service for pay purposes.

A reserve component member retiring as an E-6 with three years of active duty and 17 years of Reserve service could expect a monthly paycheck of $186, based on current rates. AFIS

How to recover security deposit

A few unscrupulous landlords will attempt to keep part or all of your security deposit without proper justification. When this happens, file a claim in the Small Claims Division of the District Court.

If the court finds that the landlord wrongfully and willfully kept all, or part, of your security deposit, you may be awarded up to three times the amount of the security deposit, or part that is kept, plus the cost of suing the landlord.

If the court finds that the landlord wrongfully kept all or part of your security deposit, you may be awarded an amount equal to the amount of the security deposit, or part that is kept, plus the cost of suing the landlord.

If the court finds that the landlord was entitled to keep part, or all, of your security deposit, he or she may be awarded an amount equal to the amount of the security deposit or the amount that is in dispute, plus the cost of the suit.

Neither you nor the landlord may be represented by an attorney in Small Claims Court concerning a security deposit dispute. You can probably handle the case alone without the help of an attorney.

Make sure you are well organized and prepared to proceed with your evidence. Gather all rental agreements, estimates, receipts, correspondence and pictures. Also, notify any witnesses you may wish to testify in your behalf.

Small Claims Court provides a friendly and informal setting for the resolution of disputes such as a disagreement about the landlord's right to keep any of your security deposit. After a judge has heard all of the relevant facts concerning your case, hopefully you will get what you are fairly entitled to.

When life's balance no longer is healthy

Like so many people, Carol found the mounting stresses of juggling career, home and personal relationships to be overwhelming. Emotional balance was difficult and, at times, impossible. Missing work on a regular basis, lack of concentration and errors caused her employer to question judgement and ability. Her job was in jeopardy. Withdrawing from family and friends only enhanced Carol's feelings of hopelessness and rejection. She felt out of control.

If you or someone you love needs help, call us. We want to help people learn to cope with life and its problems. For more information, call admissions office 671-8511.

Marine proves to be a 'natural' in 'Year of the Dragon' film

by Sgt. L.C. Brooks

He's now appearing before millions of moviegoers who go to see the action of the "Year of the Dragon," based on a novel by Robert Daly.

He's also on an "extended engagement" with the Crash, Fire and Rescue Unit of Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron, keeping an eye on the runway for aircraft experiencing trouble when landing.

LCpl. Arthur E. Hawthorne, an aircraft firefighting and rescue technician, arrived here five months ago from MCAS Cherry Point. While stationed there, he played an extra in the recently released movie.

"I'd just returned to the barracks from playing racquetball when the Marine on duty asked me if I wanted to be a star," said the Newport News, Va., native.

Hawthorne thought the guy was joking until he gave him a telephone number and told him to call collect. He couldn't lose anything on a collect call; he dialed the number.

LCpl. Arthur E. Hawthorne, SOMS, jokingly autographs co-workers note pads.

"She asked if I was interested in being in a movie and if I could be in Wilmington, N.C., the next day," said Hawthorne. "Yes" was the answer to both questions.

When Hawthorne arrived at the Dino Di Laurentis Studios in Wilmington, the setting for New York City's Chinatown, he was introduced to seven other Marines and two civilians who would also play pallbearers in the movie. He was later sent to wardrobe to be measured for the black suit and white shirt.

Next, the 10 pallbearers were shown how to march to the funeral music while they carried a huge portrait of the deceased. "It was simple. One of the reasons they wanted Marines for the part was because we're used to marching," said Hawthorne.

The reality of being in a studio with professional actors and a film crew didn't sink in until Hawthorne was on the set. "When they actually started shooting our scene, I thought, 'my goodness, this is real.' I'm going to be in a movie!"

In the back of his mind, however, he doubted the film would make it to the theaters. "I kept thinking there would be all kinds of complications, like the movie would go over budget or one of the main actors would walk out or something," said Hawthorne.

If any complications did occur with the production of the film, they didn't prevent it from being released and giving Hawthorne his acting debut. "Even though I was only an extra, it was the number one experience of my life to date," said the 20 year-old.

Since the movie's release Hawthorne has seen it three times and is waiting for his next offer. "Maybe some movie director will see me in the film and want me for another part. It's probably just a matter of time before Hollywood calls," said Hawthorne jokingly, but with a twinkle of hope in his eyes.

Diet Pepsi 10K

Isle Marines take 'the challenge'

by Sgt. Ed Ware

Led by two formations of chanting, clapping Marines, and individual runners, Island Marines made their presence felt at the Diet Pepsi 10K race on Sept. 22 in Honolulu.

The third largest road race on the island, this year's Diet Pepsi 10K saw former American 5,000 meter record holder Duncan McDonald run the course in 30 minutes and 9 seconds to beat 4,234 runners. Patsy Vasquez held a 6-minute mile pace to win the women's race in 37:09.

Macdonald and Farley Simon, a Camp H.M. Smith Marine, ran side-by-side for the first mile, crossing that point in 4:43. They passed the 2-mile marker at 9:27. As Macdonald passed the 3-mile mark, 14:22 had passed, and he had a 50-meter lead on Simon.

"Macdonald didn't increase his pace," said Simon. "I just decreased mine. It's too bad, because I really think Macdonald would have had a better shot at the course record if I could have stayed with him."

Macdonald was never threatened again. He added miles of 4:47, 4:55 and 4:53 to win the race for the second year straight.

Simon relinquished second place to fast-finishing Chip Pierce, who passed him between the 4- and 5-mile marks and went on to run a 31:04. Simon finished third in 31:46.

Other Marines placing third were Chuck Barton and Greg Wooley. Barton ran 35:05 in the 40-49 age group, while Wooley ran his personal best of 32:42 in the 20-29 age division.

"My goal was to maintain a 5:05 mile pace and to place in the top 15," said Wooley. "Overall, the race was a success for me."

Notable performances were also turned in by Carlos Pena and Dave Dipman. "My goal was to run as close to 32 minutes as I could," said Pena, who finished 12th at 32:48. "I didn't quite hold that pace, but I'm satisfied because I beat my last year's time by 2:18."

Dipman, who won the 30-39 age division of the 1984 Diet Pepsi race, finished 14th in 33:05. "I've been running for 22 years," said Dipman, "and I get a kick out of passing these younger runners."

Clad in yellow and green, 71 Marines from the Westloch Guard Company at the Lualualei Naval Magazine ran in formation for the fourth consecutive year.

"It's a bit of a tradition for us now," said Christopher Mulholland, speaking for the unit. "We entered half of the company in this race and will try to enter the other half in a future race."

Also covered and aligned from start to finish were 58 Marines from Marine Barracks Pearl Harbor. "It was a motivating run for the Marines," said SgtMaj. Tony Aguilar. "This is the first time we've run in formation; but when we asked for volunteers, they weren't shy about participating," said the Barracks sergeant major.

Farley Simon, a Camp Smith Marine crosses the finish line of the Diet Pepsi 10K in 31:46 for third place.

Your family benefits, too.

The experience of being a Marine goes beyond the regular workday. It includes being part of a community that has something in common. It means, when you transfer from one base to another, you'll probably run into friends at that new base. Plus, families can find all kinds of services available to them at Marine Corps bases throughout the world like recreational facilities for the kids. Day-care centers for tots. And events happening on base that families can participate in.

There's also a helpful moving package designed for Marine Corps wives so they can take full advantage of all they have coming to them on a move.

When you look at the security, the medical, educational and retirement benefits available to families through the Marine Corps, there are some good reasons to stay.

You can count on the Corps.

Fitness Center gets new equipment

The Fitness Center in building 1583, formerly known as the Mini-Gym, recently installed Nautilus Equipment. Leg extension, leg curl, bicep/tricep, shoulder press and double chest machines were installed to accommodate the increased demand, according to Sgt. Scott Lance, athletic director.

"The increased interest in bodybuilding and power lifting made these additions necessary," Lance said.

In addition to the new equipment, the center's hours are now from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 9 a.m., to 5 p.m., weekends and holidays.

Learning to cope with PCS moves

Moving means new experiences, new opportunities and making new friends. It also means leaving behind familiar surroundings, and fond memories.

Each year, about 300,000 military families pack their bags and move on to new duty stations. These families can describe the ups and downs of frequent moves as few civilian families can.

"It's hard to say goodbye to people, places and things that we've grown fond of," explained Fred Rogers, best known for his role in the children's program, "Mister Roger's Neighborhood."

It can be hard to start a new life in unfamiliar surroundings. Whenever we move away from a place where we've lived for a while, it can feel like we're leaving a little bit of ourselves behind — even if we think the move will bring better opportunities than we had before.

The average person makes about 12 moves in a lifetime. Military families often make that many moves within a 20-year career. Moving is so much a part of military life that families often overlook the stresses involved.

But psychologists are quick to point out that relocating, along with starting a new job, rates high on the list of life's stresses, almost as high as a death in the family, or divorce.

These stresses can be magnified for military families, especially those moving overseas, pointed out J. Robert Stephens, chief of family programs for the Air Force.

"They go through two or more days of following packers around the house, making sure their belongings get packed properly and nothing gets forgotten... then, when they arrive at their new station, they often have no place to stay, no household goods, and sometimes no car," said Stephens.

Recognizing the stress

this places on families, family service centers are helping them deal with the logistical and emotional difficulties of moving — offering everything from pots and pans to individual and family counseling.

Nearly every family service center operates a lending closet where families can borrow household staples until their own arrive. Some installations are designating transient quarters where families without assigned quarters waiting for them can stay when they reach their duty station.

Alice Ivy Snyder, deputy director of the Navy's largest family service center, in Norfolk, Va., said one of the biggest problems of moving is fear of the unknown. Information, both before and after the move, has become a key in making PCS moves easier.

In addition to presenting newly assigned service families with community directories when they arrive, some family service centers operate hotlines that provide information to service families about to PCS.

Other centers have set up files about different duty stations that service members can read to prepare them for their move.

by Donna Bolinger, AFIS

Helping children adjust

When planning a move, it's easy to get so wrapped up in 1,001 details that you overlook the most important ones — your family's emotional health.

This is especially true in the case of children, who often associate their sense of self with their house.

Child psychologists say a move can be good for children because it helps them develop the coping skills they will use throughout their lives. During a move, children learn about separation and togetherness; regrets and expectations; saying goodbye to someone familiar; and saying hello to someone new.

To help deal with a PCS move, this is what you can do:

- Discuss the move with children as soon as you know about it and encourage them to voice their feelings and concerns.
- Encourage children to focus on the move by drawing pictures about it or collecting old snapshots for a scrapbook about the place you're leaving.
- Visit your next duty station with your children if possible. If not, share with them as much information about your new home as you can.
- Pack any sentimental items that might help your children feel at home in the new area.
- Get children involved in packing, even if it's tempting to want to get them out of the way.
- Be positive. If parents are optimistic and enthusiastic, children are likely to feel the same way.

Thespians needed

The Koolau Players theatrical troupe will hold their first meeting Saturday at 10 a.m. in bldg. 1391.

The Players are planning their first production for December and need volunteers to both appear on stage and help backstage. Anyone with experience in drama, or just an interest, is encouraged to join.

For more information call Dependent Rec at 254-2963.

Nutrition seminar

The second part of a six-part series on human nutrition entitled, "The Nature of Nutrition," will be presented Tuesday, 7 to 8 p.m., at the Castle Health Education Center in Kaneohe, 46-005 Kawa Street, third floor.

The second part of the series titled, "Our Cells/Our Selves," discusses the nutrients needed to grow, thrive and stay healthy.

The cost of the video seminar series is $1 per session, and reservations are required by calling the Castle Health Education Department at 263-5286.

Art classes

The Honolulu Academy of Arts will be holding weekly adult art classes beginning Tuesday through Jan. 24.

Classes will be taught by experienced instructors and will include such subjects as figure painting, basic and life drawing, painting, watercoloring, Chinese brush and painting.

Tuition for the classes are $75 for academy members and $80 for all others, with additional model and lab fees for some classes.

To register or for more information, call 538-3693, ext. 220.
