

SgtMaj Trawick to retire

A post and relief and retirement ceremony for Air Station Sergeant Major Willie F. Trawick is scheduled for 3 p.m., Wednesday, at Dewey Square. The uniform for spectators is Summer Service "C."

Sergeant Major Francisco Alvarado will assume the Air Station's senior enlisted post from SgtMaj. Trawick, who is retiring after 30 years of Marine Corps service.

The Trawick family will return to their hometown of Eastman, Ga.

Uniform regulations updated; possession, wear-out dates set

Washington, D.C. -Some of the most frequently asked questions concerning "wear-out" dates for obsolete uniform items, and the mandatory possession dates for new ones, are answered in a recent change to the Marine Corps Uniform Regulations Manual, MCO 1020.341).

The green crewneck undershirt became the only undershirt authorized on July 1 for wear with the utility uniform. Effictive July 1, 1986, the V-neck white undershirt will be a mandatory item for all male Marines, and will take the place of the white crew heck.

Those who do not have the service sweater will be required to purchase it by Oct. 1, 1986. The sweater may now be purchased from the Marine Corps Exchange or an approved commercial source. The "wooly pully" should become available through cash sales out lets in February or March 1986.

Marines have until Dec. 1, 1986, to purchase the allweather coat. Until then, the green overcoat and raincoat may be worn. A green wool scarf to be worn with these coats has been a required item since Oct. 1, 1984.

Women Marine officers and SNCOs are now required to purchase the new ruffledfront blouse with black necktab to be worn with the evening and mess dress uniforms. Although black leather gloves are now being issued to women, cloth gloves are sitll authorized for

One item no longer authorized for wear is the nylon khaki belt. According to the latest uniform changes, the cotton khaki belt is the only belt authorized.

The Marine Corps Uniform Board sometimes allows uniform items to be worn as long as they are serviceable, even though new designs or different fabrics become available. Such is the case with the poplin camouflage utilities, which can be used to satisfy minimum uniform requirements until the poplins wear out.

The white dress and green service uniform coats may be worn until they become unserviceable. The old-style white and green uniform coats, without the back vent, can be worn in lieu of the new longer length coats. No "wear-out" dates have been set for any of these items.

Dates for uniform changes are published in marine Corps bulletins in the 1020 series and are incorporated into the uniform regulations

Mail order service

Washington, D.C. - Marines throughout the U.S. can now order uniforms and accessories by telephone.

By dialing 1-800-POC-USMC, a Marine can place an order with the uniform shop at Quantico. Va. The number can be dialed from anywhere in the U.S., except Virginia.

Items ordered by telephone will be shipped COD and usually arrive within 10 days. If the items requested are not in stock, customers will be notified by mail and given an estimated delivery date. There is no minimum order requirement.

Uniform shop catalogs have been distributed to the field, and commands may order additional copies by calling AUTOVON 278-2916 or (703) 640-2916.

The uniform mail order service operates Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. (EST).

Safety on the road

Moped riders urged to obey local, military laws

by SSgt. Greg Berry

Moned riders here took on a new look this year when a joint Air Station/Brigade message required them to wear helmets and eye protection, both on- and off-

The policy took effect Jan. and has since been corporated in Air Station and MAB directives.

At least one Marine here is grateful for wearing his helmet. "If I hadn't been wearing a helmet, I'd be claims MSgt. William Wentworth, Motor Transportation chief for 1st Radio Bn.

Wentworth swerved to avoid an automobile that crossed into his lane, and landed in a ditch. He suffered more than a half dozen broken bones, but survived hitting a steel post thanks to his helmet. "I broke the lmet, but I'm still here," he said He was released from Tripler Army Medical Center four days after the accident, but will continue therapy for six months.

Moped and motorcycle riders here are governed by laws and regulations from both the state of Hawaii and the military. Motor cyclists must pass a state driver's test and attend a local rhilitary motorcycle class, even if they've had a similar class at another military installation.

"Motorcyclists who already have a Motorcycle Safety Foundation Card are still required to take the classroom portion of our course here," explained SSgt. Edward Coombes, Defensive Driving Instructor.

This training should make motorcyclists well-versed in the laws, but moped riders aren't required to attend any special classes. This may change in the future, as safety experts here are encouraging mandatory moped safety classes.

Most of the laws for both on- and off-Station moped operation are the same. A valid driver's license is required, but Hawaii state driver's license holders can operate a moped at age 15, while those with out of state licenses must be at least 18.

Mopeds must be driven in a single file, close to the right side of the road, and may not exceed 35 mph unless a slower limit is posted.

Passengers are not allowed on mopeds, and operators must ride on a permanently attached seat and must keep at least one hand on the handlebars at all times.

Off-Station, mopeds must use bicycle lanes where provided, unless otherwise posted. On Station, however, mopeds are not allowed to use bicycle lanes at all.

Mopeds must also be registered annually with the City and County of Honolulu. Unregistered mopeds can be seized by city officials.

Perhaps the most flagrant violations by moped riders fall under Sections 15-18.3 of Honolulu's Traffic Code -"Obedience to Traffic Controls." Mopeds must obey all the traffic regulations applicable to other vehicles, and must stop at stop signs, use turn signals, obey speed limits, stay off sidewalks and yield the right of way to pedestrians in crosswalks. In addition to laws governing the operation of mopeds, they must also be equipped with headlights, visible 500 feet to the front; a horn audible for 200 feet; and brake and tail lights.

Mopeds are prohibited from using the H-3 pedestrian access, or H-3 itself. Mopeds are further restricted from Fort Hase and other beaches used for sunbathing or swimming, and the Lawrence Road access path through the golf course to North Beach.

Even with all the safety equipment and protection gear, mopeds are still only as safe as the operator.

Road hazards can cause an inattentive operator to lose control, but there's something not on the road that causes more problems than even the biggest hazard alcohol.

Driving under the influence of alcohol is a serious offense, and on Station a DUI on a moped is just that — a DUI.

'Toys for Tots' drive begins

by Cpl. Leah Gonzalez

As the holidays near, many good programs go into action to help the needy. One is "Toys for Tots," run by Marine Reserves.

"Tovs for Tots" gives Christmas joy to needy children through collection of new, unwrapped toys. They are new so children have the benefit of receiving unused

The program founded in 1947 by Marine Colonel Bill Hendricks, has grown from an annual Los Angeles area project to a nation-wide campaign.

Through contacts as a Warner Brothers executive and member of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, Hendricks was able to initiate a publicity campaign that over the years featured John Wayne, Bob Hope, Glenn Ford, Charlton Heston, Johnny Carison and Bruce Jenner.

Throughout the "70s and '80s proven methods continued to make the program a success. Overall collection was 5.5 million new stoys last

A local activity to benefit the program will be the Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony, Dec. 6, at Aikahi Park, in Kailua, where there will be collection barrels. "Most others are parties held by companies foir their employees where toy's will be collected," said Sgt. Jeffrey Dmochowski, active duty coordinator for Toys, for Tots in Hawaii. Dmochov ski with the Inspector-Instructor Staff, 4th Force Recon Co., 4th Marine Division.

Drop-off points are at the Navy/Marine Corps Reserve Training Center off Nimitz Highway, American Airlines ticket agencies, Shoe Biz and Conoisse Antiques in Kailua. There will be a home pick up service offered Nov.

"We pick up the toys and the Volunteer Information Service will handle any money donated for the program," said Dmochowski.

When asked how many toys can be expected this year, Dmochowski said, "it's hard to say, but there will be enough toys locally collected for 1,500 children. Last year we had enough for 1,800 children, so we sent some to Kauai." The toys will be distributed to the children Dec. 18 and 19.

Army club held responsible in drunk-driving accident

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article was published in the September edition of "Countermeasure," an Army Ground Safety magazine produced at Fort Rucker, Alabama

A federal judge recently ordered the Army Club System to pay almost $1 million to the guardian of a young woman who was left physically and mentally incapacitated in a 1981 automobile accident in Virginia caused by an intoxicated Army soldier.

On the night of the accident, the 19-year-old soldier drank hard liquor at an Army NCO club, even though Army regulations and Virginia law established 21 as the age for drinking hard liquor. The soldier left the club shortly after midnight and caused an accident that left the driver of the other car dead and the passenger in a coma from which she has not recovered.

In holding the club liable, the court recognized a common-law negligence action, inferring the required standard of care from a Virginia criminal statute that makes it a misdemeanor for a tavern owner to sell alcoholic beverages to underage or intoxicated persons

Alcohol is involved in more than half of the nation's 45,000 annual highway deaths. Holding the provider of the alcohol liable is one method used in attempting to reduce this number. Increasing the penalty for drunk driving and raising the drinking age are other approaches to the problem.

Army clubs may be held liable under the Federal Tort Claims Act for the negligent or wrongful acts of their employees who serve alcohol "in the same manner and to the same extent as a private individual under like circumstances." Thirty-eight states and the District of Columbia have some form of "dram shop" liability.

Profits from the sale of alcoholic beverages fund morale, welfare, and recreation activities. Large dollar judgments in lawsuits have a serious impact on the money available for such purposes.

Strict compliance with policies governing alcoholic beverages will go a long way toward preventing future accidents involving drunk driving and the litigation which is sure to follow.

Great American
SNOKE OUT

Today many servicemen and civilian smokers will call it quits for the day as part of the Great American Smokeout. Dr. William Mayer, assistant Secretary Defense for Health Affairs, hopes that day of will be the beginning of a lifetime vacation from cigarettes.

While less than one-third of the adult U.S. population smokes, the comparable rate for the military is slightly more than half.

Cigarettes were once an integral part of military life. In World War II newsreels.

Yanks could be seen sharing chocolate and chewing gum with children and cigarettes with adults. Uncle Sam smiled on these acts of generosity. But no more.

The American Medical Association agrees. Until 1954, they accepted cigarette advertisements for their professional journal. One ad, which appealed to patriotism as well as professional pride, showed a young man as a soldier and later as a doctor—both times smoking the brand "preferred by men in the medical service and the other services."

More than 20 years and numerous studies later, doctors have the lowest incidence of smoking of any professional group. But the military has one of the highest.

Although some of this can be explained by the fact that it has a large number of 18-to 25-year-olds — a group that smokes more than the general population—the rate is still a cause for concern, since it affects health, and poor health affects readiness.

American Forces Information Service

The evils of tobacco

The American Medical Association recently republished its historic 1950 article linking smoking to lung cancer that led to its own ban on to bacco ads. Alongside that historical piece were summaries of other significant studies on smoking.

What researchers have been learning about smoking since 1950 may help you get ready for the Great American Smokeout this year.

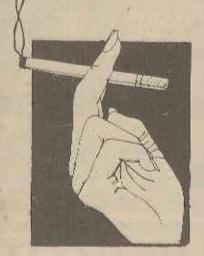

Women and smoking

Women who smoke heavily — more than 35 cigarettes a day — are seven times as likely to suffer "myocardial infarctions," heart attacks, as non-smokers.

Light smokers — fewer than 15 cigarettes a day — are almost 1.5 times as likely to suffer heart attacks as nonsmokers. When combined, with other risk factors such as high cholesterol, high blood pressure and oral contraceptive use, the risks become higher.

One unexpected side effect of smoking for women is lowered fertility. A study involving 678 women who wanted to become pregnant found that women who smoke are only 72 percent as fertile as non-smokers; heavy smokers are only 57 percent as fertile. The study did not find a link between low fertility and husbands' smoking.

Pregnant women who smoke expose their unborn children to a greater risk of spontaneous abortion and low birth weight.

Finally, smoking women really have come "a long way." In 1985, for the first time, lung cancer surpassed breast cancer as a cause of death for them.

Passive smoking

"Passive smoking," smoke inhaled from the cigarettes of others, is dangerous as well. One study of 2,100 non-smoking adults who worked for at least 20 years in offices where smoking was permitted showed lung damage equivalent to that in persons who had smoked 10 cigarettes a day for 20 years.

In another study, carbon monoxide levels in the blood of non-smokers as well as smokers doubled in one hour and doubled again in another hour when exposed to the level created by smoking 10 cigarettes in a car. The same was true for a non-smoker seated next to a smoker in a well-ventilated room.

A women's risk of lung cancer goes up as much as 3.4 percent if her husband is a heavy smoker, and infants and children are more likely to suffer from bronchitis, pneumonia and other respiratory ailments if their parents smoke.

After you quit

But there is good news of people who quit after smoking for many years. Even people in their 60s and 70s who have smoked as long as 40 years show a significant increase in blood flow to the brain within less than a year after quitting, reports Dr. Robert L.Rogers of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, Texas.

Tips to help you quit the habit

Tell your friends and family that you have pledged to quit today. Ask them to help you keep from backsliding.
Leave your cigarettes, lighter and/or matches at home today and hide all the ashtrays!

Get a smoking partner who has also pledged to quit, and try to spend your time with those non-smokers in your crowd.

Try to spend your day in places where smoking is prohibited — the movies, the library, on a bus, museum — anything to change your habits which are connected with

 Keep your hands busy — try doodling, worry beads, puzzles, needlework — eat carrots!

• Take showers or swim a lot ... you can't smoke under water!

On a 3x5 card, make a list of reasons you have for not smoking. Add to it, re-read it every time you crave a cigarette.
For relaxation, try out some new nutritious food or beverage you've heard about.

Calculate the money you will save by quitting cigarettes.

Get up from the table immediately after you've eaten and get busy — do the dishes, walk the dog, work in the garden.

Exercise to help relieve tension. Climb stairs instead of taking the elevator. Get off the bus at a stop before or after your destination and walk that extra block or so.

a smoker

Some smoking facts you should know

The risk of developing lung cancer is 10 times greater for smokers than for non-smokers. Those who smoke two or more packs of cigarettes a day are 15 to 25 times more likely to die of lung cancer than non-smokers.

Lung cancer is largely a preventable disease. It is estimated that 75 percent of the deaths from lung cancer could be avoided if individuals never took up smoking.

Compared with many other cancers, the survival rate for lung cancer is low. About nine percent of lung cancer patients live five or more years after diagnosis. Lung cancer is very difficult to detect early — only 20 percent of lung cancers are discovered in a localized stage.

A male between the ages of 35 and 44 who smokes more than two packs a day, will incur cigarette-related medical bills and lost work time adding up to an average cost of $58,987 over his lifetime.

Cigarette smokers, who represent less than one-third of the adult population, account for about 82 percent of all cases of lung cancer.

Lung cancer is the number cause of cancer death among men. But in the last 30 years, there has been more than 300 percent increase in women's lung cancer death rates.

Who smokes? In general, then with college educations, white-collar persons and high-income levels are less likely to smoke than high school graduates, blue collar workers, and men with low incomes. However, women who work are more likely to smoke than housewives and women in households with low family incomes.

Black smokers smoke less than white smokers. Eighty percent of blacks who smoke go through no more than a pack a day, compared to only 66 percent of whites. At the same time, 34 percent of white smokers consume more than one pack of cigarettes per day, compared to 18 percent of all black smokers.

Fires caused by cigarettes kill more than 2,300 men, women and children each year in the United States. And each year, an additional 5,000 victims are burned in cigarette-induced fires.

The trend to non-smokers' discounts on life insurance — more than 325 companies today offer reduced rates on annual premiums — has extended to other forms of insurance. Non-smokers often can expect to pay less for disability insurance, automobile accident policies, and homeowners' policies.

An airline serving the Southwest, Muse Airlines, and one in New England, Air North, are the first to prohibit smoking on all flights. In addition, Muse Airlines has linked up with a car rental agency which, upon request, guarantees cars untainted by tobacco smoke.

Increasingly, hotels and motels around the country are setting aside rooms, wings and floors for non-smokers. The first motel for non-smokers opened in Dallas, Texas. Guests checking into the Non-Smokers Inn must sign an agreement not to smoke or to permit others to smoke. Violators are penalized with a $100 cleaning charge and immediate eviction.

In 1981 there were 65,000 fires caused by cigarettes, resulting in $300 million in property damage. Local, state and national fire data all list cigarette-caused fires as the leading cause of fire fatalities.

Smokers of low-tar/low-nicotine brands of cigarettes have a lower lung cancer risk compared to smokers of non-filtered, high-tar cigarettes. However, the risk for these smokers is still much higher than that for non-smokers.

More men than women smoke but the percentage of adult U.S. smokers has dropped from more than 40 percent in the mid 1960s to about 29 percent today. The percentage of adult female smokers rose to a peak of 33.7 percent in 1966; since than it has fallen to about 28 percent.

Nicotine, a psychoactive drug found in cigarette smoke, reaches the brain of a smoker within six seconds of inhalation—twice as fast as mainlined heroin.

Teachers, doctors, dentists and pharmacists are groups that have had high rates of success in kicking the smoking habit.

Smokers who have quit are less likely to backslide if surrounded by spouses and friends who don't smoke.

Only one-third of smokers gain weight when they give up cigarettes. One-third actually lose weight as a result of combining a general fitness program with their efforts to quit.

Nearly 18 percent of the fires that occur in one- and twofamily dwellings are related to smoking.

Liberty's centennial countdown begins f all symbols of U.S. freedom and independence throughout the world, she undoubtedly ranks second only to the American flag.

Presented to the United States in 1884 as a gift from the people of France, the 151-foot-tall "Liberty Enlightening the World," better known as the Statue of Liberty, celebrated her 99th birthday recently.

A year-long celebration in honor of "Miss Liberty's" centennial in 1986 will begin with the world premiere at Washington, D.C.'s John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts of a major symphonic work composed in her honor. "The Lady Remembers," a sevenmovement orchestral suite by American composer Richard Adler, will be performed by the Detroit Symphony.

Work continues on the statue itself in preparation for the centennial celebrations. Sometime before July 4, 1986, the 300-ton scaffolding that has surrounded the monument will be dismantled, revealing a fully restored statue with new stainless steel interior supports; a new torch; a glasswalled hydraulic elevator; improved access for visitors, including the disabled; and improvements to the island on which she stands to accommodate some The restored Statue of Liberty will be unveiled and her torch relighted at major centennial celebrations during the week of July 4, 1986. The largest fireworks display in history and an international salute by the tall sailing ships and the world's navies are scheduled. Another ceremony, on Oct. 28, 1986, will celebrate the centennial of the statue's orginal delication.

On Ellis Island, where some 17-million immigrants were processed from 1892 until the station closed in 1954, restoration work is centering on the main building. Some of its rooms, including the huge Great Hall where immigrants • received initial medical and legal inspections, are being restored to their 1918-1924 appearance.

Restoration of the main building is expected to be completed a year after the Statue of Liberty's centennial. The remainder of the work on Ellis Island is scheduled to be finished in time for the station's centennial in 1992.

USSR boasts strong strategic defense

Washington D.C. — The world's only operational antiballistic missile and anti-satellite systems.

Extensive research into advanced ballisic missile defense technologic including laser, particle meam and kinetic energy wispons.

Ballistic miss detection and tracking rad

These may sou like plans for the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, the research program the Sov Union is trying to halt the ugh arms negotiation.

But these a strategic defense initiati already working or in the works by the Soviet Union

A newly released report shows that Soviet efforts in most phases of strategic defense have long been far more extensive than those of the United States

The USSR has major passive defense programs designed to protect important assets from attack, according to the joint DoD-State Department report. The Soviet Union also has extensive active defense systems, which use weapon systems to protect national territory, military forces or key assets.

Soviet developments in the area of active defenses fall into three major categories: air defense; ballistic missile defense based on current technologies; and research and development on advanced defenses against ballistic missiles.

According to a joint memorandum signed by Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger and Secretary of State George P. Schultz, these Soviet offensive and defensive force developments show that the United States must act in three main areas to maintain security and stability both in near term and in the future.

They recommend that the United States:

Modernize its offensive nuclear forces to ensure a military balance and to provide incentives for the Soviet Union to join the United States in negotiating nuclear arms reductions.

Act now to begin constructing a more reliable long-term strategic posture, including continuation of Strategic Defense Initiative research.

Continue negotiating with the Soviet Union for significant, equitable and verifiable reductions in existing nuclear arenals, and to discuss the relationship between offensive and defensive forces and the possibility of a future transition to a more defensereliant deterrence.

Soviet offensive and defensive force developments pose a serious challenge to the West, according to the report. "If left unchecked and unanswered, they would undermine our ability to retaliate effectively in case of Soviet attack.

"The situation would be even more severe if the Soviet Union were to have a monopoly on advanced defenses against ballistic missiles in addition to its sizable offensive and defensive forces."

Weinberger and Schultz call the Strategic Defense Initiative "a prudent and necessary response to the ongoing extensive Soviet antiballistic missile effort, including the existing and powerful deterrent to any near-term Soviet decision to expand rapidly its ABM capability beyond that permitted by the ABM Treaty.

"The overriding importance of the Strategic Defense Initiative, however, is the promise it offers of moving to a better, more stable basis for deterrence in the future and of providing new and compelling incentives to the Soviet Union to agree to progressively deeper negotiated reduction in offensive nuclear arms," they wrote.

"We are even now looking forward to a transition to a more stable world, with greatly reduced levels of nuclear arms and enhanced ability to deter war based upon the increasing contribution of non-nuclear defenses against offensive nuclear

Flight testing award presented

St. Louis, Mo. - McDonnell Douglas test pilot, William W. Lowe, won the Iven C. Kincheloe Award for outstanding professional accomplishment in flight testing.

The award, named after the Air Force captain killed in 1958 during a test flight, is iven annually to a pilot or group of pilots by the Society of Experimental Test Pilots.

Lowe, who recently spent 14 months at Edwards AFB, Calif. testing McDonnell Aircraft's AV-8B Harrier II is the fourth McDonnell Douglas pilot to receive the award.

His objective in his most recent rest flights was to define the performance and handling limits of the AV-8B so that other pilots would know how far the plane can be pushed.

While testing the Harrier, owe forced the aircraft out of control and into a spin by increasing the plane's angle of attack, pitching the nose upward during forward flight which often causes the engine to stall. In addition to regaining control, Lowe had to restart the engine to avoid making an unpowered

"A maneuver like that is a lot of hard work," he said. "It requires complete concentration and is very demanding. In over 200 flights, the AV-8B proved to be easily recoverable and the engine never failed to restart.'

The McDonnell Douglas AV-8B Harrier II is derived the AV-8A Harrier made by British Aerospace. Three Marine Corps squadrons fly the AV-8B for close air support. Eight AV-8B squadrons are planned by the Marine Corps.

According to Lowe, who has logged over 2,000 flight hours as a test pilot, depth of experience is a prerequisite for this type of testing. Since joining McDonnell Aircraft Company in 1972, he has also test flown the F-4 Phantom II, F-15 Eagle, F/A-18 Hornet.

Three years ago he made a vertical landing in the AV-BB after taking his hands off the controls while hovering 40 feet above the ground to demonstrate how well the aircraft's autopilot works.

McDonnell Douglas's prior winners are Don McCracken, for test piloting the F-4 during its spin program; Irv Burrows, who was the first pilot to test the F-15; and Jack Krings, who flew the F-15 during its spin program.

protect endangered humpback whales and other marine mammals, will officially open Hawaii's whale-watching season Nov. 30, with a cruise.

In late November between 600 and 700 humpback whales migrate to Hawaii from the Bering Sea between Siberia and Alaska. Some come to find mates while others give birth to calves conceived the year before.

The humpback is Hawaii's official state mammal, and may be seen off the west coast of Maui from Maalaea Bay to Lahaina and between the islands of Lanai and Molokai.

With only 3,500 to 3,600 humpback whales left in existence, and only 1,500 living in the Pacific, PWF considers their protection vitally important to Hawaii. In an effort to protect the humpback, there are laws which limit how close aircraft, vessels, swimmers and divers may get to the whales.

When not harassed, whales don't mind being watched. Well planned whale-watching cruises are an excellent way to learn more, about them.

U.S. Space Command created Washington, D.C. - For Chiefs of Staff, General John

the Air Force, there have always been the skies to protect. The Army has defended the land; and the Navy the sea. The Marine Corps, true to its anthem, has stood ready to protect all three.

However, in an age when ballistic missiles can strike U.S. targets with pinpoint accuracy in as little as eight minutes, space has become the newest military frontier.

Protecting the United States from war in space has become the concern of all branches of the service.

DoD recently activated a unified space command to provide an organization to oversee all military programs in space. U.S. Space Command is composed of the Air Force and Naval Space Commands and a new Army element.

The activation represents the first joint service command responsible solely for the military use of space.

Space systems are critical for national defense. They monitor compliance with treaties; watch for hostile acts by other nations; provide instant communications and navigational support worldwide; and conduct a host of other important tasks.

Just before his retirement as chairman of the Joint W. Vessey, Jr., commented on the role of the U.S. Space Command:

"There are several things the command will not become," he said. "It is not a force built to escalate the arms race. It is not a force built to achieve dominance for the United States. The command will makes its contribution to that fundamental element of United States strategy, the prevention of war.

"The U.S. military use of space is just as is the use of land, sea and air - nonaggressive. It threatens no one," he said. "It is important for the world to remember the United States strategy. Our strategy is one of deterrence.

"U.S. Space Command will be an important part of that strategy . . . Its mission is defense. Our nation has no intent to attack anyone. By the maintenance of strong, ready, deterrent forces, we want to prevent war.

"The command is a signal to everyone concerned friends and possible foes that the United States has a great interest in maintaining the peace, that we stand ready to defend those interests and to help promote peace and stability in cooperation with our friends. The command will be a force

DoD keeps watch on security program

Washington, D.C. - You can control access to classified information by installing the most comprehensive and sophisticated physical and information security controls magmable.

But unless you have trustworthy people, you don't have much of a security program. Even the most advanced security systems and procedures won't prevent a cleared employee who chooses to do so from compromising military secrets.

That's why the Department of Defense puts so much emphasis on its personnel security program.

According to officials, the Department of Defense personnel security program is by far the largest in the federal government. More than 90 percent of the sensitive positions in the federal government are held by defense personnel.

Before Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger's 10 percent reduction in the number of DoD security clearances had gone into effect, there were:

2.5 million cleared DoD military/civilian employees; 1.4 million cleared industrial employees; and about 400,000 cleared members of the Reserve components.

These figures include individuals cleared for 105 special access programs involving information of the highest national security sensitivity.

Shoplifting really stealing?

Sometimes kids do it because they think it's fun, or try it on a dare when they're with a group of kids who start talking and fooling around. Has that ever happened to you? If it did, what would you Shoplifting is taking something without paying for it — but you really do pay for it eventually.

Storekeepers have to pay for what they sell, and they have to add in the costs of anything that's stolen. Since we all have to buy things from stores, we all pay the extra cost of stolen items.

So, what can you do?

Well, if you're with some kids who want to try shoplifting, you can tell them that you don't want to and that it's not really getting something for nothing. If you ever see anybody in a store not pay for something, you can quietly tell a salesperson or cashier and they will see if there's a problem.

You might have to think about this a while, but what you pay because of shoplifting can be much more than a nickel on a candy bar. If you wanted to buy a radio, for instance, the storekeepermight have to charge $5 or $10 more if he had been the victim of a lot of shoplifting.

Shoplifting is stealing, and you can help stop it and keep prices down — and that's really a good deal!

the wrong hands, investigations of DoD craployees and potential employees help evaluate whether they can be entrusted with classified defense information. These investigations are:

National Agency Check -This includes a check of the FBI Main File and Criminal Identification Division File and the Defense Central Index of Investigations. Other federal agencies may be contacted if appropriate.

If adverse or questionable information is uncovered, the investigation is expanded to develop pertinent details. This check is used to clear military and contractor personnel for access to confidential and secret information.

Standard Background Investigation - This includes a national agency rheck and involves field coverage of such things as employment, education references, developed references and credit and local criminal justice records in the areas where the individual has lived, worked or attended school. It covers the last five years of the person's life and is the basis for granting top secret clearances to DoD civilian personnel.

Interview-Oriented Background Investigation - Following a national agency check and local agency, credit, employment and developed reference checks that cover the past five-year period, the person is personally interviewed. This investigation is the basis for granting top secret clearances to military and industrial contractor personnel.

Special Background Investigation - This is similar to the standard background investigation, except that it covers the most recent 15 years instead of the most recent five. This investigation is a requirement for sensitive compartmented information access.

Periodic Reinvestigation - This investigation is conducted every five years to reaffirm whether an individual can continue working with top secret or sensitive compartmented information. It includes a national agency check, local agency checks, credit check, employment record and employment reference checks, developed character reference checks and personal interview.

One or more of these investigations is conducted before a new employee is permitted access to classified or sensitive defense information, before an employee can move into a new position requiring a higher-level clearance; and on a recurring basis to ensure, to the maximum extent possible, the continued security to government programs.

hen the public first became aware of the sport, many ought the participants ere vain and egotistical. Since it's become more popular in the last few years, it has gained respect from competitors and spectators alike.

odybuilding is a rapidly Devolving sport for men and women. Cpl. Robert Ellision, H&HS, is the latest bodybuilder on the Air Station to demonstrate this by placing second in the heavy weight division of the "Mr. Hawaii" contest recently.

"I'd been lifting for two ars before I started building three years ago," said Ellison. "The reason I went from just lifting to building is that I became fascinated by the way the human body could be developed and defined through the use of weights."

Another reason Ellison started building was because his three older brothers are bodybuilders. "They were getting into such good shape, I thought, 'why not go for it,' " said Ellison.

With that frame of mind and a determination to succeed, the Detroit native entered the world of bodybuilding.

"Before I got into building I didn't realize that it was much more difficult to master than powerlifting. There are more exercises to perform that require more sets and more repetitions,' said Ellision. "A powerlifter basically concentrates on three exercises; bench press, deadlift and squats."

Ellison works two body parts a day — shoulder and chest, back and triceps or legs and biceps — six days a week, two and a half hours a day.

During precontest preparation, the workouts become longer and more intense and his daily caloric intake drops drastically.

"I work out seven days a week beginning eight weeks before a contest," said the 22-year-old. "I drop from 3,000 to 1,200 calories a day," he commented. During this period, Ellison's diet consists of vegetables, fruit, fish, baked chicken, and sometimes potatoes. While Ellison usually maintains a body weight of 230 pounds, his competition weight is 210.

Mr. Hawaii was Ellison's first major competition. "I really wasn't sure I was ready to compete at that level, but I'd reached a point where I had to prove something to myself," said

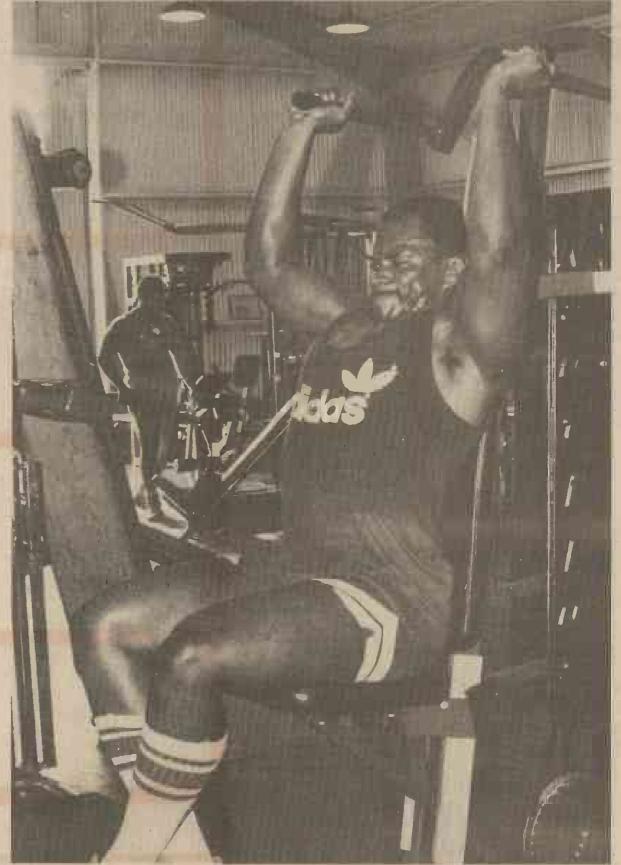

Ellison captured second place while competing against eight other heavy weights.

66 When we were backstage getting ready, I was checking out the competition and felt I had a good chance of placing in the top three," said Ellison.

With is second place, the four-year Marine veteran now moves into open division competition. He can only compete against bodybuilders who have placed in the top three in previous contest. "I'd like to compete on a regular basis and break in to the professional arena one day," said Ellison. While bodybuilding is not for everyone, Ellison thinks its popularity will continue to grow and he wants to meet the challenge of its

Hawaii Marines team up for the 'gentleman's game'

Camp H.M. Smith, Hiawaii — Five months ago, First Lieutenant Andy Holzheimer, Camp Smith maintenance officer, had an. idea. If Marines here couldn't play tackle football, why not rugby? "The only thing you need is a field, a ball, and 30 athletes willing to donate their bodies to playsical demands not seen since boot camp," he said.

Soon thereafter, the Hawaii Marine Rugby Football Club was born. "About 60 percent of the 30man club are from Camp Smith," said Holzheimer. "The rest are from Marine Barracks Hawaii and Marine Corps Air Station, Kaineohe Bay."

From a spectators viewpoint, they all may seem to be a little different, but according to the players, who play two 40-minute halves with few substitutioms, they thrive on a neputation like that.

The HMRFC was recently accepted into the Hawaii Rugby Football Union, and had their first official games. They participated in the recent Hawaii World Invitational Rugby Football Tournament held at Kapiolani Beach Park to which 10 teams from around the world were invited.

"We lost all our games," said Coach Chuck Rivers, a former all-New Zealand rugger and volunteer coach, "but, that's acceptable. I'm extremely impressed by the enthusiasm and guts these Marines displayed. I don't think I've ever seen as good a first-year team as these Marines. The only thing they lack is technique, and that just takes time and experience.' According to Holzheimer, the club is constantly looking for new players, and says the club has big plans for the future. "Because of the huge turn-out, I feel we may be able to travel offisland for rugby matches," said Holzheimer. "We're shooting for the All-Military Rugby Tourna-

Chaplain Corps celebrates 210 years

ashington, D.C. Those who go to sea witness some of the most formidable displays of nature. The nearness of the nature often brings seafaring souls nearer to their gods.

When early Latin

mariners went to sea, they took with them images of their gods, called pupi. The elevated altar built on the afterdeck to hold these idols led to the term "poop deck." When Sir Francis Drake started his journey around the world in 1578, Chaplain Francis Fletcher sailed with English on American soil. Two centuries later, on Oct. 13, 1775, the Continental Navy was established. In the first set of Navy regulations adopted Nov. 28, 1775, the second article addressed the need for divine guidance at sea:

him. Fletcher conducted the first Protestant service in "The commanders of the ships of the 13 United Colonies, are to take care that divine service be performed twice a day on board, and a sermon preached on Sundays. unless bad weather or other extraordinary accidents prevent.'

The Reverend Benjamin Balch is believed to be the first chaplain to serve in the Continental Navy. A Harvard graduate and Congregational minister, Balch fought as one of the Minutemen in the Battle of Lexington and served as an Army chaplain in the Siege of Boston. He reported aboard the frigate Boston

Oct. 28, 1778. In 1780, Balch reported aboard Alliance. One of only seven Continental Navy vessels. Alliance saw more than its share of action. When its crew captured two British vessels off Halifax, it was reported that Balch, "armed cap-apie, was seen in the midst of the fray," earning him the nickname of the fighting. parson.

Benjamin Balch was the son of a chaplain who had served King George. One of Benjamin's sons, William, continued the family tradition.

William Balch, reporting aboard Congress on Oct. 30, 1799, was believed to be the first chaplain commissioned after the Navy Department's establishment in 1798.

Records show only two Continental Navy chaplains served during the Revolutionary War: Benjamin Balch and James Geagen, a Navy surgeon who served as a chaplain. From 1798 to 1800 the Chaplain Corps had a transient roster of seven.

Until 1830, chaplains wore civilian clothes while on duty, and their Navy status was ill-defined until 1863. At that time, chaplains were designated staff officers and given relative rank with officers of the line.

The following year, naval uniforms were changed in accordance with the secretary of the Navy's desire for "republican simplicity," and chaplains received their distinctive corps device - an embroidered Latin cross. Over the next 30 years, the Navy was still a bit unsteady. Chaplains lost and regained their relative rank status, their corps device and the authorization to wear a uniform.

By 1898, however, the Chaplain Corps' status stabilized, and the next uniform change was not until 1917, when the first Jewish chaplain was authorized to wear an embroidered shepherd's crook in lieu of the Latin cross. In 1941, Jewish chaplains were authorized to wear "the Star of David above and attached to the center of the Tablets of Law" as their corps device. moday's Chaplain Corps serves sailors, Marines, Coast Guardsmen and Merchant mariners around the world and has more than 1,000 chaplains who represent nearly 100 faith groups.

In the introduction of "The History of the Chaplain Corps, U.S. Navy," published in 1949. then Chief of Chaplains Rear Admiral William N. Thomas wrote: "Nowhere outside of the armed services of the United States is it possible to find so many clergymen of so many different faiths working together in such close harmony for the spiritual welfare of so many."

Lieutenant Commander Arnold Resnicoff, present at the destruction scene when the Marine headquarters in Beirut was bombed by

Sergeant Todd Carpenter, Camp Smith, hooks onto an Australian sailor.

RUGBY/from B-2 ment coming up in May and a tournament in Monterey, Calif., also that month,' Holzheimer said. "We should do quite well. The regular season in Hawaii starts in January and goes through April; by that time we will be competitive.

It has been written that he game was invented so nen would have an excuse to throw a party. This seems to be no exception to the play on Hawaii. "We consider rugby a 'gentlemen's game',' added Holzheimer. "We get out there, regardless of the weather, and play hard. People do get hurt, but broken bones are rare." When the game is over.

the other team's players, who you would rather have ripped the other players apart during the match, become great friends. "That's the spirit of rugby," Holzheimer said.

by Sgt. Chuck Jenks FMFPac, PAO

The HMRFC practices at Camp Smith's Bordelon Field on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5:30 p.m., with pick-up matches against local clubs on Saturdays and Sundays.

Military families

Service life can be made easier

ocal psychologists say that commitment is the key to a healthy family life for military couples.

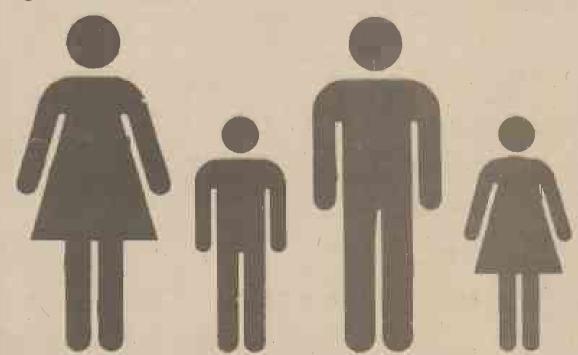

According to George Bussey, a psychiatrist and director of adult services at Brown School Psychiatric Hospital, commitment includes a couples' ability to make agreements and to come to terms about their relationship.

"The spouse, generally the wife, must understand what she's getting into when she marries a military man," Bussey said. "She needs to recognize that hours and assignments aren't flexible and can't be juggled like in some civilian occupations."

ccording to Bussey also it's equally important for the husband to recognize his wife's competence in running the family while he's away. "When the military husband returns home, she remains competent at handling the family budget, scheduling and taking care of family disputes," he said.

He trusted her decisionmaking ability while he was gone. He should continue that trust after he returns,' Bussey said. "The active duty parent should also remember that children are not subordinates of 'little soldiers,' " Bussey advises. "Interpersonal communication is different with children. It needs to be two-way." He suggested observing the spouse's way of communicating with the children.

While military fathers are away, their families should keep up their contact with him through telephone calls and letters. Preparations and plans for the fathers' return can be a family project.

Mike Len, a psychologist and the Family Services coordinator and counselor at NAS Barbers Point agrees on the importance of good family communication, along with well-established generational boundaries. "Healthy military and families make special efforts to communicate to their children the uniqued demands on the active duty family member," said Len.

"These families involve the children in planning, which makes the family run smoother. Families don't do well when children are in the dark about the situations that are part of the military lifestyle," Len continued.

"Sometimes moms slip into being a pal when dad is gone, and quickly refocus when dad comes back, which can be confusing, said Mark Stitham, a child psychiatrist.

Droblems are compounded periods of separation. late shifts and securitymindedness. The active duty partner can't come home and discuss what's going on in the office.

"Probably the most difficult job in the world is rearing a family. Parents must realize as they nurture their families they will have problems and they need to be creative problem-solvers," said Dr. Bussey.

'With the essential ingredients of commitment, communication and flexibility, families can learn to be healthy and happy," he concluded.

Arthritis Answers

myths vs facts

Q. There is so much folklore about arthritis, it's hard to know what to believe. What are the facts about arthritis?

A. Arthritis is the most common health problem in the United States, affecting one in every seven Americans. Just as common are the myths and misconceptions about it, reports the Arthritis Foundation.

'Many people believe that comes with old age, like gray hair and wrinkles,' says Dr. Frederic C. McDuffie, the Arthritis Foundation's medical director. "In fact, about half the people with arthritis are under age 60."

According to the Foundation, arthritis folklore can actually be dangerous because many people put their faith in these myths about arthritis.

They do not seek proper medical treatment and therefore increase their chances of permanent damage," said McDuffie. "Knowledge is your most important defense against arthritis."

Myth: Arthritis is one disease.

Fact: The term "arthritis" refers to more than 100 related diseases of the joints, muscles and connective tissues. The most common are rheumatoid arthritis, osteoarthritis, gout, lupus, spinal arthritis, juvenile arthritis and scleroderma.

Myth: Arthritis consists of minor aches and pains.

Fact: Arthritis is our country's number one cause of disability. While some people with arthritis have relatively minor problems; many have severe pain, disability and changes in lifestyles.

Myth: Arthritis comes primarily with old age.

Fact: People of all ages can get arthritis. In fact, the prime working and child-bearing ages are when people are most susceptible to many forms of arthritis. Thousands of children have arthritis. Osteoarthritis, the disease typically associated with old age, can develop earlier in life from injury or from wear and tear.

Myth: Arthritis will usually disappear, making treatment unnecessary.

Fact: The symptoms of arthritis usually become progressively worse without proper treatment. Some forms of arthritis will disappear, or go into remission, on their own occasionally, particularly in the early stages, but this does not mean the disease is "cured." In fact, during remission a person must be especially careful to continue medication and therapy.

terrorists, echoed those thoughts. He and Lieutenant Commander George Pucciarelli were administering to the wounded when Rabbi Resnicoff realized his kippa (varmulka) was lost.

"The last I remember it, I had used it to wipe someone's brow," said Resnicoff. "Father Pucciarelli, the Catholic chaplain, cut a circle of camouflage cloth out of his only cap, a piece of material which would become my temporary head covering . . . We both wanted to shout . . . in a land where people were killing, at least partially based on differences in religious, that we - we Americans — still believed we could be proud of our particular religions, and vet work side by side when the time came to help others, to comfort, to ease pain.

The members of this unique corps also perform the demanding role of confessor, counselor, arbiter and friend to a large and varied congregation under all situations.

In the words of Chief of Naval Operations Admiral James D. Watkins, "The military chaplains see our people at their best — at the altar to get married, at christening ceremonies and bar mitzvahs for their young children. They also see our people during the worst times - administering to battlefield casualties or counseling the drug addict."

Serving alongside their congregations, Navy chaplains have gone down with their ships or planes and performed acts of bravery which earned them many awards, including Medals of Honor.

Almost 40 years ago, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said of these special people:

'By his sympathetic labors with the men, day in, day out, and though the night, every chaplain. contributed immeasurably to the moral courage of our fighting men. None of that effort appears in the statistics. Most of it was Navy secret between the chaplain and his confidant. It is for that toil in the cause of God and country I honor the chaplains most.

Assistant SecDef rebukes Soviet officials' statements

Richard N. Perle, assistant secretary of defense for international security policy, recently challenged statements by Soviet officials at a conference in Geneva, Switzerland.

Perle, known for his staunch position against Soviet misinformation, challenged the substance of the Soviets' presentations point by point.

"They would have us believe that the Soviet buildup of strategic nuclear weapons has been forced upon them by American efforts to achieve what (they call) 'unilateral advantage.

"But it is the Soviet Union, alone," continued Perle, "that today possesses a force of intercontinental ballistic missiles with a combination of yield and accuracy sufficient to attack and destroy hardened military facilities that are essential elements of the American nuclear deterrent. The United States has no comparable hard target offensive capacity.

"It is the Soviet Union alone that has deployed a system of antiballistic missile defense.

"It is the Soviet Union alone that has a fully tested and deployed anti-satellite system.

"It is the Soviet Union alone that has mobile missiles with mulitple warheads of intercontinental range," Perle said.

Perle compared United States and Soviet trends in weapons development:

"The last of our B-52 bombers rolled off the production line in 1962, 23 years ago, and some of our active fleet of strategic bombers were built as far back as 1959. We began deploying our newest landbased intercontinental ballistic missiles 15 years ago. And during the same year, we began deploying the Poseidon submarine-launched ballistic missiles.

"We did not field another new strategic system until 1978, when we began deploying the Trident I submarine-launched missiles. Since then, we have begun to deploy air-and sea-launched cruise missiles and to build the Trident I ballistic missile carrying submarine at the rate of about one a year.

"By contrast, the Soviet Union has, since 1971, deployed at least three, and probably four, new types of ICBMs, eight improved versions of existing ICBMs and SLBMs (submarine launched ballistic missile), long-range cruise missiles; and we are about to see a new intercontinental bomber," he strategic weapons of all types, according to Perle.

He said the Soviet Union has more than 1,200 warheads on SS-20 intermediate-range ballistic missiles, probably twice that number when refire missiles are considered. The range of these missiles, according to Perle, is twice that of American cruise missiles.

'We . . . accept an image of the strategic relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union that is charactrized by a spiralling arms race," Perle summarized. "And yet the facts are significantly different.

"The United States has today, deployed around the world, some 8,000 fewer nuclear weapons than we had deployed in 1967 . . . The megatonnage of this diminished American force is barely one-quarter of what it was in the late 1960s," Perle

He added that the Western alliance has agreed to further reduce the number of U.S. nuclear weapons deployed in Europe by 1,400.

"By contrast, we have seen in recent years consistent additions to Soviet nuclear forces: 8,000 new strategic warheads alone since 1969 when SALT I negotiations got under way, 4,000 of which have been added since 1979 when the SALT II Treaty was signed."

Perle also rebutted Soviet criticisms of the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative research program, noting that the Soviet's strategic defense program - including large investments in advanced technology, such as directed energy and particle beam weapons began in the 1960s.

'If the United States and Soviet Union are to come an arms reduction agreement, the Soviet Union will have to end its artificial linkage between reductions in offensive forces and its demand that the United States terminate its SDI research," Perle said.

"I hope that we will find mechanisms, however difficult it may be, for composing the relationship between us, based on common understanding of what (offensive) forces are possessed on both sides. leading to a radical reduction of those forces," concluded.

GET $25,200 FOR COLLEGE IN TODAY'S ARMY.

The rewards of being a soldier just got richer. With The New GI Bill Plus The New Army College Fund.

You contribute $100 a month for your first full 12 months' paychecks (for a total of $1,200). The government and the Army will contribute the rest (up to $9,600 from the government and up to $14,400 from the Army, if you qualify). That's a great deal.

And as a soldier, you'll also learn a great deal. The Army offers over 80 skills for training. Many of the skills are high-tech, and many are skills you might want to pursue in college.
