Barracks reaching completion

Combat Correspondent

Infantry Marines will soon do away with the old and get into the new as they make the transition from their current unaccompanied personnel housing units to new, first-class home accommodations.

By the year 2000, most Marines from 3rd Marine Regiment as well as 1st Battalion, 12th Marine Regiment, are scheduled to occupy the new barracks aboard MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, on Mokapu Road, across from Mokapu Elementary School. The first of the new barracks are scheduled to be occupied in late October.

The entire design of the new barracks, both exterior and interior, bring many different changes to the traditional back-to-back column of rooms with bunk beds.

"It's a big improvement in the quality of life for Marines," said Gunnery Sgt. Ewart Lucius, the facilities chief for 3rd Marine Regiment. "It's definitely more of an incentive to have a home like this to come to from the field."

There are eight new barracks; each has four sections that are squared off and have a courtyard in the center. Most rooms are iden-

Combined Federal Campaign to kick off

Lance Cpl. Otto C. Piell-Muete

If a man asked a million of his friends for $1, he would be a millionaire, yet none of his friends would probably have thought they made a difference for him.

Since 1961, federal employees have made a difference in the lives of others by contributing to the numerous charitable organizations consolidated by the Combined Federal Campaign.

Today is the first day of the campaign for MCB Hawaii. It is scheduled to continue until early November.

"There's hardly anybody out there that hasn't received benefits from more than one of those organizations supported by CFC," said Lt. Col. Michael E. Kampsen, the assistant chief of staff, force inspector, at Marine Forces Pacific. "These particular charities impact everyone. When we support the CFC, we're really supporting each other."

Through the CFC, people can help contribute to more than 1,000 international, national, and local charities. Contributors may specify which charities to donate to, or donate to the campaign, which will distribute the funds to the various charities.

Donations can be given by either a lump sum (cash or check), or through payroll deductions that help people easily afford gracious contributions.

Each unit of the armed forces stationed aboard Hawaii and across the country conducts the yearly campaign at approximately the same time of the year.

To better explain the mission of CFC and the importance of the charitable contributions, servicemembers and federal employees are offered the opportunity to attend one of five CFC briefs at the base theater, said Jacque Freeland, the project officer for MCB Hawaii.

The dates and times are as follows:

Sept. 29 1:30 p.m.	Sept. 30 8:30 a.m.	Oct. 1 8:30 a.m.
	1:30 p.m.	1:30 p.m.

Former POW speaks at service

Sgt. Kane Walsh

CAMP H.M. SMTH, Hawaii — The black flag set against an overcast sky helped set a somber mood as the notes of "Taps" washed over the assembled servicemembers at the Marine Forces Pacific/Joint Task Force Full Accounting POW/MIA Recognition Day ceremony held here Friday.

After the last notes ebbed, 76-year-old Albert Frumkin made his way up to the speaker's position. He was a man who knew only too well the trials a prisoner of war must face.

He was just 20 years old when he was captured during the Battle of the Bulge by the German army, in December, 1943.

The POW/MIA Recognition Day is traditionally observed on the third Friday of September. It commemorates the sacrifices of those who were held as prisoners of war, and those who remain listed as missing in action. Currently, more than 88,000 American servicemembers are listed as missing in action from World War II, Korea, the Cold War, and Vietnam, according to the Defense Prisoner of War/Missing Personnel Office.

Starved and abused, Frumkin would spend nearly four-and-a-half months in captivity before being liberated by the Soviets and making his way back to the States, 80 pounds lighter and significantly wiser.

Throughout, he never wavered in his drive to return home to his family and friends.

"It never even entered my mind that I would die there," Frumkin said. "I hadn't fulfilled anything I wanted to do in life. I couldn't die."

Frumkin has spent a lifetime reflecting on those months of captivity, and what it was that kept him alive when so many of his fellow servicemembers didn't make it home.

Defense spending bill focuses on retention

Cpl. Barry Melton
Combat Correspondent

One of the biggest decisions a Marine can make is whether or not to continue being a Marine.

For 50 consecutive months, the Marine Corps has made its recruiting mission. Retaining those first-term Marines after their first four years, however, is something Marine Corps leaders would like to improve.

Currently, 68 percent of the Marine Corps' population is first termers. Last year, nearly 23,000 first termers reached their respective end of active service. Only 5,400 of these Marine re-enlisted, said Staff Sgt. Aubrey Hall of Marine Corps Manpower Enlisted Assignments, Headquarters, Marine Corps, during a recent visit to MCB Hawaii Sept. 13-15.

"Our mission ... is to provide commanders with Marines, by grade and skill, to accomplish the mission," said Hall. "It's very important for a commander to have the Marines he needs to do that."

The Marine Corps needs to retain 26 percent of their first-term population. That's one of every four Marines. In addition, 53 military occupational specialty fields need at least half of their population to re-enlist, Hall said.

The Marine Corps is working to try to keep these first termers in the ranks. Whenever a four-year corporal or sergeant leaves the Corps, it takes as much as four years to train another Marine to fill his or her shoes, Hall said.

Not only does this cost the Marine Corps time, it takes leaders out of different fields, many of which are undermanned and in need of small unit leaders, such as experienced corporals and sergeants, Hall explained. Secondly, it costs the Marine Corps its two most valuable assets — people and money.

Experienced corporals and sergeants are vital, especially in those fields where noncommissioned officers play a valuable role, said Cpl. Chad Lyman, a personnel clerk with Personnel Customer Service, MCB Hawaii.

"You're always getting new orders and rules, and when you have somebody who has been there for three or four years, it isn't that hard for him to adapt," Lyman explained.

More so, according to reports from the Marine Corps Times, due to the Military Retirement Reform Act of 1986, which took the luster from retirement benefits, and military salaries that aren't competitive with wages in the private sector, the Marine Corps has found it harder to recruit Marines and keep Marines past their first term of enlistment.

To combat this and other problems stemming from military pay, the Joint Chiefs of Staff addressed Congress about their concerns and needs. Congress has reacted with improvements even higher than the expectations of the Joint Chiefs.

All servicemembers can look forward to a 4.8 percent pay raise Jan. 1, and another pay raise July 1 of up to 5.5 percent. Congress also is increasing re-enlist-

SERGEANT MAJOR'S CORNER

Salute to new chiefs is appropriate

Sgt. Maj. Robert W. Holub
MarForPac Sergeant Major

A very special group of men and women in Marine Forces Pacific entered a new and exciting phase of their careers in the United States Navy Friday.

I am, of course, talking about the dozens of petty officers first class of the Force who on that day traded in their dungarees and donned the khaki uniforms and anchors of chief petty officers in the United States Navy. It is to those very special men and women I would like to speak to this week.

Now, you might be asking yourself why a Marine sergeant major writing a column in a Marine newspaper would be interested in the promotions of a sister service.

Well, I guess it might be because my own career has been so interwoven with the Navy that I feel a close bond with them and recognize that this Navy promotion is more special than any that came before or any that will come after it.

Or, perhaps, it is because I recognize that becoming a chief petty officer in the Navy is the pinnacle of one's career.

Being promoted to "chief" is the Navy's equivalent of a Marine becoming the "gunny." Both titles are synonymous with words such as leadership, professionalism, and patriotism.

Just as we in the Marine Corps say that the staff noncommissioned officers are the "backbone of the Marine Corps," the Navy's saying that, "the chiefs run the Navy" is equally true.

I remember, as a young lance corporal serving at the Subic Bay Naval Base in the Philippines, running into my very first chief petty officer in person outside the PX.

I remember seeing that khaki uniform coming toward me and looking at the Sailor's collar and seeing something shiny. Well, you know as well as I do what happened next. The old saying from boot camp came to mind for saluting officers: "When in doubt, whip it out."

I am here to tell you I saluted that chief with my very best hand salute. Well, as most chief petty officers will tell you, they are used to Marines saluting them. And I'm sure the one I saluted had been saluted on more than one occasion, but instead of laughing at me or chewing me out he returned my salute and stopped to talk to me.

He told me he was a chief petty officer — not a commissioned officer — and while he appreciated my salute, one was not required. He also went on to say if I wanted to be worth my salt as a Marine, I should brush up on my Naval ranks as well as my Marine ones because he was pretty sure I would be running into more chief petty officers in the future.

He then asked me where I was from and how long I had been in the Marines. etc. All the while I was standing at attention. Why? Because while I didn't know who this guy was, I could tell just by his bearing he was someone important. His uniform was sharp, he had a chest full of ribbons and, most importantly, he spoke like a professional.

I have always remembered that first meeting and, to tell you the truth, if I had a nickel for every chief I have saluted since that day, I would be a millionaire. But you know what? No matter how many chiefs I have saluted or how many different responses I received for doing so, I always remembered the impression the first one had on me.

As I have said in other articles, you only have one chance to make a first impression. The first chief petty officer I met made a lasting impression on me.

I, as the Force sergeant major, would like to congratulate each and every one of you, not only for what you have done up to this point to be promoted to chief petty officer, but what you will do for our Navy and Marine Corps in the future.

To me, leadership is the same whether you are wearing the khaki of a chief petty officer or the two rockers of a Marine gunnery sergeant, if you're a third class petty officer or a corporal. So please allow me a few moments to pass along this small bit of advice as you don your khakis and anchors.

Never forget how you got where you are or the Sailors that got you there. Be a role model not only for your Sailors, but your Marines as well. Remember that we in the Naval Service share the same core values of "Honor, Courage and Commitment," and try your very best to live those words both on and off duty.

Continue to make yourself available to your Sailors and Marines, to guide them and offer that which you know best.

Rededicate yourself to making the Navy even better than it is already.

Don't hide in the Chief's Mess, but get out on the mess decks and continuously take the pulse of your Sailors.

Forgive your Marines for getting lost on the ship and wandering where they should not be. If they look lost, show them the way. As a chief petty officer, Marines will always look to you to get them through a deployment or safely to the beach and back.

And last, but not least, if a Marine salutes you don't make fun of him. Stop him and take the time to explain who you are and what you represent. Who knows? He may grow up to be a sergeant major and you will have had a hand in his development.

In a John Wayne movie there is a scene on a submarine at sea with a young ensign mourning the loss of a chief petty officer who had earlier saved his life while under fire. Wayne is the executive officer and somehow or another he tells the young ensign that chiefs have been taking care of this man's Navy for many years. The chief had taken care of the skipper, he had taken care of him, and then he had taken care of the ensign. To me, that is the finest description of a Navy chief I have ever heard.

You take care of your Navy, your Sailors and your officers. Finer words were never spoken. I could only add you also take care of your Marines.

On behalf of the Force Master Chief, Master Chief Petty Officer Kevin Brannigan, and all the Marines of Marine Forces Pacific, we congratulate you on your accomplishment and we look forward to seeing you in the fleet, or, at a minimum, outside the PX ... Hand salute!

Semper Fi.

Young Marine establishes business

Lance Cpl. Otto C. Pleil-Mueta
Combat Correspondent

People may chase the plentiful rainbows of opportunity in Hawaii to find a pot of gold at the end, but for one Marine, it didn't take bright colors to lead him to his treasure.

Instead, it took a love for card games and comic books to lead Lance Cpl. Chevee Tyler Dodd, a warehouse clerk for Combat Service Support Group 3, into a potential pot of gold with his new business.

"I never dreamed I would end up here," said Dodd. "It's been a big learning experience."

At only 20 years of age, the 6-foot-2-inch native of Morgantown, West Virginia, took over "Pogo Stick" a Kailua game store of collectable card sets, role-playing games, comic books, and other games, along with a civilian business partner, Joshua Bassler, on Sept. 1.

"We both really want this to succeed," said Bassler. "It's been a lot of fun, but a lot of work."

One month after arriving on the island in 1998, Dodd found the shop to be a pleasant hangout, where he could play games with other gamers, from children to older adults. Instantly, he made a great friend in Bassler, who was also a devoted customer of the store.

As time passed and the previous owner decided to sell his game store, he encouraged Bassler and Dodd to buy the store from him and helped them get started in the business. This, along with the help from private investors, helped Dodd and Bassler make a smooth transition into the business world.

"The main reason I bought it is because I didn't want it to close," said Dodd.

And yet, Dodd hasn't neglected his duties as a Marine, as he continues to benefit the Marine Corps with his self-taught knowledge of computer programming — a tool he discovered to be quite essential at the warehouse and in his new business.

"Not only does he have his own business," said Sgt. Lejon T. Nall, the operations chief at the CSSG-3 warehouse, "but he's still dedicated to his Marine Corps mission."

Nall said Dodd was responsible for writing up a computer program that could have cost the Marine Corps anywhere from $3,000 to $10,000, and is currently setting up another program as well.

"With his own resourcefulness," said Nall, "he's taken the initiative to step out where other Marines only dream about."

Together, Bassler and Dodd strive to help one another out to make their business a success.

"Where I lack, he makes up for me, and where he lacks, I make up for him," said Bassler, the 24-year old partner that is credited with having the business managing skills, whereas Dodd provides his product managing ability.

Dodd said having a civilian partner was essential in the event that he might get deployed and wouldn't be able to take care of the store. It's also been beneficial to keep the business open from noon til 8 p.m. Bassler works at the game store in the day and Dodd handles it in the evening.

Bassler and Dodd explained card games, such as Pokemon, have become a huge success and a great contributor to the success of their game center.

"This whole industry is about games hitting their high and low points," said Bassler. "Pokemon is the big one now. It's intellectually stimulating and entertaining."

Dodd said once he started trading cards, others came to the game place to trade cards after school and play the card games as well, which has helped the business thrive.

"It was an instant success after that. It's become a new form of social interaction," said Dodd. "You can play with new people and just have fun."

Bassler and Dodd said they're both making plans to help their game store continue to succeed, such as expansion into the internet, and catering to card collectors trying to find specific cards.

And to think, it only took a love of games and a helpful business partner to help Dodd find his pot of gold — the world of business.

"All Marines don't have the ability to foster a new business or go to school," said Nall, "but Marines should be patient. When the opportunity does come, they must be prepared to seize it."

DEFENSE, From A-1

ment bonuses, housing allowances, special duty and incentive pay and restored military retirement benefits.

How does this effect first-term Marines?

A first-term corporal nearing his end of active service and teetering on re-enlistment can look forward to his base pay jumping from the current rate — $1,326 as a three-year corporal — to $1,520, as of July 1, as a four-year corporal. And if he's promoted to sergeant by July 1 — $1,640.40, according to the 2000 military pay charts.

First termers can also look forward to re-enlistment bonuses of up to $30,000. Fields that are undermanned pull higher bonus priorities known as "multiples." The multiples can range from one to five.

If there's a multiple of four offered in a particular job field, for instance, the Marine's base pay is multiplied by four, then multiplied by the number of years he or she re-enlists for, said Hall.

The money is taxed, the Marine receives half of the money in a lump sum and the other half in increments over the rest of his or her second term, he said.

The Marine Corps is also seeking improvements concerning re-enlistment bonuses. In an article featured in the Sept. 20 issue of Marine Corps Times, it was reported the Marine Corps seeks a lump sum vice an incremented system of payment for bonuses.

According to the article, officials said the large sum up-front upon re-enlistment would encourage first termers to ship over.

Many Marines are glad to see the improvements

"This shows how the government is starting to take care of you and give you more if you want to stay in," said Sgt. Mario Dominguez, an orders clerk with Personnel Customer Services, MCB Hawaii. "It will definitely make them (first termers) take a second look at re-enlistment."

"They look and ask, 'what do I have if I get out?' and then ask themselves, 'what do I get if I stay in?'" said Dominguez.

More often than not, especially for a young family, benefits and bonuses in the military will be better than with a civilian job, he said. Now the pay can compete with the private sector, as well.

"I think it's overdue," said Lyman. "If you compare what a senior corporal or junior sergeant makes yearly to a civilian just out of college with a Bachelor's Degree, it shows we're grossly underpaid. Now it's getting better."

Both Lyman and Dominguez agree that reasons besides money, like pride, camaraderie, teamwork, and love for country and Corps, should be the reasons to stay in the service.

"If you get a bonus, that's outstanding," Lyman said. "But if that's the only reason you're re-enlisting, you need to take long look at yourself and think about what you're doing it for."

Camp Smith barracks to get renovations

Sgt. Nathan L. Hanks
MarForPac Public Affairs

CAMP H.M. SMITH, Hawaii — Renovations to the Bachelor Enlisted Quarters here are scheduled to begin in November, affecting approximately 160 single Marines.

The renovations will include new furnishings for individual rooms, major upgrades in the electrical system, window replacement, new bathrooms, and a kitchen in the recreation center, according to a Sept. 2 memorandum from the commanding officer of Headquarters and Service Battalion, Marine Forces Pacific. The rooms will be furnished as a part of the commandant of the Marine Corps' "Whole Room Concept," with new drapes, area rugs, lamps, residential-style refrigerators, microwave ovens, wall lockers and new furniture.

Additionally, a newly-furnished common area lounge in each barracks will give Marines a place to relax outside their rooms.

According to the memorandum, the kitchen facility will be added to the nearby recreation center and will include five stoves and three large microwaves. As there is no dining facility at Camp Smith, this will provide single Marines greater flexibility in preparing meals.

The morale level among the barracks occupants has significantly increased since the announcement of the renovations, said Sgt Darryl W. Chambers, Avionics Logistics Division administrative clerk. "I am pleased with the continuous efforts being made to substantially improve our quality of life."

Lance Cpl. Elijah D. Payne, Systems Integration Hub Help Desk technician, who has lived here for about four months, said he, too, is happy about the changes and is looking forward to progress in the barracks.

According to the memorandum, work will take 12-18 months to complete.

BARRACKS, From A-1

tical, said Ray Rippel, the director for the Unaccompanied Personnel Housing Division.

Basic rooms are designed for only two individuals, no bunk beds and no wall lockers.

Each person gets his own bed, secretary, desk and chair, and a two square-meter closet, said Rippel. Other amenities include a microwave, freezer/refrigerator, two lamps, private digital air temperature controls and a bathroom with shower.

All rooms have doors opening toward the center courtyard and large windows, opposite the room, for natural light. To appreciate the tropical breezes of Hawaii, residents can also shut the air conditioning off and open small windows above the door and also the larger windows opposite the door to channel the air through the room.

Rippel said each barracks unit will have a laundry room, a recreational room, and a sun deck on the second floor to be used as a gathering place. And instead of everyone having to park personally owned vehicles in one specific lot, there will be parking spaces throughout the barracks area.

The schedule for Marines moving into the new barracks follows:

Dates to occupy	Building Unit
• Oct. 11 - Oct. 23	C-2 3/3
• Oct. 11 - Oct. 23	D-1 3/3
• Oct. 11 - Oct. 23	D-2 3/3
• Oct. 23 - Nov. 6	A-1 2/3
• Oct. 23 - Nov. 6	A-2 2/3
• Oct. 23 - Nov. 6	B-1 HQ Co.
• Oct. 23 - Nov. 6	B-2 1/12
• Dec. 28 - Jan. 10	C-1 3/3

The entire barracks project, with a price tag of about $35 million, is only the beginning of several other projects for new unaccompanied personnel housing projected to continue until 2008, according to Kent Murata, the assistant chief of staff for G-4.

Construction in front of the Semper Fit Center is also scheduled to provide new unaccompanied personnel housing for about 400 Navy personnel about July of next year, said Lt. Cmdr. Steve Fischer, the resident officer in charge of construction.

In addition, Fischer said the existing barracks across the street and to the right of the 3rd Marine Regiment building, including building 1028-1032, are scheduled to be demolished in December to give way to new barracks set to be built by January 2001.

Between the years 2001 and 2005, Murata said he anticipates a $20 million project a year as older barracks get replaced throughout the base.

And from 2006-2008, Murata said there is a possibility of further barracks construction.

"Marines and Sailors deserve the best quality of life and the base works hard to provide it to them with the resources it has," said Murata. "We're not there yet, but we're working to get there."

K-Bay to shine on 'Base Pride Day'

Cpl. David Salazar
Combat Correspondent

Marines and Sailors aboard MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, are scheduled to engage in a massive police call — one massive enough to free the entire installation and its beaches of debris and garbage.

The base will participate in this quarter's "Base Pride Day," which is scheduled for Wednesday, with the aid of nearly every unit aboard K-Bay.

"We've been conducting these base clean ups for many years now," said Lt. Col. Enrico Velasquez, the MCB Hawaii base inspector. "They used to be held semi-annually, but this fiscal year, the base began coordinating events on a quarterly basis."

As with any clean-up or police call, the primary goal of Base Pride Day is to clean the installation we live and work on, Velasquez said.

"In addition to a basic clean-up, this is a call to everyone to improve their areas," Velasquez said.

According to the letter of instruction for the quarterly pride day clean up, the primary objective of the effort is to keep the base looking its best "through an extraordinary grounds maintenance effort during the week of 26 Sept. to 1 Oct. 1999."

Portions of the base were assigned to seven different units aboard the installation to include 3rd Marine Regiment, 4th Force Reconnaissance Company; Marine Corps Air Facility; Aviation Support Element, Kaneohe; 1st Radio Battalion; Headquarters Battalion, MCB Hawaii; and Combat Service Support Group 3.

In addition to the designated areas the units are responsible for, Velasquez asked participating commanding officers to urge Marines who live on base to take the day's work home with them.

"I asked commanding officers to direct their Marines and Sailors to do the same thing with respect to their individual quarters," Velasquez said. "They should try to make an extra effort on their lawns and sidewalks."

"It's all in the name — Base Pride Day," said Lance Cpl. Gina Logalbo, the in/out processing clerk with the MCB Hawaii Personnel Customer Services branch of Marine Corps Community Services. "If you clean up and take pride in the base you live on, you're less inclined to litter and will have more respect for base property."

The fact that most base units are stopping and taking a day to clean the installation is very beneficial, Logalbo said.

"It's something very important and people tend to overlook things like this due to their hectic work schedules," Logalbo added.

Velasquez said it is the duty of base personnel to ensure the base is kept clean and presentable.

"This is possibly the most beautiful base in the world," Velasquez said. "It is our duty to keep it clean, but we are challenged everyday by tradewinds and currents that continually bring trash on base."

Velasquez said the camaraderie and esprit de corps inherent in every Marine will help the project succeed.

"Marine Corps pride — that's what this boils down to," Velasquez said. "The success or failure of this effort depends on the level of pride we all put forth for it."

POW, From A-1

He boiled down his experiences at Stalag 4-B into a code — one he said he hopes today's servicemembers take to heart if they ever face similar obstacles.

Frumkin's survival philosophy focuses on constant training and retraining, followed by still more training.

"The most important thing I can think of is that when you are training ... take advantage of every possibility to improve your skills," Frumkin said. "Don't take anything lightly because everything that is taught to you is taught for one purpose only, and that is to keep you alive. The little thing you forget is the one thing that you may need to remember in a serious situation."

Without physical fitness, however, no skill level is going to help, he said.

"If I had not been in shape, the chances are that I would not have survived. Something has to give, and that's your body. When it stops giving, you're dead."

To highlight this, Frumkin spoke of other POWs in his group who were unable to keep up with the rest of the column. Those who lagged behind were met with German bullets — gunshots that echoed through the frozen German countryside, Frumkin said.

Single Marines, Sailors splash into weekend

Marines and Sailors exercised their amphibious capabilities in Kaneohe Bay's bright blue waters Friday as they took a break from work and participated in Water Adventure Day.

The almost five-hour adventure started at noon and offered single Marines and Sailors, pay grade E-5 and below, the opportunity to try out different water activities for free.

"It was definitely a good experience," said Lance Cpl. Donald Adams, an aviation mechanic for Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 363, after he went scuba diving for the first time at the base pool.

To take part in the introduction to scuba diving, participants had to watch a video and follow the instruction of a master scuba diver trainer Yolanda Mihalik, the assistant manager at Ocean Concepts in K-Bay.

"Once you go under water," said dive master Vance St. Peter, "it's a whole different frontier."

Other servicemembers had a chance to go power boating, water skiing and kayaking.

The Water Adventure Day offered "a lot of things many people don't (always) get to do," said Lance Cpl. Kevin Smith, a motor transportation operator for Headquarters and Service Company, 1st Radio Battalion.

"It goes hand-in-hand with being in Hawaii," added Lance Cpl. Julio Rosario, an administrative clerk for Marine Aviation Logistics Support Element, Kaneohe. "It gives you a taste of what Hawaii has to offer."

And although they got the chance to leave their utility uniforms "back in the rear," Marines and Sailors still managed to exercise their amphibious capabilities and give true meaning to the phrase "sea services."

"It's a good chance to get away from work and have some fun," said Lance Cpl. Bruce Lortz, a motor transportation operator for Headquarters and Service Company, 1st Radio Battalion.

"It was a great idea," said Adams. "It lets us know you not only work hard but you get to have fun, too."

CAMP H.M. SMITH, Hawaii — More than 50 runners tested their stamina and speed on the hills of Camp H.M. Smith recently for a grueling 3.2-mile road race.

Competitors from here and Kaneohe Bay battled it out early Saturday morning for the top spot in the third annual Camp Smith 5K Grueler.

The race was part of the Commanding General's Semper Fitness Series. Each year Marine Corps Community Services, in coordination with the various commands aboard Marine Corps Base Hawaii, conduct the series.

"This was the third year for the Grueler, and everyone who came out had a great time," said Dave Pablo, athletics coordinator with MCCC.

Coming in as the overall third place finisher in the women's division was Kari Tanimoto. Cruising into second place was Angela Judge, and the top prize went to Carolyn Evangelista who finished in 24 minutes and 43 seconds.

In the men's division, the third place trophy went to Louis Tomsio. And in a punishing race to the finish line, Joseph Galvin kicked it up a notch to finish in 19:35 to claim the first place trophy just five seconds faster than second place finisher Mathew Rogers.

K-Bay serves up tennis with love

Lance Cpl. Otto C. Pleil-Muete
Combat Correspondent

Tennis is breaking ground at MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, as a growing number of servicemembers and their families head for the courts to swing their rackets and hit tennis balls.

With the resurfacing of four consolidated tennis courts during August, the sport has gained attention from several players, ranging from young children to the elderly, according to Ray Handy, tennis professional and instructor for MCB Hawaii.

The courts' new look has significantly helped develop the sport aboard K-Bay, and base residents are being welcomed to take tennis classes, according to Handy, whose tennis classes are in full swing after the resurfacing of the courts.

"I've noticed that over the past couple months, the interest has definitely grown," added Jason Enrique, the intramural sports coordinator for Marine Corps Community Services.

"It's hard to find the courts empty since there's usually someone always there," Enrique said.

Handy, formerly a Marine stationed in Hawaii, said he played other sports such as baseball and basketball competitively as a Marine, but after someone influenced him to try tennis, he was hooked.

"Tennis is proven to give the most physical, psychological, and emotional satisfaction," said Handy, who also expressed that it's just as fun to watch the game as it is to play the game. "It's a spectator sport as much as an active sport, and you don't need a group of people to play."

Handy pointed out that you only need one other person to play a game and it provides about the same social atmosphere as golf.

"This really helps teach kids not only how to play tennis, but how to get along with other people," said Handy.

To improve in the game, Handy offers private and semi-private tennis lessons every week for adults and children.

With only four of the tennis courts aboard Kaneohe Bay in top condition, Handy said he makes sure to leave courts open for other tennis players while he conducts his lessons.

There's also a 45-minute time limit for players if there are other patrons waiting to play.

"If the demand is there," said Enrique, "we can pursue trying to get more courts."

Enrique also said if tennis continues to grow in popularity for Marines and Sailors, an intramural program can be set up to spread the competition among several units.

For more information about available tennis programs, call 254-7597, or stop by the tennis courts to pick up a pamphlet.

Rebels repel Warriors, 51-47

Lance Cpl. Otto C. Pleil-Muete
Combat Correspondent

The Runnin' Rebels of Headquarters Company, 3rd Marine Regiment, came away with a 51-47 victory over the Warriors of Marine Aviation Logistics Support Element, Kaneohe, during championship intramural basketball action Sunday afternoon at the MCB Hawaii Semper Fit Center.

The game was the final event in the three-day 1999 Summer Basketball Championships, where eight unit teams from K-Bay competed against one another to determine an overall winner.

The Warriors had suffered only one loss in the tournament before confronting the undefeated Runnin' Rebels, but couldn't get the two consecutive wins required against the Runnin' Rebels to take the championship.

"Since we won all our games," said Runnin' Rebel Chris Sturns, "we were put in a good position to win our final game."

The Warriors started the game with a strong offensive force. After the first six minutes, the Warriors ran a comfortable 15-7 lead.

Warriors' Irvin Green and Alvin Winchester continued to threaten the Rebels with skillful plays between one another, which contributed to two consecutive "nothin'-but-net" three-pointers and brought the game to 21-10 with seven minutes left in the half.

But the Rebels never gave up and instead battled back during a 10-3 run that closed the first half with only a 25-20 deficit.

"These guys have come a long way," said Runnin' Rebel coach Aaron Banks about his team. "They had the talent, but they weren't comfortable playing together early in the season."

The Runnin' Rebels showed off their endurance and teamwork in the second half as they slowly gained the lead.

With almost three minutes left till the end of the game, the Runnin' Rebels claimed a 44-34 comeback.

The Warriors fought back with several fouls, sending Runnin' Rebel Chris Sturns to the line for free-throw opportunities. The Warriors even brought the game to only a 50-45 deficit, but with only 10 seconds left in the game, it was too late to regain the lead and the Runnin' Rebels ran away with the championship title.

"We had good players in every post," said Runnin' Rebel Jimmy Lee Wheeler, "and we wore the teams down."

"It was a good tournament," said Sturns, "with a lot of good competition."

It's anybody's game

Cpl. Trent Lowry
Combat Correspondent

I received a startling slap in the face from the reality of a 7-8 record after the first week of 1999 National Football League games. Trying to save face, I redoubled my efforts at predicting the victors in week two's matchups.

Maybe I should re-triple my efforts.

I was only able to improve one game, while an expert like Wayne Pedersen continued his dominance with 12 wins. Newcomer Debbie Pedersen scored 11-4, while fellow first-timers Craig McMichael and Jeremy Riclesberger each had a respectable 10-5 showing.

The most improved football fan, and the week two winner, was Billy J. Graham, who turned around a 5-10 week one performance into a 12-3 romp. His 36-point tiebreaker guess was closer to the actual 31 points than Wayne Pedersen's 41.

In a note to competitors, all the week's contests must be chosen to be eligible for the contest. Our prospective Air Force Reserve contestant may want to keep this in mind for this week's games.

Now, on to week three ...

The NFL has been turned on its ear after the first two weeks of the season. Injuries have plagued the high-expectations of the New York Jets, New Orleans Saints, Atlanta Falcons and Cincinnati Bengals, while the Denver Broncos three-peat hopes are already in jeopardy after a sinking 0-2 start to '99.

One of the highlights of the young season is the play of Colts' rookie running back Edgerrin James. Even though his fumble cost Indianapolis a win Sunday, James is making folks forget about last year's Heisman Trophy winner, Ricky what's-his-name.

So let's see who's going to win in week three (winners in bold):

Atlanta @ St. Louis: It's gut-check time for the falcons after a horrible 0-2 start. Do they spank the Lambs here? Atlanta fans hope so.

Chicago @ Oakland: Raiders beat the Vikings, boosting their confidence and earn-

Game of the Week:

Vikings vs. Packers

ing a 1-1 record against the NFC Central. It'll jump to 2-1.

Cincinnati @ Carolina: Akili Smith gets tested again for the Bengals, while George Seifert finally gets his first win with the Panthers.

Cleveland @ Baltimore: The Browns have struggled to get anything started in their reincarnation season, but they've got a score to settle with Art Modell's Ravens.

Denver @ Tampa Bay: The Broncos have looked like they were sleeping the first two games, but the Super Bowl giant is going to awaken in Florida.

Detroit @ Kansas City: Detroit beat Seattle and Green Bay, an impressive feat, but the Chiefs are poised to win two in a row.

Indianapolis @ San Diego: Natrone Means and the Chargers looked tough vs. the Bengals, but that's not hard. The Colts and their young offensive weapons get it done this week, if James doesn't fumble again.

Minnesota @ Green Bay (Game of the Week): Two fierce rivals in the black-and-blue division and two teams coming off upset losses. Something's gotta give, and the Vikes offense gives them the edge.

Philadelphia @ Buffalo: Flutie at home against the lame Eagles should not be a close game by any stretch of the imagination.

Seattle @ Pittsburgh: Mike Holmgren is having trouble getting the West-coast offense to work without Joey Galloway, but Pitt hasn't faced any quality opponents yet. Give the home team the nod.

Tennessee @ Jacksonville: The Jags had their hands full with Carolina, but the Titans should pose no threat for the multi-talented Jags.

Washington @ New York Jets: The 'Skins are poised to make a playoff run, while the Jets are merely poised for a crash landing.

Sunday Night
New York Giants @ New England: Though the Patriots were predicted by some to finish last in the AFC East, they'll have three wins to start the season.

Monday Night
San Francisco @ Arizona: Cards will fly high in a rare Monday night appearance, downing the mighty Niners: 47 points.

Community teams up for beach clean up

Cpl. David Salazar
Combat Correspondent

Nearly 30 volunteers from MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, and its surrounding community joined forces to rid base beaches of environment-damaging garbage Saturday.

The event, sponsored by Ocean Concepts, offered participants a good, wholesome weekend outing that benefits the base as well, said Carl Vincenti, the president of Ocean Concepts.

"It's just a good outing for people on base to participate in and to clean the beaches at the same time," Vincenti said. "People getting together, that's what it's all about — you don't need to have an extravaganza to have a good time."

The effort utilized assets that most other base clean-up efforts do not — the use of scuba divers and snorkelers to pull garbage from reefs and rocks below the ocean's surface, said Vincenti.

"One of the reasons we held this was to promote an event that was fun, exciting and served to bring different parts of the community together," Vincenti said. "We had snorkelers search for trash below the water surface and point it out to the scuba divers who would swim down and recover the trash, as well as a group of non-divers who combed the beaches."

The clean up effort also drew support from members of the K-Bay Single Marine and Sailor Program.

"This gathering was a really good way for Marines and Sailors to get out of the barracks and get involved in their community," said Dino Leonard, the MCB Hawaii water safety assistant manager and acting Single Marine and Sailor Program coordinator.

The clean up crew recovered items ranging from a tooth brush to a boat rudder from the base's surrounding waters.

"More people, more companies and more bases should have these types of events that bring people from all walks of life together for a common purpose," Vincenti urged. "This was a worthwhile activity that resulted in us picking up lots of trash and having lots of fun doing it."
