Ranges change procedures

Cpl. Otto C. Pieli-Muete

Marine Corps Base Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay and Pu'uloa Training Facility have joined the ranks of other bases around the Marine Corps by implementing the new order for annual rifle requalifica-

Per Marine Corps Order 3574.2J, as of June 1, Marines can spend as little as two days at the rifle range each year for their required annual marksmanship qualification along with one day for field

Although the order was effective in June, Marines from the Marksmanship Programs Management Section in Quantico, Va., helped implement the new process aboard K-Bay and Pu'uloa during their visit near the end of August.

"It's a big difference," said Staff Sgt. Gary Wright, the line noncommissioned officer in charge at K-Bay's range. "Marines have a tendency to get their 'zeros' (adjustments on their weapons) better."

Wright said Marines now do a shot group exercise on the first day (generally Monday) from the 200-yard line range instead of the 36-yard range in addition to firing the qualification course of fire for practice. As a result of the increased distance for the shot group exercise, Wright said Marines can focus on their shot groups with greater accuracy.

On the second day, Marines can now declare in the morning whether they want to continue to practice or if they wish to shoot the course of fire for qualification. Each Marine may practice until Thursday, when all Marines must shoot to qualify. If they don't qualify on the final day, they must redo the entire cycle again.

The final requirement includes field firing exercises on Friday that are now mandatory for all

Before, the field firing exercises were only required from specific units such as infantry units, but now, depending on unit commanders' discretions, all Marines may have to fire the weapon during several conditions that include low light/darkness, firing with a field protective mask, and firing at multiple and moving targets.

While out at the range, Marines are also required to have either a load bearing vest or suspenders (also known as H-harnesses), along with the usual cartridge belt and magazine pouch. Yet, availability of gear per unit will dictate how Marines will be able to follow these Marine Corps-wide guidelines, said Chief Warrant Officer 3 Randall Harris, the officer-in-charge of K-Bay's range.

"We're following this order as close as humanly possible," said Harris.

Another change in the order is that Marines can only qualify with the M16A2 rifle. Previously, Marines could use the M16A2 with the M203 grenade launcher, said Harris.

In addition to the requalification changes, the range at K-Bay is scheduled to undergo renovations in December to add a system that will allow electronic detection of target hits, said Harris.

Campaign ends today

The 1999 Hawaii Pacific Area Combined Federal Campaign is set to conclude today, and unit CFC representatives are encouraging servicemembers to pitch in before the end of the day.

For the unit representatives to meet the deadline, all CFC donation forms should be submitted to their representatives before close-of-business.

This year, through week four of the campaign, the CFC had earned $187.810 from units aboard MCB Hawaii, said Maj. Janice Holmes, the CFC primary project manager for MCB Hawaii.

Chief Petty Officer Mike Pinner, the executive officer for MCB Hawaii CFC, explained this is 20 percent over the numbers produced by the CFC through week four last year. By the end of this campaign, which began Sept. 23, earnings should greatly surpass last year's total of More MCB Hawaii servicemembers are giving, as well, Pinner said. Over the past four years, approximately 50 to 55 percent of MCB Hawaii servicemembers gave to the campaign. This year, more than 60 percent of all servicemembers contributed to the CFC.

Since 1961, the CFC has allowed federal employees an opportunity to give to more than 1000 charities.

Birthday Message from the Commandant of the Marine Corps

As we gather to celebrate the Marine Corps' 224th Birthday, we find ourselves at a crossroads between the past and the future, at a time where we serve as both guardians of our heritage and torchbearers committed to writing the next chapter of our Corps' history. The 20th century was a period of national definition and immense global change. It is both fitting and appropriate that we recognize and celebrate the role Marines played during these dramatic times.

power during the often-turbulent events of the last 100 years, Marines were ever present; exerting influence far beyond that expected of a Corps so few in number. Marines protected America's interests, struggled against foes who attempted to do our country harm, and they remained at the forefront of the Nation's efforts to maintain global peace and stability. From the defense of the Peking Legation to operations in Kosovo, the 20th century witnessed Marines "In every clime and place," helping the United States grow from a fledgling world power to become the only remaining superpower. In two World Wars, the Corps marched to victory against powerful enemies. In Korea, Vietnam, and Kuwait, Marines assisted in providing freedom for people who sought to live in peace. In hundreds of distant lands, from Nicaragua to Lebanon to Somalia, Marines restored and maintained order, aided people in distress, provided protection for the weak, and upheld the values that have come to define our country on the world stage.

The Americans who accomplished these noble deeds came from our society as ordinary men and women. They became extraordinary by earning the title "United States Marine." Many made the ultimate sacrifice in the service of their country, and we honor their memory. Others returned to our society where they continue to serve by living exemplary lives as men and women of character and dedication. Finally, many Marines remain in uniform, always on watch, that Americans may live in peace. On this day, the final Marine Corps Birthday of the 20th century, I offer warmest regards to all who have worn the Eagle, Globe, and Anchor, and to the families who also serve by supporting them. You represent all that is wonderful about our Nation, and I am proud to serve with you.

Navy loses two Blue Angels in Georgia air crash

Accident happened during practice of arrival procedures

Press Release

Two Naval aviators who were part of the Blue Angels, the United States Navy's elite aerial demonstration team, were killed in a crash near Moody Air Force Base, Ga., Oct. 28.

Lieutenant Cmdr. Kieron O'Connor and Navy Lt. Kevin Colling were flying

F/A-18 crashed at approximately 12:20 p.m., two miles north of Moody AFB near Valdosta, Ga.

An investigation board is currently looking into the cause of the crash.

"I had the privilege of flying with both of these pilots in the fleet," said Blue Angels Commanding Officer Cmdr. Patrick Driscoll. "They are two of the best Naval aviators I know. This is a tragic loss to the families, the Blue Angels and the U.S. Navy."

Driscoll explained the Blue Angels were not flying in formation at the time. They were practicing arrival procedures a routine training mission when their and getting familiarized with the terrain for an upcoming community appreciation show at Moody AFB.

O'Connor, a 35-year-old Burtonsville, Md., native, flew left wing in "number 3" and became a Blue Angel in September of 1998. During his career, he logged more than 2,000 flight hours and accumulated 295 carrier arrested landings.

He also served in Operations Deny Flight and Southern Watch in Iraq, and Operation Provide Promise in Bosnia.

Colling, 32, had recently joined the squadron and was in a training status.

He is a native of Castle Rock, Colo. Since 1946, when the Blue Angels were established, 23 pilots have been killed while serving with the squadron. The most previous was July 13, 1985, when a mid-air collision between two planes killed Lt. Cmdr. Michael Gershon during an air show in Niagara

An account for donations to the O'Connor and Colling families has been established with the First Navy Bank, C/O Jim Durr, 180 Taylor Road, Pensacola, Fla., 32508.

Marines honored with awards

Cpl. Nathan L. Hanks

CAMP H. M. SMITH, Hawaii Marines and Sailors from Marine Forces Pacific were honored during the 39th Annual Sea Service Awards Luncheon held at the Ala Moana Hotel Oct. 27.

The Honolulu Council of the Navy League honored more than 70 officers and enlisted personnel from the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard with awards in appreciation for their volunteer services in the community.

In addition to the Sea Service Award. Petty Officer 1st Class Donna Spaddy-Emory of Marine Aviation Logistics Support Element Kaneohe received the Enlisted Grand Award and an allexpenses paid trip for two to the Big Island. The Enlisted Grand Award is presented to the enlisted Sailor, Marine or Coast Guardsman whose performance was the most exemplary both on and off duty.

"I love helping young children and the unfortunate. I love what I do," Spaddy-Emory said. Her volunteer work ranged from working as a teacher's aide to helping feed

"We recognize the military because you are the heart and soul of the nation," said Paul Gagnon, president of the Honolulu Council Navy League. "Your giving of yourselves gives us the freedom we have today," he added.

Recipients were selected for their overall outstanding performance of duty, individual achievement, excellence in leadership. participation in community activities as well as outstanding military bearing and appearance.

"Being nominated for this award shows me the appreciation my officer-in-charge and noncommissioned-officer-in-charge have for my work, said Cpl. Kenneth Barber Jr., an aviation operation specialist from Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 463. "I'm just honored to be among the recipients here and share this moment.'

"Receiving this award is motivating," said Lance Cpl. Dustin these young servicemembers for Senger, a combat photographer with Marine Forces Pacific. "If you do good work, you will be recognized.

Also honored were Navy Lt. David Schilling, 1st Battalion, 3rd Marine Regiment; Sgt. Craig Johnson, of Aircraft Rescue and Firefighting; Cpl. Patrick Caudle,

Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 363: Sgt. Donald Wilson and Sgt. James Olson, both from HMH-463; as well as Sgt. Amanda Pryor and Cpl. Mark Blais, both from HMH-362, Staff Sgt. Jarrod Thompson, Petty Officer 1st Class Robert J. Garces, Petty Officer 2nd Class Cynthia Tademy and Cpl. Leslie Carriger, all from MALSEK, also received Sea Service Awards.

"I think it is great to recognize doing more than just their job," said Sgt. Maj. Eduardo Gadsden, MALSEK sergeant major. "It is unbelievable how these individuals find time to juggle family life, after hours life, and be proficient in their military occupational specialty. They add so much to the community."

New website adds up military pay gains

Douglas J. Gillert

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department has posted a new site on the World Wide Web that explains the military pay changes taking effect Jan. 1, including the 4.8 percent pay raise.

The site, www.pay2000.dtic.mil, provides details on the January pay raise and briefly covers new retirement options; the Thrift Savings Plan that would allow servicemembers to build a retirement nest egg; special pay and incentive pay improvements; and new rules on housing allowances, temporary lodging expenses and leave sell-back. The site also offers a means to provide e-mail feedback.

According to Thomas Tower, an assistant director for compensation in the Office of the Undersecretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness, user feedback will contribute to the site's providing more in-depth information during its second phase, expected to go online by mid-November. The third stage, toward the end of this year, will be interactive and allow service members to calculate and compare retirement choices they have after 15 years' active duty, he said.

The option of choosing retirement plans is one of the most important improvements to military pay according to Tower. cisely what this bill is going to do."

"Members now have a choice of retirement plans, including a reduced monthly payment with a $30,000 lump sum payment at 15 years or a higher annuity at 20 years," he said. Those who elect the lump sum payment at 15 years are still required to serve on active duty through their 20th year, he said. "We will provide financial comparisons of what they can save."

Pay2000 doesn't duplicate information like pay tables that are available on the Defense Finance and Accounting Service Web site, www.dfas.mil, said Tower. Pay2000 conveys information pertaining directly to compensation issues in the fiscal 2000 Defense Authorization Act, while the DFAS site contains more standardized information.

"The message we want to convey is that military compensation has been dramatically improved," Tower said. "A military career is a more attractive option, particularly in relation to the private sector, because servicemembers each year will get a .5 percent higher pay raise than the private Defense Secretary William S. Cohen called the pay changes an "investment in our warriors" at the signing of the defense authorization act Oct. 5.

"We can never pay you enough," he said, "but we can pay you more. And that is pre-

GLADSTONE BASE CAMP, Gladstone, Australia — Just days before Exercise Crocodile '99 kicked off, a desolate stretch of Australian land in the small town of Gladstone lay in wait.

Nearly overnight, however, the once barren lanscape filled with life and became the home of the more than 2,000 Marines and Sailors participating in the exercise.

Besides the berthing accommodations and mess facilities, the base camp offered additional services to make the servicemembers' stay a little more comfortable.

The base camp boasts various services, to include a theater, post office, disbursing office, game tents and a field-expedient fitness center, all for the purpose of making the lives of Marines and Sailors easier, said Petty Officer First Class Gary Roberts, a boatswain's mate and Morale, Welfare and Recreation representative with 1st Amphibious Construction Battalion in Coronado, Calif.

"I think these services help the troops relax a little after a hard day's work," Roberts said. "I think it's very important to have these services out here because it gives the troops something to do after work -- something ' other than thinking about home.

And for those Marines and Sailors who ran out of consumable items either at the base camp or the Shoalwater Bay Training Area, the exchange offered a multitude of toiletry items, snack foods and beverages as the exchange sold approximately $95,000 worth roof," McDermott said. "It gives them a chance to of items during the exercise, said Lance Cpl. Michael Matthews, an operations clerk with Combat allowing them to break the monotony that often Services such as the post and disbursing offices offer Marines and Sailors the opportunity to alleviate any stress concerning military pay or sending and receiving mail, McDermott added.

The plethora of quality of life features aboard the camp give it a homelike feeling, said Sgt. Tyrone Foster, a warehouse chief with Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 12th Marine Regiment.

"All these services kind of make it feel like you never left home," Foster said. "I've been in the field where they don't offer this kind of stuff and having all the services just makes your stay a lot more comfortable.

"We're really lucky to have all this stuff here," said Pfc. Matthew Hricko, a food service specialist with CSSD-78. "It's really nice to have a place to relax and watch a movie or play cards after you've been working all day."

SERGEANT MAJOR'S CORNER

Marine Corps birthday is time to celebrate history of our profession

Sgt. Maj. Robert W. Holub

Each year, across this great nation of ours and in hundreds of other places around the world, Marines pause to celebrate the birth of our beloved Corps Nov. 10.

Have you ever wondered what it is that makes this date almost mythical to Marines? Have you ever wondered what make us so different from our country's other branches of service?

Are we smarter? Did our recruiters get the pick of the litter each and every time someone wanted to join the armed forces of the United States?

What made Marines wade through the surf and continue to attack at Tarawa? What gave the Marines at the "Frozen Chosin" the courage to fight not only the Chinese that were attacking them, but the bitter cold of the Korean winter as well?

Well, I'm not positive, but if I were asked this question, I would have to say what sets the Marine always Corps apart is our esprit de corps. Esprit de corps is one of the intangibles that our recruiters try to explain each day across our nation to countless new recruits who hope to join our ranks.

It's esprit de corps that drill instructors instill in thousands of recruits each year at Parris Island and San Diego during 11 weeks of boot camp. And it's that same esprit de corps that sustains us through the years in peace and war.

Esprit de corps is a feeling of pride of belonging to an organization that sets high standards and then holds people to them.

It's the feeling of knowing the organization is more important than the individual, and teamwork is the key to mission accomplishment and success.

In the 32nd Commandant's Planning Guidance, he wrote, "The strength of the pack is the wolf, and the wolf is the strength of the pack." Simply stated, it is the Marine that is the strength of Corps, and the Corps that is the strength of Marines who serve in it. That's what I believe makes us so special and as long as we have people in our ranks who put their fellow Marines before themselves, we will forever be the Corps our forefathers envisioned as America's force in readiness in an uncertain world.

To me, being a Marine is the highest calling any young man or woman can aspire to. It is an honorable profession filled with honorable men and women whose you a Marine. only desire is to serve our country to the best of their abilities hy living up to our core values of honor, courage and commitment. LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Watch your speed when leaving base

I was coming to work this morning, and as I approached the back gate of MCB Hawaii, I noticed a little girl lying on the ground with her bicycle crumpled up nearby.

As I got closer to see if I could help, several other passersby also reached her. Since one of them was a nurse, I allowed her to check the girl out and keep her from trying to stand or move, while a neighbor and I called an ambulance and the little girl's mother. A doctor who lived nearby had also rushed out to give assistance.

Thank God the little girl had on a helmet and seemed to be OK, with the exception of a couple bruises and some

Witnesses said the vehicle that hit the girl changed lanes to pass a van that was turning left, then struck the girl at a high rate of speed — considering the speed limit is 25 miles

While we were waiting for the ambulance, a neighbor came out and said that people leaving the gate are constantly speeding through this area. I have personally seen cars speed up faster than 30 miles per hour as soon as they hit the gate and are in town. The speed limit through this area is 25!

I think we need to tell our Marines and their family members, as well as our civilian employees, to slow down when exiting the the back gate, before someone is seriously injured our killed!

Every morning there are dozens of kids going to school on their bikes or on foot. We need to watch out for them. It is our responsibility as adults to protect and teach children. I feel this is a prime example of how we can protect them, as well as teach them by applying a little "leadership by example."

Camp Smith MP receives Top Cop award

Sgt. Nathan L. Hanks

CAMP H.M. SMITH, Hawaii — Camp Smith military policeman was honored during the 15th Annual Law Enforcement Appreciation Luncheon and Exhibits at the Sheraton Waikiki Hotel Oct 22.

Sergeant Ted Clutter of the Marine Corps Base Hawaii Provost Marshal's Office here received the Top Cop award for his superior performance both on and off duty. Top Cop awards were presented to Hawaii civilian and military police officers who demonstrated the highest degrees of professionalism and dedication to duty.

"He was nominated to represent Camp Smith and Kaneohe (Bay) military police departments," said Capt. Joe Salvator, deputy provost marshal at Camp Smith. "He has always done an outstanding job, and most importantly, he earned it."

Clutter has been stationed here for three years and has performed in a number of

"Receiving this award makes me feel like I have accomplished a lot and that I make an impact in the law enforcement activity," said Clutter. "And my peers — along with my superiors — have noticed my hard work and dedication.

Clutter's involvement with the local community includes spending time as a guest speaker at Kamehameha Schools and for the "McGruff" Crime Dog Program. He also coaches youth football and teaches Sunday

In addition to his military duties and volunteer services, he is currently enrolled in offduty education with Wyland Baptist University in pursuit of a criminal justice degree

"He is a hard charger. He is the kind of a Marine that can always be counted on and we would like to keep," said Gunnery Sgt. Patrick Buckley, Camp Smith operations chief. "He can always be counted on."

Clutter plans to pursue a career in law enforcement after leaving the Marine Corps this December.

Efficient energy use equals savings for K-Bay

Facilities Department

Unnecessary use of water and electricity is the focus of the Navy/Marine Corps Energy Efficiency Program, because wasted energy equates to wasted money. Following are some energy conservation pointers provided by the MCB Hawaii Facilities Dept.

Q: Why is using energy efficiently so important?

A: The Department of Navy spends more than $750 million on shore utilities each year - the single largest shore facility operating budget line item. Utilities consume an average of 40 percent of the base operating support budget. Marine Corps Base Hawaii spent more than $6 million in fiscal year 1999 for electricity, water and other utilities services. The federal government pays $8 billion annually, with the Department of Defense energy expenses representing 75 percent of all federal government energy expenses. If all federal agencies purchased energy efficient products, the United States could save up to $900 million a year and reduce carbon dioxide greenhouse emissions by 11 million metric tons.

Q: Who is responsible for energy efficiency at my activi-

A: You are. But energy personnel at MCB Hawaii are also working hard to eliminate energy waste by installing more energyefficient lighting, heating and cooling systems; computerized controls; and improved maintenance programs. True success, however, can only be achieved if everyone makes energy efficiency a part of their daily lives.

Q: What can I do?

A: Don't take energy for granted. Become more knowledgeable about energy and what you can do to be more energy efficient. Be aware that your actions affect our energy efficiency. Take pride in knowing you are doing the right thing.

Q: Can I make a difference? A: You can by taking simple steps to eliminate wasteful habits, which can have a tremendous impact. For example, $1.2 mil- far? lion in energy costs can be avoided annually if 300,000 people simply turn off office lights during the lunch hour. Secondly, $3.8 million in energy costs can be avoided if 100.000 people simply turn off their computers at night and weekends.

mony Oct. 22.

A: Department of Navy energy consumption has dropped 23 percent since 1985, saving nearly $500 million, and has made significant progress toward meeting the presidentially-mandated goal of 30 percent by 2005 and 35 percent by 2010. Marine Corps Base

Military law course hones attorneys' skills

Cpl. Trent Lowry

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii — "I swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth; so help me God."

In the legal profession, the word "truth" is the ideological pinnacle that each litigator puts his reputation on the line to prove.

For many people, the only impressions they have of lawyers are those of television and movie attorneys who are portrayed as smooth-talking, riddle-solvers who flawlessly use wordmanship and theatrics to either indict or clear a person of a crime, all in the name of truth and justice. These Perry Masons, Ben Matlocks and Cousin Vinnys make the trial process seem like a walk on the beach.

Military lawyers have to employ some of the same courtroom tactics as their Hollywood brethren, but the road to a court-martial decision requires a more has been at K-Bay less than a month. realistic approach for the armed service litigators. The difference in winning or losing a case can come down to a single error or oversight on the counsel's part, so they must keep their skills sharp.

Marine Corps, Army, Navy and Air Force attorneys with a limited amount of courtroom experience spent Oct. 26-29 learning how to hone those skills and use nuances of the legal trade in their favor during a class at the Navy Legal Services Office aboard Naval Station Pearl Harbor.

"A majority of the students are inexperienced counsel," said Capt. Matt Cord, a defense counsel with the base legal office aboard MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay. Cord said the instructors of the class who are instructors at the Naval Justice School in Quantico, Va., critiqued the students to give them tips on how to be more efficient when trying real cases.

The thrust of the program includes taking civilian lawyers with anywhere from 10 to 20 years of experience and having them come in and mentor active duty lawyers with two or three years of experience," said reserve Maj. John Haverty, an instructor at the Naval Justice School and a practicing attorney in Plymouth, Mass. "The purpose is not so much the content of the case as it is the methods they use.

The class centered on a fictitious court-martial of a Marine corporal who allegedly raped an 18-year-old woman. The attorneys were tasked with preparing for the mock trial as if it were a real judicial proceeding.

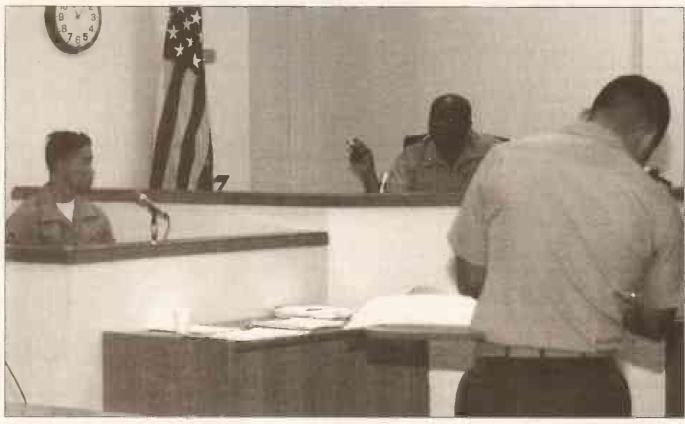

"I thought they were very intelligent about the way they went about it," said Sgt. Jeremy Riglesberger, a training clerk with MCB Hawaii's Headquarters Battalion, who played the role of one of the witnesses in the court-martial. "They each had their own styles and ideas about Riglesberger said he also observed that the training put the lawyers on their toes, because they weren't given any time before the trial to examine the witnesses.

"It's been very helpful because the instructors picked up on small things that could be missed by less experienced counsel," said 1st Lt. Jonathan Strasburg, a defense counsel with base legal who

"This is the ultimate training for military lawyers," Cord said, "This is the best way to develop high quality and effective legal skills.

While they may not be as flashy as the Hollywood lawyers, the training the military counsels receives helps them become better equipped to find the truth.

Corporal Sungmin Kim, a disbursing clerk from MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, plays the role of a witness while Capt. Neil Verbrugge, foreground, defense counsel with base legal, cross-examines the witness during the mock trial portion of military law training Oct. 26-29 at Naval Station Pearl Harbor. Colonel Harvey Hopson Jr., chief defense counsel of the Marine Corps and an instructor of the class, presides over the mock trial.

Warning: Courts-martial are not fun and games

Cpl. Trent Lowry

Try as I might to be a good Marine, I had never thought I'd be a part of a court-martial, so it was a bit unnerving to find myself part of a trial Oct. 28 - for Those were very serious charges, charges that I am glad were fictitious, since I was playing a role in a mock trial as part of training for military lawyers. Even though the court-martial was simply practice for litigators from the Marine Corps, Army, Navy and Air Force, the gravity of the situation did not seem to be any less than that of an actual court proceeding.

Playing the role of Cpl. Rudolph Hamilton, a Marine stationed at Camp Lejeune, N.C., I was facing as much as 25 years in the brig for my alleged sexual assault of an 18-year-old civilian woman.

There was no conclusive physical evidence in the case, so the trial counsel and the defense counsel each had to attack or protect, respectively, my character. I had made four statements, three of which were false, so my credibility was already suspect.

Would I be convicted, my rights stripped from me and my freedom lost as I faced half a lifetime behind bars? Or would the jury find me not guilty of the crimes, with my only offense being a lack of judge-

The military lawyers were required to handle the mock trial from the opening statements to the closing arguments. In order for the students to have an effective learning environment, the role-players had to assume the identity of the imaginary witnesses and jurors, so the case was real to each actor and lawyer.

"They did an absolutely fantastic job," said Capt. Matt Cord, a defense counsel at the MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, base legal office, of the role-players' performances. "They all got into their roles, so the testimonies didn't seem artificial at all."

"I thought the mock trial was a great chance to see the military court system," said Cpl. Sungmin Kim, a disbursing clerk aboard MCB Hawaii who portrayed a witness in the mock court-martial, "and I hope this is the only way I ever see the court system."

The witness stand is not a comfortable place to sit, no matter how nice the chair feels. The lawyers' ultimate goal is to find the truth, and a key witness is fair game

After just two hours of the mock court-martial, I personally had seen enough to know that I never want to be in the position of being the guest of honor at any actual judicial proceeding. If I didn't already try to do what's right, that was enough to set me straight.

I'd rather not have my peers question whether I'm an honest and decent person or not. I wouldn't want every aspect of my life to be carefully and thoroughly scrutinized in public.

The best way I can see to avoid this mentally and emotionally draining experience, is for one to always think about what he or she is doing, and carefully weigh

As much as Marines hear the virtues of honor, courage and commitment, it's important to keep them in mind at all times. Doing so is one of the best ways to stay out of the hot seat in the future.

BOB MAHONEY

The people of Hawaii have found something in common with the baseball legend, Yogi Berra of the New York Yankees. The phrase, "It's not over til it's over," philosophizes so many aspects of life from baseball to a family's ordeal in making final funeral arrangements. When the time of need arises, many people underestimate the details and pressures which result from losing a loved one.

For most, the finality of the moment of death, seems the end of story, but in reality it can be just the beginning of an ordeal in closing out someone's life and making the necessary arrangements. Sadly, there exists a "dearh industry." In it are all the ingredients of any business activity in today's economic world. There are mega-corporations with stockholders and boards of directors whose prime motivation is seeing the price of their stock go up. These Goliath companies have bought up a dominaring share of local funeral homes, and they have implemented sales incentive programs designed to squeeze the maximum expenditure from a family in its time of need. Some of the most skilled sales people in the world work in mortuaries today. If you are the beneficiary of an insurance policy with a lump sum payout, it is amazing how the "package" offered you at a funeral home will somehow end up using all of your proceeds. Funeral home managers constantly create an ever-increasing number of package price lists, many of which are designed to keep the family from thinking about possible alternatives, which could save literally thousands of dollars. The bottom line is this: no mattet what a funeral director may say, it always pays to shop for funeral merchandise and competing arrangements. The problem is that many families cannot come to grips with this when in grief at their time of need.

I have tried to make the point on radio that the more tragic and unexpected the siruation, the more important it is to seek the help of objective advice from a professional. The Affordable Casket Outlet is just such a resource. Locally and independently owned, this store can offer savings from hundreds of dollars on urns and markers to thousands of dollars on steel and hardwood caskets. The folksthere can help the family compare the price lists of mortuaries to find what they really need and more importantly, what they don't need.

Since opening on the 4th of July, The Affordable Casket Outlet has served dozens of families in need, and saved people tens of thousands of dollars in unnecessary funeral

Higher premiums, fewer insurers mar 2000 federal health plan

Douglas J. Gillert

WASHINGTON — The Office of Personnel Management hasn't been able to keep the lid on cost increases to the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program, which will rise an average of 9.3 percent must consider new and bold this year.

As OPM frets over how to control the rising cost of health insurance for the nations' millions of federal employees, it also has seen 43 insurers from last year's plan drop out. Officials said the dropouts will affect more than 40,000 civilian employees who will have to find a new carrier for 2000.

These changes were announced as the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program open season, which runs Nov. 8 to Dec. 13, drew near.

"It is clear that competition in the marketplace has not effectively slowed the growth in (Federal Employees Health Benefits Program) premiums," said Janice R. Lachance, OPM director. The office administers the health plan for federal employees and retirees. "We approaches so we can continue providing affordable, high-quality health care to our employees, retirees and their families."

Lachance said the increases this year and the past two years are unacceptable. This year's rate increase follows a 9.5 percent increased in 1999 and a 7.2 percent increase in 1998. To control future increases and improve the program overall, Lachance said OPM will submit legislative proposals early next year to improve the quality and cost effectiveness of health plans by raising the standards for participating health insurers. She also said she hopes to make the plan more

No reason was given for the 43 insurers that dropped out of the plan for 2000. However, OPM said the insurers were required to notify their members that they need to select a new plan during the open

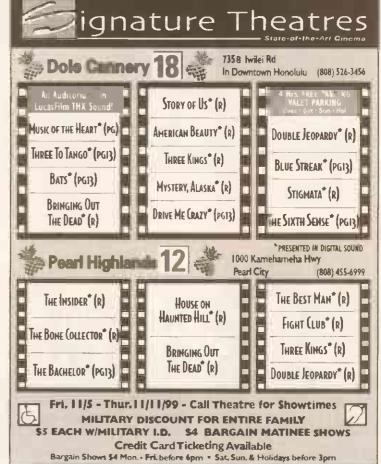

"Military Report," an on-line newsletter posted a list of the dropouts on the Internet in its Sept. 23 edition at www.militaryreport.com/healthins.-

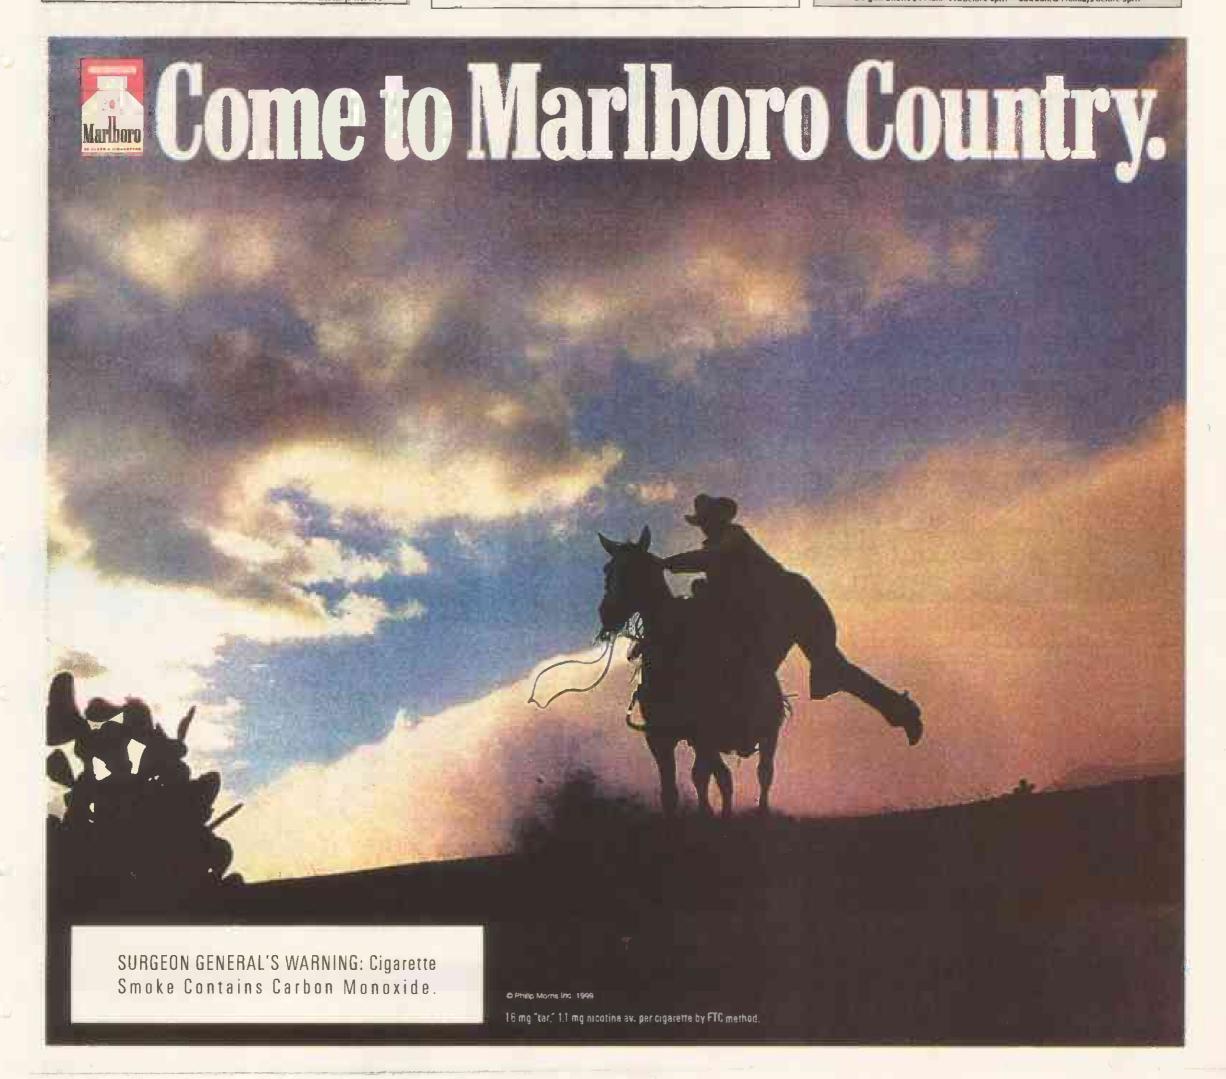

In 2000, biweekly premiums will average $30.10 for individuals and $64.67 for families. All participating insurers and premiums are listed on the OPM web site at www.opm.gov/insure/00rates/index.

Lance Cpl. Jeffrey Johnston, a supply clerk with Combat Visual Information Center, aims in with an M-1A rifle at Dewey Square after Marine Corps Uniform Pageant practice Monday. Doctor Maxwell Cooper, a Kailua plastic surgeon, lent the Vietnam-era rifle to the pageant for this year's performance. He is one of the rifle lenders who make the pageant possible.

Weapons add realism to pageant

Cpl. Trent Lowry

The Vietnam-era Marine drops to the prone position and lowcrawls forward, hot and frustrated, knowing he is being watched.

He would like to be able to brandish a weapon, something to show he means business, but all he has is a broomstick to enhance his menacing demeanor.

Performances in the Marine Corps Birthday Uniform Pageant. like the one described above, would lose much of their impact if the actors were unable to use authentic weapons for their shows each November aboard MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay. Such would be the scene if it weren't for a handful of generous lenders, like Dr. Maxwell Cooper. who loan their personal firearms to the Marines to add realism to the pageant shows.

"It was a unique opportunity and I was honored to be invited to help," said Cooper. a first-year rifle lender to the pageant. "I'm always impressed with what the Marine Corps does."

Cooper, current vice-president and former president of the Hawaii Rifle Club, lent his M-1A rifle, a civilian version of the M-14 rifle used during the early years of the Vietnam War, to the Marines. The rifle, used by the Southeast Asia-era period player, was modified to abide by Hawaii state weapons laws.

antique weapons Cooper collects. As opposed to other firearms collectors, whose rifles and guns sit quietly in gun lockers, Cooper has amassed his weapons to feed a love for competitive shooting.

"My father was a gunnery instructor in World War II, and I got my first air gun when I was 12; so I've been around shooting all my life," said Cooper, a prominent plastic surgeon with a private practice in Kailua.

Cooper said that he participates in "cowboy action" reenactments, an activity he describes as a "sport using western guns of the 1880's," where participants become the Wyatt Earps and Doc Hollidays of Oahu by dressing in period costumes, guns blazing in the sunset.

When not enforcing six-gun justice in the "Old West," Cooper is one of the leading lobbyists of legislation for firearm laws in

"Doctor Cooper is a great spokesman and very effective lobbyist for all gun owners in Hawaii," said Al Mongeon, current president of the Hawaii Rifle Association.

"I think anyone who has appreciation for firearms needs to do something about gun control laws," said Cooper, a mild-mannered physician who got more than a decade of surgical experience as an Army doctor. He

The rifle is just one of the retired recently from the Army many of whom are entrusted with reserve after 12 years of active duty service and 16 years in the

Now Cooper spends the bulk of his time with his private practice, but he said he still takes every available opportunity to pursue his weapons hobby.

"I enter as many competitions as I have time for," Cooper said, noting he attends approximately it to perhaps a dozen meets per year. "I like shooting with Marines, because they know the rules and are very safe shooters."

Cooper said he believes the rifle and pistol ranges on Oahu can be improved for firearm enthusiasts, since "marksmanship is a skill that has to be maintained." He maintains his skills by firing his historical models, such as the 1830-era musket or Civil War-aged Springfield rifles, as well as his more modern

"The weapon collector is more of a trustee than an owner," said Richard Keogh, the MCB Hawaii uniform pageant advisor and coordinator of borrowing the authentic firearms, "because he knows he will preserve the weapons and pass them on to the future generations, just like the weapons were passed into his

The generosity of the lenders like Cooper is not taken for granted by the pageant players either, the care of the valuable historical

"I think it's great that they let us use their weapons because you get, the real feeling of the era that you're portraying." said Pfc. Jeffrey Johnston, supply clerk with Combat Visual Information Center and the Marine trusted with Dr. Cooper's M-1A rifle. "I think it's great that the lenders see the importance of what we're doing."

"These people entrust us with their weapons and I think it shows the wide respect the Marine Corps has earned in the civilian community." said Keogh. a retired Army officer and a firearm collector, as well. "That's why we have the most authentio pageants around; because we're able to use authentic pieces."

Cooper said that he is going to try to attend the Marine Corps Birthday Cake Cutting Ceremony, at Dewey Square Nov. 10, where the uniform pageant members will perform their motivating glimpses into the Corps' history in front of any servicemembers and local residents.

If Cooper is able to make it to the performance he will get to see his weapon in action. The audience members seated around him will simply see a Vietnam-era Marine with an authentic M-1A rifle, but Cooper can feel proud that he was able to contribute to

Veterans Day ceremony set for Mighty Mo

In the twilight of the 20th Century, the USS Missouri Memorial Association will honor America's veterans at twilight Nov. 11, Veterans Day, with a free sunset ceremony aboard the battleship memorial.

The ceremony begins at 5 p.m. and takes place on the Mighty Mo's fantail with Old Glory and a beautiful Hawaiian sunset as a backdrop. The ceremony is open to the public and concludes at sunset, approximately 5:51 p.m., with the traditional lowering of the colors.

To accent the evening, there will be a 21-gun salute, playing of taps and patriotic songs by the Sounds of Aloha Chorus.

The keynote speaker will be Rear Adm. John W. Townes III, the decorated commander of Navy operations in Hawaii and all surface ships in the mid-Pacific region. Townes took command of his current post in January.

"This is an excellent opportunity to meet (Rear) Adm. Townes, one of the military's key leaders in the Pacific, while also honoring the contributions and sacrifices of America's veterans on this special day aboard the USS Missouri," said retired Vice Adm. Robert Kihune, president of the association.

The Missouri will remain open until 7 p.m., but due to safety concerns, only the main deck, surrender deck, wardroom and museum will be open.

Ford Island Bridge will be open to the public for the ceremony. A trolley will be provided to the Missouri Memorial for a $2 roundtrip fee.

Special Olympics seeks volunteeers

Nine hundred adult volunteers are needed for the 1999 Special Olympics Holiday Classic aboard MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay. Volunteers will assist as escorts and monitors for 650 athletes from throughout Hawaii who have mental retardation or closely related developmental disabilities.

The Olympics will be held Dec. 3-5. There will be a volunteer rally and training session held at the base theater Nov. 20, 8:30-10:30 a.m.

For more information or to signup, call Myrna Lujan at Special Olympics Hawaii, 531-1888 ext. 21, Monday to Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Brigadier Gen. Stephen Cheney, commanding general of Marine Corps Recruit Depot Parris Island and Eastern Recruiting Region, unveils the new Molly Marine monument in a ceremony on Parris Island.Oct. 23.

Molly Marine monument dedicated at Parris Island

Lance Cpl. Bock Pridemore

MARINE CORPS RECRUIT DEPOT PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. — Approximately 150 Marines and civilians came to Parris Island's Memorial Park to witness the dedication of the new Molly Marine monument

The statue is the first of two bronze casts made from the original Molly Marine statue that stands at the corner of Elk Place and Canal Street in New Orleans.

Among the dignitaries attending were Major Gen. David Mize, commanding general of Marine Forces Reserve, New Orleans, and retired Lt. Gen. Carol Mutter, formerly the highest-ranking female officer In the Marine Corps and present co-chair of the Molly Marine Restoration Society.

Lieutenant Gen. Mutter called the dedication "a really big day for the Marine Corps, but especially for women Marines.

"Marine Corps history books tend to focus on Marine Corps battles and the brave warriors who fight on the front lines, and that's as it should be, but winning battles doesn't happen without great support," she said. "And that's where you find the story of women Marines, past and present."

Lieutenant Gen. Mutter went on to recognize the contributions of the women who answered the call to be Marines during World War II.

The original Molly Marine, standing 20 feet tall from the ground to the top of her cover, became the first monument in the United States of a woman in military uniform and was dedicated in New Orleans on the Marine Corps' 168th birthday, Nov. 10, 1943.

The idea of Marine Tech. Sgt. Charles

Gresham, Molly was originally intended to be used as a recruiting tool for the Marine Corps. Enrique Alferez, a French Quarter artist, donated his time and skill to sculpt the statue.

Judy Mosgrove, a professional model, and four Marines from the recruiting office served as the models for Molly. Sergeant Hazel Parker and 1st Lt. Anne Delp posed for the body of the sculpture and Sgts. Louise Godal and Neilson Strock were Alferez's inspiration for her face.

Alferez had to use marble chips and granite, instead of the usual bronze to cast the statue, because of wartime restrictions on materials. Due to this the statue has required restoration twice in her "lifetime."

"We're here today, within sight of the Iron Mike statue, to dedicate this statue to all the women who've worn the Eagle, Globe and Anchor. All of them, past, present and future, are inextricably linked by that specialness of being a Marine," said Lt. Gen. Mutter

The Marine Support Group, the Marine Corps Coordinating Council, the Women Marines Association and the Marine Corps' League were responsible for raising more than $40,000 for the monument project that began nearly one-and-a-half years ago. Two bronze replicas of the statue are planned in her honor. The first of these replicas was dedicated today on Parris Island, the only Marine Corps enlisted female training facil-

The other will be placed at the Marine Corps Combat Development Command, Quantico, Va., the only female Marine officer training facility. The dedication ceremony for the Quantico replica is planned for September 2000.

Academy to hold program on Oahu

Press Release Afloat Training Group, Middle Pacific

Top administrative officials of the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., will present an Admissions Information Program for prospective candidates Nov. 20 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Sharkey Theater, located on the Pearl Harbor Subase.

This event is open to all middle school and high school students, their families and all interested educators.

Featured speakers include Vice Adm. John R. Ryan, the academy superintendent; Rear Adm. Gary Roughhead, commandant of midshipmen; and Jack Lengyel, the director of athletics.

Navel Academy officials will be in Honolulu for the Navy - University of Hawaii football game and are excited about the chance to host the program. All high school students in the Naval Academy's Admissions database have been invited to attend the game.

"This will be a great chance for Hawaii's students to meet midshipmen and Naval Academy Admissions personnel to learn first hand of the really exceptional opportunities that USNA can offer," said Navy Lt. Lyn Hammer, a 1992 graduate, former admissions officer and current Pearl Harbor Sailor.

For more information about attending the program, contact the academy's Blue and Gold Liaison Officer in Hawaii. Cmdr. Alma Groki at 455-4222.

Nighttime is a popular time to visit the Maize in Kapolei, because the darkness creates a creepy feel to each visitor's journey through the 300,000 cornstalks which make up the labyrinth.

More than 11,400 Hawaiian plants were used to construct the Dole Plantation Maze, which covers about 1.7 miles of trails at its location in Wahiawa.

he one-way streets of Honolulu can be difficult to navigate through even if a person knows the area, but they're not the only places to get lost on Oahu.

There are two other places on the island where people can pay to lose themselves in winding paths of vegetation.

One is the Dole Plantation Maze, located in Wahiawa on Kamehameha Highway. The other is the Maize, located in Kapolei off of Farrington offer a day of fun, confusion and a little bit of knowledge.

Highway The Dole Plantation Maze and the Maize both

At the Dole Plantation Maze, more than 11,400 Hawaiian plants were used to create 1.7 miles of pathways, according to 1998 edition of The Guinness Book of World Records. "So far, the average finishing time is about 30 minutes," said Sharlene Halemano, assistant manager at the plantation. "The five fastest times are:

"This was great," said a recent patron visiting from San Francisco who didn't beat the sevenminute time, but seemed pleased with a 20-minute

Patrons of the Dole maze pay $4.50 for adults and $2.50 for children. They are given a colored ticket that annotates the starting time and is used for tracking goal accomplishments along the maze

As people go through the maze, they seek colored boxes that conceal ticket icons which help track their time performance through the Scattered throughout, the maze also has plaques engraved with bits of the Dole franchise history to keep patrons entertained.

The other maze on the island, located near former Naval Air Station Barbers Point, is simply called the Maize. A labyrinth of 300,000 corn stalks grown eight feet high make up the Maize, designed to read "Aloha Kapolei" from the sky.

Maize opened Sept. 24 and will remain open through the end of November. Kama'aina admission into the two-part maze is $7 for adults and $5 for children under 11 years old. One program that is run through the Maize teaches agriculture, said Nancy Andrus, public relations representative for the Maize. This program is regularly used with school field trips. Teachers are provided with a teaching guide, while the students receive activity books and a card that contains questions about corn. Next to each answer is a clue that helps the students make it through the Maize with ease if they choose the

The Kalakaua Avenue entrance to the International Marketplace serves as the gateway for aloha attire, art galleries, restaurants and other memorabilia shops.

Marketplace is shoppers' paradise

Cpl. Barry Melton.

For those who are looking for gifts that say "Hawaii" or "Aloha" but don't feel like paying the prices that require whipping out a Mastercard, the International Marketplace might be a shopper's nirvana.

In the heart of Waikiki on Kalakaua Avenue, the marketplace offers pieces of culture from around the Pacific, from Aloha shirts to hand-made crafts, with prices that are reasonable for servicemembers.

"I think this is the best place to go to get souvenirs for a good price," said Lilly Cho, a marketplace merchant.

Cho, who has been a merchant there for eight years and sells items ranging from ukuleles to shell necklaces, said the shoppers, as well as the merchandise, come from around the world.

"Every single social and economic status is represented here," echoed Bob Duren, a manager at one of the marketplace's "pick-

And with restaurants inside the marketplace, coupled with the quality of the craftsmanship of many of the gifts for sale there, the International Marketplace is considered much more valid than a road-side swap meet.

"The marketplace has a better atmosphere (than a swap meet)," said Dianne Lawson, a marketing assistant with Marine Corps Community Services at MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay. "It's very festive."

Clothes are what Lawson said she looks for at the marketplace. She also recommends the marketplace for those who have family members visiting Hawaii for the first

"They should visit the marketplace so they can get a feel of it," said Lawson. "It suits the tourists, and that's what Hawaii is

Football season half full, half empty

Cpl. Trent Lowry

A couple of big fat zeros were erased during week eight of the National Football League season.

The Tennessee Titans finally put a tic mark in the St. Louis Rams' loss column, while Tim Couch's last-minute, hail-mary touchdown pass earned the Cleveland Browns their first victory in their expansion season. Couch's toss was a prayer that was answered. fittingly, by the New Orleans

Meanwhile, former Saints coach and former Marine Jim Mora guided his young Indianapolis Colts to a trampling of the Dallas Cowboys. The Colts showed resolve in coming back against the 'Boys, and did so in style.

Strong performances were also put in by the Kansas City Chiefs, who blanked the San Diego Chargers, 34-0, and the Washington Redskins, who savaged the Chicago Bears, 48-22. Jacksonville extended Cincinnati's misery as the Jags tore up the Bengals, 41-10.

One football pooler took charge this week, waiting until the last weekend of the first half of the season to notch his first victory. Patrick Keister stepped up, a la Tim Couch, to predict 11 of 14 games successfully to earn the win. He was closest on the Monday Night tiebreaker, picking 38 points to the actual 34 points scored in the game.

With that the first half comes to a close, and despite having mediocre outings the last couple of weekends, Craig McMichael came back strong with an 11-win weekend also, the only poolster to correctly pick Seattle to beat Green Bay. The Seahawk victory was enough to keep McMichael ahead in the standings, earning him the win in the first half of the season.

As a reminder for those loyal Hawaii Marine readers who would like to join the pool for bragging rights during the second half of the season, the rules are as fol-

• Weekly picks can be faxed to 257-2511 or e-mailed to valdespinolp@exemh1. mcbh.usmc.mil or lowrymt@exemh1.mcbh.usmc.mil by 4 p.m. Friday

 Submissions must include a sum of both teams' points for the Monday Night game. This total score is used as a tie-breaker.

 Thursday games will not be counted in standings unless picks are received by noon

 Pool participants who fail to submit all or part of their picks will be credited for a loss for each pick not submitted.

The standings will be determined by won/loss

. The second-half champion will be named after the final regular season game. The first- and second-half champions will pick a Super Bowl winner and a total score prediction. The winner will have his or her name inscribed in the Hawaii Marine Football Pool plaque (kept at the MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, Public Affairs Office).

Now that we're all clear on that, we welcome anyone who would like to join in at this point and look to the rest of the season. Here are the week nine picks (Winners in bold) Arizona at N.Y. Jets: The Jets' offense is only slightly less pathetic than Arizona's. Baltimore at Cleveland: still have no giddy-up. Buffalo at Washington: The 'Skins demolished the Bears. That won't happen to a good Bills team, but the Redskins' offense will still prevail. Chicago at Green Bay: Both are coming off of losses, but the Pack will take the grow! out of the Bears. Favre won't Cincinnati at Seattle: Seahawks should make easy enough to pull off a win against Tennessee, but they lost. This game won't be that close.

Pittsburgh at San Francisco: The 'Niners try to

Tampa Bay at New Orleans: The Bucs haven't played to their potential, but the Saints are completely demoralized after losing to the Browns.

Sunday Night: Tennessee at Miami: Miami is tough, but the Titans are a group to be reckoned with, as they showed the Rams. Monday Night:

Dallas at Minnesota: The Vikings struggled with Denver, but Mile High is a tough place to play. They'll have no problem with Dallas in the Metrodome. 44 pts.

Ugly Angels overpower Windwalkers

Lance Cpl. Roman Yurek

In true fashion of the National Football League's penalty accumulating Oakland Raiders, the Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 362 "Ugly Angels" managed to defeat the Marine Helicopter Training Squadron 301

"Windwalkers" Monday, 26-22, despite racking up more than 10 penalties.

Leading the offensive charge up the field was quarterback Todd Hester, and backing him up on the defensive side was lineman Daniel Collins.

"I'm the best defensive player in the league - and one of the dirtiest," said Collins, the team's leader in penalties Monday, before the game. "We're going to win the game. Just watch when the defense goes on the field."

Ugly Angels 26

Windwalkers 22

The Ugly Angels made the Windwalkers look ugly by applying defensive pressure, causing quarterback David Tomison to throw two interceptions; one late in the first half and the other early in the second.

In what seemed to be an all-out slaughter, the Windwalkers made a turn around with a quarterback sneak by Tomison, making it 18-15.

This was the closest the Windwalkers would get to tying the score. The Angels blasted back past them with two additional touchdowns to clinch the win.

Still refusing to give up, with the Angels up by 11, Windwalker Heath Russell caught a deep pass and ran just short of the goal. Julius Ventura finished the job with a two-yard rush for the score.

The second-half efforts of the Windwalkers wasn't enough. In the end it was the Ugly Angels on top, earning their first win of the season.

Also Monday night, Headquarters
Battalion "Warriors" defeated the Patrol Squadron 4, 34-0, and the Windwalkers split their double-header evening to beat Weapons Company "Hype." 3rd Battalion, 3rd Marine Regiment, 22-14.

Love of plants drives K-Bay landscaper

Cpi. Otto C. Pieli-Muete

The Navy and Marine Corps provides many different career opportunities, but not only for its servicemembers.

Gardener Kenny Kamiyama always knew he wanted to work with outdoor greenery, and MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, provides him with an ideal setting for his career choice.

Over the past 14 years, Kamiyama has proved his love of working with plants by maintaining the landscape of several areas on base with a smile.

"I put all my agricultural experience and knowledge to use in my job," said the former farmer of almost 20 years. "I enjoy what I do and that's why I do it."

After serving in the Navy during the Vietnam War, Kamiyama returned to his homeland of Hawaii to help his family grow crops such as sweet potatoes, bananas and papayas. In 1985, he came aboard K-Bay to work as a gardner.

"The atmosphere is very friendly here on base," said Kamiyama.

Kamiyama's normal duties include trimming hedges, mowing lawns, trimming trees, and maintaining the landscape in several areas on base. Kamiyama's love of plants and trees not only gives him enjoyment at work, but in his free time as well.

During his spare time, including vacations,

Kamiyama serves the Hawaiian community by volunteering numerous hours for the Hawaii Farm Bureau

'Kenny is a great volunteer," said Olivia Taum, an assistant manager for the Farm Bureau. "He helps us

One of the biggest projects Kamiyama helps out with is the annual Hawaii State Farm Fair. There he assists in many ways, including the set-up of livestock exhibits and a petting zoo, as well as helping with the day-to-day volunteer work.

'He works the fair from morning till night, for the 10 straight days it goes on," said Taum.

In recognition for his devoted work, the 52-year-old bachelor was recognized as the 1998 Most Inspirational Farm Bureau Member, said Taum.

But accolades are not what Kamiyama is after.

"You get the satisfaction from the work you do by seeing the fruits of your labor," said Kamiyama, a descendant of Okinawa, with his soft-spoken, friendly

And for Kamiyama, there are no signs of slowing or settling down from his agricultural career; he plans to go back to agriculture in the future by possibly taking care of his very own plantation.

'I've been working all my life," said Kamiyama, "and if I retire, I'll continue to work."

Thinking back. Sea Service terms offer humor for uninitiated

Cpl. Barry Melton

As I prepare for re-enlistment, I've found myself looking back on my past four years in the Corps—remembering all the good times I've had, the friends I've made, the feats I've accomplished and the time I spent as a recruit at Parris Island.

Many a day I spent in the "sandpit," a large box of sand used to provide a place for individual physical training (punishment from a recruit's perspective) of recruits at Parris Island. Many times I was being "trained" because I saw humor in things like definitions of terms.

In Recruit Training, we were introduced to a new language by our drill instructors and our books of "knowledge."

The glossary in the book was presented as such: "COMMONLY USED SEA SERVICE TERMS: The following terms will help the recruit understand the words used by a Marine."

I thought this was good, You know, it helps to understand the language of the land, I took particular interest to this, so I read on. Soon my reading turned into giggling over the words. The giggling turned to confusion when I saw the definitions.

I saw words like belay, buttkit, field day, deck, gangway, geedunk, hatch, head, liberty, petty officer, police call, quarterdeck, scuttlebutt, skipper, bulkhead and swab. The comedy came when I put my own definitions to them to make the class a little more interesting — well, at least in my opinion.

1. Scuttlebutt — Scuttlebutt is what I used to do

1. Scuttlebutt — Scuttlebutt is what I used to do when my mom whipped me with the belt and I would run around in circles. I always tried to get away, but never really could.

2. Bulkhead — I thought these were the guys on the football team in high school; big egos, minimal intelligence, grazy intensity mal intelligence, crazy intensity.

3. Police call — Now, New York may seem like a dirty town, but they police call all the time—like when the residents get their purses or their cars stolen, they always call the police.

4. Field day — I was happy in boot camp when I first heard about field day. I thought we were

I first heard about field day. I thought we were going to be running track and stuff. Instead, to my dismay, it meant cleaning everything. (See related term. police call)

5. Buttkit — I'm not touching that one with a 10-foot pole, but as you can probably imagine, I laughed hardest at this one.

6. Swab — I was so glad to find a swab was the same thing as a mop, and not a "Q-Tip." When the drill instructors said. "Swab my deck!" I was like, "You've got to be kidding me." Mopping isn't that bad, though.

7. Skipper — I overhead my drill instructors talking about when the "skipper" was coming to talk to the recruits. I was excited because I love "Gilligan's Island." However, much to my dismay once again. the "skipper" wasn't who I thought he was going to be.

This memory also led me to recall some of the Sea Service terms that weren't on that list that I learned during boot camp. These are many of the other words I never heard of until I joined the Corps.

1. Behoove — I first heard this one in boot camp from one of my drill instructors. It means — and I quote Mr. Webster— "to be necessary or proper for." I always heard, "It would behoove you to do this. It would behoove you to do that …" For a long time, I thought it was something you're supposed to do to a horse's feet, But, no horses in boot camp — I was wrong again.

2. Frigin', stinkin' — Everything is "frigin', stinkin'" in the Marine Corps. "Pull up your frigin', stinkin' trousers! Shine you're frigin', stinkin' boots!" Frigin', stinkin' is a lot like when your mother used to say "sick and tired." The two words are inseparable.

3. Goodtogo — Literally means, "good to go," but when it's jumbled together and said really fast a hundred times a day, the way other people who aren't familiar with goodtogo can interpret it many different ways. It almost sounds like some kind of slang word in another language. It prompts people to give you dirty looks when they don't understand what you just said.

4. Horhard harch — Now, when I was in band in high school, we did drill, too. We had the command "forward. march," but when I got to the Marine Corps, it became less clear. See, in the Corps it's "horhard, harch!" In fact, all drill commands in the Marine Corps begin with the letter "h" — "heft. hight, heft hight, holomn heft, harch!" You know what I'm talking about.

5. Trash — Now, trash is a word I heard before I went to boot camp, but I never saw it used in so many instances until I went. Trash is like aloha — it can take on many meanings. "You look like trash!" "Come get this trash!" "Take your trash and get out of here!" "Are you gonna do that trash?" "I don't know that trash!" It's a word for all seasons for Marines.

Don't get me wrong, I love the Marine Corps. To me, though, one of the most enjoyable aspects is its little intricacies. We have a language different than any other in the world, and if you think about it long enough, it can make you giggle,

Oh, or get thrown in the sandpit.
