

COMCAM WEEKLY

Regional Command East - Afghanistan

21-27 September 2014

U.S. Army Soldiers from 304th Engineer Company Vertical and 961st Engineer Company Horizontal take cover after an Indirect Fire (IDF) attack at Bagram Air Field, Afghanistan on September 26, 2014. All Soldiers deployed to BAF have a clear understanding on what to do when something like happens. (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldiers Sgt. Andrew Rager and Pfc. Jacob Sexton from 304th Engineer Company Vertical and 961st Engineer Company Horizontal continue to tear down some of the older buildings at Bagram Air Field, Afghanistan on September 26, 2014. All non-enduring structures are being torn down to reduce sustainmant costs and to increase force protection. (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldiers from the 454th Engineer Company Route Clearance decide what to do about an on coming cow while on a patrol in Sayghani, Parwan Province, Afghanistan on September 27, 2014. The reason for the patrol was to gather intel on the indirect fire attacks happening at Bagram Air Field (BAF). (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier Spc. Gary Oakley from the 304th Engineer Company Vertical continue to tear down some of the older buildings at Bagram Air Field, Afghanistan on September 26, 2014. All non-enduring structures are being torn down to reduce sustainmant costs and to increase force protection. (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier Spc. James Smith
Thurston from the 304th Engineer Company Vertical continue to tear down some of the older buildings at Bagram
Air Field, Afghanistan on September 26, 2014. All non-enduring structures are being torn down to reduce sustainmant costs and to increase force protection.
(U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier Pfc. Jeffrey Thurston from the 961st Engineer Company Horizontal continue to tear down some of the older buildings at Bagram Air Field, Afghanistan on September 26, 2014. All non-enduring structures are being torn down to reduce sustainmant costs and to increase force protection. (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

A U.S. Soldier of Bandit Troop 1st (Tiger) Squadron 3rd Cavalry Regiment provides overwatch security while soldiers move up Pride Rock mountain to witness the reenlistment of two U.S. Soldiers. Paktya Province Afghanistan. (U.S. Army photo by Spc. Steven Cope/ Released)

U.S. Soldiers of Bandit Troop 1st (Tiger) Squadron 3rd Cavalry Regiment with a group of Afghan National Army Soldiers climb to the top of Pride Rock mountain, to witness the reenlistment of two U.S. Soldiers. Paktya Province Afghanistan.(U.S. Army photo by Spc. Steven Cope/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier Pfc. Jeffrey Thurston from the 961st Engineer Company Horizontal continue to tear down some of the older buildings at Bagram Air Field, Afghanistan on September 26, 2014. All non-enduring structures are being torn down to reduce sustainmant costs and to increase force protection. (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier Cpl. Brian Larner from the 961st Engineer Company Horizontal continue to tear down some of the older buildings at Bagram Air Field, Afghanistan on September 26, 2014. All non-enduring structures are being torn down to reduce sustainmant costs and to increase force protection. (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Soldiers of Bandit Troop 1st (Tiger) Squadron 3rd Cavalry Regiment with a group of Afghan National Army Soldiers climb to the top of Pride Rock mountain, to witness the reenlistment of two U.S. Soldiers. Paktya Province Afghanistan.(U.S. Army photo by Spc. Steven Cope/ Released)

A U.S. CH47 (Sihanouk) helicopter prepares to transport a M777A2 weapons system as part of the retrograde for the closing base. FOB Lightning Paktya Province Afghanistan. (U.S. Army photo by Spc. Steven Cope/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier Spc. Sy Vector from the 961st Engineer Company Horizontal continue to tear down some of the older buildings at Bagram Air Field, Afghanistan on September 26, 2014. All non-enduring structures are being torn down to reduce sustainmant costs and to increase force protection. (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Soldiers of 2nd Platoon, Bravo Battery, Field Artillery Squadron 3rd Cavalry Regiment move to a safe location after hooking up a M777A2 weapon system to a CH47 (Sihanouk) helicopter as part of the retrograde for the closing base. FOB Lightning Paktya Province Afghanistan. (U.S. Army photo by Spc. Steven Cope/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier Pvt. Daniel Bridges from the 961st Engineer Company Horizontal continue to tear down some of the older buildings at Bagram Air Field, Afghanistan on September 26, 2014. All non-enduring structures are being torn down to reduce sustainmant costs and to increase force protection. (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

A U.S. Army Soldier of Bandit Troop 1st (Tiger) Squadron 3rd Cavalry Regiment Colonel Cameron M. Cantlon reenlists U.S. Army Soldier SGT Andrew Vance atop Pride Rock mountain Paktya Province Afghanistan. (U.S. Army photo by Spc. Steven Cope/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldiers from the 454th Engineer Company Route Clearance go on a patrol in Sayghani, Parwan Province, Afghanistan on September 27, 2014. The reason for the patrol was to gather intel on the indirect fire attacks happening at Bagram Air Field (BAF). (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier Capt. Eric Leatherman from the 454th Engineer Company Route Clearance goes on a patrol in Sayghani, Parwan Province, Afghanistan on September 27, 2014. The reason for the patrol was to gather intel on the indirect fire attacks happening at Bagram Air Field (BAF). (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier 1st Lt. Raymond Alsept from the 454th Engineer Company Route Clearance goes on a patrol in Sayghani, Parwan Province, Afghanistan on September 27, 2014. The reason for the patrol was to gather intel on the indirect fire attacks happening at Bagram Air Field (BAF). (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

A U.S. Army Soldier of Bandit Troop 1st (Tiger) Squadron 3rd Cavalry Regiment Colonel Cameron M. Cantlon shakes the hand of a Afghan National Army Soldier relaying trust in their abilities after climbing to the top of Pride Rock mountain as part of a reenlistment of two U.S. Soldiers. Paktya Province Afghanistan.(U.S. Army photo by Spc. Steven Cope/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier Staff Sgt. Brian Santos from the 454th Engineer Company Route Clearance gives a young boy a present during a patrol in Sayghani, Parwan Province, Afghanistan on September 27, 2014. The reason for the patrol was to gather intel on the indirect fire attacks happening at Bagram Air Field (BAF). (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier 1st Lt. Raymond Alspt from the 454th Engineer Company Route Clearance tries to ride a kid's bike while on a patrol in Sayghani, Parwan Province, Afghanistan on September 27, 2014. The reason for the patrol was to gather intel on the indirect fire attacks happening at Bagram Air Field (BAF). (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

U.S. Army Soldier 1st Lt. Raymond Alsept from the 454th Engineer Company Route Clearance walks along side a young boy while on a patrol in Sayghani, Parwan Province, Afghanistan on September 27, 2014. The reason for the patrol was to gather intel on the indirect fire attacks happening at Bagram Air Field (BAF). (U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Daniel Luksan/ Released)

A U.S. Soldier of Bandit Troop 1st (Tiger) Squadron 3rd Cavalry Regiment leads a Afghan National Army Soldier on a safe route up Pride Rock mountain to witness the reenlistment of two U.S. Soldiers. Paktya Province Afghanistan. (U.S. Army photo by Spc. Steven Cope/ Released)

U.S. Soldiers of Bandit Troop 1st (Tiger) Squadron 3rd Cavalry Regiment with a group of Afghan National Army Soldiers climb to the top of Pride Rock mountain, to witness the reenlistment of two U.S. Soldiers. Paktya Province Afghanistan. (U.S. Army photo by Spc. Steven Cope/ Released)

For More Combat Camera Imagery, Please Visit
<https://dvidshub.net/units/jcca> <https://defenseimagery.mil>

dvids

DEFENSE VIDEO & IMAGERY DISTRIBUTION SYSTEM

DEFENSEIMAGERY.MIL

