HIRING OUR HEROES CORPORATE FELLOWSHIP

It's graduation day for corporate fellows

Service members earn certificates after completing 12-week program

BY RIO FERNANDES Northwest Guardian

Above the Seattle skyline, in the Amazon Doppler Tower, the 33 cohorts of the Hiring our Heroes Corporate Fellowship cheered and laughed with each other while being celebrated at a graduation ceremony Oct. 6, after completing their successful management internships.

"It was enlightening," said Sgt. 1st Class Fred Melvin with the 504th Military Police Battalion, 593rd Expeditionary Sustainment Command. "I was able to get hired with a company called Work of Honor. We were able to get out there and have an immersion experience into civilian culture."

The 12-week program was focused on helping each of the fellows develop skills in upper management. Multiple premiere Washington companies, such as Amazon, Alaska Airlines, Comcast, Starbucks and UPS participated in the program because leadership knew they'd be getting high-quality candidates plugged into their organizations.

"We all know that military people bring in a specific set of skills — ones that nearly align one-for-one with corporate val-

HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

Military rich with Hispanic heritage

Enthusiastic salsa music and life stories from a Joint Base Lewis-McChord Nicaraguan-American made for a festive time for the packed crowd at Carey Theater as hundreds of service members came together for JBLM's Hispanic Heritage Month celebration Oct. 6.

National Hispanic Heritage Month is observed from Sept. 15 to Sunday. The event celebrates the history, culture and contributions of American citizens whose ancestry is from Spain, Mexico, the Caribbean and Central and South America.

The event is an expansion of the Hispanic Heritage Week first proposed in 1968 by President Lyndon B. Johnson. It was expanded to a monthlong observance in 1988 by former President Ronald Reagan.

"Whether you are Nicaraguan, Puerto Rican, Venezuelan or Mexican, the Hispanic heritage is a valuable component of our diverse community," said Chief Warrant Officer 3 Larry Delgado, I Corps human resource operations technician, as he began his speech. "We come from warriors, farmers or car-

LACEY VETERANS SERVICES

New veterans services hub open for business in Lacey

BY RUTH KINGSLAND Northwest Guardian

Southwest Washington veterans have a new location to get help with everything from education to housing issues, thanks to the opening this month of a Veterans Services Hub at the South Puget Sound Community College location in Lacey.

The hub offices opened at the site, 4232 6th Ave., Suite 202, Oct. 7 with a ribbon-cutting ceremony and tour attended by local and state dignitaries, as well as American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars officials and other local veterans.

"This is a great service for our veterans," said Navy veteran Ray Osburn, 64, of Lacey, as he congratulated Lacey Mayor Andy Ryder after the ceremony.

The city of Lacey was instrumental in creating the Veterans Services Hub on the SPSCC Lacey campus, having created an advisory committee in recent years to identify needs of the community, which includes a large veteran population.

There are 600,000 veterans in the state of Washington, and 32,000 of those are in Thurston County where the new facility is located, according to Lourdes "Alfie" Alvarado-Ramos, director of the Washington State Department of Veterans Affairs. She attended the opening along with U.S. Congressman Denny Heck and officials from both SPSCC and Saint Martin's University.

"This is a military town, Lacey," Alvarado said, as she addressed a crowd of a few hundred assembled under a tent in front of the new facility. "A lot of towns do parades and have other ways to honor veterans. But Lacey put (its) money where (its) mouth is.'

The facility is in a rented portion of the SPSCC Lacey campus. The city of Lacey has committed to $100,000 in its yearly budget to support the Veterans Services Hub.

Navy veteran Ray Osburn, 64, of Lacey, right, congratulates Lacey Mayor Andy Ryder after a ceremony to dedicate the new Veterans Services Hub at the South Puget Sound Community College Lacey campus Oct. 7.

Ryder, who is owner of the Shur-Kleen Car Wash on Joint Base Lewis McChord, said he has a passion for veterans. He traveled to Washington, D.C., in 2014 with Lacey City Manager Scott Spence to try and gain federal dollars for the Veterans Services project.

Despite what appeared to be an obvious need, "we were told we were on our own," Ryder said to the crowd at the service center dedication.

"But that didn't stop our delegation; we didn't take 'no' for an answer," Ryder said, adding that veterans are worthy of support for all they have done for the country. "There were services out there, but no central facility. There was a huge need but no centers south of Tacoma.'

About six years ago, Ryder and other city staff met with the city of Lakewood, which was in the process of opening Rally Point 6, a similar facility, to look at what it offered and what could be replicated and augmented at the Lacey site.

When an opportunity arose -1,200-feet of available rental space — at the SPSCC site, folks at the city of Lacey knew this was a great opportunity to move forward with the veterans hub.

In addition to services, local businesses and facilitators involved in the overall project, a local Gold Star wife was honored at the dedication.

Leigh Ruff, whose husband, retired Army Col. Edwin R. Ruff, died in 2011, chose to honor her husband by donating four of her husband's cherished militarythemed art prints to the new Lacey facility. Three of the prints share Civil War themes. The fourth, perhaps most beloved by Ruff, portrays a man reaching his hand out in emotion at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial wall in Washington, Ruff received that art piece from several of his employees upon his retirement in 1991. The employees each signed the borders of the print.

"All of the art pieces were very special to my husband,' Leigh Ruff said as she gazed at one of the framed pieces adorning a wall at the facility. "But, this is the perfect place for them."

SKIES UNLIMITED

Harvest Festival showcases programs

BY RUTH KINGSLAND Northwest Guardian

They came as Disney Princesses, super heroes, witches and fairy tale characters. Hundreds of costumed children and parents filed into the Schools of Knowledge, Inspiration, Exploration and Skills Unlimited for an evening of free fun, games, food and SKIES experiences at the Harvest Festival and Open House at the Lewis Main facility on Joint Base Lewis-McChord Oct. 7.

During the event, in addition to party stuff, the children got to see what it was like to take part in the many activities — from dance and gymnastics to martial arts — available at the SKIES Hillside area campus. Although some of the kids are regulars at the facility, many were JBLM residents who hadn't before tried the classes.

"My son wants to take music and dance and my daughter wants to try ballet," said Jessica Tuia, a military spouse, as she and her children took turns posing for photos in a castle cutout in the facility's cafe that was decorated for the occasion.

Three-year-old Aria Tuia said she was having fun at the party, though she was a bit concerned about sticking her head through the character cutout's face section. Her family moved to JBLM a few months ago from Texas.

"This is a great opportunity for my kids to meet other kids," Jessica said, as her 10-year-old son Darius escorted Aria into a room to try out the SKIES gymnastics class.

Perhaps most popular at the event was the karate class, where despite their costumes, children learned a few kicks and climbed over a foam wall in near boot camp-style fervor.

Dressed as a ninja, 6-year-old Brandon Elkins didn't let a recently broken arm interfere with his enthusiasm for the class. Brandon is an orange belt in the SKIES program and was excited to wear his Halloween costume for the event, said his mom, Shonda Elkins. She and Brandon's dad, Sgt.

Jessica Tuia, a military spouse, coaches daughter, Aria, 3, to put her face through a castle character cutout for a photo during the Harvest Festival at the JBLM SKIES Unlimited facility Oct. 7.

Sidney Elkins,504th Military Police Battalion, 42nd Military Police Brigade, watched Brandon demonstrate a high front kick to a training bag, as instructed by SKIES karate instructor, Joel Toline. Shonda said she enrolled Brandon in the SKIES karate class last year when her husband was deployed in Kuwait.

"It's a good program; it definitely keeps Brandon busy and teaches a little discipline as well," Sidney said.

Five-year-old Luis Rivas was dressed as the Marvel character the Incredible Hulk for the party, but he had to take off his green mask to participate in the karate class. This was Luis' first time taking part in a SKIES class, but he was enjoying it a lot, according to his mom, Rosita Rivas.

Rivas was invited to the party by her friend and fellow military spouse, Ashley Plepel, whose 5-year-old son Aiden Plepel-Camacho attends SKIES classes.

Aiden came to the event dressed as a brightly-colored bumble bee. Although the event was billed as a Harvest Festival, rather than a traditional Halloween

Six-year-old Kevin Correa Martinez dressed as a Jedi Knight for the event. As they arrived for the party, his mom Teresa, a military spouse, held Kevin's 3-year-old sister, Victoria, who was dressed as Minnie Mouse.

"This is so fun," Teresa said, as she was met at the door by SKIESUnlimited co-director and theater instructor Cindy Arnold, who dressed as the Snow Queen for the occasion.

The Correa Martinez family has been involved at SKIES for a while and said they appreciate all the facility has to offer.

"We love it here," Teresa said. "The coaches are fantastic and the kids really grow in the classes. It's a good distraction from everything else in the world."

Guardsmen, Reservists may nominate employers for award

The Rainier Wing of the 62nd Airlift Wing is fueled by dedicated Citizen Airmen who take time away from their civilian jobs to serve their country.

Citizen Airmen can recognize civilian employers who support their military service, whether it's from promoting their military service to keeping in touch with their employers while on military duty, the Freedom Award recognizes employers who go above and beyond for military members.

The Freedom Award is the U.S. government's highest award for large, small, and public organizations (not individuals) that provide outstanding support of their Guard and Reserve employees.

The nomination form takes about 10 to 15 minutes to complete and can be found at FreedomAward.mil. Just click "Nominate Employer" on the homepage, and then tell the story of how your employer supports you and fellow military employees.

Up to 15 employers will be chosen to receive the Freedom Award and be honored with a ceremony at the Pentagon in August. The nominee and award recipients will attend this

Yudh Abhyas wraps up in India

U.S., India forces complete 12th annual exercise

CHAUBATTIA MILITARY
STATION, India — Soldiers from the United States and India completed a two-week training exercise Sept. 27 at Chaubattia Military Station,
India. The closing ceremonies marked the 12th year of the bilateral training exercise known as Yudh Abhyas.

Yudh Abhyas, which means 'training for war' in Hindi, focused on the interoperability between the U.S. and Indian armies. The training integrated the soldiers of both the 5th Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, 1st Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division and the 12 Madras into a single unit for a simulated U.N. peacekeeping operation in a fictional African nation in crisis.

The exercise was divided into a command post exercise and a field training exercise.

"Exercise Yudh Abhyas has been a unique experience, a first of its kind for me and my team," said Maj. Sriram, an Indian army officer with 12 Madras. "The unique platform facilitated closer interactions and development of stronger bonds between the soldiers of both armies."

Yudh Abhyas allowed for an exchange of knowledge between the two militaries by sharing training techniques, cultural exchanges and building joint operating skills.

Some of the mutual training included education on each nation's equipment and weapon systems, counter improvised explosive device tactics, battle-field trauma management, house clearing techniques, rappelling and more.

"The training curriculum in the exercise was so designed to encourage a high degree jointness in the tactical drills and that the soldiers of both teams could use and understand each other's weapons and equipment," Sriram said. "The social interactions that the soldiers underwent gave a chance for the soldiers to get to know each other better — that is the biggest takeaway."

From day one, the emphasis was to encourage soldier-to soldier interaction, Sriram

Being two different countries with different cultures, it helped to know the soldiers of the other nation better. The more social interactions the soldiers had, the more they bonded.

"This is my first experience working with the Indian Army," said Sgt. Etienne Perrault, a fire team leader with Charlie Company, 5-20th Inf. "They were very professional and put out a lot of good information relating to mountaineering, quick assault and rappelling. A lot of it was good information that I can take back and train my Soldiers on."

The U.S. Soldiers learned from the Indian soldiers and vice versa, said Capt. Chandan, an Indian officer with 12 Madras. A lot of techniques, such as house clearing, were different, but the basic nuances remain the same.

It was the same for physical training — each nation had a different method, but the experience was great.

"We shared in our hardships with them (during training)," Chandan said. "We know more now and learned about each other's cultures."

This was another opportunity to interact with a great partner nation and it's always humbling to listen to somebody's realworld applications of what the U.S. Soldiers train on, said Capt. Canyon Yeamans, a civil affairs officer with 83rd Civil Affairs Battalion out of Fort Bragg, N.C.

It teaches the U.S. Soldiers a lot about what they do and the impact it has based on the Indian Army's experiences.

"Anytime you are working in a joint environment, the ability to understand what the partner nation is doing and why they are doing it is tantamount to working together," Yeamans said. "With these exercises, we build that mutual understanding so that in the event that we ever do work together (in a real-world scenario), hopefully it is not a challenge for either of us."

It was a great intellectual and professional challenge to understand the Indian Army's different processes based on decades of experience in operational theaters that are very different from what Soldiers in the U.S. Army are used to, said Capt. Adam David, who was the combined brigade battle captain during the command post exercise.

"I think the biggest lesson that I learned is that soldiers in a lot of ways are the same everywhere we go," David said. "We all have a common interest in defending democracy and freedom. It does not matter where you are, as long you have good men and women beside you, you will be able to get the mission done."

BATTLE OF THE BULGE REUNION

Veterans from Battle of the Bulge visit JBLM museum

BY RIO FERNANDES Northwest Guardian

For the 15 Battle of the Bulge veterans visiting Joint Base Lewis-McChord Oct. 6, seeing relics of their battle at the Lewis Army Museum isn't easy to describe.

"It helps you relive what you've experienced during the war," said Mike Levin, who fought in the battle with the 7th Armored Division. "You see some of the equipment you had and some of the places you were."

Levin and the rest of the veterans were visiting JBLM with the Veterans of the Battle of the Bulge for the organization's 35th-annual reunion trip. The visit to the Lewis Army Museum was just one of many stops that the group made.

After spending some time inside the museum, the group made its way out to the lawn, where dozens of military vehicles and weapons rest. One of the most popular displays with the group was the M4 Sherman Tank, which was the most common tank used by Allied forces in the war. Therefore, it invoked a lot of memories for the veterans.

on by many historians to be one of the defining battles of World War II. It was the final German offensive, lasting 40 days in the middle of the winter of 1944 to 1945. The veterans who attended the event spoke candidly about the battle, saying that while it may have been a difficult environment, they all took great pride in what they did.

RIO FERNANDES Northwest Guardian

Battle of Bulge veterans explore Lewis Army Museum and admire the relics of World War II Oct. 6.

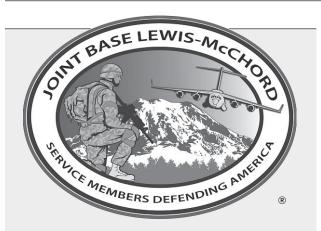

"I was part of the second push that had helped end the battle," said Robert C. Schneider, who fought with the 11th Armored Division. "It feels good to know that what we did is shown here at a museum like this. I have grandkids, and I want them to see this stuff. It helps them learn more about who their grandfather is."

For the Lewis Army Museum director, Erik Flint, accommodating the group was a challenge because the museum is going through renovation.

He said it was the least he could do for the World War II veterans.

"(The tour) was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," Flint said. "These guys just aren't around anymore; we are losing veterans of this war every day. Our main mission is to help train and make better Soldiers. Having these guys come out, enjoy our museum and spend time with the younger generation of Soldiers is great. I was glad to welcome them to the museum."

Getting mammograms regularly, as part of preventive health measures, can help detect and treat breast cancer early and can reduce the chance of a cancer diagnosis. Breast cancer is one of the most common cancers for women.

Screenings help fight against breast cancer

BY COL. MICHAEL PLACE Madigan Army Medical Center

hile we put a special emphasis on breast cancer awareness in October, at Madigan Army Medical Center we like to focus on the health of our female patients year-round.

Place

We know that our patients are service members, moms, daughters, wives, leaders, coworkers, community members and much more. We know that you are often pulled in many different directions on any given

However, we hope that you will schedule some time for yourself this fall to take care of your health. While it may seem easier to find time to come to the hospital when you don't feel well and need to see your doctor right away, we want you to make some time for your preventive checks for mammograms, Pap smears and young women's wellness visits.

Preventive health can truly reduce the chance of a cancer diagnosis.

Breast cancer in particular is one of the most common cancers women

The good news is that getting mammograms regularly can help detect and treat breast cancer early. Likewise, getting Pap smears regularly can help ensure early detection of cervical cancer. In fact, the cervical cancer rates in the United States are relatively low because of our emphasis on regular screens through Pap smears and early treatment of precancerous and cancerous changes to the cervix.

How often should women come in for screens? It all depends upon your age. Following national health guidelines, we recommend that women aged 21 to 65, without risk factors for cervical cancer, come in every three years for a Pap smear.

Don't forget that we also recommend discussions about HPV vaccine to prevent cervical and other cancers for those aged 11 to 13. We encourage women in the age range of 16 to 24 years to come in annually for young women's wellness visits.

Finally, women who are 50 and older see the most benefit from getting a mammogram every two years. The decision to start screening mammography in women prior to age 50 years should be made by you and your provider. Women who place a higher value on the potential benefit than the potential harms may choose to begin screening every two years between the ages of 40 and 49 years.

At Madigan, we make sure to follow wellness guidelines which are endorsed by the United States Preventive Services Task Force, who develops primary care prevention standards for the whole nation. They make certain that these prevention standards are kept up to date by continuously reviewing medical research and revising the screening recommendations based off of the latest science.

You can find their recommendations at uspreventiveservicestaskforce.org/Tools/ConsumerInfo/ Index/information-for-consumers.

Please take a few minutes today to schedule a wellness exam, if you need one, by calling 1-800-404-4506. We're looking forward to keeping you healthy.

Your time is valuable and we believe that it would be well-spent by visiting us now to benefit vour future health. We think the future you would agree.

ues," said Robin Baker, military recruiting program manager for Amazon Web Services. "We know culturally that (service members) are a good fit culturally with all of corporate America. These companies want service members badly; the struggle is just finding the right training and access."

The graduation ceremony featured a few guest speakers, including Ian Scofield, a former fellow who now works for Amazon Web Services. There was also a military challenge coin presentation to thank employers who helped arrange the internships. The ceremony concluded with the presentation of completion certificates from each employer to their respective interns.

While not every fellow has secured a job, officials are optimistic that each one soon will be employed in a job commensurate with their skills.

They expressed this confidence by participating in a fellowship intended to arm the service members with upper management training.

"We all know that military people bring in a specific set of skills — ones that nearly align one-for-one with corporate values."

"We had a lot of career skills programs that focused on getting people hands-on experience for the trades," Baker said. "But we didn't have anything for upper management training, and we wanted to address that. We know that our service members are qualified; the only problem is getting them the right train-

The fellowship program was created two years ago and has trained nearly 150 total cohorts. It's currently celebrating its fifth group of fellows, according to Sean Murphy, the associate director of Camo2Commerce, another organization involved in the fellowship.

"It's amazing to see where we've come from talking about making this program over coffee," Murphy said. "We knew folks (who) were getting lost in the mix when applying for corporate jobs. So we wanted to make something to help great military officials (have) the chance to get hands-on experience and network. It's great to see where we've come since then."

figures who claim an Hispanic heritage.

Delgado shared his own story as a first generation American whose parents became naturalized Americans in 1973. Although he and his siblings spent their early years with grandparents in Nicaragua, they joined their parents in Florida when he was 4 years old.

"It took some getting used to," he said, explaining that the children were told to speak only Spanish to their parents at home, in order to retain their heritage.

Delgado's father worked as a truck driver, while his mother worked two jobs — one as a seamstress. The family lived near Homestead Air Reserve Base, Fla., and he attended many airshows as a child, he said.

He recalled members of the 82nd Airborne Division coming to give aid to his family and others after Hurricane Andrew ripped through South Florida in 1992. One year later, Delgado enlisted in the military and later served with that same division as a service member deployed to Operation Enduring Freedom in Afghanistan, he said.

Delgado also told of his anomaly growing up as a Hispanic American with the first names

Larry Steve. "I asked my mom, 'Why didn't you name me names like my friends?" he said. "Why didn't you call me Miguel or Jose? Why did you name me Larry Steve?"

The answer surprised him. "I wanted you to be proud to be American," she said.

"I am proud to be Nicaraguan, proud to be American and extremely proud to be a Soldier," he said.

Delgado left active duty in 1997 and joined the Army Reserve. He is currently pursuing his bachelor's degree in organizational leadership from Brandman University.

During his years of service, Delgado earned a wealth of military decorations and awards. He also is a member of the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club. Delgado and his wife, Marinel, have four daughters.

In addition to Delgado's reflections, the crowd was treated to some traditional salsa and stood up Joint Task Force Matthew on Oct. 5.

It's mission is to transport humanitarian relief supplies such as food, shelter and safe drinking water for what the United Nations estimated to be 1.4 million Haitian citizens in need, according to a Defense

Department official who said the hardest-hit communities are along Haiti's southwestern peninsula in the Sud and Gran-d'Anse regions. Joint Task Force Matthew is delivering relief supplies to areas cut off by Hurricane Matthew, conducting aerial assessments to evaluate road and landing zone conditions throughout the country and supporting airfield operations, the official said.

TRANSFERRED AT SEA

The amphibious ship USS Iwo Jima performed an at-sea transfer of equipment and service members Monday with the aircraft carrier USS George Washington, Davis said, adding that the Washington had been standing by in the Bahamas to provide support to Haiti as needed since it left port in Norfolk last

"More than 150 Marines, four MV-22 Osprey tilt-rotor aircraft and other equipment were transferred at sea between the two ships," Davis said. "The Iwo Jima will continue on to Haiti and provide a very robust port package to help with the joint task force mission that (also) includes the USS Mesa Verde, which arrived (Oct. 9)," he said.

SOUTHERN U.S.

In the United States, National Guard service members continued to provide support to states affected by Hurricane Matthew during the weekend, primarily flood support in North Carolina and South Carolina, he said.

"We're seeing about 8,000 Guardsmen still on state active duty working for their governors," Davis said. "We expect them to downsize somewhat in Georgia and Florida, while remaining very much on duty in the Carolinas for flood recovery

WASHINGTON WING

Twins reflect on lifetime of military service

BY RIO FERNANDES Northwest Guardian

Lieutenant Colonel Evelyn Lundstrom-Weiss and Lt. Col. Eleanor Baker have spent nearly a lifetime with the Washington Wing of the Civil Air Patrol at McChord Field.

The only thing they might have committed more time to than their service is each other. The two sisters, often referred to as "the twins," are still as close as when they started their service in 1950.

"She lives about 13 miles away from me now," Baker said. "That's probably the farthest we've ever lived apart. We've always belonged to things together. We worked with the Seattle Squadron at one of the first ever Seafair parades."

The two 86-year-old women have a combined 132 years of experience with the Civil Air Patrol. They've seen the formation and fall of the USSR, the eruption of Mount St. Helens, the 9-11 terrorist attacks and much more.

Through all of the changes in the country and the world, the two sisters have remained conwith the department have allowed them to witness first-hand the change and growth it has gone through.

"When we first started, we had to study out the Boeing manual, and it was so boring," Lundstrom-Weiss said while laughing. "We know that they do a much better job training the cadets. It's improved so much."

The two agree that the lifetime working for the CAP has been worth it. They have traveled the world, helping people during natural disasters and pushing each other to always become better at their jobs.

"We've been involved in every aspect of Civil Air Patrol," Baker said. "Whether it be disaster relief, summer encampments, search missions, whatever you can think of."

While working with one's sibling might sound daunting to some, Lundstrom-Weiss and Baker agree it's been a fantastic experience. They've been able to use each as other as confidants and also as healthy rivals, as they both tried to become the best versions of themselves.

They'd also encourage anyone who is interested in learning about aerospace to look long and hard at a program, because they know it's a fantastic way to get introduced.

"You'll be able to learn as much as you possibly can," Lundstrom-Weiss said. "There are also so many activities and opportunities that you can accept if you're ambitious."

While it would be easy for the two to call it quits, they both agree that they enjoy working for Civil Air Patrol too much to walk away.

"It keeps you young to keep busy," Baker said. "I just enjoy doing everything so much still. Hopefully, we can keep doing this for a while longer!"

AIR FORCE ORGANIZATIONAL EXCELLENCE AWARD

Civil Air Patrol receives award for 75 years of service

BY JEREMY WEBSTER Secretary of the Air Force Public Affairs

The Civil Air Patrol received the Air Force Organizational Excellence Award during the Air Force Association Air, Space and Cyber Conference at National Harbor, Md., Sept. 20 in honor of its 75th anniversary.

"The Air Force Auxiliary is extremely proud to be recognized for our service with the Air Force Organizational Excellence Award," said Maj. Gen. Joseph Vasquez, the CAP national commander. "This prestigious honor is an inspiration to our 56,000 volunteer Airmen. Seventy-five years after Pearl Harbor, our operational support to the Air Force (continues to) take place every day, around the clock."

The award recognizes the CAP for its exceptionally meritorious service from October 2012 to August 2016.

During that four-year period,
CAP supported the homeland defense mission by flying more than 36,000 operational flights and executing approximately 3,000 search and rescue missions for the Air Force Rescue

Coordination Center, which resulted in 272 lives saved. In addition, they assisted emergency response officials in times of natural disasters by providing real-time aerial imagery for mission planning purposes.

The CAP-sponsored Aerospace Connections in Education Program impacted 20,000 elementary school children by elevating academics and fitness with an engaging science, technology, engineering and mathematics-themed curriculum.

The organization's long history of public service was recognized in December 2014 with the presentation of the Congressional Gold Medal for its volunteer service with helping protect Allied shipping and the U.S. Homefront during World War II.

CAP was established six days before the attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 1, 1941; one of their first missions was to deter submarine operations near America's coast. By the end of the war, CAP flew more than 24 million over-ocean miles, reported 184 submarine sightings and dropped 82 bombs. However, they weren't officially designated the official Air Force Auxiliary until May 1948.

In 2015 CAP became part of the Air Force's total force, which also includes active-duty, Guard and Reserve members.

On Dec. 1, CAP will celebrate their 75th year of service to America. During that time, the Air Force has looked to CAP to help train its own and augment its mission.

About 56,000 members make up CAP in eight geographical regions and composed of 52 separate wings — one in each state, as well as Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico.

NATIONAL PRESCRIPTION TAKE-BACK DAY

Drug take-back day on Oct. 22

BY CAPT. DARA SHIN

Madigan Army Medical Center Anyone with unused medications can safely dispose of them during the National Prescription Take-Back Day Oct. 22 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at both the Lewis Main Exchange and McChord Field Exchange.

"Unneeded and expired medications carry a lot of hazards for the military community," said Lt. Col. Paul Kassebaum, Madigan Army Medical Center's pharmacy chief. "When prescriptions are kept past their expiration date, they may lose potency or exhibit unusual properties and side effects. It's better to talk with your provider about getting an updated prescription if there is a need."

Proper drug disposal reduces access to dangerous and potentially addictive drugs, such as opioids (such as oxycodone or hydrocodone), and prevents environmental contamination.

Prescriptions that are left out can also pose a hazard to not only patients but to children

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reports that prescription drugs are largely to blame for an 80 percent increase in the number of accidental child poisonings since

The availability of unused prescription drugs has likely contributed to the national opioid epidemic as well.

In 2014, more than 14,000 people died from prescription opioid abuse. Another benefit of returning unused medications is that it is safer for the environment than flushing them or throwing them away. "Some medications come with instructions that say to flush them when they are no longer needed, but we're proud to provide more environmentally-friendly options," Kassebaum said.

BELOW: A "medsafe" medication disposal box was installed in the lobby of the outpatient pharmacy at Madigan Army Medical Center.

Both prescription and overthe-counter drugs can be disposed of in an anonymous drop box at the National Prescription 3:45 p.m.

Take Back Day.

Pills, tablets, capsules, ointments, creams, lotions, powders and no more than four ounces of liquid medications are acceptable.

Law enforcement will be present to ensure security of the event while supporting anonymous turn-ins. Organizers suggest participants who are concerned about anonymity remove or cover labels on bottles or place loose tablets or capsules in clear plastic zipper Needles, illegal drugs, aerosol spray cans, more than four ounces of liquid, trash, batteries, medical equipment supplies, chemicals (i.e. alcohol or hydrogen peroxide), or medical waste will not be accepted at the event. For those instances, participants should contact their local waste management for disposal options.

In addition to participating in the National Prescription Take-Back Day, Madigan also offers year-round opportunities for patients to safely dispose of unused medications.

Medsafe receptacles for unused medications are located at the Madigan outpatient pharmacy and at the Okubo Soldier-Centered Medical Home on Lewis North.

The big blue receptacles are available for use during regular business hours. The Madigan pharmacy is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and the Okubo Soldier-Centered Medical Home is open weekdays from 7:30 a.m. to

FAMILY ADVOCACY PROGRAM

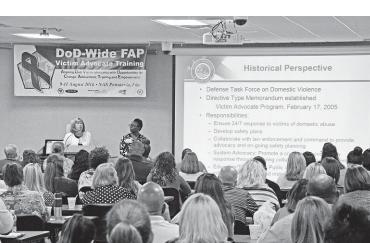

Help for domestic violence is available at Madigan

Madigan Public Affairs Physical abuse. Emotional abuse. Financial abuse. Sexual abuse. Domestic violence can show up in all of these forms. The types of abusers can be just as varied — male or female, officer or enlisted, service member or family member.

Unfortunately, like the rest of America, many military families experience domestic violence. While there's no single cause of why people commit domestic violence, several factors may contribute to it such as substance use, experiencing or witnessing domestic violence in childhood and mental health issues such as depression, anxiety or post-traumatic stress.

In addition, many perpetuators choose to abuse their partners in order to control them -

Family Advocacy Programs around the Department of Defense provide training sessions to help eliminate domestic violence.

whether they control finances, friends or behavior.

Getting help can be a difficult choice for people experiencing domestic violence. Partners may be reluctant to open up about their relationship or may be concerned about the consequences of reporting abuse. For people experiencing intense physical abuse, leaving their abuser can actually be the most dangerous choice they can

When people abuse their partners in order to exert power over them, being left by their partner could mean the end of their control and could lead them to use even more extreme forms of abuse.

For these reasons, family members' safety is the first priority of the counselors at the Family Advocacy Program at Madigan Army Medical Center. The staff understands the complex dynamics of domestic violence and first consider health and safety concerns.

When a family wishes to stay together, and it's safe for the family, the staff helps to strengthen family functioning and preserve families. They provide treatment for all family members as appropriate.

The Family Advocacy Program also places emphasis on prevention of domestic violence, and early identification and reporting of abuse. Their Family In Need of Services program offers treatment and case management to families with lower levels of conflict to prevent abuse from occurring.

Staff can also help link families with services off base.

Family members can self-refer to the Family Advocacy Program during duty hours by calling 253-968-4159, and after hours by calling 253-966-7233 (the

ZOMBIE

Add more than 100 recentlyenlisted service members of the undead army, and it was an adrenaline pumping 3.1-mile run. The first one to cross the finish line was Army Chief Warrant Officer 2 Derrick Doyle, who lost only a couple of "lives" (flags that the zombies sought) around the midway point.

"I ran with my oldest son; sacrifices had to me made," Doyle said.

Runners were able to run the course with a mindset that they were playing a first-person video game. Most of the zombies were moving at the pace of the walkers seen in "The Walking Dead." Those in the later stages of the run were moving a little quicker — like on "Z Nation."

Participants wore a belt, much like a flag football belt, with flags, that represented lives, to start with and were able to receive more at the medical station inside one of the former World War II barracks.

Bill Strock, who helped JBLM race coordinator Jennifer Helm design the course, compared the experience to the video game, "Left 4 Dead."

"It starts with six guys, and they run through the city and into a building before deciding where to go," Strock said.

Zombies were portrayed by service members who volunteered their time. In the hours before the first heats began, they received special effects treatment with makeup artists providing the blood, wounds and other details you would see in a

Hollywood zombie production.

Some service members added to the experience by wearing their combat uniforms with

With a bit of a Halloween feeling, youths were dressed in various costumes for their 1K run. Some were dressed as comic book characters like Spider-Man and Wonder Woman. There were also plenty who dressed up as video game heroes like Master Chief from the "Halo" series.

Some children were more creative. Staff Sergeant Derek Zielinski's daughter, Danielle, 10, dressed in a doughnut costume while his son, Weston, 5, went as a hot dog.

"They thought the zombies were going to go after them more than the other kids," Zielinski said.

32ND ANNUAL ARMY TEN-MILER

JBLM women win bronze at Army Ten-Miler

Knoll leads JBLM women's team; Men's team finishes ninth overall

BY DEAN SIEMON Northwest Guardian

It might not have been the silver medal finish from last year's Army Ten-Miler, but the Joint Base Lewis-McChord women's Ten-Miler team still ran their way onto the medal podium Sunday in Washington,

Within the crowded field of approximately 35,000 runners, the JBLM women's team finished third overall in the activeduty women's team category with a team time of four hours, 31 minutes and 56 seconds. Although the team took bronze as a group, it was a distant third behind the top two active-duty women's teams.

Fort Bragg, N.C., had the best combined time overall at 4:13:49. Last year's Ten-Miler women's gold medal team from Installation Command Europe took second with a time of 4:16:19.

JBLM's top female runner was Jessica Knoll with a time of 1:05:23. Her pace of 6:33 per mile helped her finish 38th overall among female runners.

Women's team captain Anne Spencer commented that while Knoll is already a talented runner, she's been putting in the miles. She's even run various races to help prepare her for the Army Ten-Miler, including an ultra-marathon (26.2 miles).

"She's been really dedicated the whole (training) season, as well as racing throughout the year," Spencer said. "It's obvious that it paid off really well." Before the Army Ten-Miler,

ATLANTA FALCONS VISIT BEFORE SEATTLE GAME

Players experience life of an Army infantryman fter defeating the Denver Broncos on the road Sunday, the Atlanta Falcons decided to enjoy some time in Seattle before the upcoming game Sunday against the Seattle Seahawks. But while many players would usually take time to see landmarks like the Space Needle or the Fremont Troll, some came to Joint Base Lewis-McChord.

About a dozen Falcons had the unique opportunity to go to one of the training area ranges on Lewis Main Tuesday where they met several JBLM service members who have been preparing for a chance to earn the Expert Infantryman Badge. It was an exciting time for all of the players, especially third-year offensive guard Ben Garland. Garland is a graduate of the Air Force

Spencer said the JBLM women were hoping for a consistency around the 65- to 66-minute mark for all of their runners. They were close as Baillie Locke was not far behind Knoll with a time of 1:07:26.

Spencer ran for a time of 1:09:04, followed by Betsy De-Sitter's 1:10:03. Runners paired up to stay together through most of the course, which was a big reason why the four times that made up their third place finish were within five minutes of each

"It was about the team doing well as a whole," Spencer said. "We helped each other along the way to reach our goals."

While the JBLM women might take a few weeks of easier running, they'll likely jump back into training through most of the year for the 2017 Army Ten-Miler. They've often talked about running in local races.

"Maybe we won't be able to run with each other in the mornings," Spencer said. "But (we'll be) getting together for long runs on the weekend so we can keep our little runner community going and think about next

The JBLM women's team was able to finish the event standing on the podium; however, the men's team had a difficult time keeping up with top-level runners in the active-duty men's division.

The JBLM men finished ninth overall with a team time of 3:53:51 and were more than 20 minutes behind the first place team from Fort Bragg (3:31:46). Fort Bragg had all six runners finish in the top 100 overall participants, led by Peter Koskey's time of 51:43.

Chris Pedi was the fastest among all JBLM male runners with a time of 56:06. Eric Geber finished with a time of 58:43, followed closely behind by newcomer Richard Williams (59:15).

Team captain Bobby Brown, who finished with a time of 59:47, said training plans that both Pedi and Geber did outside of the installation were the difference in their times from the rest of the team.

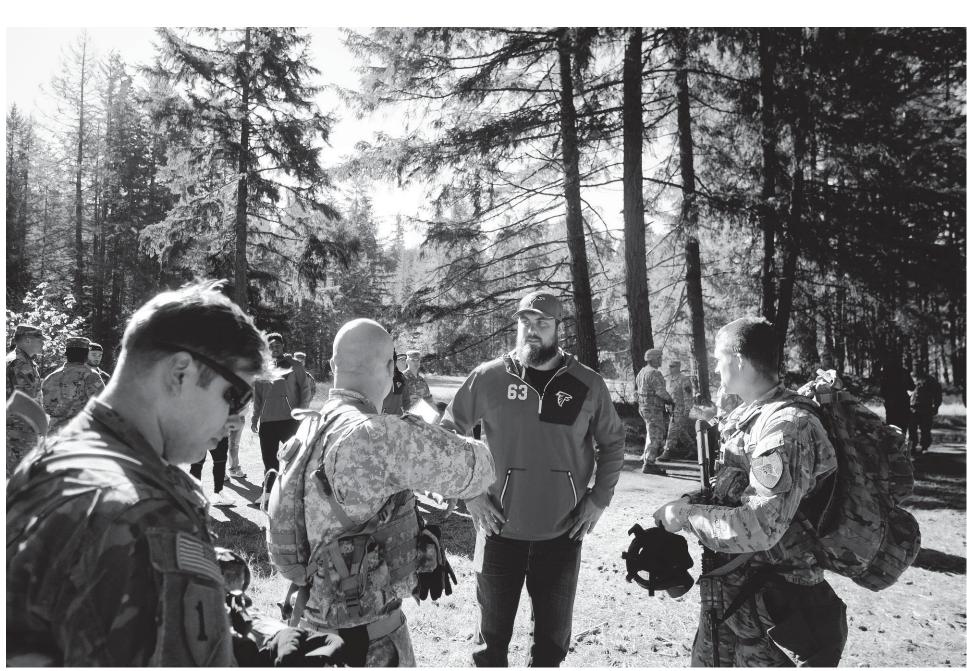

"(Pedi) was putting in more than 80 miles of running per week," Brown said. "Same thing with Geber; he was getting in 60 miles or more per week with some solid speed workouts."

Brown said the JBLM men are likely planning to take a week or so off from running before beginning their training for next year's Army Ten-Miler. Continued training and competing at local track and field meets can help them get their individual times closer to some of the best in the division.

"I feel like our training was pretty solid (this year), but we can certainly get our times closer to those 50-minute times," Brown said. "That's certainly within the realm of possibility."

before playing professionally. While seeing a lot of equipment used by the Army's 1st Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division, the experience still felt like a walk down memory lane, he said.

"You always get those little flashbacks of that military vibe," Garland said. "You see that brotherhood around here, and you see how they roll. It's always good to come back and have those memories.'

Walking through the range, Falcons players had a chance to see the different skills that the service members are being tested in to earn the EIB. Nearly 1,000 Soldiers will be going through the proficiency testing next week.

Tuesday was a nice break for service members to meet NFL players who respect their efforts. Garland said he and his teammates were able to learn the keys to being the best football team in America from the best team the country has to offer.

"So to be able to come out here and see what they do and see how they bond really helps us develop as a team," Garland said. The 23rd Brigade Engineer Battalion also provided a display of weapons and tools. Players had fun walking into some of the Stryker vehicles the unit uses out in the field. There were some laughs shared as they put on rucks, with the assistance of the service members.

After that, the players were

"How could you not?" said Sgt. Major Christian Kiechler, the operations sergeant major for the 1st Bde., 2nd. Inf. Div. "You're always going to measure everybody.

The players were then taken on a bus to the Lewis Main Exchange, where hundreds of Atlanta football fans greeted them for an autograph session. Although JBLM is located in the Pacific Northwest, the installation is home to football fans from around the country - including season ticket holders for the Falcons.

"Considering this a military base that sells nothing but Seahawks gear, it's great that there's another team out here to represent," said Kai Oboho, a JBLM military spouse.

ou don't have to go scary to enjoy the Halloween and harvest-time options available around the South Sound and beyond this month, and many won't give a fright to your pocketbook.

Whether you want to dress up your children, yourself or your fur kids, take a romp in a corn maze or enjoy the taste and smells of apple cider and pumpkin donuts, there's a nearby activity waiting to thrill the senses and put some fun in the season.

One such option is the Scholz Farm and Garden in Puyallup. It's free to visit the fourth-generation family farm, which has a market open from April through October every year. The farm is known throughout the region for its sweet corn and farm animals, but from now through Oct. 31 the site is transformed into a Halloween-fun destination offering a massive pumpkin patch, free corn maze, painted or U-pick pumpkins and much, much more.

"We gear everything to the little people: nothing scary and nothing spooky," said Fawnella Scholz, adding that everything, including parking, is free at the farm unless you buy something. Scholz and her husband, Allen Scholz, own the farm, which Allen took over from his dad, Kenneth Scholz. The farm has been in the family since 1948. Fawnella is an Army and Air Force veteran, having retired in 2009 as a major after 23 years as a clinical nurse at Madigan Army Medical Center.

On the weekends, the Orting Lions Club sets up on site its concessions trailer with a host of food options, including hamburgers, hotdogs, nachos, biscuits and gravy, coffee, tea, sodas and a traditional hot pumpkin drink.

U-pick pumpkins and ghost (white) pumpkins at the farm cost 33 cents per pound. Smaller pumpkins and gourds are 75 cents each. There's also a variety of squash for 49 cents per pound as well as painted pumpkins in the farm store for various prices.

On a recent weekday afternoon, Navy Vietnam veteran Brian Sweiven helped 8-year-old Avery Brundage, of Tukwila, Wash., pick out a perfect pumpkin for the child to purchase. Avery comes to the Scholz Farm's pumpkin patch yearly with her mom, Tami, and siblings — 3-year-old Sawyer and 1-year-old Alder.

"It's really fun (at the farm), and the pumpkins

RUTH KINGSLAND Northwest Guardian

are really cool," Avery said, as she helped Sawyer climb onto a large, old red tractor set up on the outskirts of the pumpkin patch.

Sweiven has managed the Halloween retail sales at the Scholz Farm for the past few decades. Since moving to Arizona three years ago, he drives up each fall to participate.

"It's just something fun to be part of," he said.

Mike Van Scoyoc and his friend, Maureen Soler, both of Enumclaw also are big fans of the Scholz Farm. Both said they have been coming to the farm for many years.

"I think it's awesome," said, as she helped Van Scoyoc load a pickup truck with a few hundred pounds worth of pumpkins and gourds they planned to use for an event at the state fairgrounds in the coming week. "There are high quality pumpkins, and it's a wonderful place to visit. There are not too many patches where you will find all of this for free."

In addition to the dozens of area pumpkin patches and corn mazes — many of which have entrance or parking fees — there are several events planned in coming weeks on JBLM, including some Trunk-or-Treats planned at individual brigades and the Book Patch Library's Haunting Storytime Hour
