Senior Leaders Gen. Abrams talks to leaders

"Let's be clear about this, you have to have emotional intelligence, you have to be an inspirational leader. That's what we expect of all our leaders, absolutely. You've got to have intellect, absolutely without question. But, there is a physical component to being a leader."

– Gen. Robert B. (Abe) Abrams
Commanding General, FORSCOM

On Point

"Answering the call since 1636"

The National Guard is the oldest military force in the Department of Defense. The National Guard celebrated its 380th birthday on December 13, 2016, continuing to answer the call since 1636 when the first militia regiments in North America were organized into three permanent regiments: East, South, and North Regiments. It is symbolic of the founding of all the state, territory, and District of Columbia militias that collectively make up today's National Guard. This year's theme is "Answering the call since 1636."

FORT BRAGG, N.C.—For the first time ever, U.S. Army Forces Command Soldiers went head-to-head this week, competing for the opportunity to be a FORSCOM nominee for the General Douglas MacArthur Leadership Award.

Thirty of the command's top Soldiers converged here and were challenged physically, mentally and emotionally in a series of events comprising the assessment.

General Robert B. Abrams congratulated the candidates on making it to this level and welcomed the candidates before their first event, the Soldier Readiness Test.

"Over the next three days we are going to throw at you physical activities and we're going to throw at you emotional intelligence activities. We are going to immerse you under stress," said

Abrams. "We are going to put you in situations where you have to work as an individual and as a team, and we are going to evaluate you."

During the assessment, the Soldiers went through a Soldier Readiness Test, a Leader Reaction Course, an Army Physical Fitness Test, weapons proficiency, a timed written exam, wrote an essay on short notice and faced an evaluation board of senior officers.

"The intent of the Gen. Douglas MacArthur Leadership Award is to recognize leadership contributions of junior officers during the selected calendar year," Maj. Gen. Jody J. Daniels, chief of staff, Headquarters U.S. Army Forces Command and MacArthur Award board president said.

"The nomination considerations include leadership, influence, proficiency, values, team-building, and personal skills."
