Task Force Gold

Task Force Gold, the turning point for Operation Iraqi Freedom, it is a successful and fully capable force. It is here in an area known as Sadr City where the 926 EN BDE is focusing its efforts to re-vitalize a war torn and impoverished neighborhood.

In only a few short weeks Task Force Gold has achieved astounding results. The Jamilla Market area is being re-born as Iraqis rebuild their shops with the assistance and backing of the 926 EN BDE and the Iraqi Government.

Already the area is becoming safer for Coalition Forces who routinely interact with the local population. CPT Darrick Wright of Task Force Gold said, "The people see that we are here dealing with them honestly and that we want to help. JAM (Jeysh al-mahdi) only wanted something in return."

"One team, One fight"

The revitalized market has brought about a change in an area which was once hostile. This area of Sadr City is quickly becoming a model for the rest of Iraq. As time passes in the area, one can easily see the transition from a battle ground to a vibrant and thriving community.

Streets which were once filled with garbage and raw sewage are now being cleaned up. The Iraqi people in the area show a keen desire to help themselves, to better their situation, and live a normal life. According to COL Jared Olsen, Task Force Gold Commander, "the Iraqi business owners have had the courage to return to their shops after the Coalition Forces forced JAM members out of the area." He continued by saying that the Government of Iraq has also provided workers who assist in cleaning efforts around the Jamillia Market area. The mission of Task Force Gold is to bring peace to Sadr City and improve the quality of life for its residents.

-SPC Hutchins

Residents within Sadr City work to improve their neighborhoods by replacing war destroyed walls and reopening markets. What once seemed a dream now seems only weeks away.

926th EN BDE PSD (Protective Services Detail)

“One Team, One Fight”

They have long hours, little to no down time, and they often forget what day of the week it is due to the amount of missions they perform. They joke about what they will do when they return to the hooch. Yet despite the fact that they are in Iraq, you will still find them in high spirits, laughing and cracking jokes. What little free time they get they spend either combating each other on “Call of Duty 4” or sitting in their motor pool having a barbeque. They talk about everything from the day’s mission to which college is better; Auburn or Alabama. The later discussion normally gets a little heated from time to time. Each one has their own favorite part of the job, for some it is the money, others it is the adventure, but for SSG Thomas Bowie it is, “Being able to see more of Iraq, and see how the people here live and to understanding the Iraqis better.”

Before they leave, they huddle together, where they bring their thoughts, fears, and gratitude before God. Before every mission SGT Rusty Tetter says, “I pray to God to watch out for the team and for protection.” As they leave the comforts of the Victory Base Camp they know that the enemy could be lying around any and every corner, but for these Trojans they fear only mission failure. They watch with vigilant eyes every rooftop and suspicious person that they can see. The heat of the Iraqi desert and the weight of the body armor add discomfort for them, yet they move on into their mission. They may get to eat breakfast and lunch today or they may not, but you will never hear them complain. When they return late in the afternoon or evening they think of only three things; chow, a shower, and mail call. Those soldiers who are lucky enough to get mail that day keep their enjoyment to themselves. Both SGT Tetter and SSG Bowie say that they enjoy working out and hanging out with the rest of the team after a mission, it is their way to relax. SSG Bowie enjoys playing basketball and has said that it puts him in another mode. The team’s work done, they return to their living area to rest and relax; preparing themselves for the next day’s tasks.

Good Friends, Good Food

Just down the road the promise of a healthy meal awaits us. We trudge from our CHUs and offices, motor-pools and worksites, through the blazing heat knowing that inside the dining facility we will find something good to eat and a friend to share a meal.

The Dining Facility is a large structure with two entrances and guards stationed outside to make sure that no-one can get in that shouldn’t be there. They also check our weapons to make sure that we have them on “safe” so that there are no accidents to ruin our day.

Our Mothers would be proud to see that as soon as we enter the building there are wash stands for us all to wash our hands. And we all do. Cleanliness is next to Godliness, you know.

We pick up our trays and plates and a packet of flatware and head towards the serving line. Along the way we scan the rows of tables looking for the usual suspects. I spot MAJ Liles, CPT Waddell and MSG Roberts and acknowledge them with a nod and mark my seat at the table with the silent gesture.

There is lots to choose from and always something new. Eggs to order, omelets with anything you want in them, bacon, biscuits and gravy. There is fresh fruit and danish pastries, cereal and bagels, and of course, hot coffee.

For lunch you can choose short order stuff like burgers, fries, Philly-Cheese-Steak sandwiches, and sloppy-joes or a more traditional or healthier meal such as baked or grilled chicken or a deli sandwich.

Dinner varies depending on the day of the week. Specialties include Surf and turf with huge pre-cracked crab legs and sizzling steaks. There is meatloaf and pork-chops and BBQ ribs that fall off the bone.

And with every meal there is an open salad bar, a taco bar and drinks of every type, from milk to juice and even “Near-Beer”, an alcohol free beverage that tries real hard to taste good but misses by just that much. Still, a taste of lemon makes it tolerable and, for a brief moment, can transport you back to a memory of a back yard BBQ on a hot summer day.

The People who work here are from all different nations. They cook and clean and stack the trays. they refill the coolers and restock the salad bar. They go out of their way to make sure that our meals are tasty and filling.

The Mess Sergeant is in charge and plans this all out . They organize and supervise and direct the decorations that adorn the walls and the tables. He makes sure the menu is complete and assures that the food is ready on time.

And because of all that we can sit down and chat and for an hour if we are lucky can relax and spend time with good food and good friends.

Note from the HHC Commander

CPT Jared Corsi

We have moved into our second month of deployment. All of you are doing an excellent job as Iron Castle soldiers. We have placed the 926 Engineer Brigade patch onto our right shoulders and are now officially recognized as combat experienced soldiers. Our engineering efforts are making an immediate difference in the many Mohallas that make up Baghdad. Your teamwork, focus and bravery are evident to all. Task Force Gold continues to be the main effort and never lose sight of this. Continue to work hard and respect the local culture. The temperature is definitely rising as we move through the heart of the summer months. Most of us have never experienced such heat. Stay hydrated and find time in your busy schedules to conduct Physical Training a minimum of five days a week. This physical training will help you sustain the mental and physical demands of every mission you go on outside of the wire. I am sure that all of the members of the Protective Services Detail and Command Team will attest to this. To the families of our great soldiers, thank you for your love and patience as we push through this mission. Our children may not understand the big picture of our efforts here, but the point you can drive home is we are doing this for them.

Note from the First Sergeant

1SG Dennis Denton

Getting ready for a deployment and family separation is all part of what Soldier's do in today's ARMY. We will soon start our cycle of allowing HHC, 926th Engineer Brigade Soldier's to begin their allotted Rest and Recuperation (R&R) Leave from theater, which will take them away from the ongoing stresses of a combat environment. As we learned in our R&R leave briefing, going home in the middle of a deployment, Soldiers must use good common sense as they again mingle with loved ones. Take time to relax and not over indulge in the things that a free society offers. When Soldiers return home, try not to make your schedule so full that it crates an unacceptable level of risk. You should always make reasonable plans. All Soldiers of the Brigade headquarters are doing an outstanding job up to this point, although we still have a ways to go in accomplishing what we have set out to do. We need all Soldiers to return safely and on time to continue the success of accomplishing our mission. All Soldiers will have an opportunity to take their R&R during their tour. We ask that everyone be patient as travel begins, because we all know that air travel can be delayed for one reason or the other. In closing, we need to note that the support that is provided by those in the rear is appreciated greatly and we could not have come this far in our deployment without that support. From the heart, I say thanks again for all that you do. Continue to support us and we will make you proud. I hope everyone has a wonderful 4th of July celebration and continue to be safe.
