Rainier Wing welcomes new leadership

New wing commander takes reins at change of command ceremony

BY STAFF SGT. DANIEL LIDDOCOET 446th Airlift Wing

Colonel Sean Pierce assumed his role as the 446th Airlift Wing's newest commander following a change of command ceremony at Joint Base Lewis-McChord Saturday.

Pierce brings with him a breadth of experience specific to the 446th AW's mission, having previously served as the 446th Operations Group commander for two years.

Relieving command is Col. Scott McLaughlin, who served honorably as the 446th AW's commander for more than three years and will be assuming a new role as the 4th Air Force chief of staff at March Air

Reserve Base, Calif.

Major General Randall Ogden, 4th Air Force commander, officiated the ceremony and is one of Pierce's earliest Air Force mentors dating back 15 years.

"When you have a leader like Col. Sean Pierce coming, you can all be confident that you have a leader (who) is more concerned about his Airmen than any accolades he might receive," Ogden said.

Soldiers from the 504th Military Police Battalion, 42nd Military Police Brigade, received awards Tuesday for their outstanding achievements after competing and winning in not one, but two competitions against other units within U.S. Army Forces Command.

During a visit to Joint Base Lewis-McChord for a Mission Readiness Brief, Gen. Robert Abrams, U.S. Army Forces Command commander, took a moment to personally recognize the Soldiers.

The first award presented was to Sgt. 1st Class Jason Pickett, named Career Counselor of the Year in the command.

Abrams said being a retention noncommissioned officer is not an easy job.

"Being a Retention NCO is really hard work and requires commitment and dedication, complete selflessness, Abrams said. "The fact that he (Pickett) was the best retention NCO on JBLM is a big deal."

Command Sergeant Major Stephen Helton filled the vacancy of command sergeant major of Joint Base Lewis-McChord's 7th Infantry Division at a change of responsibility ceremony in front of the division's headquarters at Harrison Hall on Lewis Main Jan. 5.

The position had been vacant since August, when previous Command Sgt. Maj. Jack Love took a position in Afghanistan.

Helton comes to JBLM from the Special Operations Aviation Command at Fort Bragg, N.C., where he also served as command sergeant major.

"When you look at (Helton's) bio, you'll see he's had all the tough assignments," said Maj. Gen. Willard Burleson III, commanding general of the 7th Infantry Division, as he introduced Helton at the ceremony.

Wanted: Best of the best

For those looking for a way to deploy and serve the country within a small operations unit, and possibly move up the ranks quickly while learning advanced medical, weapons and technical skills, applying to be a member of the 2nd Security Force Assistance Brigade might be an option.

SFAB leaders from Fort Bragg, N.C., came to French Theater at Lewis Main Tuesday for an information and recruitment briefing about the relatively-new brigades.

The 1st SFAB was created in 2017 and was the first permanent unit of its kind in the Army dedicated to advising and assisting partner nations in developing security force capabilities. That unit trains at Fort Benning, Ga.

The 2nd SFAB will be composed of more than 800 service members training at Fort Bragg, N.C.

"This is a big deal; you're going to be part of something great," said Command Sgt. Maj. Michael Grinston, command sergeant major for the U.S. Army Forces Command, at Fort Bragg.

Grinston, former I Corps command sergeant major, returned to JBLM along with the other SFAB leadership for the recruiting event and for a mission readiness brief at I Corps.

Grinston provided some of the criteria for becoming part of the SFAB at the French Theater SFAB briefing and also mentioned one reason an applicant wouldn't be accepted.

"If you're not deployable, you can't be part of this organization," he said.

Command Sergeant Major Ken Killingsworth, who is in the process of moving from Hawaii to a command sergeant major position at Fort Bragg, also shared information at the briefing, including the purpose of the SFAB, which he said is to train, advise and assist a company and enable partner and allied security forces.

Being part of the SFAB is an important service, and the organization is a top priority for the Chief of Staff of the Army, according to Killingsworth.

"We're looking for the best of the best," he said.

In addition to other skills expected for applicants, "there's a certain level of fitness expected," Killingsworth said.

Applicants must be a volunteer, have a PULHES — physical capacity/stamina, upper extremities, lower extremities, hearing/ear, eyes, psychiatric, military physical profile — of 111,221 or greater; score at least 240 points on Army Physical Fitness Test; obtain and maintain a secret security clearance; and successfully pass a background screening with no derogatory information within the last three years.

Because the organization has a goal of preparing exceptional leaders, those who volunteer are accepted and are already at a certain rank can enter training to progress to higher ranks somewhat faster than those outside the organization.

Although those who volunteered last year for the 1st SFAB received a $5,000 incentive bonus, Killingsworth said he can't yet confirm that bonus will be offered to 2nd SFAB volunteers.

"Bonuses have to be approved, but there will be incentive bonuses," he said.

The 2nd SFAB will be made up of smaller teams, about 12 persons per team plus nine security members, Killingsworth said.

"(The SFAB is) an enduring mission. You guys are making history and breaking ground for the Army," Gen. Robert Abrams, commander of the U.S. Army Forces Command, said in a video shown at the briefing.

About 150 Soldiers attended the French Theater event, including Spc. Xavier Lopez, 46th Aviation Support Battalion, 16th Combat Aviation Brigade. He said after listening to the briefing, he plans to apply for the 2nd SFAB.

"I joined the military to defend my country, and this looks like a great opportunity to do that," Lopez said, who joined the Army in his hometown of San Antonio, three years ago and has been at JBLM for about 18 months.

"I'd like to be part of the Special Forces Assistance Brigade," he said.

To begin the application process, Soldiers must contact their branch manager. It's a three-year commitment, and teams within the SFAB are expected to deploy often.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Joint Base Lewis-McChord has late-night firing over 3 weeks

Four infantry units and two Special Operations units on Joint Base Lewis-McChord will conduct day, evening and nighttime artillery and mortar training over the next three weeks.

- A unit will have 155 mm howitzer training Tuesday from 6:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

- There will be late-night howitzer and mortar firing starting Wednesday at 6 a.m. to Jan. 19 at 4:30 p.m. Training will occur throughout daytime and nighttime hours.

- Three units will take part in 120 mm mortar and 155 mm howitzer training on JBLM.

- Mortar training will also take place Jan. 23 at 6:40 a.m. to Jan. 26 at 9 p.m. Training will occur throughout daytime and nighttime hours.

- Three different units will take part in 60 mm, 81 mm and 120 mm mortar training on JBLM.

- Mortar training will also take place Jan. 30 at 12:01 a.m. to Jan. 31 at 11:59 p.m. Training will occur throughout daytime and nighttime hours.

- A unit will take part in 60 mm, 81 mm and 120 mm mortar training on JBLM.

Increased levels of activity will be noticed throughout the training.

This is required training, which allows military members to practice and improve skills necessary during combat. As often as possible, JBLM conducts larger scale artillery firing and demolition training at the Yakima Training Center in an effort to minimize inconvenience for the surrounding communities. However, some training must take place on base.

Air Force is no longer requiring Airmen's first-year evaluations

Air Force officials announced Jan. 4 Enlisted Performance Reports are no longer required for regular Air Force Airmen in the grade of airman first class and below with less than 36 months time-in-service or Air Reserve component Airmen below the grade of senior airman.

This policy change supports Air Force senior leaders' focus on revitalizing the squadron and saving Airmen time. It is intended to eliminate an unnecessary administrative requirement and empower frontline supervisors, raters and commanders to frequently engage with their Airmen face-to-face, said Lt. Gen. Gina Grosso, deputy chief of staff for Manpower, Personnel and Services.

Instead, the Air Force has additional means available to document an Airman's performance and to ensure he or she is meeting the training, developmental and experiential skills required to perform as professional Airmen.

Performance feedback and Airmen Comprehensive Assessments will still be required. Initial feedback sessions will occur within 60 days of raters taking over as supervisors and then every 180 days until an EPR occurs.

The removal of EPRs prior to promotion to senior airman will allow Airmen more time to learn their primary skills and missions before their performance is documented on an EPR, Grosso said.

All active-duty enlisted Airmen will receive their initial evaluation upon reaching their first March 31 static close-out date after either promotion to senior airman, or after completion of a minimum of 36 months time-in-service, regardless of grade, whichever occurs first.

All Air Force Reserve component enlisted Airmen will receive initial evaluations upon the first March 31 static close-out date as a senior airman.

Commanders still retain the option to complete a Directed By Commander evaluation to document substandard performance for those airmen first class and below any time after an Airman reaches 20 months time-in-service.

Flight Academy program takes off to address aircrew shortage

Headquarters Air Force Junior ROTC has launched a program aimed at potentially putting more pilots in the cockpits of military aircraft to help address the Air Force's ongoing aircrew shortage.

Beginning in the summer of 2018, select Air Force JROTC cadets, who applied for a new Flight Academy scholarship, will attend an accredited aviation program at one of six partnering universities to get a private pilot license.

The competitive application process started in fall 2017. The names of the initial 120 scholarship recipients from the more than 800 who applied will be released in early 2018.

The Flight Academy supports the Air Force Aircrew Crisis Task Force. The task force was tasked by the Air Force chief of staff to come up with new and innovative ways to address the service's shortage of experienced aircrews. The task force is tackling the problem along seven lines of effort: requirements, accessions, production, absorption, retention, sortie production and industry collaboration.

Air Force JROTC leaders plan on collaborating with civilian aviation organizations, industry and others to provide partial funding for future Flight Academy scholarships. The scholarships pay for transportation, room and board, academics and flight hours required to potentially earn a private pilot license. The in-residence training typically lasts about seven to nine weeks.

The Air Force Junior ROTC cadets selected for the summer's Flight Academy and the 250 planned for 2019 are but a drop in the large commercial and military pilot shortage bucket. Civilian airline industry experts project a demand for 117,000 new commercial pilots over the next 20 years. The Air Force is currently short of at least 1,500 pilots to fulfill its requirements.

BATTLE BEAN COFFEE

Still brewing after all these years

BY DEAN SIEMON
Northwest Guardian

Coffee and the Pacific Northwest go hand-in-hand. It's hard to go anywhere in Washington state and not find a coffee stand or shop.

Coffee has been produced on Joint Base Lewis-McChord for nearly 20 years. Battle Bean Coffee is the first and only coffee roasting operation on a U.S. military installation, producing between 20,000 and 22,000 pounds of coffee per year.

It is a small operation with two employees in a warehouse inside Building 4041 on Lewis Main — next door to the Auto Skills Development Center.

Curtis Black, Battle Bean Coffee's manager and a retired Army sergeant first class, was familiar with the coffee operation in the years leading up to his 1997 retirement. Before rebranding in 2006, it was called Especially Espresso. He began his career with the business while in college in 1999.

"It started with a job as a barista," Black said.

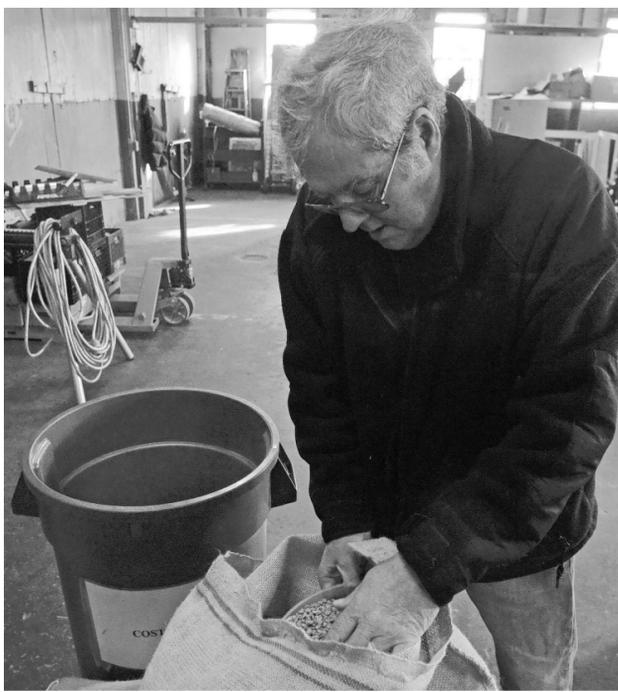

Over the years, he has developed different roasts and flavors with the variety of coffee beans that come into the warehouse. Black said he has a broker in Auburn with InterAmerican Coffee out of Houston.

Battle Bean's bean coffee collection includes Thai, Nicaraguan, Colombian, Brazilian and more.

"We do get a lot of different things that you can't get at Starbucks," Black said. "That way people can experience something different from around the world."

The coffee is roasted and prepared for two shops on JBLM: one inside Stone Education Center on Lewis Main and the other inside the Customer Service Mall on McChord Field. Battle Bean also receives orders from veterans who once served at JBLM and now live across the U.S. — including one gentleman who has ordered four bags a month for the past 10 years.

Battle Bean also takes custom orders. A few years ago, an Air Force lieutenant colonel requested a special roast flavored with chocolate and raspberry for a wedding on base.

Roger Disbrow, chief of business operations for JBLM's Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation, said he had worked on a deal with the Nisqually Indian Tribe, who wanted custom medium and dark roasts by Battle Bean.

"I can produce pretty much anything," Black said. "It's all based on the time, the heat and what it looks like. A lot of it is artwork instead of science."

For the majority of the past two decades, all of the roasting operations have been handled by Black. About two years ago, the team grew to include Eileen Mello.

Black has also been part of Battle Bean's numerous moves over the years from its start on Lewis North with a building that stood where the Warrior Zone is now. Battle Bean was at the warehouse for a few years until the Warrior Zone was opened in 2012, where the roasting machine was on display for patrons to see it in action.

Mello does the majority of the roasting nowadays, and Black does most of the deliveries for Battle Bean to the two shops and all of the places that serve the coffee. He's also a maintenance worker for Family and MWR.

Black said he enjoys the work he has done with Battle Bean to a military community that enjoys their morning brew.

"It's great; we give the troops something back," Black said.

Ghost Brigade Soldiers earn EIB

Through the darkness, the Soldiers pushed forward toward their objective. Sweat was dripping off the chins of some, hitting the ground, as each mile passed.

Their rucksacks seemed heavier with each passing step, their helmets weighing down like lead covers on their heads. They had to complete a full 12 miles before their trek was done.

Once they reached their destination, there was one more task at hand — each Soldier had to treat a simulated casualty and carry him out on a litter. This was the final event for the Expert Infantryman Badge testing that took place Dec. 11 to 15 at Joint Base Lewis-McChord.

Out of the 324 Soldiers from the 1st Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division who started the Expert Infantryman Badge testing, only 73 successfully completed all the required tasks and earned their Badge — making the attrition rate 77 percent.

"The test has evolved over the years," said Command Sgt. Maj. Walter Tagalicud, I Corps command sergeant major. "It certainly differs from the one I participated in to earn my EIB in 1989. But, the spirit and intent remain. There is no greater individual training mechanism to building the fundamental warrior skills required in our profession than the EIB."

There is a lot of train up to the EIB, said Spc. Tyler Conner, an infantryman with Alpha Company, 2nd Battalion, 3rd Infantry Regiment.

Even if a Soldier is not trying out for the EIB, the train-up for the testing is valuable to see the right way of doing infantry tasks.

STAFF SGT. SAMUEL NORTHRUP 1st Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division Public Affairs

When a Soldier finally earns the EIB, it shows that they have honed their skills enough to be called an expert infantryman.

The EIB evaluation included an Army Physical Fitness Test, with a minimum score of 80 points in each event; day and night land navigation; medical, patrol and weapons lanes; a 12-mile forced march, and Objective Bull (evaluate, apply a tourniquet to and transport a casualty).

"These crucial skills are the building blocks to our battle drills and collective gates," Tagalicud said. "The Expert Infantryman Badge is as much about the training, leading up to and through the testing, as it is about proving your mettle."

"Earning the EIB was one of the best experiences I had in the Army," said Sgt. Wilmar Belilla Lopez, a Soldier with 2-3 Inf. "Being tactically and technically proficient is the core of being a Soldier. When a Soldier earns their EIB, it signifies they have achieved a level of proficiency all Soldiers should strive for."

The EIB was developed in 1944 to represent the infantry's tough, hard-hitting role in combat and symbolize proficiency in infantry craft.

For the first EIB evaluation, 100 noncommissioned officers were selected to undergo three days of testing. When the testing was over, 10 NCOs remained and were interviewed to determine the first Expert Infantryman.

On March 29, 1944, Tech. Sgt. Walter Bull was the first Soldier to be awarded the EIB.

"The Greek Philosopher Heraclitus said, 'Out of every 100 men, 10 shouldn't even be there, 80 are just targets, 9 are the real fighters and we are lucky to have them — for they make the battle. But the one, one is a warrior, and he will bring the others back,' Tagalicud said while addressing the new EIB holders.

"You are that warrior," he said. "You Infantrymen, you Soldiers, you leaders and candidates are the one in a hundred. Many stepped forward to answer the question am I good enough. For you the answer is a resounding yes."

42ND MILITARY POLICE BRIGADE

MP Soldier first to respond to derailment

SGT 1ST CLASS BRANDON AIRD
42nd Military Police Brigade

A single 911 call came into the Joint Base Lewis-McChord Police Station about a possible train derailment near Mounts Gate Dec. 18. No one at the police station could recall a train derailling anywhere near JBLM before, and they weren't exactly sure what to make of the call. JBLM Police dispatch routed the closest military police officer to go investigate the scene.

Spc. Lornisa Stamper, a military police officer in 51st Military Police Detachment, 42nd Military Police Brigade, was at a vehicle collision near DuPont Road Dec. 18 when a call came over her vehicle radio asking her to respond to a possible train derailment near Mounts Road. Stamper was the closest military police Soldier to the scene.

"Stamper left her vehicle collision to find out what was going on," said Lt. Clarence Oleson, a Department of Defense police officer, and traffic management and collision supervisor for JBLM.

Stamper drove down the freeway looking for the train derailment, and found the train derailed at a bridge that spanned across Interstate 5.

At the same time, multiple 911 calls were coming into JBLM dispatch about a train falling onto the freeway. JBLM Traffic Management was able to pull up local traffic cameras on the internet that showed a train had, in fact, derailed.

"There was a collapsed train car laying on its side in the middle of the freeway," said Stamper. "Another train was hanging off a bridge with its front end resting on the train car below it."

The 23-year-old Soldier from Beaumont, Calif., was the first on scene to Amtrak Cascades Passenger Train 501 that derailed near DuPont. The high-speed train was on the first run on a new route called the Point Defiance Bypass. Within minutes multiple JBLM and civilian first responders converged on the chaotic scene helping the injured.

"I grabbed my (medical) gloves and raced toward the injured," Stamper said. "There were people covered in blood everywhere."

Stamper climbed into the passenger train on I-5 that laid crushed on its side. Oleson had arrived and was helping her assist casualties.

"There was a casualty in the train that couldn't feel anything from the belly button down," Stamper said. "Lieutenant Oleson helped put a neck brace on the casualty while I held his head. He had a severe head wound — my hands were covered in blood."

The train above Oleson and Stamper was creaking as it slightly moved. The train was hanging from the bridge and resting on the crushed train car below.

"It was a bit nerve-racking because we didn't know if it was going to fall down on top of us," Oleson said.

In order to get the casualty (strapped to a backboard) out of the train, Stamper had to kick out a train window and assist lifting the casualty through it. After getting the casualty out of the train, Stamper and Oleson started helping emergency medical staff with other casualties.

"Things happened so quickly, it's hard to remember the order of things," Oleson said.

Stamper recalled next helping a casualty in a car that had been driving down I-5 when one of the train cars had fallen off the bridge and landed on it.

"The rail car that had fallen off the bridge and shattered his femur," Stamper said. "We couldn't get him out of the car."

Firefighters had to use the jaws of Life to cut the car from around the casualty piece-by-piece.

"I just sat with him holding his hand for 45 minutes," Stamper said. "He was in a lot of pain, and I didn't want him to be alone."

After getting the casualty out of the car, Stamper and Oleson started helping the walking wounded to collection points in order to assist them being moved to local hospitals.

"It was amazing how well everyone worked together (firefighters, police, EMS)," Stamper said.

JBLM fire chiefs and leaders from the Vancouver Police Department (Canada), have been conducting training on managing multiagency assets on JBLM to be able to respond effectively to an active shooter or mass casualty.

Stamper and Oleson had never responded to a mass casualty incident of this nature before.

"When the call came over the radio, I had no clue what I was getting into," Stamper said.

Three people were killed and more than 100 people were injured when the train derailed. Medical personal, firefighters and police officers from across Puget Sound came together to help. Stamper was relieved by other first responders around noon after four hours of helping casualties.

"I'm very proud of her," Oleson said. "She disregarded her own safety and jumped into every train she could, like a little squirrel, trying to help anyone that needed it."

When disaster struck, JBLM was ready to help

BY COL. NICOLE LUCAS
JBLM Garrison Commander

For months leading up to the anticipated runs of high-speed trains on tracks along Interstate 5 and Joint Base Lewis-McChord, we stressed safety at nearby railroad crossings.

At the same time, agencies on and off-base got together to conduct joint emergency training, collaborating on many what-if scenarios. After all, JBLM and the surrounding communities were used to slow-moving freight trains on these tracks, not fast-moving passenger trains.

Come Dec. 18, we showed we were ready.

No one could have predicted the tragic accident that occurred at 7:34 a.m. that Monday morning, one week before Christmas, when Amtrak No. 501, on its way from Seattle to Portland, derailed south of I-5's Mounts Road exit, killing three, injuring more than a hundred people and blocking I-5's southbound lanes for three days.

When the first call came into JBLM from the Pierce County 911 Center, JBLM Fire and Emergency Services spearheaded a multijurisdictional response to the accident.

Tragic though it was, it's not been lost on region officials how fortunate it was the accident occurred adjacent to JBLM, its first responders and other base resources. The fast response by JBLM Fire and Emergency Services' firefighting and law enforcement professionals, as well as West Pierce Fire and Rescue and the Washington State Patrol — who arrived within minutes — saved lives.

Once on scene, JBLM Fire and Emergency Services provided initial command and control over a complicated and precarious crash site that blocked a major interstate during rush hour.

JBLM Fire and Emergency Services helped secure the crash site and organized rescue operations by military and civilian first responders. This force included all six JBLM engine crews, plus crews from DuPont, Lakewood and Lacey and support personnel from state and county agencies. Combined, these agencies ensured all fire hazards were eliminated.

They also ensured on-scene medical care was provided and dozens of moderately to seriously injured passengers were transported to local hospitals, including Madigan Army Medical Center.

ANSWERING THE CALL

There were many heroes that morning. Individual JBLM service members and civilian employees literally hopped out of their cars and trucks to help injured passengers who were either trapped in the wreckage or had been thrown from the train when it derailed. The professionalism and skill of these people was noticed both by local and national media outlets.

News coverage showcased how JBLM military and civilian employees were able to immediately and effectively respond to the derailment as it unfolded literally before their eyes. The quick-thinking action of these JBLM individuals was commendable.

JBLM's ability to rapidly field such an initial response, then help lead a unified team of federal, state, county and city partners highlights another point. This capability doesn't just happen.

It takes hard work made possible by individual and agency readiness maintained through frequent, realistic training. Whether you're a Soldier, Airman or civilian employee, your individual training regimen helps ensure JBLM has the highly-skilled people it needs to participate in large-scale disaster preparedness exercises, and likewise, to ensure we're ready when tragedy strikes.

That point was never more apparent than on Dec. 18.

We take part in multijurisdictional training so we — and our state, county and city partners — can better understand one another's strengths, capabilities and responsibilities before a crisis. This ensures we can effectively work together when — not if — a major accident or disaster occurs in this region.

JBLM responded remarkably well to this incident, but we can't rest on our laurels. We could be called upon to respond again at any time. We must be ready.

The Dec. 18 reaction to Amtrak No. 501 is a testament to the skill and professionalism displayed by everyone who responded to this tragic accident.

While we wish this accident never happened, the collaborative response could not have been better. Well done!

SHARP PROGRAM

Ending 'sexual assault entirely'

Reports down across JBLM, data indicates

BY PAMELA KULOKAS
Northwest Guardian

In 2017, Sexual Assault Response Coordinators at Joint Base Lewis-McChord handled 153 nondomestic abuse-related adult sexual assault reports from Oct. 1, 2015, to Sept. 30, 2016.

Not all of those JBLM alleged incidents occurred on base, but all were reported on JBLM — reflecting a flexibility in reporting by the Department of Defense meant to meet goals for increased reporting and decreased crime through prevention, while allowing victims to report a sexual assault at a time and place of their choosing.

The national report on local installation data, released in November, shows JBLM's reports decreased ever-so slightly from fiscal 2015 — from 159 to 153 cases.

According to Julie Lindahl, Ph.D., forensic psychologist and I Corps SHARP program manager, sexual assault prevalence is lower on JBLM, she said.

"Our report numbers are increased, and our prevalence is down," Lindahl said. "What we're trying to do across the (DOD) is get those two numbers to match — to get to zero, essentially. We want to eliminate sexual assault entirely."

The narrowing gap between prevalence and reporting is a trend across the DOD, as reported in fiscal 2016 Annual Report on Sexual Assault in the Military provided to Congress May 1.

Since 2005, DOD policies have encouraged service members to report sexual assaults, resulting in more victims coming forward, Lindahl said — 32 percent of those who were sexually assaulted in 2016, up from 15 percent in 2014.

VICTIM RESOURCES

The I Corps SHARP Resource Center is open weekdays from 7:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. in

Lt. Col. Donald Lagrange, deputy commanding officer of the 42nd Military Police Brigade, addresses service members during their graduation from a SHARP Foundation Course Oct. 20, 2017.

Building 207 C. On McChord Field, the Sexual Assault Prevention and Response program, located in Building 100, is open weekdays 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

JBLM military, civilian victims and eligible adult family members of service members can report an incident that may have occurred elsewhere — including the civilian sector — and perhaps before the service member entered the military.

The I Corps SHARP program assists victims with filing two types of reports — restricted and unrestricted. Restricted remains confidential and is not reported to the command or investigated, while the victim still receives support.

"The value is the individual is able to disclose the information; they're able to be believed, and they're able to get the help and resources they're looking for," Lindahl said. "Maybe that's all they want — to be heard and receive support. And that's OK; they don't have to do anything else."

With unrestricted reports, the victim receives the additional support of the command, which must report the offender and the incident to the Criminal Investigation Division.

"We can't confirm that somebody will be held accountable, but we can assure them that there will be a full-fledged investigation," Lindahl said.

Because there is no statute of limitations for reporting or converting a report from restricted to unrestricted, the SHARP program could receive a report today about an incident from the 1980s, complicating the investigation.

"Is that going to stop CID? Based on my conversations with our agents here, no," Lindahl said. "They are still going to move forward with their duty to investigate. They will work them to the end."

The national report on local installation data about JBLM includes delayed reports.

Julie Lindahl, Ph.D.

I Corps SHARP program manager, forensic psychologist

CAUSE FOR CONCERN

Despite sexual harassment and sexual assault recently making headlines in the media and seemingly leaving no industry untouched, Lindahl said the SHARP program is not influenced by this. Nevertheless, any number of incidents or reports is still cause for concern. The way forward, Lindahl said, is all about prevention.

"What has been lacking across the enterprise is the focus on the prevention piece in the SHARP and SAPR programs, and that is known across DOD and the Army," she said. "I think that we are making huge improvements in that area, and that is what is going to drive us to zero."

The culture needs to change, Lindahl said, noting communication is key.

"It takes time to change minds, change behaviors and change a culture," she said. "You don't create change overnight."

Having difficult conversations about what sexual assault looks like, what offender behavior looks like and what trends and patterns to look for is all part of encouraging people to be part of the solution. Lindahl said the SHARP program trains people to stop sexual assault before it happens.

"They've got to take their blinders off and say, 'That doesn't look right, and I'm encouraged to go stop that because that's not OK,'" she said.

446TH AIRLIFT WING

Heroic cop joins Rainier Wing on JBLM

BY STAFF SGT. DANIEL LIDDICOET
446th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The desire to serve is strong for many Reserve Citizen Airmen, and one heroic police officer returned to service after being recognized for his valor during an intense standoff with an armed robber.

Before he signed up to become a member of the 446th Security Forces Squadron in April, Staff Sgt. Daniel Aguirre, 446th SFS fire team leader, was serving as an officer in the Seattle Police Department where he still serves today.

During the course of his duty as a police officer in January 2017, Aguirre and his partner became involved in the pursuit of an armed robber that ultimately resulted in their award of the highest distinction the SPD has to offer: the Medal of Honor. Early in the afternoon, police received a report of an armed robbery in the 3300 block of Rainier Avenue South, where the suspect had reportedly brandished a handgun and taken another man's cellphone. The suspect, later identified as notorious robber "Top Notch," pistol-whipped the victim and also fired a shot.

The suspect fled the scene in a stolen Volkswagen Jetta before police could arrive. Aguirre and his partner, Officer Christina Bradley, located the car a short time later in the Central District, having already been present to address nearby community concerns.

While leading police on a brief chase through a residential neighborhood, the suspect collided with an unoccupied parked car. He then exited his own vehicle where he fired one shot at Aguirre and Bradley who quickly proceeded to pursue the suspect on foot.

Aguirre and Bradley called in for support and quickly set up a perimeter to contain the area where the suspect had been hiding. With nowhere to go, the suspect was eventually overwhelmed and apprehended by police.

For their heroic actions during the pursuit and their instrumental roles in apprehending a violent criminal, Aguirre and Bradley were both awarded with the Seattle Police Department's Medal of Honor — a rarely-awarded distinction.

"I think the award really represents the entire unit," Aguirre said. "A lot of people played important roles in this incident. My role in it was small, but I am honored on behalf of everybody who was involved."

In joining the 446th SFS a few months after the incident, Aguirre brings with him a breadth of experience that he can share with his new unit.

"Having known him prior to his joining, it was no surprise at all to see the way in which he conducted himself," said Maj. Ryan Bradley, 446th SFS commander and former SPD Officer. "He really adds to the strength of our unit through his selfless sacrifice."

Aguirre, who was in the United States Marine Corps for five years prior to becoming a police officer, chose to become a Reserve Citizen Airman as way of getting back into the military life and serving his country.

"It's the camaraderie that draws me — the opportunity to participate in something bigger than myself," Aguirre said.

For Aguirre, the accolades and esteem have never been part of the appeal to service.

"Our people are silent professionals," Bradley said. "I want people like him in my unit. It takes a special kind of person to run toward a threat when rounds are flying around, and I know that while he's in this unit he's going to be an asset. He's going to be a leader."

386TH AIR EXPEDITIONARY WING

Logistics Airmen deliver MRAPs safely downrange

BY TECH. SGT. LOUIS VEGA JR.
386th Air Expeditionary Wing Public Affairs

Delivering mine-resistant, ambush-protected vehicles downrange to U.S. troops is vital to their safety and overall mission success. Logistics Airmen at the 386th Air Expeditionary Wing show their commitment to making this happen safely every day.

The 386th Expeditionary Logistics Readiness Squadron's process to send MRAP vehicles throughout the area of responsibility is designed to ensure the vehicle makes its destination and operates properly when it gets there.

"If we don't do a good job, it can cause the airplane to crash," said Senior Master Sgt. Jeremy Burlingame, 386th ELRS aerial port operations superintendent. "The vehicle may not be air worthy and fail inspection in some way. It may also have explosives or hazardous material that, if not identified, can cause big trouble."

Master Sergeant Michael Beswick, 386th ELRS special handling noncommissioned officer in charge, is one of eight inspectors responsible for ensuring the MRAP vehicles meet the necessary specifications to be transported downrange for use.

"My focus is getting the cargo to people that need it," Beswick said. "I'm not here to 'wow' people. I have friends downrange, and I think of it like that. I'm just here to get my friends whatever they need."

U.S. contractors present the vehicles to inspectors who use a checklist to determine whether it passes or fails. If for some reason it fails, the inspector identifies the reason, and what needs to be corrected, before it can be accepted by the inspector and flown downrange.

After it passes inspection, the load planning team determines Ramp crew specialists from the 386th Expeditionary Logistics Readiness Squadron secure a vehicle onto a C-17 in Asia Dec. 28.

how many MRAP vehicles will be flown in a C-17 Globemaster III and how they will be balanced inside the aircraft. Finally, once it gets onto the aircraft, it is secured by the ramp crew.

Understanding the process of properly restraining cargo and the consequences of a sudden weight change in the cabin is critical in making sure the aircraft makes it to its destination.

"I like having a hands-on of what's happening in the military and equipment being used downrange," said Senior Airman Brian Dobbs, 386th ELRS ramp specialist. "It takes about four or five of us to load one MRAP safely."

The frequency in which the vehicles sent downrange fluctuates, but they reach all parts of the AOR.

"Our team moves a lot of tonnage, and it all goes into the fight to win the war or protect our troops," Burlingame said. "Our mission supports the warfighter, and when we send MRAP vehicles into theater, it saves lives."

MRAPs have proven to be lifesavers against improvised explosive device attacks, small arms fire, mines and ambushes. Furthermore, they are constructed with V-shaped hulls and a raised chassis design to deflect underbelly blasts.

EARTHWORKS

Recycling meets mission goals

Facility turns organic, inorganic waste into crushed asphalt, more

BY CATHY HAMILTON-WISSMER
Directorate of Public Works

Earthworks, the compost facility at closed Landfill 5 on Joint Base Lewis-McChord, takes recycling seriously. It captures organic and inorganic waste generated on the installation and generates products for troop projects, such as compost, mulch, crushed asphalt and crushed concrete.

“Material generated at Earthworks is free for unit use,” said Jaimie Wharton, environmental scientist. “All we ask in exchange is that units bring their yard waste to us for recycling.”

JBLM diverts waste from landfills and produces recycled products for use in troop projects. There is no cost to units for Earthworks products.

In fiscal year 2017, 24,112 tons of organic waste was diverted to a cost benefit — including procurement costs — of $512,000, and 273 tons of inorganic waste was diverted at a cost savings of $219,000.

The mission at Earthworks is to preserve and enhance the environment by providing cost-effective composting of organic waste generated at JBLM and recycling of inorganic construction and demolition waste debris such as asphalt and concrete.

Compost on JBLM is composed of tree limbs, branches, leaves, brush, food waste and some grass and horse stable waste. LeMay, JBLM Waste Connections partner, collects all pre-consumer food waste from dining facilities five days a week, from the commissaries three days a week and brings it to Earthworks, where this ‘green’ is mixed with ‘brown’ ingredients in a recipe to balance the carbon to nitrogen levels.

It makes an earthy, sweet-smelling product that builds good soil structure, enables soil to retain nutrients, water and protects against drought. Projects that use compost include troop beautification, trenching, running trail maintenance and enhancing pride areas.

The recycling of inorganic construction and demolition materials produce recycled aggregate products such as crushed asphalt and crushed concrete.

These products are used for new construction projects such as Stryker tank trails, parking lots, backfill and road construction projects like road shouldering. The Lewis Army Museum parking lot utilized recycled asphalt product for paving in April of 2017.

Earthworks products are not available to the public. To obtain products, units must provide their own military or GSA vehicles for hauling the materials.

All material or disposal requests must be made at least one day in advance for approval and scheduling. For a material request form and to get scheduled, call Earthworks at 253-967-3803.

ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION WARRIOR PROGRAM

Restoration helps fight for bottom line

BY CATHY HAMILTON-WISSMER
Directorate of Public Works

The Environmental Restoration Warrior program and the Department of Public Works Environmental Division Fish and Wildlife team who initiated it have made unique efforts to accomplish environmental objectives, conserve rare species and comply with the law, while also saving the Army hundreds of thousands of dollars annually — serving the active-duty community and preserving the military mission.

The efforts of this program meet the goals of the Sustainability triple bottom line plus: mission, environment and community — plus economic benefit.

This internship program is for injured and retiring active-duty service members. JBLM’s Fish and Wildlife team is involving the ERW in ecological restoration, conservation, and science.

“I love this stuff man. Wind and sleet don’t matter; I just love being out here. Putting up these boxes, helping out some ducks, this is awesome to me,” said Sgt. Ron Rudolph, who served in Afghanistan as a mortarman before interning with

CATHY HAMILTON-WISSMER Environmental Division / 2017

JBLM’s ERW program.

ERW is now in its fourth year and continues to build on its successes. Participants in the program help conduct varied, critically-important recovery activities such as restoration forestry, rare species surveys, habitat enhancement, invasive species control, native seed collection, salmon passage, riparian restoration, wetland searches for rare amphibians and timber sale raptor surveys.

During the summer, interns are trained and nationally certified as wildland firefighters and assist in prescribed burns to maintain sensitive prairies and oak woodlands. These activities help JBLM meet environmental management objectives, ensuring compliance with state and federal regulations. Among other things, this helps prevent critical habitat designation and other similar hindrances to military use of JBLM’s training lands.

ERW interns work side-by-side with professional biologists and students from nine local colleges, gaining job-skills training, building practical experience and learning about academic opportunities — all while immersed in a civilian professional environment. Most of the program’s 78 graduates are now gainfully employed and building civilian careers, and many are enrolled in college or working in environmental-related career fields.

In fiscal year 17, the ERW

Serenity Ainsworth, Evergreen student intern at JBLM, touches a bluebird nest and discusses nesting habits in the cantonment with a group of volunteers in the Environmental Restoration Warrior program Dec. 11, 2017. supplied the equivalent of more than $500,000 in volunteer labor to Fish and Wildlife. In a time of budgetary uncertainty and increased requirements of additional species listings, this inflow of labor has been critical to the accomplishment of a wide range of biological objectives.

Interns are typically active-duty personnel in their last year of service, and it provides them with job-skills training and resume building to prepare them for careers in a wide array of environmental fields. It also pairs them with student volunteers from nine local colleges, who are able to provide insight into academic opportunities and involve interns in ecological research.

A high proportion of the program’s 79 graduates over its four-year history have successfully transitioned into post-service careers and college enrollment.

Those interested in interning with Fish and Wildlife should email: dennis.buckingham@colostate.edu.

446TH AW

ceremony echoed this ethos as he shared his vision for the 446th AW.

“One of the key things I’ve learned from mentors like General Ogden is that an effective leader is often a servant leader,” Pierce said. “The concept of servant leadership inspires others to lead and strengthens an organization by building up the people around us. As leaders, we don’t seek the power that our positions provide us, but rather we seek to empower those around us.”

Pierce also brings a vast diversity of experience with him to his new role as wing commander.

“He’s been a pilot in so many different weapon systems,” Ogden said of Pierce, “from helicopters to tankers, to tactical airlift and hurricane hunters. He also has experience serving in the Pentagon on the air staff, which has given him a broad perspective and makes him an even better leader with that understanding of strategic level decisions and resource allocation issues that we face.”

As the 446th AW transitions to new leadership, its Airmen will also remember McLaughlin fondly as a leader who always demonstrated and emphasized the importance of mutual respect.

“Colonel McLaughlin has a reputation for being an extremely talented leader, but (he is) also one who cares for people and has great respect for others no matter what their background may be,” Ogden said. “I think he does that because he thinks it’s the right thing to do, but it also makes our Air Force stronger.”

McLaughlin left the 446th AW with a great deal of gratitude for the hard work his Airmen dedicated to the wing during his time as commander.

“When I assumed command in 2014, I shared the thought that the first responsibility of a leader is to define reality, and the last is to say thank you,” McLaughlin said.

“I’ll leave you to judge how well I defined reality for 446th Airlift Wing; however, I will say that I enjoyed tremendous support from our Airmen in taking a hard look on how we did our business during my time in command.”

nations and protecting the Antarctic environment.

“Since September we have flown 17 (ODF) missions, transported nearly 950,000 pounds of cargo and more than 1,300 passengers including the U.S. ambassador to New Zealand,” said Maj. Lucas Berreckman, 62nd Operations Group executive officer and instructor pilot.

Ensuring the success of the U.S. Antarctic Program is no small feat. The program’s success is accomplished through a network of intricately-connected parts known as Joint Task Force-Support Forces Antarctica.

JTF-SFA is managed by Pacific Air Forces at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam, Hawaii, but it relies on support from active duty and National Guard and reserve personnel working together as part of JTF-SFA to execute the ODF mission.

“The Air Force provides strategic inter-theater airlift, tactical intra-theater airlift and airdrop, aeromedical evacuation support and search and rescue response capabilities,” said Lt. Col. Trace Dotson, C-17 Antarctic Mission commander. “Operation Deep Freeze, the military’s support for the Antarctic Program, is supported by the triad of active duty, Air National Guard, and Air Reserve component personnel. Our Airmen provide a reliable airlift capability to one of the more challenging U.S. military peacetime missions due to the harsh environment in which we operate. Those Airmen get to put their skills to test in the coldest, windiest, most inhospitable continent on the globe which truly tests AMC’s (Air Mobility Command’s) global mobility capability.”

Having traveled to the continent twice — once as a student pilot and again as an instructor — Berreckman said he recalls his impression of Antarctica as dreamlike.

“It was surreal,” he said. “Not knowing what the continent would actually be like beforehand, I found it surprisingly mountainous, truly beautiful and colder than you would imagine — despite our arriving during the Antarctic summer.”

Though striking to behold,

Aircrews from McChord Field routinely transport a variety of cargo in support Operation Deep Freeze, including this 68,000-pound vehicle.

Antarctica’s austere environment creates unique challenges for those who seek to land and operate there.

In addition to fast-changing weather which makes approach difficult for pilots, cold and inhospitable surroundings present challenges unlike those loadmasters and maintainers operating outside the aircraft have typically encountered before, Berreckman said.

NSF notes that research is performed in Antarctica only when it cannot be performed at more convenient locations elsewhere on the globe and that research has three distinct goals: to understand the region and its ecosystems; to understand its effects on, and responses to global processes such as climate; and to use the region as a platform to study the upper atmosphere and space.

Likewise, there are distinct goals and benefits for McChord

Airmen operating in the remote and extreme Antarctic environment. In addition to the advancement of technical skillsets, the ODF mission has resulted in strengthened bonds between the United States and partner nations such as New Zealand.

“The value comes from getting to execute a subset of the C-17 (Globemaster III) mission that I hadn’t done before,” Berreckman said. “Learning more about the aircraft’s capabilities, further developing pilots, loadmasters and maintainers who go on the missions, and also cultivating relationships with our international communities firsthand makes ODF priceless.”

“At the beginning of this season, we arranged a (C-17) static display for local residents in New Zealand,” Berreckman said. “More than 3,000 civilians and five ambassadors came through that day, allowing us to communicate our mission and the capabilities of our platform, which is an invaluable opportunity.”

There’s a reason not every aircraft in the U.S. Air Force arsenal plays a role in ODF. The C-17 is uniquely suited to the task, and so are the Airmen who crew it.

“The C-17 is the perfect size aircraft to provide intra-theater airlift between Christchurch, New Zealand and Antarctica,” Dotson said. “The C-17 can carry up to 100,000 pounds of cargo and people safely to Antarctica while still having enough fuel to return to New Zealand if the weather degrades suddenly. A larger aircraft may not be able to land on the ice runway at McMurdo Station, and smaller aircraft can’t afford the large cargo payload that the USAP (U.S. Antarctic Program) requires.”

With 13 missions still to accomplish, the current ODF season will conclude in February. The 2018-2019 season will resume in late September or early October 2018.

“It’s been a successful season so far, and we’re looking forward to returning to Christchurch in February to complete our remaining missions,” Dotson said.

Despite all these contributions, the 62nd AW remains heavily tasked supporting overseas contingency operations, presidential support missions and various other high-priority airlift and airdrop operations around the world.

congratulated Pickett and thanked him for his dedication and contributions as a career counselor.

“Across all the stars of retention posts that we have in U.S. Army Forces Command, for you to be recognized as the top retention NCO is actually an incredible accomplishment,” Abrams said.

The second award, known as the Eagle Award, was presented to the 95th Military Working Dog Detachment, 504th MP Bn. The Eagle Award is given annually to the command’s best small MP company working dog detachment.

“We submit our packets and books showing our accomplishments throughout the year — our training proficiency rates, our number of deployments, volunteer hours and our AKIA (Annual Kennel Inspection and Assessment),” said 1st Lt. Carmon Johnson, detachment platoon leader.

The 95th Military Working Dog Detachment was reactivated at JBLM in 2012.

“This is the first time we have won it, and we are excited and proud of winning this award,” Johnson said.

Abrams spoke about the importance of military working dogs and the time and dedication it takes to train them.

“Military working dogs, especially explosion detection dogs, have saved countless lives,” Abrams said. “To train them and sustain them and maintain them for worldwide deployment is an unbelievable amount of work inside our kennels. We recognize annually the best kennel, the best military working dog detachment within FORSCOM.”

“The standards are very, very high, and it requires incredible discipline, sustained discipline, enforcement of our policies with regard to military working dogs and performance matters. This is a huge accomplishment for all of you, and my hat’s off to you; job well done.”

“He’s ready, and he has my complete confidence,” Burleson said.

Helton expressed his appreciation for the Bayonet Division and his opportunity to fill the 7th Infantry Division vacancy.

“It’s difficult to properly express how honored I am to have been selected as the command sergeant major of this storied division,” he said. “As I reflect on the rich history, lineage, and extraordinary record of combat, I’m struck with the gravity of this position and truly humbled to represent the Bayonet Division as its senior noncommissioned officer. “I will represent you with pride and advocate for your training, readiness and resources.”

Helton also took a few moments to thank his wife, U.S. Army veteran, Leslie Helton, and the couple’s 13-year-old son, Kai, an eighth-grader at Mann Middle School in Lakewood, for their love, support and sacrifice.

Helton began his military career as a Scout Helicopter Crew Chief in Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., Oct. 3, 1990. He went through advanced individual training at Fort Rucker, Ala.

He served in various positions in Fort Campbell, Ky.; Fort Riley, Kan.; and Camp Humphreys, South Korea.

Helton participated in numerous deployments, including Operation Uphold Democracy, Haiti 1994; Operation Iraqi Freedom 2003, 2004, 2005, 2010, 2011; and Operation Enduring Freedom 2013.

He is a graduate of the United States Army Sergeants Major Academy at Fort Bliss, Texas.

Helton earned an associate’s degree in general studies from Central Texas College, Killeen, Texas.

He also has earned numerous certificates from various military training and leadership courses.

Helton’s awards and decorations include: the Legion of Merit; Bronze Star Medal; Meritorious Service Medal; Army Commendation Medal; Army Achievement Medal; Master Aviation Badge; Parachutist Badge and the Assault Badge. He’s also the recipient of the Honorable Order of Saint Michael (Bronze Award) and the German Armed Forces Proficiency Badge (Gold).

JBLM FITNESS RESOLUTION FAIR

Kick-start that New Year's fitness resolution

Participants can sample a variety of fitness classes offered on JBLM

BY DEAN SIEMON
Northwest Guardian

With the start of every new year, some Americans make a resolution to lose weight, be more fit or a combination of both. For members of the Joint Base Lewis-McChord community, keeping that resolution in 2018 begins Saturday at the annual JBLM Fitness Resolution Fair.

The JBLM Fitness Resolution Fair is hosted by the Wilson Sports and Fitness Center on Lewis North from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

The fair, which is free to attend, will feature fitness classes offered across JBLM — including Zumba, Strong by Zumba, MixedFit and indoor cycling.

Event coordinator Mallory Loy said the event has been popular because participants enjoy taking the classes and seeing what is new.

"It's just nice to be able to get the word out with this event that (the JBLM community is) able to take these classes free at most of the facilities," Loy said.

One new fitness class is Strong by Zumba. Zumba, a dance-fitness course incorporating hip-hop, samba, salsa and other Latin American genres of music, has grown in the past decade. With Strong by Zumba, the class is generally shorter and has a faster pace — similar to high-intensity interval training.

"It's kind of like circuit training more than a CrossFit or functional fitness class," Loy said.

Loy said participants will also have a chance to try out a func-

While wearing a replica jersey of his favorite professional basketball player — Stephen Curry of the Golden State Warriors — Bradley made 11 of 15 free throws to clinch the title in the boys' age 10 division.

The win advances him to a future Knights of Columbus district-level competition, along with seven other JBLM youths who won their age divisions by scoring high in their 15 free throw attempts.

Bradley was also tied for the most points, perhaps fitting for someone wearing the jersey of one of the most consistent scoring threats currently in the

JBLM SPORTS, FITNESS AND AQUATICS

Changes coming to JBLM sports, race calendars in 2018

BY DEAN SIEMON
Northwest Guardian

Joint Base Lewis-McChord's Sports, Fitness and Aquatics has released its full schedule for the 2018 JBLM Commander's Cup leagues as well as open leagues and JBLM races.

The Commander's Cup leagues are designed for units to compete against each other in an intramural setting — building points for participation and where units finished in each league. The first Commander's Cup league, volleyball, is scheduled to begin Jan. 15, followed by bowling Feb. 8, soccer March 12 and golf April 9.

The start of the Commander's Cup basketball season was moved from January to April 17 due to the difficulty to schedule referees to officiate games during a peak time for basketball.

"They're covering all of the local high school games and at community colleges; it can be hard to get officials on a constant basis," said Bruce Anto-nowicz, director of JBLM Sports, Fitness and Aquatics.

There will be a qualifying event April 20 for JBLM's teams competing in the annual Army Ten-Miler. Other Commander's Cup leagues include softball June 11, paintball Aug. 11, flag football Aug. 2, indoor soccer Oct. 1, the 5K Championship Oct. 19 and the JBLM Swim Meet Nov. 6 to 8.

tional fitness workshop to train muscles by simulating common movements done at home, work or sports with an emphasis on core stability.

"We're hoping to reach out to more patrons with that (workshop)," Loy said.

Similar to last year, participants can try out a fitness class during a 30-minute trial. There will be 15-minute transition periods between classes, which provides participants a chance to cool down before tackling another class.

Loy said she encourages JBLM newcomers to attend the Fitness Resolution Fair, in case the highlighted classes weren't offered at their previous installation.

"You want to change it up," Loy said. "It'll introduce them to National Basketball Association. And just like the professional, Audette was able to make an adjustment after a few early misses.

"I did a little bit better aiming to get the ball right into the basket," Bradley said.

Similar to Curry's form, Bradley usually practices shooting from the three-point range.

His parents are happy to see his improvements show in competition. His mother, Tiffany Audette, said he's shown growth since he began shooting at age 2 with a Little Tikes basketball hoops.

"It's amazing the things he's done and how he's advanced so far," Audette said.

The other youth to score a high of 11 points was Katrell Walker, who won the boys' age 14 division. Walker said he didn't feel any pressure when there was a large crowd of peers and coaches surrounding him from the three-point arc.

"Whenever I'm in a game, I have eyes on me, too," Walker said. "To me, (this is) like basically playing a game."

The free throw competition was hosted after a full day of CYS basketball leagues held their Saturday games. As the competition grew closer, CYS staff and coaches spread the word to parents about the opportunity to test one of the fundamental skills in basketball.

CYS coach Damian DeCastro saw five of his kids from different age group teams earn a berth into the district round. In addition to Audette and Walker, Brandon Vargas, 9; Darius Samuelu Tuia, 11; and Taleah Richardson, 12, all won their respective divisions.

DEAN SIEMON Northwest Guardian

Nayali Hernandez-Rodriguez, 10, lets the ball go during one of her attempts in the Knights of Columbus Council 10652 Free Throw Competition on Joint Base Lewis-McChord Saturday.

"It's impressive," DeCastro said. "All the effort they put into it (all season) shows."

The JBLM youth contest attracted 20 shooters aiming for a berth into the district-level of competition, to be announced later. The Knights of Columbus will advance the best of each district into a regional competition, which looks for the best to compete in a state championship.

This is the second year Council

10652 held a council championship on JBLM. Before last year, athletes had to look for a council championship outside of the installation.

"They're already here playing basketball; why not (have them) stick around and shoot some free throws," said Greg Kaufman, youth director for Council 10652.

are open to active-duty service members attached to a unit on JBLM, with mandatory representative meetings planned before the start of each season. There are also open leagues designed for service members, spouses, family members and anyone else with a valid JBLM ID.

The JBLM open league schedule starts with women's volleyball Feb. 17 and women's basketball April 7. This year will see the addition of open basketball and volleyball, both starting June 16.

Along with an open flag football season, there will be spring and fall seasons for open league softball — one starting April 7 and the second starting Aug. 18. Depending on participation, each season could have separate divisions for recreational, competitive and women's softball.

"It seems that (softball) is one of our big three sports, like football and basketball," Antonowicz said.

Entry fees for each sport will vary. Players without a team are encouraged to attend coach meetings.

Running enthusiasts will also find the normal schedule for races in 2018, starting with the annual Shamrock 'n Run 1K and 5K March 10, followed by the popular Down and Dirty Mud Run May 12.

There will be a Military Formation Run competition as part of the annual Sound to Narrows 12K event in Tacoma June 9. A second-chance qualifier for Ten-Miler teams as one of three options for the JBLM Freedom Run is set for July 4.

The rest of the 2018 Joint Base Lewis-McChord race calendar features the Salmon Run Aug. 25, Zombie Apocalypse Run Oct. 13, the Turkey Trot Nov. 17 and the Jingle Bell Jog Dec. 8. There is an Awareness Run planned for some time in 2018, to be announced at a later date.

Antonowicz said it is important for JBLM Sports, Fitness and Aquatics to provide a wide variety of themed runs and different distances.

"It encourages people to get out there and be active," Antonowicz said. "I know a lot of people like our themed runs. The participation has been fairly consistent — around 500."

SNOWSHOE TRIP AT THE COMMONWEALTH BASIN

The Cascades in the winter is a snowshoeing paradise and none more so than Commonwealth Basin. The proliferation of snow keeps the trail ever-changing. Soft blankets smooth the landscape forming snow bridges over creeks, making stumps look like soft bumps in the landscape. Distance: 8 miles, roundtrip; elevation gain: 2,300 feet. Depart from McChord Field's Adventures Unlimited at 8 a.m. Register at JBLMmwrRegistration.com. $65.

CROSS-COUNTRY SKIING AT LAKE EASTON

Short trails, rolling hills, groomed trails and beautiful views make a great day of cross-country skiing at Lake Easton. Gear, transportation and instruction are provided. Participants must go to the Northwest Adventure Center to be fitted for gear no later than the day before trip. Meet at McChord Field's Adventures Unlimited at 8 a.m. Difficulty: moderate; distance: 5 miles; elevation gain: 50 feet; time: three hours. Minimum age: 12; children younger than 18 must be accompanied by an adult. Register at JBLMmwrRegistration.com. $65.

SNOWMOBILING TOUR ADVENTURE IN CLE ELUM

Take a snowmobile tour around Sasse Mountain in Cle Elum for fun, action, beauty and excitement. For those seeking the most fun-filled winter experience, check out this snowmobiling trip through the Cascade Mountains. Transportation, snowmobile, helmet, boots, gloves and snowsuit are provided. Dress in layers. Minimum age to drive: 16. Depart from Northwest Adventure Center at Lewis North at 7 a.m. Register at JBLMmwrRegistration.com. $185; $75 for ages 14 and younger.

INTRODUCTION TO BACKCOUNTRY SKIING

This class is for anyone who wants to take the plunge into the backcountry with their skills. An educational day will teach participants everything from how to set up a ski kit, how to engage the avalanche float bags and perfecting turns in deep powder. Get away from the lift lines and learn how to earn those turns anywhere the snow falls. Our expert guides will lead the outdoor adventure. Ground transportation, backcountry ski or split snowboard, avalanche beacon, shovel, probe and airbag included. Come get fitted for gear the week before the trip. Due to weather, location is subject to change for safety. Minimum age: 16; children younger than 18 must be accompanied by an adult. All participants must be intermediate skiers. Depart from McChord Field's Adventures Unlimited at 8 a.m. Register at JBLMmwrRegistration.com. $110.

SEATTLE NIGHT PHOTOGRAPHY TRIP

Just because the sun's gone down, it doesn't mean the day of photography has to end. Night photography is fast becoming one of the most popular forms of digital photography. Take a journey of Seattle after dark. Minimum age: 12; children younger than 18 must be accompanied by an adult. Depart from the Northwest Adventure Center at Lewis North at 3:30 p.m. or McChord Field's Adventures Unlimited at 3:45 p.m. Register at JBLMmwrRegistration.com. $65.

SNOWMOBILING, BACKCOUNTRY SKI

Take a snowmobile tour around Sasse Mountain in Cle Elum for fun, action, beauty and excitement. People who are looking for a fun-filled winter experience should check out this snowmobiling trip through the Cascade Mountains. Transportation, snowmobile, helmet, boots, gloves and snowsuit are provided. Dress in layers. Minimum age to drive: 16. Backcountry skiing/snowboarding refers to areas not covered by a resort or lifts including terrain reached by hiking, split-boarding, touring or sledding (snowmobile). The backcountry usually has the best snow because it's not easily accessible to others. Many of the best snowboard videos are filmed in the backcountry. Join the Northwest Adventure Center for a megafueled snowmobiling adventure where you can get dropped off at the top of a hill, shred it on skis or snowboard, then hop back on and do it all over again. Ground transportation, snowmobile, backcountry ski or split snowboard, avalanche beacon, shovel, probe and airbag included. Depart from the Northwest Adventure Center at Lewis North at 7 a.m. Register at JBLMmwrRegistration.com. Snowmobiling: $185; $75 for ages 14 and younger. Skiing: $165.

has offered the event, which involves baby shower games, educational and pampering products and informational booths, door prizes, refreshments and more.

In addition to the many activities of previous years, this year there will be a lactation consultant in attendance and 4-D ultrasound booth.

"There's a lot of really cool stuff this year," said Megan Braholli, recreation specialist in the Family and MWR special events office.

One booth alone will be giving out more than 100 gift bags, she said.

Guests will receive a passport page to get stamped at various booths at the event. When completed, the stamped passport is returned to the entrance booth for a chance to spin the wheel for one of several prizes.

JBLM's Child, Youth and School Services has joined with Family and MWR to host the

The event is primarily geared to new and expectant moms and their young children. All are welcome, but most child games and crafts will be geared to ages 4 and younger, Braholli said.

In addition to fun games and freebies, expect to learn some new tips for moms.

"It's a free event with no RSVP and lots of fun stuff," Braholli said. "If you're a new mom, expect to reap the benefits of new information and the many booths of stuff you may not already know."

BE PREPARED WITH WILDERNESS FIRST AID

The Wilderness First Aid course helps prepare outdoor enthusiasts for the unexpected. This fast-paced, hands-on training is designed to meet the needs of trip leaders, camp staff, outdoor enthusiasts and individuals working in remote locations. It will introduce students to caring for people who become ill or injured far from definitive medical care. Classroom lectures and demonstrations are combined with realistic scenarios where mock patients will challenge to integrate your learning. At the end of the course, students will have the knowledge, skills and ability to make sound decisions in emergency situations. All students are required to have current First Aid, CPR and AED training before WFA course date. This is available to every student the Friday night from 6 to 8 p.m. before your

MOUNTAIN BIKING INTRODUCTION TRIP

Experience the thrill of mountain biking. The guides will start by addressing proper bike fit and making any necessary adjustments to the bikes. Next, they'll demonstrate riding techniques, including body and pedal position, shifting, braking, climbing, descending and navigating minor obstacles on the trail. They'll also go over important communication skills and mountain biking trail etiquette with the aim of keeping multi-use trails open and safe for everyone. And finally, the guides will practice all these new skills on a great trail ride. Minimum age: 14; children younger than 18 must be accompanied by an adult. Depart from the Northwest Adventure Center at Lewis North at 8 a.m. Register at JBLMmwrRegistration.com. $35.

SNOWSHOE TRIP AT HURRICANE RIDGE

Hurricane Ridge in Olympic National Park is one of the most spectacular places to snowshoe in Washington. Enjoy stunning alpine views while trekking across ridge lines decorated with snow sculptures, constantly being reshaped by the legendary winds for which the area has earned its name. Distance: 6 miles, roundtrip; elevation gain: 800 feet. Minimum age: 12; children younger than 18 must be accompanied by an adult. Depart from the Northwest Adventure Center at Lewis North at 8 a.m. or McChord Field's Adventures Unlimited at 8:30 a.m. Due to winter conditions, location is subject to change for safety reasons. Register at JBLMmwrRegistration.com. $90.

SEMINAR FOR INTERNATIONAL TRIPS

Attend one of the monthly free seminars touching on a wide range of introductory topics. Learn a new skill, ask some questions or figure out how to use your gear in a few hours with our instructors. This class will go over the basics of planning your dream trip abroad. Work with a travel enthusiast and international guide to learn how to plan an incredible experience anywhere in the world, from choosing housing locations, finding volunteer opportunities, interacting with local people, getting the most from your trip and how to be the best traveler instead of tourist you can be. No equipment necessary. This class is held at McChord Field's Adventures Unlimited at 11 a.m. Register at JBLMmwrRegistration.com. Free.

FEBRUARY 3-4

CLASS ABOUT BASIC ALPINE CLIMBING

During this course, you'll receive hands-on climbing and climber's safety training in Washington's glorious Cascade Range. Unlike Rainier, the Cascades are part of a huge mountain range with scores of peaks topping 8,000 feet and upwards of 400 glaciers and countless permanent snowfields. This program is designed for the beginner or intermediate climber who wishes to develop strong fundamental skills in all aspects of snow and glacier climbing. It serves as a prerequisite for many of our basic-level climbs and is a stepping stone to more technically difficult mountains, including Denali.

This course has served as a springboard to many climbing careers, including numerous Rainier summiteers, and has developed a foundation of skills for hundreds of independent climbers. Taught over two weekends the first half is classroom based skill sessions. The following weekend is an overnight field skills practice on the slopes. Register at JBLMmwrRegistration.com. $125.
