Senior Leaders West Point graduation

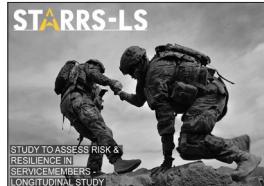

“Character, competence, courage and commitment is part of the sticker price of being an Army leader. If you take care of your Soldier(s), they will take care of you. If you lead, they will follow and together you will take the hill.”

– Gen. Joseph F. Dunford Jr.
Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff
May 26, 2018, West Point, N.Y.

On Point STARRS - Longitudinal Study

The Study to Assess Risk and Resilience in Servicemembers – Longitudinal Study (STARRS-LS) is a research project funded by the U.S. Department of Defense (DoD) to create actionable information on risk reduction and resilience-building for suicide, suicide-related behavior, and other mental/behavioral health issues in the military. It continues and expands the work begun by the Army STARRS project. STARRS-LS was established in July 2015, as a research partnership between DOD, the Department of the Army and the National Institute of Mental Health to follow the original Army STARRS participants for another five years.

CANTIGNY, France – Soldiers from the 1st Infantry Division were selected to attend the U.S. Army in World War I Centennial Commemoration in Cantigny, France, over the 2018 Memorial Day weekend.

The first ceremony held at Cantigny was a rededication of the 1st Inf. Div. monument designed to honor the nearly 1,000 Soldiers of the “Big Red One” who were casualties during the battle to liberate the village from German forces on May 28, 1918.

The monument was originally placed in a field on the outskirts of Cantigny, but was recently relocated to an area closer to the village center.

“You see our motto is that there's no mission too difficult and no sacrifice too great,” said Brig. Gen. Richard Coffman, 1st Inf. Div. deputy commanding general for maneuver, to the crowd gathered at the ceremony. “The mission was difficult – we made many, many sacrifices ... but, we know that freedom is not free and America was willing and always will be willing to support its great allies.”

Robert J. Smith, Fort Riley Museum Complex director and historian, along with other historians from the U.S. Army Center for Military History, led the Soldiers on a historic tour to the significant areas in Cantigny. This tour helped explain why the battle of Cantigny is such an important part of 1st Inf. Div. history.

“The battle of Cantigny was fought here over 100 years ago; it was an extremely significant battle for the United States Army,” Smith said. “It was the first significant action of American participation in World War I. The battle inflicted nearly 1,000 casualties for the 28th Infantry and the 1st Inf. Div.”
