Senior Leaders
'We are in this together'

"I know that we cannot win a war without the National Guard. Your success is our mission. We are in this together, and at First Army we are solely focused on helping you generate warfighters to ensure you complete your missions."

— Lt. Gen. Thomas James, Jr.
Commanding General, First Army
January 4, 2019, Little Rock, Ark.

On Point Stewardship of the Army Profession

Stewardship is the duty of all U.S. Army leaders who are entrusted by the American public to care for the people, resources and the Army Family. Stewardship ensures the Army remains a trusted military profession, both today and tomorrow. Strategic leaders have the special responsibility to reinforce the Army culture of trust. The Army Profession is one of the most trusted institutions in the country. Trust between the public and Army rests on the Army maintaining a culture informed by its' ethic and values. The Army Profession defines the essence of what it means to be a Soldier or Army Civilian.

Antiterrorism Awareness

Terrorism is an enduring, persistent, worldwide threat to the U.S. Army and the nation. Terrorist tactics evolve as adversaries seek to negate the Army's strengths. Raising antiterrorism awareness helps the Army to safeguard people, information and facilities.

FORSCOM units transfer authority in Iraq

The 1st Brigade Combat Team "Bastogne," 101st Airborne Division, from Fort Campbell, Kentucky, officially assumed the mission from the outgoing 3rd Cavalry Regiment "Brave Rifles" from Fort Hood, Texas, during a ceremony held January 23, 2019.

The transfer of authority was part of the regular rotation of forces that support the Combined Joint Task Force – Operation Inherent Resolve. Brave Rifles deployed from Fort Hood in April to locations across the CJTF-OIR area of operations to support the ongoing fight to accelerate the lasting defeat of ISIS.

"Thank you to our Iraqi partners for the honor to fight ISIS alongside you," said Col. Jonathan Byrom, 3rd Cav. Regt. commander. "It is our privilege to hand over responsibility to our brothers and sisters from Bastogne."

The Bastogne soldiers will work alongside coalition partners from 74 nations and 5 international organizations to support the Iraqi Security Forces as they continue the fight to defeat ISIS fighters in Iraq, provide security to the Iraqi people and set conditions for follow-on operations to increase long-term stability.

The Brave Rifles troopers leave after several months supporting Iraqi and partner force operations with intelligence support, joint fires, aerial surveillance and a multitude of training opportunities.

From remote firebases along the Syria border where Iraqi, French and U.S. artillery units fired side-by-side, to facilitating joint clearance operations for Iraqi and Kurdish forces hunting ISIS fighters in remote mountain locations, the Brave Rifles executed a variety of advise and assist mission.
