Installation ride share program kicks off on Stewart

Pat Young

Fort Stewart Public Affairs

Commentary

The installation's ride-share initiative, Commute with Enterprise, kicked-off Aug. 1.

I agreed to join the first group of employees to help pilot the program and share my experience with the larger Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield community.

The Fort Stewart program is part of the Department of Defense's ride sharing initiative, designed to help save money, reduce pollution, traffic congestion, and stress. The garrison kicked off an information campaign in May to determine if there was a local interest in the program and if it was viable. Was there enough people living in the same geographic area with similar work schedules?

While waiting for the results, I learned the effort was supported by the Mass Transit Benefit Program, www.whs.mil/Mass-Transportation-

Benefit-Program, which provides participants a transit pass that generally equates to each individual's transit cost – up to approximately $265 each. While the program doesn't put any extra dollars in your pocket, it does save wear on your engine and reduce the amount you spend on gas. How it works, is the pass funds are pooled through the Commute with Enterprise program that go toward the costs of the shared-ride.

The first ride share was organized by Windrick Smith, a logician at Winn Army Community Hospital. I joined Smith's group from the Richmond Hill area, who share a Commute Enterprise seven-passenger van. Smith said he and his wife, Marie – who are both retired military service members working as civilians at Winn have seen ride share programs offered at other installations, and are happy to see it available on Fort Stewart.

Claudia O'Meara, one of the Winn ride-share commuters agrees.

"It helps reduce traffic and reduces our carbon footprint," O'Meara said. "Besides, it's nice not having to drive all the time."

Individuals wishing be drivers in the car pool, have to apply. The more drivers more you can share the responsibility and prepare for those times when someone goes on leave. Members of the pool determine driving schedules, pick-up locations, and similar variables. But the more people who participate, the more options individuals will have. While I live across town from most of the Winn ACH commuters, a retired first sergeant I know, who runs an auto-repair business on Highway 17, allows me to park at his business. Parking fees are not covered by the program.

DoD employees who are interested in the program can learn more at the MTBP website, Commute with Enterprise at www.commutewithenterprise.com, or contacting the Dr. Robin Ellert, Fort Stewart Workforce Training and Development Specialist at robin.k.ellert.civ@mail.mil.

HAAF NCO earns Sergeant Audie Murphy Award

Spc. Noelle E. Wiehe
50th Public Affairs Detachment

A Marne Soldier earned the Sergeant Audie Murphy Award July 31, on Fort Stewart, following a two-day series of evaluative events to compete for the distinction.

Staff Sgt. Davion Taylor, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 3rd Aviation Regiment, 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade, was among six noncommissioned officers of the 3rd Infantry Division to compete for the award and induction into the Marne Chapter of the Sergeant Audie Murphy Association.

"I've always wanted to go out for the Sergeant Audie Murphy Award," Taylor said. "It is a really big accomplishment for me."

Taylor said one of his peers at his previous unit in Fort Drum, New York, sparked his interest in seeking the award.

Master Sgt. Bret Anderson, president of the Marne Chapter of the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club, said award recipients are considered to be among the top 10-percent of the NCO Corps in the Army and held to such standard for as long as they continue to hold the award.

Taylor said now it is his responsibility to keep the award through upholding the values and leadership a recipient is expected to exemplify as an inductee of the SAMA.

Awardees are required to achieve expert in marksmanship; score a 270 or above on the Army Physical Fitness Test, hold excellent NCO Evaluation Reports throughout their career and have outstanding experience in relation to their peers. They are awarded following a four-level determination consisting of nomination, performance testing, an initial brigade-level selection board and a division-level selection board.

"You can't get the award over a single event, you have to get it over a career of being a good NCO," Anderson said. "Everyone tends to look at the Sergeant Audie Murphy society as those you can go to for the hard answers."

The SAMA was named after the most decorated World War II combat Soldier, Medal of Honor recipient Audie L. Murphy. The Sergeant Audie Murphy Club was established in 1986 at Fort Hood, Texas, and became Army wide in 1994.

"We might never have a Soldier that highly decorated again," Anderson said. "In his memory, we are trying to find the NCOs out there who truly are among the best."

According to Anderson, "the best," is defined in each rank and each career field.

"Every NCO has a character and a personality they can put forth to help improve their units," Anderson said.

According to Anderson, the association is a private organization comprised of NCOs who have established themselves as the most competent, skilled and knowledgeable leaders the Army has to offer. Members must exemplify empathy and genuine concern for the Soldiers and Family Members within their ranks.

Additionally, the club is comprised of awardees and non-awardees looking to better themselves, help their communities and learn more about Sergeant Audie Murphy.

Anderson said Murphy's namesake is especially noteworthy considering he began his Army career in none other than the 3rd ID.

"If you're going to induct into the prestigious club, it might as well be in 3rd ID where Sgt. Audie Murphy was assigned," Anderson said.

Taylor is the first recipient of the award under the 3rd ID Command Sgt. Maj. Michael Coffey's command at Fort Stewart.

Coffey explained to Taylor that competing for the award showed true character.

"Your very presence here speaks volumes to you as a person, to you as an NCO and to your unit," Coffey said. "Regardless of the results, it speaks volumes about your willingness to be here and the preparation that goes into coming here."

Education benefits transferability change

All actively serving members of the armed forces who have 16 or more years of service will no longer be able to transfer their Post-9/11 GI Bill benefits to their dependents. This new restriction was put in place per change 1 to DoDI 1341.13, Post-9/11 GI Bill, dated Friday. As a result of this change, ARNG Soldiers are highly encouraged to transfer their Post-9/11 GI Bill benefits as soon as they become eligible (not flagged, have six or more years of service, and at least one eligible dependent in DEERS) to avoid missing out on this extremely generous family benefit. To transfer your benefits go to: <https://www.dmdc.osd.mil/milconnect> or <https://www.milsuite.mil/book/docs/DOC-634821>. The Office of the Undersecretary of Defense has issued an extension to the deadline date on the limits of transferability of education benefits for Service members with greater than 16 years of service. The new deadline is Jan. 12.

Survivor's digital double helps train SARCS, victim advocates at SHARP academy

Joe Lacdan
Army News Service

PLAYA VISTA, California -- In a small classroom at Fort Riley, Kansas, a sexual assault victim shares intimate details about his experience being sexually assaulted during a 2010 deployment to Iraq.

Sitting in a red chair in his Army combat uniform, the victim, Jarett Wright, answers questions from students at the Sexual Harassment/Assault Response and Prevention Academy.

Wright actually has already left the Army and isn't really in the classroom. The students are interacting with a digital avatar of the Soldier on a vertical LCD monitor, listening in hushed silence as he talks about the assault he suffered at the hands of his unit members as part of a violent hazing initiation into the unit.

Then a young private first class, Wright suffered physical injuries and depression from the assaults, which included rape and humiliation tactics.

"I felt like I was nothing," Wright said. "I didn't even know how to go about talking to someone about this, because I'm just a lowly Pfc (private 1st class). No one's going to listen to me."

The Digital Survivor of Sexual Assault, or DS2A, prototype developed at the University of Southern California's Institute for Creative Technologies, has helped students empathize with the victim, which

Army leaders hope builds better sexual assault response coordinators and victim advocates.

The program gives the Army another tool in its objective to eradicate sexual assault and harassment within its ranks. DS2A helps students gain an understanding of how sexual harassment and sexual assault can negatively impact readiness in military units.

"The idea is to get people more familiar with the situation," said Ron Artstein, research scientist at the ICT. "Get them to also not just be aware and know, but also feel for them -- feel empathy (and) connect."

Through a partnership with the Army Research Lab and the SHARP Academy, ICT researchers developed the immersive interactive training, which takes place during the final block of the seven-week SARC/victim advocate course before students graduate.

The interactive program can put new students at ease when interviewing victims, Artstein said.

"It lets people open up," Artstein said. "When somebody is talking to (the survivor's avatar) you don't feel judged, you feel a little bit less embarrassed, a little bit less uncomfortable."

Accessibility to a victim gives the program added dimension. Although the victim, a former Army specialist, does not often speak publicly about the assault, the students can talk to him anytime with the flick of a mouse.

Artstein said researchers have not yet programmed the prototype for mass dissemination and it remains strictly formatted for training purposes only. But eventually the researchers would like to make a digital survivor program that addresses other effects of sexual assault, including suicidal thoughts. The research scientist said during a feedback session, a Soldier once asked multiple questions regarding suicide. ICT members later learned that the Soldier had multiple friends who had expressed desires to commit suicide.

Fort Stewart AAFES

Online shopping is more convenient than ever for Fort Stewart-Hunter Soldiers and their Families with the Army & Air Force Exchange Service's expanded buy online, pickup in-store service.

Military shoppers can buy items at ShopMyExchange.com and pick them up at the installation Exchanges. The Exchange has expanded the selection of eligible merchandise since the Department of Defense's largest retailer rolled out the service at Fort Stewart in May—95% of the online assortment can now be picked up in stores, up from about 10% at launch.

"The Fort Stewart-Hunter Exchange wants to make the shopping experience as easy as possible for Soldiers and their Families," said Exchange General Manager Hollie N. Morales. "Customers can purchase what they need before they head to the store and associates will do the shopping for them. In some cases, shoppers can even pick up their items on the same day as ordered."

Shoppers are notified by email or text when their order is ready, and in-store signing indicates where customers can pick up their items.

ShopMyExchange.com offers more than two million items and military-exclusive pricing—tax free. Additionally, 100% of Exchange earnings, including those from online purchases, support warfighters and their Families through military quality-of-life programs and improvements to the Exchange shopping experience.

Can Do Battalion focuses on leadership

Dogface Soldiers enter beast mode

Master Sgt. Shelia L. Cooper
3rd ID Public Affairs

Soldiers from across the 3rd Infantry Division competed in the Beast Mode Competition July 30 – Aug. 1, on Fort Stewart.

The competition, hosted by the 3rd Infantry Division Artillery, was established to determine the fittest Soldier in the Marne Division and to foster esprit de corps through friendly competition.

“This is a great way to bring everyone together and boost morale and motivate the Soldiers,” said Command Sgt. Major James M. McGuffey, the command sergeant major of DIVARTY. “It also allows the leadership across these organizations to see their Soldiers compete.”

The competition consisted of more than 10 rigorous events. On Day 1, the competitors conducted two minutes each of push-ups, sit-ups, and pull-up, as well as a 3-mile run, all in the Operation Camouflage Pattern Uniform, minus the patrol cap.

“Day 1 was the most difficult because I didn’t know what to expect,” said Sgt. 1st Class Qualeem J. Green, forward observer, DIVARTY.

Day 2 of the event kicked off with a 3-mile run, followed by a 2-mile, 40-pound ruck march, and concluded with an addition 1-mile run. As sweat dripped from their faces and uniform, these Soldiers truly pushed their bodies to physical exertion.

“I went into this with the mindset that we all have different abilities and I felt that I would have been just as accomplished if I did a lot better than what I felt I would do,” said Sgt. Imanic Mccoy, administrative assistant, DIVARTY.

By Day 3, the Soldiers were truly exhausted from the two prior days of rigorous physical fitness events.

Green jokingly stated that after the run, ruck, and run on Day 2 that he didn’t have legs.

Day 3 was no easy feat. The competitors conducted two minutes of the water can carry, pull-ups, tire flip, burpees, and a rope climb.

“I looked forward to Day 3, because there are about 10 guys that are bigger than me out here,” said Green. “It is really fun to compete with bigger people. They showed up and did their best and I showed up and did my best. I came out here and gave it my all.”

Green stated that the hardest events were on the last day due to all of the upper body obstacles.

“The rope climb was a smoker then we changed stations which added onto the fatigue,” said Green.

These competitors from all backgrounds and units, came out to see who the fittest Soldier in the Marne Division was, as well as to challenge themselves in physical fitness.

McGuffey stated that the goal is for DIVARTY to host this competition monthly during physical fitness hours and that the competition is open to all Soldiers.

The Soldier who wins the competition will earn the title “Beast Mode”.

Marne Bistro goes for the Connelly culinary competition

Sgt. Laurissa Hodges
3rd Sustainment Brigade Public Affairs

Culinary specialist at Marne Bistro dining facility were evaluated Aug. 2, on Fort Stewart, for a chance to represent the XVIII Airborne Corps at the Phillip A. Connelly competition.

The Marne Bistro Soldiers will compete against other XVIII Abn. Corps units, including 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) and 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 82nd Abn. Div. to represent the XVIII Abn. Corps at the Department of the Army level.

“The Connelly is a prestigious award that helps promote professionalism,” said Chief Warrant Officer 3 Dan Barker with the 406th Army Field Support Battalion and responsible for inspecting the potential competitors.

The Phillip A. Connelly Program, aligned with the National Restaurant Association, is a competition between culinary specialists to display excellence in food service.

“We try to find ways to compete with outside forces,” said Sergeant 1st. Class Anthony P. Brooks, senior culinary management non-commissioned officer, with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Special Troops Battalion, 3IDSB. “With this competition team, it highlights the whole command team on the great things that the food service industry is doing.”

According to Joint Culinary Center of Excellence the Connelly Competition between culinary teams results in the presentation of a gratifying dining experience across all Army food service platforms in garrison and field.

“We are competing against all the DFACs in the Army,” said Spc. Oscar Ayala, culinary art specialist, with 1st Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd ID. “We’re getting graded on sanitation, how we make the food, the presentation, and how the food tastes.”

Shift leaders prepare culinary specialist for the Connelly months in advance by putting together a team and then providing professional culinary training to provide eye-appealing, tasty and nutritional meals.

“My job is to supervise,” said Staff Sgt. Sharon Mathis,

Marne Bistro dining facility manager, with 287th Field Feeding Company, STB. “I make sure that my shift leaders are training the Soldiers to be properly prepared for the competition.”

Food service regulations are used for daily DFAC operations as well as training for the Connelly. The difference between the two are the advance level skills performed and intensity of being inspected.

“It’s not really any different from what we do on a daily basis,” said Brooks. “The only difference is the emphasis of being inspected and evaluated on doing everything according to food service regulation.

One objective for the Connelly is to improve the professionalism of food service personnel, thus providing the best quality food service to the supported diners.

“The Soldiers that come in Marne Bistro should know when we are being inspected that we are expected to put out a nice quality meal with a good atmosphere and good environment for Soldiers to eat from,” said Brooks.

Excelling in the competition means a lot to the Soldiers that train and participate.

“If we win, it just feels good to know that we were the best in the whole Army,” said Ayala.

Sharing thoughts regarding tradition

Maj. John D. Hubbs
FSGA Operations Chaplain

This Friday marks the 31st anniversary of a truly momentous occasion in baseball history.

On Aug. 9, 1988, the Cubs were winners in the first ever night game played at Wrigley Field.

The oldest park in the National League, Wrigley was synonymous with day baseball for decades. Gradually, however, the economics of modern sports brought the Cubs under pressure to conform to the new standard of playing under the lights. In fact, to make sure that revenue was not lost in the event of the Cubs making the playoffs, MLB executives even discussed the possibility of forcing the Cubs to play "home" playoff games at Busch Stadium in St. Louis. Perhaps to ensure that a baseball sacrilege like that never occurred, Wrigley Field was artificially illuminated thirty-one years ago this week.

G.K. Chesterton once wrote, "Tradition means giving votes to the most obscure of all classes, our ancestors. It is the democracy of the dead. Tradition refuses to submit to the small and arrogant oligarchy of those who merely happen to be walking about."

Tradition and traditional are often words that we associate with outdated or even boring. While Chesterton might deem the cause for this as arrogance, I think it is just as often ignorance. For instance, even if a conversation between two people were on a topic of great interest to me, I would find it quite boring if they spoke in a language other than English. In my early adult years I found a similar principle to be true in the realm of music. Before I met and married a classical musician, I found orchestral music uninteresting. Eventually; however, I realized the problem was not that Mozart had produced a lower quality of music than REO Speedwagon, but that I possessed a level of understanding only capable of appreciating the latter.

I know that many people at my age succumb to the nostalgic myopia of how good things were "back in the day", but I am convinced that the tendency for people to prefer the new is often a case of ignorance regarding the things they are casting aside. I often hear modern church goers speak in disparaging terms about those styles of worship which emphasize rituals. How boring to do so many of the same things week after week. But, they are only boring because they are not understood well enough to be valued. When not deployed, I have kissed my wife every day for 33 years.

It is a ritual which signifies our love and commitment to each other. Liturgical acts point to a far greater love still. But just as a beginning reader will prefer Dr. Seuss over Dostoevsky, an unformed worshipper will prefer praising God from the shallow end of the pool. Depth has been sacrificed to accommodate the taste for something new and more easily understood.

It is, of course, always necessary to change some things. Even in the Army, uniforms, fitness tests, and regulations are different than they were decades ago. But we will never stop standing at attention for the anthem, saluting the flag, or passing a guidon from one commander to the next. All of these actions have meaning and connect us to our heritage.

In other words, they all speak to the importance of tradition. Fortunately, the local community of Wrigleyville also understood this principle and demanded assurances the number of night games would be limited and the tradition of day baseball continued during the regular season.

I guess even Cub fans can be smart when it comes to a few things.

Language understanding technology allows users to ask dozens of variations of questions. The training can be used to train individual academy students or be used in a group setting.

Wright spent two weeks at the ICT's Playa Vista campus in January 2017 and returned for a three-day recording session in May 2017, voicing a total of 1,926 responses to possible user questions. ICT researchers filmed Wright's answers during lengthy interviews before 52 cameras inside the ICT's light stage.

The system internally ranks the best responses based on an ideal response model and programs the digital depiction to respond with the highest-ranked answer.

Researchers used a similar model to the one used for the New Dimensions in Testimony project, which documented testimonies of some of the last living survivors of the Holocaust. The Holocaust project shares historical stories with the public, but researchers created the DS2A project solely for training purposes. The goal is to engage Soldiers and Army civilians in an immersive and interactive conversation.

"When people are in a small group talking to the system, they're engaged. They're interested," Artstein said. "They want to learn more."

The researchers have based success and the overall effectiveness of the project on positive feedback from users and their tendency to ask probing questions. SHARP instructors have found the program so effective that it has been used as a capstone block of the course.

Eventually, Artstein said, the programmers hope to create digital testimony from a female survivor, but said there are no current plans to do so.

A Bradley Fighting Vehicle is displayed in the Changing World gallery of the National Museum of the U.S. Army, July 25. The gallery is dedicated to campaigns in Southwest Asia. The one pictured is more than 27 tons, was the lead vehicle in the charge from Kuwait to Baghdad in 2003 and was a critical part of the battle that opened the door to the capture of Baghdad, a city of over five million, with just under one thousand troops. It was assigned to Troop A, 3rd Squadron, 7th Cavalry Regiment. Construction of the museum is ongoing, and doors are scheduled to open to the public in 2020.

National Army museum takes shape before 2020 opening

FORT BELVOIR, Virginia -- With doors expected to open next year, the National Museum of the United States Army is quickly coming to life.

Located on an 84-acre hilltop site at Fort Belvoir, just south of the nation's capital, the 185,000-square-foot gleaming, stainless-steel structure will offer free admission to the public and give a comprehensive look at more than 240 years of Army history and traditions.

The museum's goal is "telling the Army's story to an estimated 750,000 visitors every year," said Tammy E. Call, museum director, and "creating new opportunities for the public to connect with the American Soldier."

The museum is also dedicated to "remembering and honoring their legacies," Call said, of Soldiers and veterans.

"This will be America's Army museum," she added, "telling the Soldier's story 364 days a year."

The museum will immerse visitors into "what it means to be a Soldier" in times of war and peace throughout American history.

The primary galleries are titled, Soldiers' Stories Gallery, Army and Society Gallery, and Fighting for the Nation Galleries. Each gallery will have artifacts, films, documents, and lifelike Soldier figures.

Visitors will learn about Army history through Soldier stories from America's colonial beginning, and lead through the generations of service to the ground force it is today.

The first four macro artifacts -- a FT-17 tank, a Sherman tank, a Higgins boat used during the D-Day invasion, and a Bradley Fighting Vehicle -- were installed in August 2017, before the building's walls were built. Since then, a Sikorsky R-4B helicopter and a UH-1B Huey helicopter were installed in February 2019.

The macros were all used in battle, and are chronologically placed to visually tell the Army's history, through every major conflict.

The museum will also include the Experiential Learning Center, or ELC, a Medal of Honor Experience and a rotating exhibit gallery. Future exterior elements include a memorial garden, army trail, and outdoor event space, according to a museum official.

The ELC will provide hands-on learning activities in geography, science, technology, engineering, and math, or G-STEM, which visitors can apply to a simulated Army humanitarian mission, said museum public affairs assistant, Kate Wacker.

"It's something for all ages to enjoy," she added.

The design of the museum evokes the principles of the Army: it is disciplined, modest, and rigorous, according to the project description, adding the simplicity and sharpness of the walls and huge windows allow reflections to be cast on the facade, transforming the character of the building through every season and time of day.

The museum is scheduled to open in 2020. The museum is also recruiting volunteers now to be trained and ready before the first visitors arrive. For more information, call 1-800-506-2672.

The National Museum of the U.S. Army is scheduled to open in 2020. Through a joint effort with the Army Historical Foundation and the U.S. Army, the museum is being constructed at Fort Belvoir, Va., and is 20 miles south of Washington, D.C. According to the project design, the museum "evokes the principles of the Army: it is disciplined, modest, and rigorous." The Army will own and operate the museum which will be open 364 days a year with free admission.

3rd ID celebrates strength at power-lifting event

Above, Crystal Bradley, 29, performs a dead-lift of 315 pounds at the power lifting competition on Fort Stewart, July 27. Bradley went on to complete all three attempts at the dead-lift, setting a personal best record of 365 pounds. The Power Lifting competition brought together Soldiers and military Families from across the Division to celebrate strength and support one another as many achieved new personal records.

Sgt. Julian Gaitor from 6th Squadron, 8th Calvary Regiment, 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, prepares to perform a dead-lift at the power lifting competition on Fort Stewart, July 27. Gaitor successfully lifted 365 pounds.

Sylvia Vasquez, 41, squats 265 pounds during the power lifting competition at Johnson Fitness Center on Fort Stewart, July 27. Vasquez competed in the 90kg weight class and had a successful second attempt for the squat.
