LITTLE KNOWN FACT:

I enjoy long walks on the beach. Really, I enjoy finishing tasks whether I'm at work or at home.

WHEN DID YOU GO TO BMT?

I left for basic training May 3, 2011.

WHAT IS YOUR CIVILIAN JOB?

I am an auditor and internal investigator for the State of Oklahoma.

CAREER GOAL?

My goal is to grow up and become an officer one day. Throughout my career, I strive to treat others the way I want to be treated; something my mom always instilled in me.

WHAT DID YOU WANT TO BE WHEN YOU GREW UP?

After watching the movie Home Alone, I decided I wanted to be an actress. I also had a dream of playing sports professionally since I enjoyed most sports as a kid.

WHAT IS THE BEST PART ABOUT YOUR JOB?

I enjoy teaching new members the basics and the overall picture of what they can accomplish in the Air Force Reserve.

STORY AND PHOTOS BY MAJ. JON QUINLAN

This year marks the 14th anniversary of the 9/11 attacks, and firefighters from the 507th Civil Engineer Squadron honored the occasion with their 6th annual fire climb Sept. 12 to remember the victims and heroes who perished that day.

Several members donned firefighter gear and traded packs of equipment as they climbed up and down the fire-training tower at the end of Reserve Road. They carried hatchets, oxygen tanks, fire hoses and the U.S. flag. Emergency medical technicians kept time to ensure the firefighters participating could complete the 18 laps within 56 minutes, the amount of time it took the South Tower of the World Trade Center to collapse after it was struck by an airliner.

The fire climb is a way to pay proper respect to the heroes of the day and the victims. Not only was there silence, prayer and reflection but each member was able to get a glimpse of what it was like on that day to climb those stairs and attempt to get help to those that need it. Expect the event to continue for years to come in the 507th Air Refueling Wing, according to event planners.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

By Ch (Capt.) Keith Rogers

1 Corinthians 9:24-25

24 Do you not know that in a race all the runners run, but only one gets the prize? Run in such a way as to get the prize. 25 Everyone who competes in the games goes into strict training. They do it to get a crown that will not last, but we do it to get a crown that will last forever.

As football season begins in Oklahoma, the heat and the smell of freshly-cut grass brings back memories of high school football practice. Getting ready for the first game each year was a punishing experience; the coach blasted his whistle compelling us to sprint, and chanted, "Fourth quarter, don't quit!"

Practice paid off on game day, because victory was achieved by the team that practiced with more discipline and intensity.

Our great effort was all for a temporary reward. As a football team, we loved to win; we even made it to the semifinals. Once that glorious season ended, we began preparing for a new season once again.

For the Christian, the scriptures teach us that we run a race to win a crown that lasts forever. In life, it's not easy to always do the right thing or go the extra mile for someone. How often do we go through the motions without making any real effort to help others or better ourselves? If one professes to be a Christian, then the goal should be to bring glory to God in each area of life.

Look at your life. Are you striving to do your best by taking care of yourself and those around you? Or, are you merely going through the motions?

Make a change. Run the race in a way that will glorify God, because that type of victory will last longer than a football season.

YELLOW RIBBON SECURITY TEAM:

Ensuring attendees and their families stay safe

As a stream of visitors walks across brightly colored carpet in an immense hotel in Orlando, Florida, a man in a suit directs them to a registration table. He does this for scores of people over a 3-hour period at the start of an Air Force Reserve Yellow Reintegration Program training event.

demeanor he and other security team members strive to project at each Yellow Ribbon training weekend. “We want people to know we’re here and that their loved ones are protected.”

Hamlor works multiple conferences per year in addition to serving as a security forces action officer with the 459th Security Forces Squadron at Joint Base Andrews in Maryland. He has provided security at Yellow Ribbon events since 2010.

More than 900 people – Reservists and those closest to them -- attended this event Sept. 25-27 in Florida. Yellow Ribbon promotes the well-being of Reservists and their families by connecting them with resources before and after deployments.

“The primary purpose of the security detail is to ensure the safety of children in the childcare area,” he said. “We want parents to know that, although the childcare process is unfamiliar, it’s very secure.”

The safety of the participants is of paramount importance to the 8-person security detail at this event and allows the attendees to focus on receiving information from the resource providers there.

“This is my first Yellow Ribbon event, and it’s funny that the first one I attend it’s through a security detail,” said Tech. Sgt. Hector Flores of the 507th Security Forces Squadron.

It’s that time of year again, as training camps begin around the National Basketball Association.

Among those teams tipping off camp this week is the Oklahoma City Thunder, and the Thunder come into this season with high hopes of bringing the city their first professional sports championship.

New head coach Billy Donovan comes to the team from the University of Florida, where he won two national championships. Donovan replaces Scott Brooks, who led the team to the NBA Finals in 2012. The Thunder have not been back since, and Donovan will be looked upon to help the team take that final step.

Health will be another factor, as the Thunder will get small forward Kevin Durant back from a foot injury that sidelined him for most of last season.

Durant, combined with point guard Russell Westbrook, form one of the most devastating duos in the league. Power forward Serge Ibaka also comes back from a knee injury that took him out for last season’s final month.

There is a lot of excitement surrounding the Thunder, but with that excitement comes desperation and angst among the locals.

Durant, Westbrook and Ibaka have been together for seven years, and the window to get a championship is getting closer to being shut by the day.

The rumor mill also has the city worried because there is a chance Durant leaves the team after this season. The 2013-’14 league’s most valuable player is in the final year of his contract and can become an unrestricted free agent after this summer.

While staying in Oklahoma City is seen as the most likely choice, the Washington Wizards and Los Angeles Lakers have been thrown around as a potential landing spot for Durant. Fueling the speculation is the fact Durant is from the Washington, D.C. area.

The closing window, combined with the possibility of Durant leaving, makes this season maybe the most important for the Thunder since the franchise moved in from Seattle before the 2008-09 campaign.

The talent is in place for a deep run. They have a new coach that knows a little bit about winning championships. For those reasons, among others, now is the time for the Thunder to roll towards that elusive title. It won’t be easy having to go through the NBA’s Western Conference, but Oklahoma City has all the ingredients to get there.

He is climbing a white metal structure, likely a fire training tower. In the background, there are trees and a small building under a clear blue sky. Another firefighter in similar gear is partially visible in the lower right corner.
