BEHIND the FENCE

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. - Whether times from watching movies depict the fighting of Hue City during the Vietnam War or recent CNN coverage of the ongoing conflict in the Balkans, many people think of Marines in battle, in urban environments are filling their imaginations more and more.

Despite the "urban uproar" that is an integral part of today's military training, the citizens of Jacksonville, Fla., were very surprised to see the 26th Marine Expeditionary Unit's Maritime Special Purpose Force "take" a large building in the downtown area.

The "take down" was the culmination of a pre-deployment work-up exercise called Training in an Urban Environment Exercise held recently.

It was the perfect way to finish up training here," said Cpl. Rene Pulco, 26th MEU unit diary chief. "If you couldn't make it down, it was well televised."

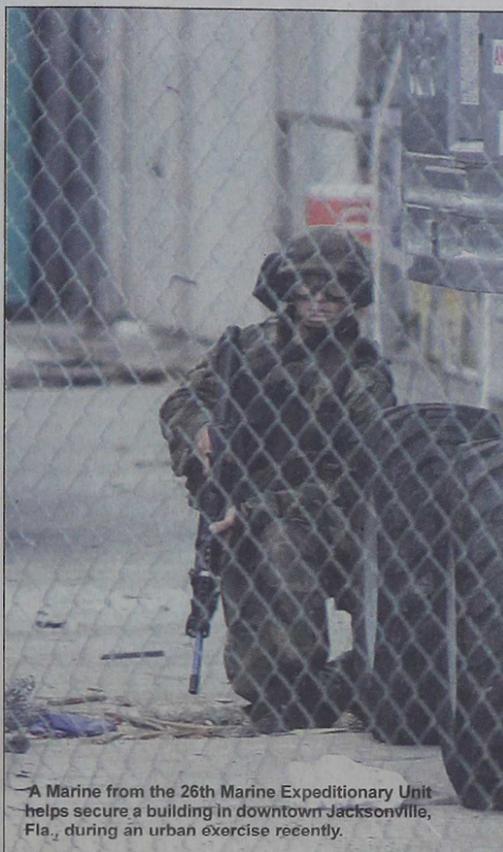

Aside from the "show" that went on, Marines were training behind the scenes; and not just the Marines that were fast-roping onto roofs and clearing buildings, according to Col. Andrew P. Frick, 26th MEU commanding officer.

While TRUEX is very important for the staff, its greatest value is to the staff," said Frick.

It focuses the staff on R2P2 (Rapid Response Planning Process) and allows staff to hone their skills that can be used to a wide variety of missions." The R2P2 processes are the steps the Marine Corps uses to plan a mission. The process is set up to take approximately six hours from the receiving of warning order, which would put the staff in session, to the launching of the Marines from the deck of the ship to execute the mission.

"I believe that our skills at this point are more developed than any units have been," said Lance Cpl. T. Jones, 26th MEU guard force. "Although, said Jones, he didn't know

Battle Course ready for action

Cpl. Valerie A. Martinez
Marine Combat Correspondent

The East Coast's first company-sized live-fire range was unveiled during a groundbreaking ceremony at Range G-6 here June 25.

Constructed by members of 2d Combat Engineer Support Battalion, 2d Marine Division, and the 74th Naval Mobile Construction Battalion of Gulfport, Miss., the Company Battle Course will allow infantrymen to practice ground maneuvers with direct live-fire supporting arms.

"This is a great day. We're building a great range here, a range we've needed since the base opened," said guest speaker Maj. Gen. Robert R. Blackman Jr., the 2d Marine Division's commanding general at the time of the event.

What this range brings, said Maj. Robert S. West, "is a capability for the first time for a company to come out and exercise and practice maneuver. This is a great step forward for 2d Marine Division."

In order for Marines to be able to practice maneuvers of this scale before this range was built, they had to travel to Twentynine Palms, Calif., for a Combined Arms Exercise, said Col. John C. Coleman, commanding officer of 6th Marine Regiment. "There was not an alternative on the East Coast for company-sized training. This will replace that condition."

The Warner Robbins, Ga. native added, "Although there were other ranges that supported up to platoon-sized level training, now we can maneuver multiple platoons while conducting live air-delivered and surface-delivered fire."

infantrymen to practice maneuvers with many of their organic weapons systems.

"They will be able to practice maneuver with many of the direct-fire supporting arms, such as the .50-caliber and 7.62 mm machine guns, and the full spectrum of indirect-fire supporting arms, such as 60 and 81 mm mortars, artillery, and fixed and rotary wing close-air support," said West, training officer for 2d Marine Division. "The more practice we get, the more we will have our Marines come back in one piece."

"When you are building a range, you are doing great things for Marines, for readiness. Their efforts will save Marines lives someday. It may be 20 years from now, but it will save lives," said Blackman.

"Although there were other ranges that supported up to platoon-sized level training, now we can maneuver multiple platoons while conducting live air-delivered and surface-delivered fire."

Recon re-supply

the ramp and on target, attachment has food and more

Sgt. Mike Dougherty
Marine Combat Correspondent

Members of 24th MEU (SOC)'s Force Reconnaissance Detachment deployed critical supplies from thin air during Albanian Phiblex.

Sgt. Paul Moose, Force Recon operations chief, arranged for an aerial re-supply of MREs for a platoon hunkered down in steep slopes of Albania. Such re-supply operations are common in much smaller packages, was no small effort, said Moose.

"I normally drop supplies down to a platoon," he said. "This time we dropped a pallette of a whole platoon," he said. The pallette weighed more than 330 pounds and the entire ramp of the HMM-266's CH-53 Stallion.

Supplies could not be trucked in to the platoon some 100 miles inland - not of the cratered landscape, but because the operation was conducted using air transport only. Ship-to-shore surface transport was possible due to navigational constraints.

Fortunately for the recon Marines on both ends of the transaction, conditions couldn't have been more favorable for the night drop. With a full moon and 100-percent night visibility, Moose had no problem spotting the platoon's beacon, even as the aircraft streaked overhead at 90 knots.

The only real concern, explained Moose, was the condition of the package upon landing. The chute opened swiftly and the pallette landed intact within 100 feet of the platoon's position, he said. The success of this operation extended the "legs" of the recon element for future operations.

Gunnery Sgt. Mike Dougherty

Members of 24 MEU's recon element push the pallette over the edge to its final destination. The chute opened successfully and the package arrived intact within 100 feet of its target.

No break from risk in military service

Editor's note: The following editorial was published in the July 14 "Opinion" section of Jacksonville's Daily News after the recent Marine Corps helicopter crash here. While these words reflect the opinion of our civilian counterparts, they speak volumes on the inherent daily risks our Eastern Carolina Marines and Sailors undertake during training and serve as a reminder of our community's commitment to the Corps. Reprinted with permission.

Another terrible crash. Another comforting memorial service.

And another reminder of a grim fact of military life: The business of war often spills over into everyday life.

Tragically that's what happened this week when a CH-46 Sea Knight crashed in the New River during a night training exercise. Three crewmembers lost their lives, and the pilot and co-pilot were both injured.

Because Marines train as hard as they fight, training accidents are inevitable.

It's easy to believe the dedicated men and women who wear the uniforms of the U.S. Armed Forces are only at risk when they are actively defending this country and its interests. Clearly, that's not the case. Today's military needs are much more complex and the training is exceedingly more dangerous than ever. That's the nature of the job.

Marines not only work hard during times of conflict and deployment, they also work hard at being the best in their profession. To accomplish this, they must train constantly and realistically.

TRICARE Online

Tricare Online, a new healthcare information service for its beneficiaries, is now available according to the Division Surgeon Office.

Visit www.tricareonline.com and receive the latest information on issues like 'Food and Nutrition' and 'Alternative Medicine.' Also, the 'Health Calculator' can tell you whether you're a 'pear or an apple' (waist-to-hip ratio) and how many calories were burned during P.T. this morning.

Improving Safety

A "Safety (Ground) Culture Workshop" was held at the II MEF building Tuesday. Directed by the Commandant of the Marine Corps, the two-hour workshop included informal conversations between field grade officers and contracted safety officials to develop and understand the scope of II MEF operations, said Joyce C. Haas, II MEF's Safety Officer, also in attendance.

A two-day follow-on development meeting is scheduled for July 23 and 24.

LT. CMDR. JOHN SHALHOUB

Salute Our Nation

by Lt. Cmdr. John Shalhoub

We, the people, are proud of our nation.

We, with the beat of the drums, the rumble of guns, and the music of hymns, salute our colors.

We rise with the sun, toil the land, and sweat in the mines.

Our ships sail the seas, our soldiers keep the peace, and our citizens preach brotherhood.

Year after year, we get stronger, bolder and better. We safeguard the freedom of expression.

We are always ready and prepared, to repel the attacks of all the enemies.

Our freedom is sacred in this beloved land.

Our security and peace are where we always take a stand.

Wherever our soldiers dig in at foothills, stand on mountain tops, or fold the plains under their feet, they ring the bells of liberty, justice and brotherhood in the four corners of the earth.

We preach tolerance, live in freedom, and fight with courage. We are the students of history.

We accept responsibility, silence hostility and encourage harmony among all the peoples.

We are masters of the seas, lords of the mountains, and hawks of the skies.

The seas know our gallantry, the hills our bravery, and the skies our victories. Salute our nation!

Thanks from the Chief

Anita and I are very thankful for your prayers, thoughts, personal notes and the beautiful flowers during a difficult time in our lives. They truly meant a lot to us and certainly eased my recovery to have so much support.

May God bless each one of you who comforted and strengthened us with your encouragement.

We especially thank the folks at Onslow Memorial and the Naval hospitals at Camp Lejeune and Portsmouth. Your professionalism and personal touch helped carry our family through a trying time. And to the members of the Military Affairs Committee and local government officials, we greatly appreciated your enduring support.

I encourage everyone in our Jacksonville-Camp Lejeune family to maintain your health "readiness" by not missing those elusive doctors' appointments that seem to spring up at the most inconvenient times in our lives.

Look out for health and remember that it takes certain amount of work to selves fit. Like our Corps' "preventive maintenance" program need to defer to the professional care providers periodically in staying healthy.

Thank you all so very much!

Lejeune: uphold public image

I am a military spouse, and I proudly call Jacksonville my current home. I have felt welcomed and appreciated by the community and businesses of Jacksonville and have found this to be a wonderful place to live. I have been troubled recently by many vehicles that are displaying a bumper sticker that reads, "Jacksonville, N.C. Sucks!"

I have seen this sticker on the back of many cars driven by Marines. I know these drivers are Marines, because next to this incredibly rude sticker, they proudly display a Marine Corps sticker. I find this remark insulting, and I can only imagine how it makes the Jacksonville feel.

I know the opinion expressed by this sticker is not the opinion of the majority of the military community when a member of the military displays it on her vehicle, it only shows a blatant disrespect for the community, which is, if ever, a period of time, home.

Members of the military are often the most conscious of their public image. I believe that Marines in leadership roles would be the least likely to engage in this blatant disrespect toward a community that offers them so much.

'Professionals study logistics

The 24th MEU (SOC)'s deployment as Landing Force Sixth Fleet 2-01 is well underway. At this writing, we're six weeks into the float and things are moving along quickly. We arrived in Rota, Spain in mid-May and started our split-ARG right off the bat.

The Kearsarge and Carter Hall continued on to Palma de Mallorca, Spain for liberty and then to Sardinia for Exercise Trident D'Or and Greece for Exercise Alexander the Great.

Meanwhile, the Ponce headed to Morocco for liberty in Tangier and Exercise Mediterranean Shark in Sammar. It then sailed to Gaeta, Italy and Dubrovnik, Croatia for liberty before heading to the Republic of Georgia for Exercise Cooperative Partner.

Our Marines and Sailors have been productive. University classes, MCCA activities, training, work and duty are keeping them busy and sharp. You can read about the 24th MEU (SOC)'s recent awards and promotions in THE GLOBE's Milestones page. Also, don't forget to check out our Web site at www.usmc.mil/24meu.

Over the next few "Dispatches," I'll be focusing on each of the MEU's Major Subordinate Elements. I'll start with the MEU's Combat Service Support Element, MEU Service Support Group-24.

"Amateurs study strategy, professionals study logistics" is an often-quoted maxim in military circles. The reason is simple: without logistics, no strategy can be implemented. That's where MSSG-24 comes in.

Commanded by Lt. Col. John Lopez, of New York City, the "G" is tasked with providing logistical and combat service support to the entire MEU.

The unit's executive officer is Maj. David Flynn, of Jasper, Ind. Its sergeant major is Sgt. Maj. Richard Rawling, of Fort Pierce, Fla.

The MSSG is composed of 295 Marines and Sailors working in seven detachments. In addition to the Headquarters Detachment, commanded by 1st Lt. Erin McHale, of North Attleboro, Mass., the following dets make up MSSG-24:

Dispatches

1ST. LT. DAN MCSWEENEY

Transportation Support, commanded by Capt. Zeke Zukowski, of Worcester, Mass.

Maintenance, commanded by Chief Warrant Officer Alan Clyne, of Phoenix, Ariz.

Communications, commanded by Capt. Jason Hamilton, of Chicago, Ill. Engineer, commanded by Gunnery Sgt. Michael Barton, of Pontiac, Mich. Supply, commanded by 1st Lt. Cynthia Frederick, of Tierra Verde, Fla., and Medical, commanded by Master Chief Petty Officer Jimmy Moseley, of St. Louis, MO.

The bulk of MSSG-24's personnel and assets are embarked on USS Ponce, but small detachments are also found on USS Kearsarge and USS Carter Hall.

MSSG-24 has approached this deployment head-on. Throughout their work-ups and into the actual float, the Marines, Sailors, staff NCOs, and officers have leaned into making sure the unit is prepared for whatever comes its way.

During the 1960s MSSG-24 was activated at Camp Lejeune as Logistic Support Unit, 32d Marine Amphibious Unit, to participate in exercises and operations in the Caribbean and Atlantic areas. In 1970s, the unit was re-designated as Logistic Support Unit-32 and then Marine Amphibious Unit Service Support Group-32.

AROUND THE CORPS

N.Y. village honors war hero

John Neal
Combat Correspondent

GROTON, N.Y. — "Looking at my desk log for Feb. 16, 1968, I tried to find some extraordinary connection I could talk about," said Martin Luster, New York Assemblyman for the 125th District. "I found nothing extraordinary. Who would have thought 33 years later I'd be talking about a man just a few years younger than I am who committed an act of honor, an act of brotherhood, an act of selflessness."

Luster was just one of the distinguished guests who came to Groton, N.Y., July 7 to speak at the dedication for Medal of Honor recipient 2nd Lt. Terrence C. Graves. Graves was a team leader in the 3d Battalion, 3d Marine Division who was killed Feb. 16, 1968.

Graves was well-known throughout Groton in this region just east of Finger Lakes. Born in Texas July 19, 1934, Graves' family moved to Groton, N.Y., where his father, Leslie, had a career in teaching and public administration. By the time he graduated high school, Terrence — or Terry, as his friends and family knew him — had begun to demonstrate exceptional leadership qualities that would lead him through Miami University of Ohio to a Naval Reserve Officer Corps scholarship.

After his graduation from Miami University in May 1967, Graves was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps and was ordered to Vietnam six months later. Two months after his arrival, team Box consisted of six enlisted Marines and a corpsman under the command of 2nd Lt. Graves, participated in a reconnaissance mission west of Dong Ha. By the afternoon of the following day, the small team was engaged in heavy combat with two companies of the North Vietnamese Army.

Graves ordered his team to a new extraction point while simultaneously calling for indirect fire support. Wounded in the thigh, he refused medical attention as other Marines were also wounded.

The 2nd Lt. Terrence C. Graves Memorial was dedicated July 7, 2001, in Groton, N.Y. Graves received the Medal of Honor for actions in Vietnam.

Despite the heavy concentration of automatic and small arms fire, a helicopter managed to land to pick up the team of Marines. Realizing that one of the wounded Marines — Cpl. Danny Slocum — had not climbed aboard the helicopter, Graves jumped off the craft and ordered it to lift off without him.

One of the Marines who survived that afternoon would later go on to say, "What Lieutenant Graves did was the bravest thing I've ever seen."

According to Graves' father, while everyone in the Groton community was shocked to hear of his son's death, few were surprised when they heard of his deeds.

"Several of his friends were not surprised at all when they heard of the sacrifices Terry made," he said. "That was just like him," they said.

Another Marine joined Graves prior to the helicopter lifting off, and the three Marines left behind at Dong Ha continued to fight, though low on ammunition. As they fought and moved to a new extraction point, Graves continued to call for fire support until a second helicopter arrived. The trio boarded the second helicopter, but an intensified volume of enemy fire

Jason Weiss tells Sgt. Patrick Magnotta to look directly into the camera during his videotaping session for a casting call held June 15. Magnotta is an administrator for Facilities Maintenance and said he was one of the few picked for the new Marine Corps commercial.

Sandra Zarate

ANTICO, Va. — Lights, camera, action! The lucky Marine these words will soon hear is the subject of a casting call for the next Marine Corps recruiting commercial. The casting call was held at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot Parris Island on June 15 to determine which individuals would be cast in the next Marine Corps recruiting campaign.

The casting call was led by Capt. Anthony J. Robinson, recruiting officer for Marine Corps Recruiting. Robinson said the difference this time from previous casting calls is that they're casting enlisted Marines only, because they've started a new campaign to help revitalize the recruiting force. Robinson switched the campaign to what he called "Semper Fidelis," said Robinson. "We start off fresh and capitalize on the sense of a group. What better way to show to the public that we have a large group of enlisted Marines?" Robinson said.

Robinson said he has traveled to Parris Island, Marine Barracks, Washington, D.C.; and Quantico, Calif.; Bridgeport, Camp Pendleton, Calif.; and Camp Lejeune, N.C. Robinson said he is going to different bases all over the world to cast nine to 12 Marines for the different roles in the commercial, and we're looking for all types of people that would fit into those type of roles," said Robinson.

Besides being an enlisted Marine, the only other requirement is that they be in good shape, said Jason Weiss, account representative for J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency.

"They have to be physically fit in order to do this commercial, because it is going to be very demanding," he said.

Weiss didn't want to let the cat out of the bag, but he did say this commercial was going to be more reality-based.

"This commercial is still going to have some fantasy in it, but will show more of the activities Marines are doing now or have done in the past," said Weiss. "All I can say is it has something to do with extreme sports."

So far they have looked at more than 200 Marines, Robinson said.

"All they have to do is fill out an application, get videotaped at different angles and get their photos taken," he said.

"It doesn't matter what they're wearing. We take their photos from the shoulders up, put a dress blues cover on them and they're ready for their photo shoot. We do it all on the spot and it only takes a matter of minutes."

When the agency representatives complete the casting calls, they will then filter through the photos and call those Marines selected to see if they're still available.

The filming of the commercial should be completed by September, and the commercial should be completed by January 2002.

Senior chief pins on ensign

Cpl. Joe Lindsay

IWAKUNI, Japan — Officers come into the military as civilians directly from college, from one of the service academies or directly from the enlisted ranks.

Those promoted from the enlisted ranks often finish their degrees in their spare time while continuing their regular duties and usually hold the rank of E-5 or below.

The same cannot be said for Ensign Noel Fontanilla, a 15-year Navy veteran recently promoted to his new rank from senior chief petty officer during a ceremony at Club Iwakuni. Fontanilla holds a degree in Business Administration from the University of the East and was selected as a Limited Duty Officer in February 2000.

"It's a wonderful feeling," said Fontanilla of his promotion. "To be surrounded here by family, friends and the men and women I serve with is truly an honor on this special day."

The Manila native enlisted in the Navy in 1986 and recounted his first night aboard a ship during his promotion ceremony speech.

"I remember all the horror stories I had heard about life at sea," said Fontanilla. "That first night, I kept to myself and tried to keep a low profile. I just wanted to make it through the night. In the morning I was still alive and realized I was going to be just fine."

That might have been the understatement of his career.

Ensign Fontanilla has been a model Sailor throughout his entire career, always striving to better himself and those around him," said Lt. Mark Axinto, guest speaker at the promotion ceremony. "He has been an outstanding leader in the enlisted ranks and will make an outstanding officer."

Ensign Noel Fontanilla cuts one of many salutes he returned as an officer for the first time during his promotion ceremony July 2.

After the pinning of his new rank, Fontanilla was given his first salute as a Naval Officer by Chief Petty Officer Robert Bugawan, storage division officer and ceremony attendee.

"To see him exchange that first salute as an officer, after so many years in the enlisted ranks, was one of the highlights of the day," said Petty Officer 2nd Class Demetrio Kalaw, GSA Mart supervisor and ceremony attendee.

"Everyone who has served with him is proud to be able to say they have. He is a credit to the Navy and the armed services," he said.

Fontanilla, who has worn various hats since coming to Iwakuni in 1996, including Shipping and Receiving and Material Leading Chief Petty Officer, Stock Control and Purchasing Division officer and collateral duty Command Senior Chief, is now headed to the Navy Supply Corps School in Athens, Ga.

"It's another challenge that I look forward to," said Fontanilla. "I always have tried to look ahead during my Navy career. Whether it's a big step or a small step, you've got to look forward toward the future."

Even if it means just getting through a long first night aboard a ship, Fontanilla has always seemed to do just that.

24th MEU (SOC) studies Roman history

1st Lt. Ryan Prince
GLOBE Contributor

During a recent port visit to Brindisi, Italy, Marines and Sailors of the 24th MEU (SOC) embarked on a tour of Pompeii, the ancient Roman city buried in ash by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius in 79 A.D.

1st Lt. Ryan Prince

This ancient colosseum was one of the many sights viewed by Marines and Sailors during their liberty in Pompeii, Italy.

Our recent tour of Pompeii was memorable, to say the least. As representatives of the MEU's Command Element, BLT 2/8, HMM-266 (Rein), and MSSG-24, we enjoyed ourselves while learning a great deal about Italy and ancient Rome.

Ironically, while the eruption of the volcano destroyed Pompeii, it also preserved the city for generations to come. The eruption lasted two days and three nights, expelling enough molten lava to bury a city 7 miles away. While lives were lost in the eruption and the resulting chaos, the city was preserved in its natural state.

Eighty percent of the city has been uncovered and into one of the largest open-air museums in the world. Days before our visit, rare gold coins were recovered from the debris, contributing even more to the historical insight by this ancient city.

From USS Kearsarge, we boarded busses bound for Brindisi on July 7, 2001. Nearly six hours later, we arrived at the city with our tour guide, Giardini. Constantly being reminded to "take your time, quickly please", we were shepherded through the walls and alleys of the city. All were amazed at that was still evident within the sculptures and architecture. The city is a snapshot in time. Even the ovens had even bread that was being prepared when the baker fled 1,922 years ago (although Giardini pointed out that the bread was slightly overcooked).

We transitioned from the city of Pompeii to Mount Vesuvius where we enjoyed an Italian meal about half way up the mountain. Our bus driver earned his pay as we snaked our way up the mountain, providing us with breathtaking views of lava covered cliffs and the cities of Naples and Pompeii. While many would have preferred to take the bus all the way to the top so that we could have had our lunch in peace, the only way to reach the top the same way they would have done it during the height of the Roman Empire: on foot.

The bus dropped us off at the start of the footpath. Our tour guide immediately levied a time constraint on us.

Fortunately, Marines are well trained for speed and most managed to complete the hike to the summit in time.

The effort was well worth it, as the trail came to a one-of-a-kind vantage point. To one side, you could see into the center of the volcano and see the crater left by the eruption.

To the other side, the clouds circled the mountain and cameras were traded back and forth as everyone tried to capture the moment on film.

After a hurried trip back down the mountain and an opportunity to purchase souvenirs, we loaded the bus for our fateful return to the ship. Yet again, Marines twisted their bodies into unimaginable contortions as to get comfortable in the bus seats.

While the bus ride was long, the trip was well worth it. We witnessed the beauty and history of Pompeii and Mount Vesuvius. Many attempts have been made to recreate ancient societies, but it's not often we are given the opportunity to view the original construction of a city developed 1,922 years ago.

1st Lt. Prince is attached to the 24th MEU (SOC) Command Element's Radio Battalion Detachment.

HERO from 3A

caused the craft to crash shortly after taking off, killing all aboard except Slocum. Slocum managed to evade capture and being killed by enemy and friendly fire, and was eventually rescued.

"As recipient of the Medal of Honor, the Purple Heart, the Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with Silver Star, and the Republic of Vietnam Campaign Medal, 2nd Lt. Graves represents the courage, tenacity, and honor for which these awards stand," wrote General James L. Jones, Commandant of the Marine Corps. "He gallantly and selflessly gave his life for his country."

It took one year, since its inception by retired Marine Master Sgt. Jim Greenman, to organize a committee and raise enough money to create the memorial that now stands in Groton Municipal Park. According to Greenman, the idea for a monument came to him at a game of golf with a friend of his who mentioned a Medal of Honor recipient was from Groton.

"I called his [Graves's] father, and asked him if I could form a committee and build a monument to his son," said Greenman. "He gave me the go ahead and that's how it started."

More than 500 individuals from 19 different states and 72 communities in New York donated money to erect the granite memorial at the Groton Municipal Park. Raising funds was not a problem in this central New York area where towns average a population of 2,000.

Through a campaign of placing ads in newspapers and writing letters to community leaders, the memorial committee managed to raise almost $50,000.

The remaining funds not used in constructing the memorial have gone to the newly formed Terrence Graves Memorial Scholarship. The first recipient of the scholarship was Will Roberts of Groton Central High School Class of 2001.

Representing the Marine Corps at the ceremony was Maj. Gen. Pete Osman, Director of Operational War Plans and Interoperability at Washington D.C. In his address to the people of Groton, he assured them the sacrifices Graves made 33 years earlier have not gone in vain in the Marine Corps.

"This practice of honor before self is found in studies by recruits on those who received the Medal of Honor," he said, referring to the Crucible portion of recruit training.

Retired Air National Guard Brig. Gen. Robert Purple was Graves's high school teacher, basketball coach, and mentor, and closer to the young man from Groton than most. In his comments at the memorial dedication, he was able to summarize the character of 2nd Lt. Terrence Graves in a few, simple words.

"Confident, determined, and able to back it all up," said Purple. "That was Terry. The best of things in the worst of times."

TRUEX from 1A

how far the MEU has come as a team because he hasn't been with the MEU since the "stand up."

"While I feel there is always room for improvement, the more we train together the greater the "cohesion factor" which helps us plan, think and execute as one vice four separate elements," explained Frick.

Jones said he believes the MEU is at its strongest point so far. He said it should be because the Marines and Sailors continue to train and learn as the workups go on.

So far the MEU's training has taken them from the information processing courses of the staff to expeditionary woodland training in Virginia, familiarization with ship life and the latest urban environment training the MEU will soon begin its final exercises.

"Completion of TRUEX is the halfway point in our [pre-deployment training]. I feel comfortable that the MEU has met or exceeded its goals to this point," said Frick. "All the Marines and Sailors have worked hard for the last 90 days, at this point we will start to "test" those skills."

Frick said those skills will be tested during the Amphibious Ready Group/MEU Exercise.

"The ARG/MEUEX is my test to see if we are ready, though there is little time to do anything prior to SOCEX (Special Operations Capable Exercise)," said Frick. "If we see any areas of concern, we may have an opportunity to practice it again. At a minimum we will be able to 'brainstorm' what needs to be 'fixed.'"

Marines are starting to realize that the exercises are for 'real' and it seems they are all taking things more seriously, according to Jones. He said TRUEX might be the closest thing to reality we have to train with if we face an actual urban conflict or situation.

"I am always proud of all the Marines and Sailors of the 26th MEU," said Frick. "They have all worked very hard to date and I'm pleased with where we are."

RISK from 1A

Because they train as hard as they fight, training accidents while not ever accepted as the status quo are inevitable. Combat readiness and national security aren't to be taken lightly.

Still, in a community when the family next door is more likely to have ties to the Marine Corps than not, it's always disheartening to learn a Marine has lost his or her life in peacetime practice.

Marines share their pain. What happens to one happens to the many. The Marine Corps has always prided itself on its ability to do the impossible with the least amount of troops.

Marines are instilled with both a sense of pride in their mission, as well as the belief, each individual is simply a part of the greater whole.

It's that belief—that each Marine has value and the loss of one affects the whole—that makes the Corps unique.

Marines declare that they take care of their own. Then they go out and prove it.

During the Korean War, a small band of leathern necks found themselves marching through strange and bitterly hostile territory, surrounded on three sides by superior numbers of their enemy.

Along the way, they picked up servicemen from other units who were also hobbling back to their nations. The Marines carried their equipment, their wounded and even most of their dead as they marched exhausted and frozen, to join their comrades. Most of the men who made it were youngsters, barely out of school, or World War II veterans, back for another cause.

These men shared a special bond, one that transcends ties bound by blood or friendship: they were Marines.

Joined together in pride, spirit and commitment, the title IS won only by men and women willing to give their all, whether in war or peace. To them, the loss of one is just as terrible as the loss of many.

And that's how are community feels—three times over—in the aftermath of this latest terrible accident.

and divine services. God is finding a place in every computer, school and classroom in every human heart.

God walks with those who walk, marches with those who march, and swims with those who swim. God exercises with those who exercise at the gym, on the fields and the training sites.

God is finding a place in many hearts and minds of the Marines who seek an opportunity to learn their specialties with precision, proficiency, and skill.

If you want to see God on the move in Camp Johnson then you must witness first hand the services that are offered on this base and the kind of ministry that is provided for every Marine who enters into this Camp to chart a new life in the Marine Corps.

The Commanding Officer and his staff are in full support of our Command Religious Program and spiritual activities. They provide complete support for every effort that enhances the moral, welfare, and spiritual well-being of all the Marines, Sailors, and their families. They give our religious programs unwavering support. They back the efforts of the chaplain and the programs that reflect spiritual growth, motivation, and desire to succeed.

In addition to the many activities and programs in the schools, the chaplain provides counseling, guidance, and spiritual reassurance to all those who seek him on a daily basis. Also he provides invocations, benedictions, orientations and suicide prevention briefs on weekly basis.

Camp Johnson is one of the few places where I have seen God working through the chaplain's continuous ministry. I have seen many Marines organize Bible Studies, Sunday school classes and other religious activities to serve God and to take care of His people.

I have seen God's love, compassion and mercy in every one's life. God is present in every graduation from one school to another and from one orientation to another. God is working well in the lives of those who ears to listen and eyes to see, and in those who seek Him.

In Camp Johnson, Marines come to be and to be educated. They train hard, and are tested hard. At the end of the course, they graduate with honor and move on to serve their country.

I have seen these Marines train vigorously, work diligently, and plan their work efficiently with competence. I attend staff meetings and I was impressed by their inspiring goals, high standards and commendable accomplishments.

The Commanding Officer and his staff set the pace for the various schools they're working tirelessly to live up to their mission.

The officers lead the young Marines to teach them, train them and help them achieve their tasks. They teach them the way of life. They make every Marine feel very important, needed, and he belongs in the overall mission.

In Camp Johnson, God travels to every office and to every heart and humble soul.

God travels with those who travel with those who sail, and flies with those who fly. I am very proud to have been part of the history of Camp Johnson, birthplace of freedom, patriotic pride and human spirit.

May our prayers be always lifted for those who died for the cause of freedom and for those who were commemorated in the Beirut Memorial and died while seeking to preserve the peace.

May the pride of the Marine Corps prevail with the harmony of peace and justice for all.

Security battalion welcomes Gandy

Col. Bruce A. Gandy, left, and Col. Paul Cahill salute the American flag during pass and review. Cahill replaced Cahill as CO of Marine Corps Security Force Battalion during the ceremony.

Sgt. Chet Decker
Combat Correspondent

FOLK, Va. — Marine Corps Security Force Battalion, a unique battalion with a constantly deployed throughout the world, welcomed a new commanding officer in its ranks today. Col. Bruce A. Gandy, former commander of the 26th Marine Amphibious Unit's battalion landing team, 8th Marines, who conducted peacekeeping operations in Kosovo during the summer of 1999. His decorations include the Navy and Marine Corps Commendation Medal with Combat V, the Defense Meritorious Service Medal and the Navy and Marine Corps Service Medal.

Gandy takes over a battalion with two platoons of FAST companies that have been deployed in most major Marine Corps operations since the late 1980s, including operations in Panama, Somalia, Haiti, and the Balkans.

"There's no doubt that the Marines and the Security Force will be key players in any future operation," said Gandy. "I look forward to serving alongside all of you in the future."

Gandy's more recent assignments include tours as Executive Officer of the 22d Marine Expeditionary Unit, Commanding Officer of 3d Battalion, 8th Marine Regiment and Deputy Operation Officer, 2d Marine Division.

Lt. Gen. Raymond P. Ayres, Commander, U.S. Marine Corps Forces, Atlantic, awarded Cahill the Legion of Merit for his work as the battalion's commanding officer, a title he assumed in March 1999. Ayres commended Cahill on his style of leadership.

"We can't tell where Col. Cahill's influence stops," said Ayres. "Ask any gathering of Marines, and you will likely find someone who has served with Col. Cahill, or been instructed by Col. Cahill, or has been the recipient of fine leadership or instruction of someone else who learned the trade from Col. Cahill."

A decorated Marine with more than 25 years in the Corps, it was Cahill's responsibility over the past two years to lead the more than 2,300 Security Force and Fleet Antiterrorism Security Team (FAST) Marines who provide security around the world, to include that provided in Yemen during the aftermath of the USS Cole bombing last year.

Cahill moves on to be the Commanding Officer of Expeditionary Warfare Training Group, Atlantic, at Little Creek.

1/2 set to exploit UDP experience

Recently, elements of 1st Battalion, 2d Marines, deployed to Okinawa as part of the Unit Deployment Program (UDP).

While deployed, the mission of the unit is to be forward deployed and ready for contingencies, according to Lt. Col. Joel G. Schwankl, Commanding Officer of 1/2. The Marines will be replacing 3d Battalion, 8th Marines.

Okinawa is just one of several stops the battalion will make during this deployment. They will also be afforded the opportunity to train in Korea, Australia, Mainland Japan and Fuji.

As with any unit, prior to deploying, 1/2 has gone through months of training. Perhaps the harshest training occurring in Bridgeport, Calif., cold weather training. According to Maj. Douglas J. MacIntyre, training officer for 1/2, Bridgeport was "an intensive period of warrior spirit, live-fire exercises and small-unit tactical training."

"Our goal is for readiness to continue to improve during the course of the deployment," explained MacIntyre.

In addition to the training the Marines received as a unit, family members were also prepared for the hardships that go along with a deployment. All immediate family members received a Family Readiness Brief, and the Key Volunteer Network is in place to handle any problems or concerns that may arise during the deployment.

The consensus among the Marines of 1/2 is they are well-prepared to attack this mission. "We're set to go on deployment; whether it's here or elsewhere; it's part of the next phase for many of us of training," said Cpl. Darrell W. Cleland, Weapons Company Heavy Machine Gun Platoon.

"Our platoon is a young one, and I am looking forward for us to start working more as a team," said Cleland.

MacIntyre expressed a similar point of view, stating, "The training and exercise plan over the next 6 months is sure to be challenging and rewarding in that the majority of the events will be new to the Marines." The deployment is certain to offer many challenges and new experiences to the Marines of 1/2.

Transportation Support Detachment combines what used to be two distinct platoons, Motor Transport and Shore Party. These two platoons share the basic mission of logistical throughput. We have married the two platoons to make the logistical flow smooth from the beach on up to the fight.

Our shore party Marines manage the beach, tracking supplies, equipment and personnel ashore, then our Material Handling Equipment (MHE) operators load much of that onto our trucks. Then Motor Transport operators push their payloads, whether that be cargo or passengers, to the desired objective. All the while our inherent maintenance capability, in the form of both Motor Transport and MHE mechanics, ensures our gear stays in the fight.

Another capability our det brings to the battle is found in our shore party Marines, who facilitate Helicopter Support Teams by providing the personnel necessary to transport MEU cargo and equipment via external helicopter lift.

The entire detachment across the Amphibious Ready Group consists of 75 Marines. As mentioned, we have MHE operators and mechanics, Motor Transport operators and mechanics and our 0481 Landing Support Specialists. On the three ships, we provide ten of our 0481s to work for the Combat Cargo Detachment, ultimately working directly for the ship in support of MEU operations on the flight deck and in the cargo spaces.

Our biggest challenge has been combining the two formerly separate platoons into one cohesive unit, working towards the same mission accomplishment, and producing a team effort. A part of this challenge has been the staff's ability to manage the det across the Amphibious Ready Group, keeping abreast of operations and personnel issues.

Our det's heritage is symbolized in the distinct red patches that most of us wear. It represents a link to the early days of the Shore Party in WWII. We distinguish ourselves by our commitment to supporting the MEU's missions.

The most rewarding part of deploying with this detachment has been working through the challenge of forming a team to come together and work towards mission accomplishment. Being the leader of this unique detachment and seeing it come together through the adversity and challenges of a Med Float is the true return on our invested time and efforts.

MEU Service Support Group-24 is currently deployed with the 24th MEU (SOC) in the Mediterranean. Composed of seven detachments, the "G" provides invaluable logistics and combat service support to the overall MEU. Capt. Zukowski, of Worcester, Mass., is the Transportation Support Detachment officer-in-charge.

PUTTING THE PIECES TOGETHER

Recovery Efforts

Col. Richard Dunniv, investigating officer, and P.A. Loving Co. workers discuss how they will remove the wreckage from the New River. Concerns about the river's depth, only 10 feet, at the crash site.

As the second major piece is lifted aboard the barge at 7:30 a.m. Friday, a life boat falls from the debris and inflates. Divers were on scene to help with recovery efforts.

SNEADS FERRY - Marine officials and Swansboro-based P. A. Loving Co. lifted the wreckage of the CH-46 Sea Knight Friday that crashed into the shallow waters of the New River July 9.

The extraction, which took a little more than an hour to complete, was a success, according to John Riggs, Camp Lejeune environmental protection specialist.

"Everybody was amazed it came out as quickly as it did," he said. "I am in absolute wonderment as to how anybody could have gotten out of that. Based on what I saw, everything else (but the tail section) was crushed and shredded."

Pilots Maj. Charles Rust, 34, and 1st Lt. Christopher Knarr, 29, survived the crash. Crew members Sgt. Richard C. Beaty, Sgt. Byron E. Lane and Lance Cpl. Sean M. Hughes were killed.

According to Riggs, the process of removing the aircraft was as meticulous and as professional as it comes.

He said base officials and mechanical experts planned everything down to the smallest details.

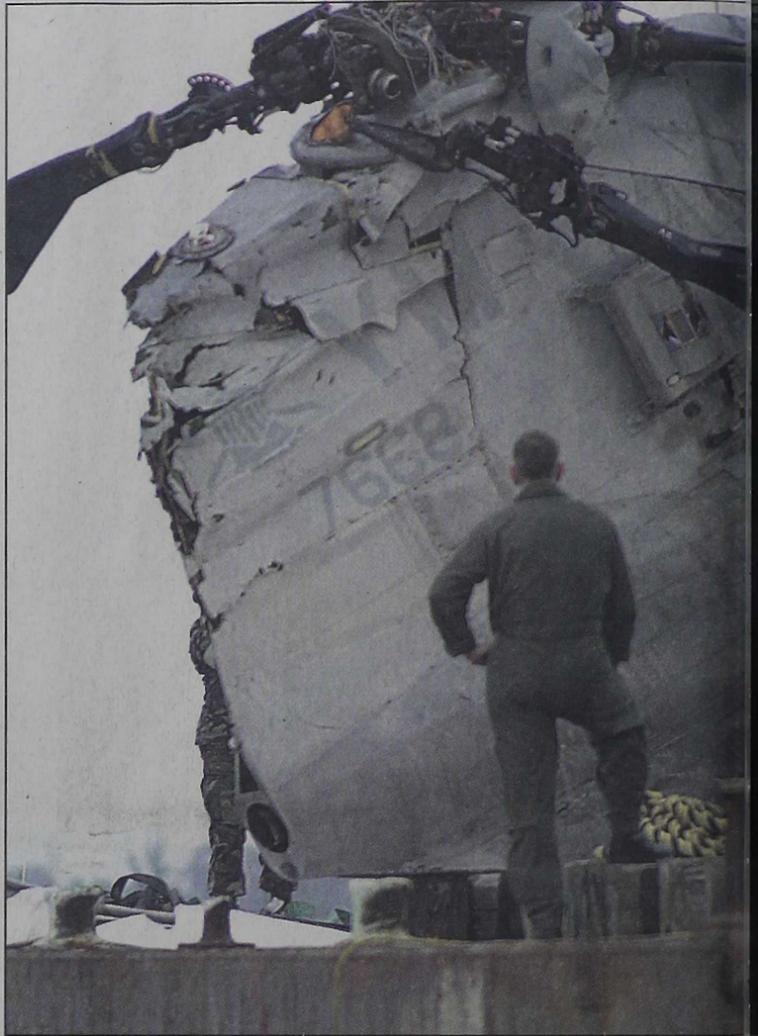

What was important to Riggs was that his specialists were involved in the entire process because of area environmental concerns with the river.

He said less than two additional gallons of hydraulic fluid spilled into the river during the recovery, and his team quickly cleaned the petroleum with a paper specially designed for recovery in water.

Equipment that included a barge, a crane, a tugboat and two smaller vessels were placed on scene by 9:30 p.m. July 12, just 500 yards off the Camp Lejeune shoreline. Immediately at daybreak Friday, Riggs' team opened the containment boom and the recovery efforts began.

Once all the debris was recovered, the barge was pushed to Landing Zone Bluebird where the pieces were placed on Marine LVs and transported to a hanger at Marine Corps Air Station New River.

The cause of the crash is still under investigation.

Dunnivan, commanding officer of VMAMT-204, inspects the wreckage of the CH-46. Dunnivan is investigating why the aging but reliable aircraft crashed into the New River July 9.

P.A. Loving Company, a civilian contractor hired to remove the aircraft from the New River, lifts the first of five major pieces of the wreckage. The aircraft recovery began at 7 a.m. and quickly concluded by 10.

Marines aboard the P.A. barge look at the wreckage from the New River. Marines were part the team in the recovery efforts.

Marine Corps Combat Service Support Schools is scheduled to change commanders in a ceremony at the Camp Johnson Parade Field Tuesday at 10 a.m.

Col. Les Stein will relinquish command to Col. Jonathan T. Pasco, who is coming from U.S. Central Command at MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa, Fla., where he served as the Plans and Exercises Branch Chief, Engineering Division, Logistics Directorate.

Stein, of North Brunswick, N.J., was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1975 and designated an air defense control officer. In 1977 he changed career paths and became a motor transport officer.

As such, he served in numerous command and staff billets, to include platoon and company commander, battalion operations officer and executive officer, commanding officer of Marine Corps Motor Transport School, and Assistant Chief of Staff, Logistics, Marine Forces Reserve.

He also served as a faculty advisor and instructor at the Marine Corps Command and Staff College.

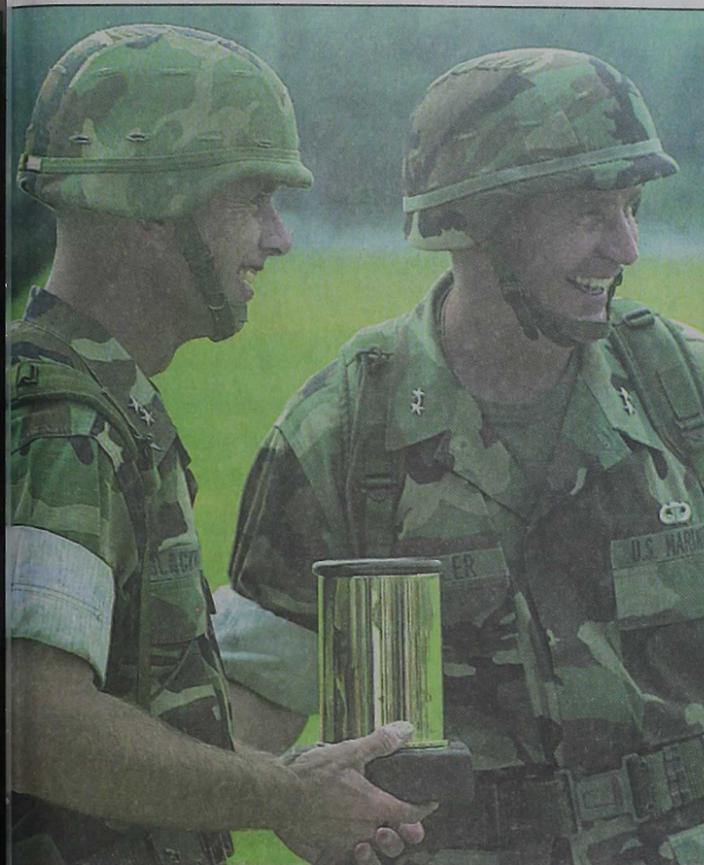

Stein holds a doctorate in education, and two master's degrees — one in systems management and another in national security and strategic studies. He is also a graduate of the Amphibious Warfare School and the Marine Corps War College.

Since his arrival at MCCSSS, Stein has reorganized the command and stood-up a Headquarters and Support Battalion. He has also updated and revised 90 percent of the schools'

Division welcomes Sattler

Blackman leaves legacy of combat readiness

Cpl. Mike Vrabel

Gen. Blackman (l) and Sattler had special smiles for the 10th Marines following the cap-corkers' post-parade presentation.

Capt. Alan F. Crouch

With a gentle breeze to help display the flags as they were marched by the reviewing stand, Maj. Gen. John F. Sattler took command of the 2d Marine Division from Maj. Gen. Robert R. Blackman Jr., in a traditional ceremony befitting the organization represented.

"It's a shame I have to leave, but it's time for me to go," Blackman said during an interview following the ceremony.

Blackman leaves the "Follow Me!" division after serving as its assistant division commander for a year, followed by two years as its commanding general. Under his command the division participated in several large training exercises, including Dynamic Mix in Greece, where the general took command of the newly re-formed 2d Marine Expeditionary Brigade. Division Marines have deployed worldwide to protect American lives and interests and have trained with allied forces both at home aboard Camp Lejeune and abroad.

"Ladies and gentlemen," Blackman addressed the assembled crowd of family and friends, "they can fight and they will win," he said while gesturing to the more than 500 division Marines and Sailors in formation behind him.

Blackman will move to Tampa, Fla., to be the next Director of Resources, Requirements, Budget and Assessment for the U.S. Central Command.

Sattler, whose last assignment was as the Director of Public Affairs at Headquarters Marine Corps, returns to Camp Lejeune and the Leathernecks of the 2d Division after only a three-year absence.

"Welcome home, my friend," said Sattler's new boss, Maj. Gen. Martin R. Berndt, commanding general of II Marine Expeditionary Force.

Sattler left the division in 1998 after serving as the commanding officer of the 2d Marine Regiment for two years and as the assistant division commander for a year.

After thanking his large family and many friends for their support and attendance, Sattler thanked the Key Volunteers — family members who are trained to assist Marine units in a variety of support roles — because he said he knows "family readiness is a combat multiplier." Then turning to the large formation of troops, he said, "I am honored and humbled to be your commanding general."

Summer awareness preached

HM2 Melissa Falany

As the Marines and Sailors of 2d Medical Battalion recently got into high gear a little summer fun, the commanding officer called for a "Safety Stand-Down" with the intent of creating "a lasting momentum of safety consciousness" with his troops.

Cmdr. Robert Mulvanny's intent was taken directly from the guidance of the commanding general of 2d Force Service Support Group.

Because every week the headlines tell the tale of Marines and Sailors being killed or injured as a result of poor decision-making and unnecessary risk-taking, 2d Medical Bn.'s Training Department designed a program of instruction that addresses several high risk activities, then enlisted the help of local subject matter experts in providing guidance to the troops on risk reduction.

Missile Testing

The Ballistic Missile Defense Organization announced it has successfully completed a test involving a planned intercept of an intercontinental ballistic missile target.

This test took place over the central Pacific Ocean. A modified ballistic missile target vehicle was launched from Vandenberg AFB, Calif., Saturday and a prototype interceptor was launched approximately 20 minutes later and 4,800 miles away. The intercept took place approximately 10 minutes after the launch.

Reenlistment

Starting Oct. 1, Marine sergeants may reenlist up to their service limit of 13 years if they have a recommendation for reenlistment from their commanding officer and meet all reenlistment standards, according to MARADMIN 313/01.

Under the current policy, sergeants in some primary military occupational specialties are considered for staff sergeant during their first reenlistment. Those sergeants not selected for staff sergeant may be unable to reenlist and involuntarily separated.

Eallonardo July's top service member

William F. Klumpp
Contributor

Military Affairs Committee of the Jones-Onslow Chamber of Commerce is to announce that Sgt. Joseph A. Eallonardo, armory custodian for Company C, 6th Marine Regiment, was selected as the 2001 Service Member of the Month. Eallonardo, a Tully, N.Y. native, was presented the award at an evening banquet Monday at the Paradise Officers Club aboard Camp Lejeune. Eallonardo stated, "I didn't know much about the award previously, but it's an honor and it's great to be selected as the top member of the unit."

Eallonardo graduated from Tully Central High School in 1995, earned an associate degree in Criminal Justice from Onondaga Community College in 1998.

Eallonardo entered the Corps that same year and was assigned to Marine Corps Security Force Company 1, Rota, Spain, where he would learn the keys to his forthcoming success as a Marine. Eallonardo said he has gotten where he is because of the example set by his company first sergeant, 1st Sgt. Frank Brill. "He taught me to be a firm," said Eallonardo. "You have to be firm on things that are important and teach your Marines to do the same." According to Eallonardo, being a good leader requires prioritizing duties, keeping your mind on your work and not worrying about outside pressures.

Eallonardo has taken what he has learned and provides valued guidance to those young Marines he works with. His current company first sergeant, 1st Sgt. Robert Terry, said, "I believe in the leadership principle that Sergeant Eallonardo sets on a daily basis is setting the example. The personal standards he has set for himself reflect in his Marines." Terry continued, "His bearing, physical fitness and appearance in uniform say a lot, because there are Marines in this battalion that have never worked with Sergeant Eallonardo but know him on sight."

For those warriors who are striving to be accomplished leaders of Marines, Eallonardo provides simple advice: "Do the right thing in the field and in garrison."

Although his active service to the Corps will end in January 2002, Eallonardo plans to continue his government service as a New York State Trooper. "He is definitely an asset to this company, and will be missed by all when his EAS rolls around," concluded Terry.

In recognition of his outstanding achievement, Eallonardo will also receive the following gifts from area businesses and individuals:

- A plaque from the Military Affairs Committee.
- A print of the Beirut Memorial, compliments of SIA Group and Abe Rosen. Framing of the print, compliments of Jones-Onslow EMC and Marine Federal Credit Union.
- Dinner for two at Ragazzi's restaurant, compliments of Tom Romanetz and Century 21 Champion Real Estate.

'Iguana' awarded

Lance Cpl. Paula M. Fitzgerald
Marine Combat Correspondent

Members of Riverine Training Team 3-01 "Iguana" were presented with Navy and Marine Corps Achievement Medals in a ceremony at Julian C. Smith Hall here recently.

Twelve Marines and one Sailor hailing from various II Marine Expeditionary Force and education commands here deployed to Puerto Carreño, Colombia, May 23 to June 25 to train with and prepare Colombian Marines to conduct safe and effective counter-narcotics operations in a riverine environment.

"We were pretty successful even though we had little time to prepare," said Cpl. Mauricio R. Torrico, Marine Combat Training Battalion, School of Infantry. "It was a very rewarding experience. We gave them (Colombian Marines) knowledge, and we also learned from them."

The Austin, Texas native trained "Iguana" and the Colombian Marines for swim qualification and infantry tactics.

The team deployed to a high-threat area and participated in an assortment of training activities with outstanding results, according to Lt. Col. Jorge L. Barrera, II MEF U.S. Southern Command Operations Officer.

Basic first aid, waterborne navigation and movement techniques, marksmanship, leadership and human rights training were a few of the training objectives for "Iguana." "I was fortunate enough to be in charge of a very mature team that did extremely well," said Capt. Mark F. Nicholson, officer in charge of "Iguana."

Because of the Marines' hard work and perseverance, they were able to realize a number of benefits from the deployment. Language skills were improved, contacts were established with Colombian Marines, and an enhanced depth of cultural understanding was achieved, according to Nicholson.

Maj. Gen. Martin R. Berndt, commanding general, II MEF, was on hand for the ceremony and presented the awards.

Members include: Capt. Mark F. Nicholson, Capt. Bryan K. Kramer, Gunnery Sgt. Anthony M. Hedrick, Gunnery Sgt. Geoffrey P. Akey, Chief Petty Officer Ricardo P. Renteria, Staff Sgt. Gustavo Monroy, Sgt. Benjamin E. Townley, Sgt. Carlos A. Prietosalazar, Sgt. David A. Pedraza, Cpl. Paul Centeno, Cpl. Mauricio R. Torrico, Cpl. Robert C. Labonty, and Cpl. David M. Wilhelm.

Command effort reminds service members to stay safe, stay alert and stay aware

Cpl. Valerie A. Martinez
Marine Combat Correspondent

More than 532 vehicle and motorcycle accidents have occurred here since January, and according to Traffic Safety Specialist Freeman White Sr., "That's a lot of accidents aboard the base."

Speeding, failure to yield right-of-ways, tailgating and running stop signs are among the top-cited moving violations, and the culprits - young drivers.

"The problem with young drivers is they are adventurous, and they take chances when they drive," said White. These mishaps, ranging from minor to deadly, are unfortunate, and most could have been avoided with education and awareness, he added.

Locally, one of the top education programs for this target age group, drivers between the ages of 18 and 26, is the Driver's Improvement Course. As White explained, students learn driving skills designed to save lives and bring Marines and their families home safely.

The daylong course begins with learning to "see." "The number one cause of accidents on the road is failure to use your eyes properly. This means scanning the roads and intersections while you drive," White said, adding an alert driver who scans the road "will notice the drivers who are being careless."

Students are then taught how road signs communicate with drivers, added White, and move on to the importance of knowing when and how to adjust speed.

"Speed is not what kills. Failure to adjust your speed, especially during times of inclement weather like rain and snow, makes for a dangerous situation," added the Jacksonville native.

The class curriculum includes the topics of driving with a margin of safety, or comfort zone, around your vehicle and driving emergencies. Also, the subject of driving under the influence/driving while intoxicated is covered during a Careless driving in inclement weather like rain or snow can quickly turn into a deadly mishap. Freeman White Sr., traffic safety specialist here, is reminding drivers to prevent an accident by remembering to adjust your speed.

lesson entitled "You the driver."

"You the driver" deals with the effects alcohol has on your judgment, coordination and vision," said White. He also pointed out that an alarming 40 percent of motorcycle and vehicle drivers involved in accidents are under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

These offenses aren't taken lightly, said White. "Driving aboard Camp Lejeune is not a right, it's a privilege. If you violate the rules and regulations, your driving privileges can be taken away."

Drivers caught breaking the law will be cited by military or civilian police and can be fined, jailed or both. In a recent All Marines (ALMAR) Message, The Commandant of the Marine Corps General James L. Jones remarked that too many Marines are dying early, unnecessary deaths.

"With the arrival of spring, we have seen an increase in motorcycle fatalities and injuries," Jones said. "The risks associated with driving vehicles should be understood. To ignore them tempts fate. More deaths and injuries can be prevented."

White echoed the sentiment for local drivers. "In order to be mission capable, we need to ensure that's every Marine who wears a uniform

Deli-bakery under new, improved management

Have any of you seen the redheaded toad working in the Bakery? If you haven't, next time you come shopping, you'll have to go by the Bakery and just stand back and watch for a while. It's been a long time since I've seen anyone with that much energy!

That ball of fire is our new Deli/Bakery Manager. Her name is Tricia McKinney and we shanghaied her from the new Fort Bragg South store. She had been at the Southpost store for nine months and in that time she had managed to reach the number one spot in the country for bakery sales.

There's a good reason why she has been number one. She has over 18 years of experience and she's never satisfied! Everytime I make a trip back to the Deli area, I can see changes being made. She has already cleaned up the back room, re-organized all the supplies, ordered in a much larger variety of stock (I have the bills to prove it) and has plans for a lot more changes in the next couple of weeks.

The bread has been moved out into the center of the aisle in front of the bakery instead of being hidden on the shelves against the wall and the sales have really jumped up. The rolls are a lot bigger which gives the customers a better value. There is already an increase in productivity and availability of the product. The customer service in the Deli/Bakery has also made great leaps and I am seeing a lot more smiles back in that corner of the store.

Tricia has also started giving free cookies to all the kids that come by the bakery, so be sure and stop by the bakery when you are shopping with the wee ones. If nothing else, the kids will be happy, at least until the cookie is gone. (You know, if you bring along enough disguises, you might be able to keep your child fed until you're done shopping. Maybe a hat one time, a pair of sunglasses the next trip to the bakery.... might work?)

Oops, I went off on another subject again! Back to the Deli/Bakery. Tricia is also going to be starting a new sandwich program where she will offer croissants, Pita and Rye bread for your sandwiches in addition to the white bread you have been getting. You should also be seeing a "sugar free" section soon.

Give her a couple of weeks to get everything in place and you should be amazed at the difference you're going to see. If anyone has any ideas, suggestions, comments (I know you don't have complaints), just go see Tricia. She's very receptive to everything!

And check out the "Grab and Go" selection on the sidewalk every day! Since we moved it outside, the sales have really picked up! We have several coolers outside the front door with soda's and sandwiches as well as a large selection of chips and crackers available. We also have a cashier on the sidewalk every day that will be more than happy to ring up your purchases so you don't even have to go into the store if you are in a hurry. Just think, you could get your lunch and be on your way in 2 minutes flat! Talk about fast food!

Just one more topic and then I'll finish up for this week. How many of you missed the truckload sale in the Tawara Terrace housing area this past Monday? It was the best one yet! If you missed the sale, you really lost out on some great deals we were offering. The next one will be in Midway Park August 20. Breast-fed babies have edge on life

Lt. Cmdr. Janet Gehring
GLOBE Contributor

World Breast-feeding Week is celebrated each year during the first week of August. The week is dedicated to highlight the health benefits of breast-feeding for both mothers and babies. The Naval Hospital Camp Lejeune's (NHCL) Lactation Council has planned numerous activities to provide education regarding breast-feeding questions and concerns. Informative educational classes will be held August 1-7. There will also be an informational booth at the Marine Corps Exchange and poster presentations in each of the primary care clinics during this time period.

U.S. Health Policy for Breast-feeding:

In October 2000 the U. S. Surgeon General presented a Blue Print for action, which called for knowledgeable health care providers to actively participate in their communities to increase breast-feeding rates and promote optimal breast-feeding practices. Upon this announcement the NHCL Lactation Council formalized its yearly goals with the new Blue Print as a guide. Several professional medical and nursing organizations have written clear policy statements in support of breast-feeding. The American Academy of Pediatrics and the American College of Nurse Midwives both endorse breast-feeding as the optimal method of infant feeding due to the health benefits for mom and baby.

Scientific Evidence of Advantages: There is clear and convincing scientific evidence that support the many health advantages of breast-feeding. According to the AAP the advantages for infants include decreased illness such as diarrhea, ear infection, respiratory infection and possible enhanced cognitive development. Some advantages of breast-feeding mom's are decreased postpartum bleeding, earlier return to pre-pregnancy weight, improved bone remineralization postpartum, and reduced risk of breast and ovarian cancers.

There are also significant social and health benefits to the nation. These include reduced cost of health care and reduced employee absences due to childhood illness. Individual families can benefit economically by reducing their food purchases an estimated $400 per year by not utilizing artificial feeding. However, there are some situations in which breast-feeding is not in the best interest of the infant. Those are usually identified early in the care of the infant and should be discussed with your primary care manager.

Breast milk has often been described as the perfect food. It is easily digestible and contains many nutrients and antibodies that are reproduced in any laboratory. Compelling research evidence has shown that breast-feeding provides benefits for infant development, growth and immunity while protecting maternal health.

Recommendation of the American Academy of Pediatrics:

The national health agency, People 2010, has set an objective to increase breast-feeding in the postpartum period to 75 percent. The recommended length of time for exclusive breast-feeding from the first 6 months. Introduction of complementary table foods is encouraged to continue until 12 months of age.

'Fad diet' may be harmful

T.W. writes: "I would like to lose some weight. I've tried various diets and exercise but have not been successful in the past. I'm thinking about trying the high-protein, low-carb diet that I've been hearing about. What do you think?"

Dear T.W.,

I would advise you not to go on a high-protein, low-carbohydrate diet! This type of diet is totally inappropriate for successful weight loss. It is harmful to your body and significantly deficient in important nutrients. Let me explain this further.

First of all, high-protein, low-carbohydrate diets are based on a rather obscure theory that a high intake of carbohydrate forces the body to secrete excessive amounts of insulin. In turn, the excessive insulin promotes greater fat storage. The "theory" also states that "excess" carbohydrate intake will always be stored as fat. Therefore, if an individual decreases carbohydrate intake, there is less insulin secreted and subsequently less fat storage. This is absolutely not true, and there is no scientific research to back up this "theory." Insulin is not a bad hormone. Insulin is the key that unlocks a cell so that glucose from the diet can enter the cell and be used for energy. Under normal conditions, the human body tends to prefer carbohydrate as a ready energy source over fat. Additionally, it is much more difficult to transform carbohydrate into fat for storage, so the body tends to want to store fat intake rather than carbohydrate intake. Furthermore, a regular exercise program that is associated with an appropriate weight management regimen will train the body to more efficiently utilize insulin (forcing insulin levels back to normal more rapidly) and more efficiently manage the carbohydrate and fat metabolic pathways.

Secondly, high-protein, low-carbohydrate diets do cause fats to be broken down. However, the fats are broken down incorrectly. If there is insufficient carbohydrate in the diet, fats are not broken down into nice, component fatty acids, but are instead broken down into ketone bodies. Ketone bodies can be used by the body for energy if necessary. However, ketone bodies are acidic little entities that tend to do harmful things to the body, particularly if they accumulate in large quantities in the blood stream and for long periods of time. Individuals following this type of diet can force their bodies into conditions very similar to those of an out-of-control diabetic who is entering a dangerous stage called ketoacidosis. In addition, a human body running on ketone bodies faces early fatigue, a decrease in the brain's cognitive (thinking) processes, and a decrease in reflexes.

Thirdly, this type of diet forces an individual to consume very large quantities of protein. Unfortunately, along with the large intake of protein, there is a concurrently large intake of fats, as there are little to no "fat-free" proteins. This high-fat intake significantly increases the risk for coronary artery disease.

High-protein, low-carbohydrate diets are deficient in many important nutrients, including the B-vitamins, vitamin C and vitamin A. This diet is deficient in many minerals as well. Furthermore, it is deficient in fiber, both the soluble and insoluble types. In an athletic individual, this type of diet forces a depletion of glycogen (carbohydrate) stores in the muscles, leading to poor athletic performance and early fatigue during competition.

One important additional point against this type of diet is that it does nothing to promote the long-term lifestyle changes that are necessary for successful lifelong weight management. A basic rule to remember is that for a weight management plan to be successful, it has to be something you can follow for the rest of your life. And a high-protein, low-carbohydrate diet is definitely not something that fits this rule!

A dinner was held recently at the American Legion Hall, Burton-Cowell Post 265 Jacksonville to honor all Korean War Veterans, both locally and surrounding areas. Guest of Honor/Speaker for the occasion was retired Maj. Gen. Lloyd H. Wilkerson who served with the 5th Marine Regiment during the Chosin Reservoir Campaign. The dinner was held on June 25, the 51st Anniversary of the beginning of the Korean War, and was catered by Hilda's of Jacksonville, N.C.

between the two Corps. "We're similar in the way we train, but [both Marine Corps] can offer pointers on how to train better."

For instance, Lendof mentioned that during a knot-tying class, both forces used basically the same techniques, but the Chileans, who train here annually, were able to offer tips on how to perform quicker.

Chilean Commando platoon commander 2nd Lt. Gonzalo Carcamo echoed Lendof's opinion.

"We're similar, but have different techniques," said Carcamo, a native of the self-claimed "World's south-most city," Punta Arenas. Carcamo also said he was satisfied with his Camp Lejeune training experience. "I'm very proud to work with the U.S. Marines."

The bilateral training was also a homecoming for one U.S. Marine. Sgt. Brian K. Somers, from Tucson, Ariz., has been stationed in Chile since January on the Personnel Exchange Program. This exercise marks his first trip back to the states this year. For Somers, the biggest transition for the Chilean Marines he traveled here with was adjusting to the heat.

"It's winter right now in Chile," said Somers, who explained the average temperature in southern Chile now is near 40 below zero. "It's a drastic change."

Somers has lived exclusively among the Chileans for the last seven months, and has begun to understand the differences between them and the U.S. Marines.

"The average Chilean lance corporal equivalent has been in about five to years," he said. "They put in a lot more time for their rank."

Somers also is helping the bilateral training here by translating between the two forces. He said he spoke some Spanish growing up, but learned most of the language since he came in the Corps.

"I didn't really know the language until I went to the Marine Corps' Defense Language Institute," explained Somers.

The bilateral training concluded July 20 with a cultural day and a picnic. This year's training marked the sixth straight year the Chileans have trained at Camp Lejeune.

programs of instruction. One way he accomplished this was reducing training time by 5 percent and lecture time by 10 percent.

"The highlight of my tour at MCCSSS was working with the best Marines, Sailors and civilian employees in the Department of Defense," Stein said.

Stein's personal decorations include the Meritorious Service Medal with gold star in lieu of fourth award and Navy Commendation Medal.

He is married to the former Marcia L. Stefanik of Syracuse, N.Y. They have one daughter, Christina, who recently completed her sophomore year at Wake Forest University.

Pasco, of Fairfax, Va., entered the engineer field after being commissioned in the Corps in 1978. Since then, he has filled many command and staff billets, to include platoon, company and detachment commander. He also served as an operations and logistics officer, a battalion executive officer, a staff platoon commander and an instructor at The Basic School in Quantico, Va. In 1992, he was assigned overseas to the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia as the senior advisor to 3rd Battalion, Royal Saudi Marine Corps.

Pasco is a graduate of the Army's Engineer Officer Advanced Course, the Advanced Logistics Officer course, the Marine Advisor's Course, Instructional Management School, CSS staff planning courses at the Marine Expeditionary Unit and Marine Expeditionary Brigade levels, Navy Public Works Officer Course, Navy Family Housing Management Institute, the Marine Corps Senior Leader's Seminar, Marine Corps Command and Staff College, and the Senior Officer Course in Military Justice and Civil Law.

He holds a bachelor's degree in biology and a master's degree in national security and strategic studies.

His military decorations include the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, Meritorious Service Medal with gold star, Navy-Marine Corps Commendation Medal with gold star, Joint Service Achievement Medal and the Navy Achievement Medal.

His and his wife Emily have a son, Gregory and a daughter, Jackie.

Editors note: Col. Stein doesn't have any official orders yet. He is awaiting a final interview for an assignment at the State University of New York Maritime College as the commandant of cadets.

Marine for life

Staff Sgt. Michelle C. Smith
Marine Combat Correspondent

The Department of the Navy has several programs for Marines and sailors transitioning back to civilian life after honorably serving their country. The Marine Corps is taking its motto "Semper Fidelis," Latin for "always faithful" even further.

Under the direction of the commandant of the Marine Corps, the Marine for Life/Semper Fidelis Association Program is being developed to improve assistance to Marines who transition from active service while reemphasizing the value of an honorable discharge. The program includes initiatives involving commanders and the Marine Corps' culture, but its groundbreaking element will be the establishment of an organization for Marine Corps "alumni," the Semper Fidelis Association.

"What makes this program different from all other transition-assistance programs is that it will provide a web-based, nationwide network of local hometown Marine and Marine-friendly information, as well as a Hometown Link, a Marine in various home areas to provide sponsorship and face-to-face assistance," said Maj. Gary D. Dean, project officer.

"It will provide Marines with location-specific information such as schools in the area as well as plugging them into the Marine and Military network."

With Hometown Links anticipated in the major geographic areas corresponding to current 183 Reserve sites, the program that transitioning Marines are not "Marine family" when they leave active duty, the Tucson, Ariz. native.

"By doing so, it (the program) will become our credo of "Once a Marine, Always a Marine" and provide tangible evidence of the value of being a Marine," he said.

Hometown Links will be located in the program's "proof of concept test" sites in Ga., Charlotte, N.C., Chicago, Fort Worth, Louisville, Ky. and Tampa, Fla. The program will recruit from Marine Corps Bases at Camp Lejeune, N.C. and Camp Pendleton to identify Marines transitioning to the program and letting them know about the program. Marines can receive sponsorship assistance.

The test phase will validate the program. Hometown Links sponsoring Marines will determine the viability of volunteer recruitment and provide feedback for program refinement.

According to Dean, a Marine transition site needs to either have a Hometown Link or go to the website (www.MarineForLife.com) to obtain Healthful and more plentiful eating has become a little easier for eligible servicemembers thanks to a subsistence allowance recently enacted by Congress.

"The main goal of the Family Subsistence Supplemental Allowance is to increase a member's income by an amount intended to remove the member's household from eligibility under the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Stamp program," said 1st Lt. F. Greg Harris, II Marine Expeditionary Force disbursing here. "However, a member does not have to be in receipt of food stamps to be eligible for participation and entitlement of FSSA."

The criteria for qualification of FSSA are household size and the joint household income, which must fall below 130 percent of the federal poverty line.

The difference of income and the poverty line will be the amount of FSSA given, but the sum given each month is not to exceed $500," Harris said.

Joint household income is defined as the income of individuals who live together and purchase food and prepare meals for their home consumption," explained Harris.

Word of the voluntary program, which came into effect May 1, is beginning to spread here. At II MEF, seven Marines are participating in the FSSA program, said Harris.

"I found out about FSSA after my commanding officer told me about it," said Pfc. Blythe, diary clerk with 2nd Force Support Group.

The Lonestar, Texas native is married and has three children. He and his family live in the Park community of base housing.

"It was a quick and easy process and it's hard to rate FSSA because the guidelines," said Blythe. "My monthly allowance went up about $278 after I applied."

SUMMER from 1B

"Convincer" for a quick demonstration of Newton's third law, the 10 mile per hour "crash", it was observed that forces easily out muscle even the biggest and strongest and that without seat belts even minor fender bender can cause injury. This demonstration also served to remind motorists to wear proper headgear at all times.

Because summer is a time for outdoor cooking, fire water sports, the Fire Department was asked to discuss these activities and point to the simple ways in which they can find themselves in trouble. June first was the start of the season so Inspector Glen Zurek also presented some information on destructive weather preparations for all.

Keith Wright held the group's attention when it came to the subject of substance abuse and, especially alcohol use. Key messages, assigning a designated driver, and using the 24-hour Program, are just a few of the topics that he presented to the group.

The battalion's Motor Transport Section hosted a vehicle maintenance demonstration that included fluid, filter, and tire change, and several other simple do-it-yourself tasks. Vehicle inspections are a quick and easy method of identifying problems that can lead to a break down or a crash.

Tonya Johnson's team of experts focused on health and fitness as a way to reduce the risks associated with poor diet, stress, and excessive alcohol consumption. They also discussed resources available for anger and stress management.

Operational Risk Management requires that commanders look at all aspects of the environment in which their Marines live and work. By calling a halt to the normal activities of the battalion for two days in order to provide a forum for discussion of these safety related topics that can and will save lives demonstrated to his troops his ongoing commitment to their well-being as well as to ensuring that he will have the best possible service II MEF.

Your welfare is no day at the beach

Eastern North Carolina comes alive in the summer. It doesn't matter which beach you go to, all the beaches are packed with sunbathers and swimmers. While most beachgoers are focused on enjoying the beach, beach safety may sometimes be the last thing that comes to mind — until it is too late.

On days are uneventful. We may get a couple of instances related to much alcohol," says Sgt. Myk Nelson, NCOIC of Lifeguards. "We do not encourage alcohol at the beach, if you are over 21, bring a cooler, as long as the contents are cans, NOT glass. It is going to be drinking alcohol, make sure to bring drinking water. It hydrates you."

It is important that beachgoers familiarize themselves with Omitow rules. Pets are only allowed south of Risley Pier. Surfers are not permitted, but must be 100 meters away from swimmers. Fishing is per-

It is important to make sure that patrons stay off the sand dunes, which protect the beach from erosion. Beach driving is allowed on the south side of Risley Pier once an access pass has been obtained from the Traffic Management Office at Bldg. 4000. The speed limit for all areas of the beach is 20 mph. And vehicle radios must remain at a minimum level. "We should not be able to hear music 100 feet from any vehicle," says Nelson.

Proper civilian attire should be worn while attending Omitow Beach. That includes no drugs. Patrons are reminded to use their own sound judgment.

It is hard to stay indoors during a Carolina summer, when the siren's call of the coast beckons. And when outdoor activities come to mind, boating often tops the list. It's rare to see a boat in Eastern Carolina without sailors. Sailors or sightseers cruising along the coast may carry the latest gadgets and recreation, not all come equipped with the most important tool for boating — safety training.

Boating skills can literally mean the difference between life and death. Anyone who plans to spend a significant amount of time on the water should learn boating safety, and two areas are available to do just that. The Coast Guard Auxiliary, Flotilla 20-10, and the United States Coast Guard offer a range of courses in boating safety. According to Vivian Bennett, a public affairs officer with the Coast Guard Auxiliary, the courses are for all levels of boaters.

"We get a wide spectrum of participants," said the New York native and former Marine while registering students for a recent class at the Coast Guard station in Emerald Isle. "Some are thinking about buying a boat, some have had one several years. We even have two auxiliary members sitting in as students."

Other students included Jeanette and Bill Muller, who said they were interested in learning to navigate Carolina waterways, which differ greatly from those in their home state of New York.

"We're unfamiliar with the waterways down here," said Bill Muller, "so we really want to learn navigation from a safety aspect."

In addition to navigation, the basic boating classes cover everything from selecting and piloting a boat to following the "rules of the road" and operating a radio. The only cost is for class materials and books; neither organization charges additional fees for instruction.

The auxiliary's next class will begin in the fall, however, the U.S. Power Squadron has an upcoming boating class at the New Berry Library starting July 23 at 7 p.m. and an intensive, 3-chapter BoatSmart class at Cherry Point August 4 at 9 a.m. Contact Arthur LaVie at (252) 872-9002 for more information.

Part of the appeal of the BoatSmart course offers intensive instruction in boating safety. Eastern Carolina is its proximity to the coast and abundance of rivers and lakes. Learning safe ways to navigate them will ensure you'll be around to enjoy them.

"We just bought a boat," said Jeanette Muller, "and we don't want to have to see those guys again."

This week on Camp Lejeune Today, Sgt. Xavier Lendof, assistant team leader, 2d Force Reconnaissance Battalion, 2d Marine Division, Sgt. Sean Mickel, assistant radio operator, 2d Recon Bn., and Chilean Marine Lt. Gonzalo Carcamo, platoon commander, Chilean Commando Section, give us the down and dirty on their recent joint training. In addition, videographer Pfc. Morgan Catha-Garrett shows us ongoing improvements at Camp Lejeune's state-of-the-art Military Operations in Urban Terrain facility. Master Sgt. Jeffery Hoiston, MOUT staff non-commissioned officer-in-charge, gives us some insight about how the facility is striving for more realism through advanced additions. Also, videographer Cpl. Timothy Bennett tells us about 2d Marine Division's 3rd Annual Scout Sniper Competition at Stone Bay Rifle Range. See all this and more on Camp Lejeune Today at noon and again at 5:30 p.m. Join Yolanda Mayo and Debbie Hoffman as they visit historically significant spots aboard Camp Lejeune on this week's edition of Lejeune

Happenings. Also, see what base commanding general, Maj. Gen. David M. Mize, has to say about his recent arrival here and what he looks forward to during his upcoming tour. Then, Catha-Garrett talks to Staff Sgt. Michael Dowdle, Onslow Beach SNCOIC, about a water safety course where Marines are trained in the art of water rescue. You'll also learn about the Governor's Mentors Program from Valerie Collins, executive director, who explains the history of the program and shows us how it brightens the lives of many youths in Onslow County. Lejeune Happenings airs twice daily on LCTV-10 at 12:30 p.m. and again at 6. You can also catch Lejeune Happenings on FOX 8 and 14 Saturdays at 7:30 a.m. Visit Israel on this week's Joyful Noise, which features "Hymns You Know and Love." Kidman

McGregor

Osment

Moulin Rouge (PG-13), one of the new movies now playing on base, is a bold musical drama, set in the notorious Paris cabaret of the same name during Bohemian, turn-of-the-19th-century Paris - where the cancan dance ruled, hipsters first dabbled in psychedelics and brooding artists met their muses in seedy clubs.

The film is a romantic tale of a young writer with a magical gift for poetry who defies his bourgeois father by moving to the Bohemian underworld of Montmartre. He is taken in by the absinthe-soaked artist Toulouse-Lautrec, whose party-hard lifestyle centers around the Moulin Rouge, a world of sex, drugs and the shocking cancan. The young writer falls into a passionate, but ultimately doomed, love affair with the star of the Moulin Rouge.

Nicole Kidman (To Die For) stars as Satine the Sparkling Diamond, the star attraction of the Moulin Rouge and the most famous and beautiful nightclub courtesan in France. Ewan McGregor (Trainspotting) plays Christian, the aspiring poet from a middle-class family who falls in with a rough crowd and embarks on a love affair with Satine.

John Leguizamo (William Shakespeare's Romeo + Juliet) appears as Toulouse-Lautrec, the famous nightclub regular; Jim Broadbent (Topsy Turvy) is Zidler, the owner of Moulin Rouge; and Richard Roxburgh plays the wealthy Duke of Worcester, a man who will bankroll Moulin Rouge's owner in return for Satine's body and soul.

Director/writer Baz Luhrmann (Strictly Ballroom, Romeo + Juliet) created Moulin Rouge, which is very visual and spectacularly drenched in color, décor and other eye-popping effects.

As with his Romeo + Juliet, Luhrmann mixes contemporary music with the 1899 setting. The soundtrack consists mostly of 1970s' music from such artists as Eric Clapton, U2 and Sly & the Family Stone. Other contributors include Bono, David Bowie and Fatboy Slim. The soundtrack also features Christina Aguilera, Lil' Kim, Mya and Pink remaking the hit-single Lady Marmalade. Kidman and McGregor sing their songs and, surprisingly, have beautiful voices.

According to Luhrmann, Moulin Rouge is "a reinvention of the musical form. We've given it a post-modern form. We've taken all the culture of the last 100 years, torn it up and pieced it back together to make our own world."

Moulin Rouge is one of the first real musicals from Hollywood in many years.

A.I.: ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE
If you can't wait 'til it hits base, A.I.: Artificial Intelligence (PG-13) is playing in Jacksonville.

A.I.: Artificial Intelligence is a science fiction drama about a time in the future when artificial beings are used to maintain the human way of life, and when a robot boy begins to take an emotional journey toward becoming something more.

Just imagine - sometime in the distant future, after the polar ice caps have melted and major flooding has devastated most major cities - a world now run by robots with highly sophisticated artificial intelligence. In the midst of it all stands one boy alone with a robotic teddy bear who long for something more ...

Haley Joel Osment (Sixth Sense) stars as the 12-year-old "boy" robot named David, made-to-order for a family who has lost a young son. Living with humans Henry and Monica Swinton, played by Sam Robards (Bounce) and Frances O'Connor (Bedazzled), David begins to question where he truly belongs when he faces rejection by humans and machines alike.

With Gigolo Joe, an older android, played by Jude Law (The Talented Mr. Ripley, Enemy at the Gates), our little artificial man goes off on a quest to become real.

Also starring in this great, heart-tugging ix-laden film are William Hurt (One True Thing) as Professor Hobby; Brendan Gleeson (Braveheart) as Lord Johnson-Johnson; and Jack Angel (Toy Story II) as the voice of Teddy.

From the Front Row
REINHILD MOLDENHAUER
HUNEYCUTT

Director Steven Spielberg (E.T., Schindler's List, Saving Private Ryan) took on this project, which the late Stanley Kubrick (Full Metal Jacket, The Shining, Spartacus, 2001: A Space Odyssey) dreamed of for nearly two decades. Upon his death two years ago, he left reams of notes, sketches and pre-production papers. Spielberg then picked up the reins of the project and guided it to completion by not only directing the film, but also picking up a rare screenwriting credit.

A.I.: Artificial Intelligence is a journey of ideas and emotions presented by a superb filmmaker and entertainer. It explores the whole idea of the difference between man and machine in the future.

Having a hard time deciding which movie to see? These movies are playing at Camp Lejeune and New River theaters this week:

Angel Eyes: Jennifer Lopez, Jim Caviezel. While pursuing a suspect of female Chicago police officer nearly becomes the victim of a fatal ambu- mysterious stranger intervenes and saves her life. As they fall in love, the truth about each other and are forced to deal with the secrets from Rated R for language, violence and a scene of sexuality.

What's the Worst That Could Happen?: Martin Lawrence, Danny DeVito. A professional thief gets a tip for an easy heist at a billionaire's "unoccupied" mansion. He goes for it; after all, what's the worst that could happen? Rated R for language and sexual content.

A Knight's Tale: Heath Ledger, Rufus Sewell. A young squire with a gift hits the road with his cohorts after his master dies suddenly. On the job stumble upon an unknown writer who agrees to forge genealogy documents pass the squire off as a knight. With newly minted history in hand, the sets out to prove himself a worthy knight and finds romance along the PG-13 for action violence, some nudity and brief sex-related dialogue.

Pearl Harbor: Ben Affleck, Josh Hartnett. Set during the bombing of Pearl Harbor, two friends are caught up in the events that drew the United States into World War II and find themselves in love with the same woman. Rated PG-13 for sustained war sequences, images of wounded, brief sensuality and some language.

The Animal: Rob Schneider, Colleen Haskell. Marvin dreamed of being a cop until his animal instincts start taking over his body at the wrong time for some crude and sexual humor.

SRP readers bowled over

Summer Reading Program participants were "bowed" over by our most recent surprise outing. Approximately 50 children hit the lanes at the Harriotte B. Smith Bowling Center as the SRP continues all along.

This week's SRP theme is "Seeking ... Under the Sea." Weekly programs will be held Tuesdays at 10 a.m. for kindergarten through third graders, Wednesdays at 1 p.m. for fourth through sixth graders. Hammocks Beach State park staff will be on hand this week to showcase the wonderful "Under the Sea."

The SRP finale will be held on July 27 at 2 p.m. at the Harriotte B. Smith Library. Author Susan Priss and Miss Priss will make a special appearance to send off the "bookworms." Certificates of participation, prizes, refreshments and more will be available. All children from toddlers to eighth graders are invited.

The reading fun continues with Storytime. The Harriotte B. Smith Library hosts Storytime for preschool children Monday at 9 a.m. Two times, Wednesday at 9 and 10 a.m., are available at Tarawa Terrace Community Center. Storytime is Thursday at the Base Library reference room from 9:30 to 10 a.m. for two- to four-year-olds and from 10:30 to 11 a.m. for four- to six-year-olds. This week's Storytime theme is "Under the Sea."

The Library is hosting the Homeschooling Workshop August 11 at 2 p.m. Anyone interested in learning more about homeschooling is encouraged to attend. Even if homeschooling is not a choice for you right now, the information supplied during this seminar may be of value to you in the future. Jeff Townsend, president, Board of Directors, North Carolinians For Home Education, Valerie Cifuentes and panelists from ECHO (East Coast Homeschool Organization) will be prepared to discuss all the points of homeschooling, such as how to begin, legalities, requirements, resources and support, as well as answer questions. Handouts, including NCHS brochures, will be available. All homeschool families are registered with this agency.

Adults interested in this program are welcome to call and/or drop by the circulation desk to register. The free seminar is limited to 40 spaces.

This homeschooling workshop is just another example of the library being "The Very Best Place to Start."

See you at the library!

The Harriotte B. Smith Library is open:
Monday through Thursday 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.
Saturday, Sunday, Holidays 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Camp Johnson Branch Library is open:
Monday through Thursday 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.,
Friday and Saturday 2 to 7 p.m.,
Sunday and Holidays 2 to 9 p.m.

For more information about the programs offered through the library, call 451-5724. Jean Sybrant is the programs and publicity coordinator at the Harriotte B. Smith Library.

STUDENT MEALS

CLDS offers nutritious breakfasts and lunches each school day. Breakfast is $0.75 (PreK-12). Lunch may be purchased for $1.35 (PreK-5), $1.45 (6-12) or $2.35 (adults). Nutritious ala carte foods are also available. Students from eligible families may receive free or reduced price meals. Applications for free and reduced price meals are available at each school and must be completed each school year. Families are encouraged to complete applications prior to July 25 to avoid a possible delay in benefits. Applications may be dropped off at any one of the Camp Lejeune Dependents Schools or at the School Food Services Center Office, Bldg. 4021, Midway Park.

Screening offered

Camp Lejeune Dependents Schools' elementary school children, except Tarawa Terrace II, will have a preschool screening for children who will be four years old by August 16, 2001 and who live in base housing or whose parents hold a 90-day housing letter. All preschool children living in Tarawa Terrace Housing area will attend a screening at Tarawa Terrace I Elementary School.

Only exceptions to the age requirement are for three or four year olds who have developmental delays and have an Individualized Education Program (IEP) at the Camp Lejeune Dependents Schools specifying school education as a service. The screening is a half-day program that takes place through Fridays. There is a morning and afternoon session each of these days. Mondays are set aside for workshops, home visits, parent-teacher conferences, training and for staff development activities. There is no charge for attending this program. Transportation is provided for children who live 1.5 or more miles from the school who attend a Base Child Development Center or a transportation listed as a needed service on an IEP. The screening meets the housing and age requirements for the screening program and you would like to enroll him/her in school. The screening is taking place at all of the elementary schools. If your child is three or four years old and you have concerns about his/her development and would like a free screening, contact Student Services at the Superintendent's Office, 451-2461 ext. 241 to schedule an appointment.

SAFETY from 1C

that they take their charcoal with them and not dump it on the beach," says Nelson. No camping or fires are allowed after dark.

Designated swimming areas have been marked off at Onslow Beach. Swimmers are encouraged to swim with a buddy and not swim over 150 yards out. It is extremely important to obey the lifeguards at all times. "Patrons may be asked to leave the beach for the day if they cannot follow the lifeguard's instructions. We are just trying to watch out for the safety of everyone," says Nelson. Lifeguards are available every day, now through Labor Day, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Preventing sunburn is also a serious concern at Onslow Beach. Physical blockers, such as zinc oxide, or chemical sunscreens, such as a SPF 15 or stronger, should be used while attending the beach. Make sure you apply it often, especially if you are swimming or sweating from the heat.

By following these rules and using common sense, everyone should have a great time at the beach. Make sure you come prepared. If you forget something, the Exchange Beach Shop has everything you need for a safe summer. Have a safe summer!

Kayla Langlitz is the marketing manager for MCCA.

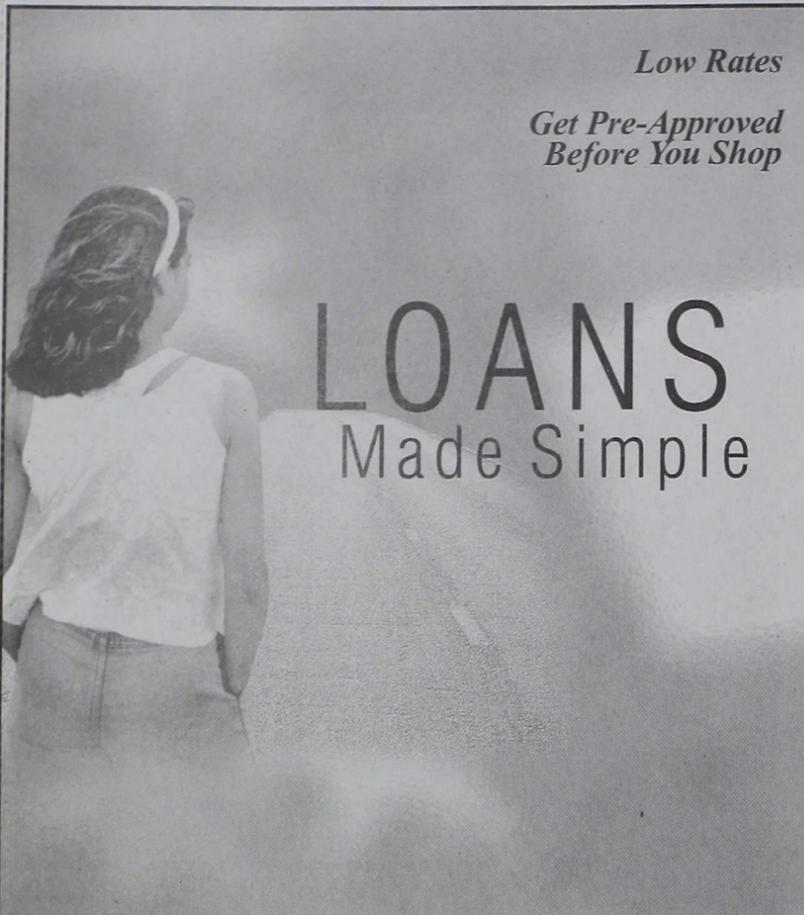

Here are a few helpful tips to protect yourself while enjoying the summer months:

- Apply sunscreen with a Sun Protection Factor (SPF) of at least 15, and reapply every two hours.
- Wear an approved hat and sunglasses and stay in the shade whenever possible.
- Avoid reflective surfaces – they can reflect up to 85% of the sun's damaging rays.
- Drink plenty of water (at least 8 glasses a day) even if you are not thirsty. Avoid caffeine and alcohol, which will dehydrate you.
- Wear light-colored, loose clothing.

Swimming:

- Learn to swim, and teach your children to swim.
- Always swim with a buddy.
- Never leave children alone.
- Read and obey posted signs.
- Always check depth before diving. Even if you have checked before, conditions can change.
- Know your swimming limits and stay - within them.

- Do not run on a pool deck.
- Alcohol and swimming do not mix.
- Do not chew gum or eat while swimming.
- Keep electrical cords or products away from pool areas.
- Know your local weather. Get out of the water immediately if there is lightning in the area.
- Always swim or surf at places patrolled by lifeguards.
- If you are unsure of surf conditions, ask a lifeguard.
- If you get into trouble in the water, don't panic. Raise your arm for help, float and wait for assistance.
- Always float with a current or under tow. If you get caught in a rip tide, don't panic. Staying calm will help conserve energy. If you are a strong swimmer, swim at a 45-degree angle across and in the same direction as the current until you reach the breaking wave zone, then return to shore. If you are a weak or tired swimmer, swim parallel to the shore until you reach the breaking wave zone, then swim back to shore or signal for help.

RCIA

rite of Christian Initiation of Adults program designed for adults to learn and grow in their faith. If you are an adult Catholic who has yet received the Sacrament of Confirmation or who wishes to learn about Catholicism, then RCIA is for you. Classes are held Wednesdays at 7 p.m. in the Catholic Chapel Annex. For information, contact Joe Brington at the Base Chaplain's Office, Bldg. 67, or by phone at 451-3210 or 451-8636.

New Millennium Cafe

Cappuccino, movies, fellowship and good times are the foundation of the 2d FSSG Religious Ministry Team's New Millennium Cafe, which debuted with Left Behind, the first in a series of movies filled with danger, intrigue and deception. The Cafe will continue the third Sunday of each month at 6 p.m. The entire family is invited to this free evening of fellowship, discussion and scripture. For more information, contact Cmdr. Henry Hensley at 451-5711.

Word of Life

Visit Word of Life Fellowship Ministries for daily noon prayer. Word of Life also hosts Sunday school at 9:45 a.m. and Sunday worship services at 11 a.m. and again at 6 p.m. Enjoy Tuesday Bible study at 7 p.m., Wednesday service at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday prayer service at 9 a.m. Word of Life Fellowship Ministries is located at 900 Bell Fork Rd. Need a prayer? Call 577-PRAY. Need a ride? Call 353-9000.

Parents Supporting Parents

Everyone needs a little help sometimes, and parents of children with special needs want to be there for each other. Come out to the II MEF Volunteer Center, Bldg. H-14, from 10 a.m. to noon the last Monday of each month and enjoy guest speakers covering topics like stress management and making a move with a special needs family member. Childcare is provided; however, space is limited, so reserve early. For more information, call Mary Prince at 451-3212 ext. 206.

LDS 2001-2002 Bus Schedule

Transportation to and from school is only provided to students living 2 miles or more from home district school. The LDS bus will provide transportation for special needs students, regardless of distance. Individualized Transportation Plan provides for transportation. CLDS bus will contact parents of students with special needs in regard to the bus schedule.

19th Century message holds true today Get it done 'Untitled' masterwork still has significance

Cpl. Allan Grdovich
GLOBE Editor

Be quiet and get it done. That is Elbert Hubbard's point in his masterpiece, A Message to Garcia. The short article ran in 1899 in The Philistine and was written in about an hour after an argument with his son. It was originally printed without a heading, according to Hubbard.

The significance of the article reached more people than the author had ever imagined. He considered his accomplishment "a lucky accident" as stated in Apologia, his written account of A Message to Garcia's success.

Soon after being printed, various news agencies, including the American News Company, requested thousands of copies of the article, which was later reprinted in booklet form. The success did not stop there.

A Message to Garcia is said to have been distributed to every Japanese government worker, soldier and civilian alike, during the reign of Emperor Mikado, according to Hubbard, and it has been translated into all written languages.

According to the story, the scenario takes place during the outbreak of the Spanish-American War. A young lieutenant named Andrew Summers Rowan was chosen for the difficult mission of getting a message, by any means necessary, to Cuban revolutionary forces leader, General Garcia.

In the story, the author commends Rowan for accepting his task with seemingly blind obedience. During his venture to get this message to the general, Rowan was dropped off at night on the Cuban coast and trekked his exhausted body four days through the other side of the hostile island without any questions or complaints. He just did as he was told.

Today the saying "it is hard to find good help these days" seems to be common. In A Message to Garcia, the reader is led to believe what was old is new. The trifles of the 19th century may hold true for today's employers. Today, it is hard for leaders in this MTV society to find a man who will pass "a message to Garcia," without question, or ask for some help or put it off 'til later.

In conclusion, what may have been used for a publication turned out to be an inspirational tool and portrayed a simple message Hubbard took to heart. Just get the job done.

The following is the complete text of Hubbard's original essay, published untitled in 1899 in The Philistine. The essay can be found on the World Wide Web at www.retroactive.com/artsncrafts/garcia1.html.

In all this Cuban business there is one man stands out on the horizon of my memory like Mars at perihelion. When war broke out between Spain and the United States, it was very necessary to communicate quickly with the leader of the Insurgents. Garcia was somewhere in the mountain fastnesses of Cuba — no one knew where. No mail or telegraph could reach him. The President must secure his cooperation, and quickly.

What to do! Someone said to the President, "There's a fellow by the name of Rowan will find Garcia for you, if anybody can."

Rowan was sent for and given a letter to be delivered to Garcia. How "the fellow by name of Rowan" took the letter, sealed it up in an oil-skin pouch, strapped it over his heart, in four days landed by night off the coast of Cuba from an open boat, disappeared into the jungle, and in three weeks came out on the other side of the island, having traversed a hostile country on foot, and having delivered his letter to Garcia, are things I have no special desire now to tell in detail.

The point I wish to make is this: McKinley gave Rowan a letter to be delivered to Garcia; Rowan took the letter and did not ask, "Where is he at?" By the Eternal! There is a man whose form should be cast in deathless bronze and the statue placed in every college in the land. It is not book-learning young men need, nor instruction about this or that, but a stiffening of the vertebrae which will cause them to be loyal to a trust, to act promptly, concentrate their energies; do the thing — "carry a message to Garcia!"

General Garcia is dead now, but there are other Garcias. No man who has endeavored to carry out an enterprise where many hands were needed, but has been well-nigh appalled at times by the imbecility of the average man — the inability or unwillingness to concentrate on a thing and do it. Slipshod assistance, foolish inattention, dowdy indifference, and half-hearted work seem the rule; and no man succeeds, unless by hook or crook, or threat, he forces or bribes other men to assist him; or mayhap, God in His goodness performs a miracle, and sends him an Angel of Light for an assistant. You, reader, put this matter to a test: You are sitting now in your office — six clerks are within your call. Summon any one and make this request: "Please look in the encyclopedia and make a brief memorandum for me concerning the life of Corregio."

Will the clerk quietly say, "Yes, sir," and go do the task?

On your life, he will not. He will look at you out of a fishy eye, and ask one or more of the following questions:

- Who was he?
- Which encyclopedia?
- Where is the encyclopedia?
- Was I hired for that?

Don't you mean Bismarck? What's the matter with Charlie doing it? Is he dead? Is there any hurry? Shan't I bring you the book and let you look it up yourself?

What do you want to know for? And I will lay you ten to one that after you have answered the questions, and explained how to find the information, and why you want it, the clerk will go off and get one of the other clerks to help him find Garcia — and then come back and tell you there is no such man. Of course I may lose my bet, but according to the Law of Average, I will not.

Now if you are wise you will not bother to explain to your "assistant" that Corregio is indexed under the C's, not in the K's, but you will smile sweetly and say, "Never mind," and go look it up yourself.

And this incapacity for independent action, this moral stupidity, this infirmity of the will, this unwillingness to cheerfully catch hold and lift, are the things that put pure socialism so far into the future. If men will not act for themselves, what will they do when the benefit of their effort is for all? A first mate with knotted club seems necessary; and the dread of getting "the bounce" Saturday night holds many a worker in his place.

Advertise for a stenographer, and nine times out of ten who apply can neither spell nor punctuate — and do not think it necessary to.

Can such a one write a letter to Garcia?

"You see that book-keeper," said the foreman to me in a large factory.

"Yes, what about him?" "Well, he's a fine accountant, but if I'd send him to town on an errand, he might accomplish the errand all right, and, on the other hand, might stop at four saloons on the way, and when he got to Main Street, would forget what he had been sent for."

Can such a man be entrusted to carry a message to Garcia?

We have recently been hearing much maudlin sympathy expressed for the "down-trodden denizen of the sweat shop" and the "homeless wanderer searching for honest employment," and with it all often go many hard words for the men in power.

Nothing is said about the employer who grows old before his time in a vain attempt to get frowzy ne'er-do-wells to do intelligent work; and his long patient striving with "help" that does nothing but loaf when his back is turned. In every store and factory there is a constant weeding-out process going on. The employer is constantly sending away "help" that have shown capacity to further the interests of the business are being taken on. No matter how good the sorting continues, only if times are hard and scarce, this sorting is done finer — but out, the incompetent and unworthy go. It is of the fittest. Self-interest prompts every man to keep the best — those who can carry a message.

I know one man of really brilliant parts, the ability to manage a business of his own is absolutely worthless to anyone else, besides with him constantly the insane suspicion of employer is oppressing, or intending to oppress, cannot give orders, and he will not receive a message be given him to take to Garcia would probably be, "Take it yourself."

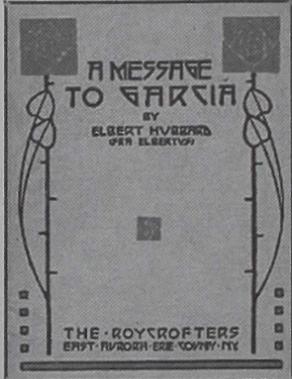

Tonight this man walks the streets, work, the wind whistling through his coat. No one who knows him dare employ he is a regular firebrand of discontent. Various to reason, and the only thing that holds him is the toe of a thick-soled No. 9 boot.

Of course I know that one deformed is no less to be pitied as a physical cripple; but in your pitying a tear, too, for the men who are carried on a great enterprise, whose hours are not limited by the whose hair is fast turning white, struggle to hold the line in dovensence, slipshod imbecility, and ingratitude which, but for them, would be both hungry and honest.

Have I put the matter to you? Possibly I have; but when all is gone a-slumming I wish to see sympathy for the man who suffers, man who, against great odds, makes the efforts of others, and, having done, finds there's nothing in it: bare board and clothes.

I have carried a dinner-pail and worked wages, and I have also been an employer. I know there is something to be said on both sides: no excellence, per se, in poverty; rags and mendicancy; and all employers are not rich-handed, any more than all poor men are.

My heart goes out to the man who dares when the "boss" is away, as well as when he is present. And the man who, when given a letter for delivery, takes the missive, without asking any questions, and with no lurking intention of carrying the nearest sewer, or of doing aught else, never gets "laid off," nor has to go on strike for wages. Civilization is one long anxious search for such individuals. Anything such a man is granted; his kind is so rare that no employer would let him go. He is wanted in every city, in every office, shop, store and factory. The world cries out for such; he is needed, badly — the man who can carry a message.

OUT & ABOUT

Coin Club

As recently as the 1960s, coins of numerous designs circulated freely. Today, fewer "collectable" coins are found in pocket change. To address this challenge and many other aspects of numismatics, the Jacksonville/Camp Lejeune Coin Club meets the 2nd Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the USO, located on Tallman Street. The public is invited to attend. For more information, call 455-3963.

Concert in the Park

The Concert in the Park series at Marston Pavilion will feature jazz with St. Charles Street Band July 29 and blues with Tommy B and the Stingers August 26. Bring your lawn chairs, picnic baskets, coolers and the family. All shows are free and open to the public. For more information, call 451-3535.

Fort Macon Concert Series

Fort Macon in Beaufort will conclude its fourth year of free concerts with a show by Bogue Sounds July 27. The concert begins at 7 p.m. Guests are encouraged to bring lawn chairs or blankets and picnic food and beverages (alcohol is not allowed). For more information, call (252) 728-9922 or (252) 726-3775.

Morehead City Concert Series

A summer concert series sponsored by the Morehead City Parks and Recreation Department will include performances by Carolina Beach Club Saturday, Hwy. 49 Blues Band July 28, Delta Bones August 4, Bottomline Band August 11, Allysonhymn August 18, Searee and Ketner August 25 and 40 West September 1. Performances begin at 7 p.m. at Jaycee Park at 9th and Shepard streets. All shows are free and open to the public. For more information, call (252) 726-5083.

Worthy is the Lamb

The annual outdoor drama Worthy is the Lamb runs Thursday through Saturday until August 25 and Friday through Saturday August 26 through September 15 at the Crystal Coast Amphitheatre near Swansboro (look for the sign at the intersection of N.C. 24 and N.C. 58). The White Oak River provides the backdrop for this passion play beginning with John the Baptist's arrival in Jerusalem. For more information, call (800) 662-5960.

Mustang Association

The Jacksonville Tarheel Mustang Association cordially invites the newly selected Marine Corps/Navy Warrant Officers to come join the Mustang association. If interested, contact retired Lt. Col. Peter Tallman Sr. at 353-6440. Wives are also encouraged to participate.

YMCA Volunteers

Join your YMCA as a volunteer and help determine what programs are needed, where they are needed and how you can help better serve the needs of this community. Volunteer opportunities are available to everybody. To volunteer, call 451-9569 or write to Armed Services YMCA, P.O. Box 6085, Midway Park, NC 28544.

Marine Corps League

The Onslow County Detachment of the Marine Corps League meets the second Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at the USO on Tallman Street in Jacksonville. All active-duty, honorably discharged and retired Marines are invited to join this detachment. For further information, call George Barrows at 989-2746. The Cherry Point Detachment meets the third Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. at the Reserve Support Contingency Billeting Complex, Bldg. 3935, MCAS Cherry Point. Blanco leaves legacy Francisco Blanco recently announced his retirement from Lejeune High School, nearly 40 years after finding his way to Camp Lejeune and planting the seed that would put Onslow County at the forefront of a soccer boom.

Paul Thompson
Globe Contributor

Nearly 35 years ago, Francisco R. Blanco scraped and scrounged, borrowing anything he could in order to get his Lejeune High School boys' soccer team to Chapel Hill to compete in the state tournament.

Shorts from the basketball team. Jerseys from the football team. Shin guards from the girls' physical education hockey team. Socks from the baseball team.

"The uniform tells you the story, I borrowed from every sport I could get, but it paid off," Blanco recalled. "You can imagine what kind of uniform we had there, but that's the one that made it all the way to the top."

Blanco, 61, took that rag-tag bunch, consisting mainly of football players, and won the Devilpups' lone soccer championship in late 1966, defeating Greensboro Page for the title.

"The football team that year had a season that was kind of so-so, and they were a little bit disappointed because they felt they could do better," he said. "So I went to the football team and said 'Guys, how would you like to win a state championship?' And they said 'Doing what?' and I said playing soccer."

"Most of them were pretty good athletes, most were in pretty good condition already. This tournament was going to take place ... in December, so since they had just finished their season, they still wanted to keep on playing. As a joke, they said yes, we'll do it. The next thing we know, we start practicing, somehow we came up with the uniforms ... we're playing, we're winning, we're going all the way and it was fantastic."

"Nowhere did I ever dream that we would ever get that championship. We were so happy."

That was the first step in what turned out to be a 35-year career for Blanco, who recently announced his retirement from Lejeune High.

It was also what amounts to the first seed in an almost unimaginable soccer boom

Raiders kick off season Saturday

The Jacksonville Raiders in action at a scrimmage game recently held at Camp Lejeune.

Timmi Toier
Sports Editor

Set to kick off its second season in Onslow County, with a home opener against rivals, the Goldsboro Bulldawgs, the Jacksonville Raiders semi-pro football team already knows the battle that waits Saturday night at Liversedge Field.

"This will be the hardest game we will play," said George Speight, Raiders head coach. "We've had this (rival) going on since 1999, when they beat us twice. We cleaned up against them last season, so this year, it's like we're starting fresh."

Starting fresh with a new defense. Backs, Ky Ky Brown and David Williams along with end Cory Powell return for another season as key players, but the team has added new defensive talent like linebackers, Steven Bloodworth and James Blachshier.

And Speight is banking on Edwin Garcia to springboard the defense after losing last years solid defensive back, Herbert Rembert. "We've got a very coachable team this year, and our job is to put a positive product on the field," said Speight.

The Raiders will return with the core of its offensive line: Theron Wigfall (32/728.8) who was number one in receiving for the league last season; Kendrick "Kool-aid" Pollack (48/112.6 for 1141 yards), who was number three in the league in passing; and running backs Rodney Washington and Joe Stevenson.

"We're lacking slightly offensively, but we've got some bright spots on our line, like Kool-Aid and Wigfall," said Raider Offensive Coordinator, Greg Hampton. "Overall, we look good. We've incorporated a new offense and we're coming in solid this season."

Members of the Class AAA, Mason-Dixon Football League, the Raiders' games are played under NFL rules, logging the team in as 'semi-pro.'

But semi-pro does not mean being compensated for playing.

"This biggest misconception about our team is the public thinks we are get paid to do this. We don't. Not the players, the coaches, or the cheerleaders. We all work full-time jobs and then practice every night at the field. And some of my players head to secondary, part-time jobs after practice at night. We're doing this for the love of the game. That's the only reason," said Speight.

The Mason-Dixon League added six teams to the 2001-2002 season, which means the Raiders will face new competition this year against the Virginia Ravens and the Roanoke Grizzlies.

"From what we've seen they look pretty organized," Hampton said. "We'll exchange film with them [new team] will give us some time to review before we play them the year."

But for now, the Raiders' focus is on a new season Saturday night.

"The biggest misconception about our team is the public thinks we get paid ... we don't. We're doing this for the love of the game."

George Speight
Head Coach
Jacksonville Raiders

A tailgate party will kick off at 4 p.m. for Saturday's opener which is also Military Appreciation night. Cost includes admission to the game, music, food and a greet and meet the Jacksonville Raiders and Raiderettes open at 6 p.m., game time is 7 p.m. and regular admission

"The Bulldawgs have picked new players, and are under new management, so we're not real sure expect," said Speight.

"But being rival teams, we will play us harder than anyone going to be a hard game to call, we will prevail."

"Our players are excited and play. We're this community's team we need their support," said Speight. "We hope to see them in the Saturday."

BLANCO from 1D

in southeastern North Carolina.

Early beginnings

Soccer is in Mexico what football has become in the United States. When a child is old enough to walk, a soccer ball will be placed at his feet.

Moises Blanco was no different with his son, Francisco, born in January 1940 in Merida, the capital of the state of Yucatan in southern Mexico.

"The moment that my father tried to hold me by the hands trying to make me walk," Blanco remembered as his introduction to the sport. "There was usually some type of ball around."

With his father a surgeon and his mother, Dolores, a teacher, Francisco grew up in one of the more affluent families in his neighborhood. Yet it was not until he was nearly a teen-ager that he owned his first soccer ball.

"I recall during my childhood playing out in the street with the kids, and we would make soccer balls with newspapers and rags," he said. "If we needed shin guards, we would use magazines, it was part of childhood over there. We were the family in the neighborhood with the most money, but still most of our games we did not have soccer balls, so we had to make our own."

"I must have been about 12 years old when I first got a real soccer ball. And that was something."

More than just a street player, Blanco was a member of his high school teams at Modelo High School, then American High School.

"I would say I was average," he said of his talents on the field. "Although I recall I was quite competitive and every chance I would get I would be playing soccer. Even though I was average, the only thing I had going for me was I was really into it."

That passion for the game, along with effectiveness in the classroom, garnered Blanco a college scholarship in the United States.

"That's how I managed to come to North Carolina. I was 15 at the time, somehow they managed to get me to North Carolina and I couldn't speak English."

Surviving through soccer

Blanco eventually ended up in Asheville where he attended Warren Wilson Junior College in Swannanoa, but not before added high school work to compensate for his minimal understanding of the native language.

"I found out they had soccer there, and through soccer I was able to survive. I made it to be captain of the team my last year over there."

After his two-year junior college stint, Blanco enrolled in nearby Appalachian State, which at the time had yet to discover the young man's favorite sport.

"No sooner had we arrived to Appalachian than we decided to try and start a team," he said, including a few of his Warren Wilson classmates. "And we found a faculty member, he was the fencing coach at the university, who was willing to help us out with the team. So we started the team at Appalachian and I was able to visit some other schools like Duke University, Chapel Hill and some other smaller colleges in the area."

Suddenly, Blanco found himself enamored with his new surroundings.

"This is when I began to think about the opportunity, thinking I sure like North Carolina."

Just prior to his graduation in 1961 from ASU, two job offers were extended: one from Presbyterian Junior College (which later became St. Andrews) in Maxton and one from a small Marine Corps base on the coast.

Blanco accepted both positions, knowing that the Presbyterian job was only for the summer. One catch on his second job may be why Blanco remained at Camp Lejeune High School.

"When I did get here for my interview ... the superintendent said to me 'You got the job on one condition,' ... he did not want to hire me to come and teach only a year. He wanted me to give my word that I would stay a minimum of five years. I said yes, of course, not knowing that I was gonna stay this long."

Starting small

Four years into his young teaching career, Blanco assembled a club soccer team that went 3-0 playing mainly against teams on base, since no other school had a team. The following year really got the ball rolling.

"In 1966, Dr. Marvin Allen, who was the head coach at UNC Chapel Hill, wrote me a letter ... inviting me to enter my team that season in a tournament which would eventually decide the state champion on the high school level," he said.

"I approached my principal, Dr. Conrad Sloan, and said to him we have this opportunity to represent the high school by playing, but it means we would have to travel in order to compete against teams from Fayetteville and others. And Dr. Sloan ... said 'Do you think we could get somewhere with this?' And I told him 'I think we can.'

"He was the first person to have faith in what we were doing." And with that, soccer was officially put on the map in southeastern North Carolina.

"The impact of that was tremendous all over, but particularly here in Eastern North Carolina."

The following year New Hanover High started a program. Jacksonville High School got into the act in 1977. Shortly thereafter, White Oak, Swansboro and the rest of the county schools followed suit.

Putting his life into it

Blanco's five-year promise eventually turned into 40 years, with the man many know simply as 'Señor' spending 35 of those cultivating and teaching the game to anyone - be it coach, player, parent or just fan - who was interested.

"Now to look back and see how far we have come along, knowing, remembering there was a time when we didn't have any of it. Obviously when I see that and I get to see some of the young ones playing nowadays, I feel very good about that," he said. "When I see the U.S. Soccer Team doing so well, I remember when you mentioned soccer and people would look at you as a foreigner. It's hard to believe soccer being as American as anything else."

Stations make sports switch

Matthew Gottlieb
GLOBE Contributor

There's a change in the airwaves in Onslow County. WSTK-910AM switches all-sports format at 12:07 a.m. Sunday.

The station, purchased by Eastern Communications, is part of a move to the purchase of WJNC-1240AM, which switch to Eastern Communications control time before August 1.

"The goal is to bring the station to prominence in the community," said WSTK's new general manager. "We want the name back out there. There's going to be a format change at both stations for that. We want people to know we're under new ownership and management. It's a fresh start."

Both stations will undergo changes out the summer, with a mix of national programming in effect by September.

WSTK will carry ESPN's national syndicated programs, such as The Tony Danza Show, The Dan Patrick Show and ESPN Night. In regional interest, WSTK will carry N.C. State, the Washington Redskins, Carolina Panthers and Performance Network. The station will also broadcast high school football games. Onslow County ball coaches will take part in halftime shows on Tuesday and Thursday nights in fall.

In the coming weeks, WSTK will purchase Kinston Indians games. "It's a matter of all the equipment together," said Sevy. "We probably play those games in about a month or so."

Jacksonville High School football will move to WJNC after a one-year hiatus. WJNC will continue its broadcasting rights to UNC. WJNC will begin airing Wake Forest sports. The new ownership will air some basketball games and is exploring the possibility of broadcasting high school baseball.

WJNC is switching to a news format, retaining Doug Stephen's morning news and adding conservative talk shows such as Limbaugh and Dr. Laura Schlessinger.

As Eastern Communications acquires stations and completes its adjustments, local sports talk shows will return. "I'm looking forward to it," said Sevy. "The community seems real responsive to it. There seems to be a void left for local programming there's a void we want to fill it and we have ideas."

"If I had one word that would describe it, it would be local. Starting off with a lot of programming that's not local, start getting close to football season that local feel."

MISSION AVIATION FELLOWSHIP

Mission Aviation Fellowship (MAF) is a nonprofit organization that operates the world's largest fleet of private aircraft used for the public good, and MAF has created a communications network that links the entire world.

MAF has been spanning the globe since 1945, serving hurting people today in 22 countries with a fleet of 75 aircraft and 33 e-mail hubs.

Every four minutes an MAF aircraft either takes off or lands somewhere around the world. Each year MAF's 75 aircraft log more than 40,000 flights to more than 3,000 grass or dirt airstrips.

MAF's aviation and information technology serves more than 500

Christian and humanitarian organizations on five continents.

MAF supports Christian workers, evangelists, and teachers; delivers food, seed, and livestock; transports sick and injured villagers; ferries doctors, medicine, and relief supplies; and, in general, carries the materials for a better life to people who need it most.

Running backs battle for best

Once a Marine, always a Marine

Don't look now, but sleepy, little Greeley, Colo., is about to become the stage for the NFL's training-camp story of the year. Writes Jim Armstrong of the Denver Post, "We speak, of course, of the Broncos' halfback situation, where Terrell Davis, a former league MVP, will be trying to prove he isn't the third-best running back on the roster." The story is rife with possibilities, dripping with drama and saturated with subplots.

You've got Davis, who had one foot in the Hall of Fame before a succession of injuries cost him virtually two seasons.

You've got Olandis Gary, who ran for 1,159 yards in three-quarters of a season in 1999 before tearing up a knee in last year's season opener.

Finally, you've got Marine veteran Mike Anderson, who ran for 1,500 yards as a rookie last season despite totaling seven carries in a span of four games.

"Who wins the battle?" writes Armstrong. "Time will tell us soon enough, but, at the moment, here's all you need to know: It is Davis' job to lose. He hasn't produced much since his MVP season in 1998 - 145 carries for 493 yards - but still casts a big shadow. The Broncos' coaches expect him to win the job, expect him to rack up 1,500 yards, expect him to be playing in the Super Bowl in January. Sounds good. Maybe too good."

KAY'S COBRAS SNAG TIE

The Carolina Cobras (7-6), coached by Marine veteran Doug Kay, stayed in a three-way first-place tie in the National Conference's Eastern division (Arena Football League) with the Toronto Phantoms and New York Dragons by defeating the Los Angeles Avengers, 66-28, to break a three-game losing streak.

Toronto downed New Jersey, 52-45, and New York dumped Arizona, 62-55. Buffalo (6-7) lost to Orlando, 48-40, to fall out of the first-place tie.

Carolina closes out the regular season Friday night by hosting Toronto.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

The Coast Guard Academy and Merchant Marine Academy will move from the Freedom Football Conference to the Upstate Collegiate Athletic Association in 2004, bringing the Division III conference to eight football members.

POLK BACK AT MSU

Ron Polk, 57, who became the Southeastern Conference's winningest coach during a 22-year run as coach at Mississippi State, was introduced by Athletic Director Larry Templeton as the school's new coach before a standing-room only gathering at a press conference.

"All I can say is, I'm back," said Polk, a Marine veteran clad in a Mississippi State golf shirt.

"The last five or six days haven't been easy knowing my life had changed when Pat (McMahon) decided to take the job at Florida."

In 28 years as a coach, Polk compiled a 1,122-534 record during stints at Georgia Southern (1972-75), Mississippi State (1976-97) and Georgia (2000-2001).

His teams advanced to the NCAA Tournament 18 times, finished first or second 12 times and played in the NCAA College World Series seven times.

He directed Georgia to a 47-22 mark in the just-completed season, with the Bulldogs earning the school's first SEC baseball crown in 47 years and a berth in this year's College World Series.

In so doing, Polk became the second coach to direct three different schools to college baseball's championship series.

The new MSU skipper signed a four-year contract. Polk inherits a squad that includes 25 of the 32 letter-winners from last season's team that compiled a 39-24 worksheet, won the 2001 SEC Baseball Tournament and advanced to the school's sixth consecutive berth in the NCAA Tournament.

MOVE STILL UNCERTAIN

Officials looking to buy a major-league team and move it to Washington, D.C., have received financial information on the Devil Rays, the Tampa Tribune reported. Rays chairman Vince Naimoli, a Marine veteran, denied the report.

MOTOR SPORTS

David Donohue and his Team Chevrolet started in 40th position but finished 34th in the Sam's Club 300 at Joliet, completing 99 laps before crashing and retiring for $15,795.

GOLF

While Marine veteran Lee Trevino is ending his final major championship, he's thinking about retiring.

"They're going to have to put dirt under my feet to get me out of golf," Trevino said after finishing par 72 in the first round of the Senior Championship at Dearborn, Mich. "I'm not going to be playing 18 tournaments a year, just doing now. The only difference is that I'm playing four majors and 14 three-dayers."

The 61-year-old star has won four of the 50-and-over circuit, the last in the 1997 Seniors' Championship. He won six majors during his career on the regular tour. But Trevino is still one of the tour's biggest draws. Associated Press reported.

He received a large ovation as he teed off in the 18th fairway Thursday, and Nicklaus got as many requests for autographs as Trevino.

Trevino has 29 Senior PGA Tour titles, won 27 times on the regular tour. At 61, he shot a 72-71-75-74-292, collecting $14,000. Meanwhile, Marine veteran Dave Eichel shot a 69-73-74-72-288 to tie for 23rd place with a total of $26,250.

John Gunn is an independent journalist and retired Marine intelligence officer who has written two books on Marines and football. This is an excerpt from his Internet column at www.gulf1.com/COLUMNS/gunn/marines.

CHAMPS from 1D

Ivan Davis (17) and Timothy Owens (14). Micheal Christensen logged in 10 for 8th Comm.

Davis grabbed another 18 points during game two against 8th Comm's Coran Gary with 11. Demetric Nobles scored 10 for 8th Comm's Coran Gary with 11. Demetric Nobles scored 10 for 8th Comm and Micheal Parrish brought in 15 points for the champs, as P-3 took the final win and championship, 58-49.

"It was a heart-breaking defeat," said 8th Comm's head coach, Eddie Jones.

"We went undefeated in regular season play, but lost several games and had to re-group for championship games. P-3 is a real team and we knew it was going to be a good match. My team gave all we had and I am proud of their performance. They stayed composed, focused, but P-3 really wanted the victory. My hat's off to them," said Eddie Jones.

"We were really confident all season," said P-3's assistant coach, Derrick James.

"We fought hard for 80 minutes to defeat 8th Comm and I am proud of our teams performance. These games showcased the talents and hearts of true champions."

Traders

TRADERS is a free service provided by the Public Affairs Office and submitted by active duty and retired military personnel and their dependents, and civilian personnel aboard Camp Lejeune and MCAS New River. Ads must be remitted each week and reach the Public Affairs Office by noon THURSDAY for the following week's publica- tion. Ads should be submitted on a trader form, available here or at the Public Affairs Office. Ads are reserved for the exchange or sale of personal goods only. Ads for personal services or businesses may not be printed. The Public Affairs Office reserves the right to withhold ads that may be deemed inappropriate for any reason. Official phone numbers CANNOT be listed. Limit is three ads per week. If the Public Affairs Office receives more ads than space permits certain ads may not be published until the following week.

- Individual forms must be filled out for each "category" of items (automobiles, pets, etc.) and written legibly.
- No more than 25 words per form.
- Trader ad submissions cannot be accepted by phone, guard mail, or fax, as these means are reserved for official business only.

Changing with the times...

There is a new and improved method of submitting trader ads from your home, through the Camp Lejeune web- site. Follow these easy steps to submit your trader ad in THE GLOBE.

- Go to the Camp Lejeune website at www.lejeune.usmc.mil
- Click on "The Globe" on the right side of the page.
- Click on "Trader Ads" on the right side, read the rules and follow the steps to submit your ad.
- Make sure and include your phone number IN THE AD along with your personal information and do not type in ALL CAPS. LIMIT THREE ADS PER WEEK PER PERSON.

You can also submit your ad through mail by dropping it off at the Public Affairs Office.
