3-year-old at home, deployed couple withstands challenges

By Spc. Stanford Toran IV

"He has his days where he is mad at us for leaving and other days, he cannot stop telling me how much he misses us," said Cpl. Ashley Hibbler, of her three-yearold son Landon.

Hibbler and her husband, Spc. Kyle Hibbler, are deployed to the Middle East with the 28th Expeditionary Combat Aviation Brigade and have been away from their son since July 2020.

"At first, he did not understand what was going on," said Ashley. "But he has grown a lot since we left and has become more understanding of the situation."

At the beginning of the deployment, the Hibblers' challenges included learning how to work with each other as fellow Soldiers, instead of a married couple. Being separated from their son, they also worked to gain support from their command concerning their unique situation.

"When we first arrived at Fort Hood and met our unit, Sgt. 1st Class [Melanie] McCracken talked to me about how she had been deployed with her husband before and she made us feel very comfortable coming to her with related issues," said Kyle. "She and the command team were very accommodating."

One such accommodation was arranging for them to be assigned to the same duty location and, recently, to live together on base. Despite their different duties, Ashley as a logistics specialist and Kyle repairing helicopters, they work similar schedules so they can video chat Landon at the same time daily.

Living together has helped establish a sense of normalcy, even while deployed.

"She still makes me take out the trash," says Kyle.

However, though many say that they are lucky to deploy together, it comes with its own sets of struggles. They had to get creative at times but having a solid foundation of communication and understanding has helped them overcome obstacles.

"Not having a private area for the first six months of deployment and having to spend time together outdoors was just one of our struggles. We spent many cold, rainy nights outside but we did not care because we were together," they said. "Adjusting to the stress of the environment and being away from home can really strain a relationship. Instead of hurting our relationship, this deployment has strengthened it and made us realize we can truly tackle anything together."

While they are away, their extended family has taken care of Landon. They have also played an important role in helping him handle his parents' absence. Another thing that has helped is the ability for him to talk to his parents regularly.

"There are some days he is upset and does not want to talk. We count down the days together and although he does not fully understand the concept of time, he gets excited when I say we have 'this many days left," said Ashley. "He just knows Momma and Kyle will be home soon."

Kyle is actually not Landon's biological father, but has been very much involved for the majority of his life.

"The first thing he says almost every time when Ashley calls him is 'I want to talk to Kyle, Momma," said Kyle. "Although he is not biologically my own, I love him so much and share a bond with him that is the same as if he were."

While Kyle and Ashley are grateful to be together, they admit that it has been harder for Ashley to be away from her son than it would have been to be away from her husband.

"Being our age, we have a better understanding of being away from each other, than my three-year-old has with being away from his mom," said Ashley. "It's harder for him to understand because he is so young. He knows Mom is gone and he feels emotions he doesn't know how to process. That makes it more difficult for him and for me."

On whether or not this experience has been worth the separation, Ashley expresses mixed feelings. COVID-19 presented many challenges and changes to the expected mission and experience for the brigade. She has endured the psychological impact of being separated from her son while deployed to the Middle East while her family struggles with a pandemic at home.

"It took me six years to finally be able to deploy and I was excited for it because I love my country and this is something I've always wanted to do," she said. "However, being away from my son has made it very difficult and I have had to really push through most days."

Even though she has doubts, she is still happy to serve and share moments with her husband.

With their deployment winding down, Kyle and Ashley have contributed to their unit's mission here and achieved professional accomplishments.

Recently, Ashley was laterally promoted to corporal, with Kyle pinning her new rank during the ceremony. For Ashley she was happy to share that milestone with him and described it as a "sentimental moment."

"It felt good seeing her recognized for her hard work and perseverance," said Kyle. "Being a mother away from her child for the first time has been the greatest challenge, but she was able to put her mind to the task at hand and accomplish something that I always knew she could do."

The Hibblers are deployed with Delta Company, 2-104th General Support Aviation Battalion, 28th ECAB in support of Operation Inherent Resolve, the fight against Daesh, and Operation Spartan Shield.

1st TSC and U.S. Army Central kick off sexual assault prevention month

By Barbara Gersna, 1st TSC

1st Theater Sustainment Command joined U.S. Army Central as the command kicked off events for Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month here Monday.

1st TSC Soldiers and civilian employees attended a presentation with Poet and Sexual Violence Prevention Advocate Obbie West held at Olive Theater via Microsoft Teams.

Maj. Gen. John P. Sullivan, commanding general, 1st TSC, introduced the program and West, "I can't think of a better way to formally kick off the month of awareness," he said over Teams.

West retired from the Army and has traveled the world as a motivational speaker, presenting life-depicting poetry on a variety of topics. He captivated the audience with his poetic delivery focusing on disruptive behaviors. He discussed bystander information and the influence of leadership.

"I am a leader. I am a strategic leader," West began his presentation.

West is best known for his signature poem, "The Perpetrator's Perspective," which earned a first place Maj. Gen. Keith L. Ware Communications Award for this long form production video.

"I follow Obbie West on social media," said Staff Sgt. Lenisha Finney, budget analyst, 1st TSC G8. "He is inspirational and has empowering messages. I wanted to attend when I heard that he was presenting."

West said that we can't assess our sexual assault and awareness training during rehearsal as we do with other measurable Army training. He explained a couple of ways that we can assess our sexual assault and prevention efforts is through how we prevent and how we care for a person if an assault were to occur.

He also stressed that our training must be gender neutral, because women are not the only victims of sexual assault. Men can be victims too, and both genders can perpetrate the crime, which goes against Army Values.

Capt. Nicole McCoy, 1st TSC SHARP program manager, said, "These are all messages that our commanding general has been pushing, and West is amazing," she said. "His messages are empowering and appeal to younger soldiers."

During his presentation, West highlighted five bystander interventions. He also stressed that it is one of our most demanding missions and that the incentive is that it saves lives.

"Offenders thrive on ignored warning signs," West said. "Predators move on our stillness."

"Character and capability are not created equal," he explained. "Just because someone is always on time and completes their work tasks doesn't mean they aren't capable of sexually assaulting someone."

"Pid yoursalf of the term, it's not my business." West urged

West said that it's easy to play blind. "It takes courage to say something," he said. He encouraged people to intervene in stopping something illegal from actually happening. What starts out as an inappropriate joke or improper touching could potentially turn into a crime. West said that we must forget about the uncertainty of not having the details.

Don't wait for others to act. No one else said anything. Everyone thought someone else was addressing it. West stressed that those aren't valid excuses.

"The criteria of being an active bystander is that you have to believe in what you're defending," he said.

West also stressed that leaders set the tone. He explained respect for a person and respect for authority.

"Soldiers are trained to respect those higher ranking, but they should also set the example for soldiers to respect them as a person," he said.

If a junior soldier sees a leader addressing inappropriate behavior prior to any action, then they know it will not be tolerated. West encouraged leaders to, "conduct themselves to be respected as people too."

Maj. Gen. Sullivan concluded the presentation saying that a lot resonated with him. "I am a firm believer in language left unchecked can lead to action. There is some leading indicator before action," he said.

Command Sgt. Maj. Michael J. Perry III, senior enlisted advisor, 1st TSC, stressed that it is our "obligation and duty to prevent sexual assault and harassment, and we all have the responsibility to prevent it. If we don't, we're part of the problem," he concluded.

This was the prevailing message of the event. Know the signs if you see them, and prevent sexual assault or harassment in the Army by holding others accountable for their inappropriate language or behaviors before they lead to action.

Pfc. Samuel Perez is a paralegal specialist with 1-82nd ARB who assists in the brigade's legal section.

Originally from New York City, he joined the Army in 2019 after running into financial trouble while in college. Now, his long-term goal is to someday become the command sergeant major of the JAG corps.

"The best part about this deployment is all the experience I am gaining," said Perez. "It is not every day you get to work with National Guardsmen. It's quite the experience to get a new perspective on the job."

Spc. Brian Rogers originally joined the military to become an explosive ordnance disposal specialist, but wanted to get involved with IT and now enjoys being a signal support systems specialist. His favorite part of the military is meeting cool people and getting good training.

Currently enrolled at Penn State, he is pursuing a degree in computer science and physics.

Rogers is deployed with HHC.

Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month is observed each April to raise awareness and educate communities on the prevention of sexual assault.

Last week, Lt. Col. Kevin White and Sgt. Maj. Guy Miller joined the 28th ECAB's Sexual Harassment and Assault Response and Prevention team in signing the SAAPM 2021 proclamation, reaffirming the brigade's commitment to its SHARP program.

The 28th ECAB sexual assault response coordinator can be reached at john.p.karpovich.mil@mail.mil.

The 28th ECAB victim advocate can be reached at andrea.l.whelan.mil@mail.mil.

Today's homefront hero is Amber, wife of Maj. Ernie Carlson.

Amber took time this deployment to send care packages to not only her husband but other Soldiers as well, on top of taking care of their children and new pets.

"I really appreciate her and have been continually impressed by her strength and perseverance throughout this deployment while we've been gone." - Spc. Donna Wauthier

Thanks for holding down the homefront, Amber!

HOMEFRONT HEROES

Soldiers and families,

We know there are many ways our families "hold down the homefront" and we want to share their stories.

If you'd like to recognize a family member back home please do one of the following:

- 1) Send a message to the 28th ECAB Facebook page with a photo of the family member and a short paragraph describing why they deserve a shout out.
- 2) Email your FRG leader with a photo of the family member and a short paragraph describing why they deserve and shout out.
- 3) Contact the brigade PAO or your UPAR for assistance

Ideas include...

- A child who reads bedtime stories to their younger siblings
- A niece or nephew who sent care packages to their Soldier's unit
- A parent or in-law who has been stepping up to take care of the kids
- A child who broke a personal record at a recent track meet
- A spouse who threw a party for their child's birthday on their own (yikes)
- A spouse or parent who picked up a new skill or earned a degree

"The strength of the armed forces of the United States is as much about its families as it is about its combat capability." — Gen. Martin Dempsey

VA Benefits with MSG Putnam

Attached is a flyer for those who have questions about VA benefits. Eventhough it is for the Pittsburgh area (VISN 4) they can help anyone.

Highlights:

* Many will be eligible for 5 years free healthcare through the VA (not tobe confused with TriCare) It is easy to enroll. Soldiers can either visithttps://www.va.gov/health-care/how-to-apply/or complete a 1010EZ form and send it to their nearest VA Healthcare facility. Soldiers will need their DD214 to enroll.

* If anyone has questions about filing a service connected claim they canemail the VA on the attached flyer, when they return home contact their local Veterans Affairs Office https://www.dmva.pa.gov/veteransaffairs/Documents/Outreach-and-Reintegration/countyprint.pdf or they can ask MSG Putnam.

* Soldiers do not necessarily need an LOD to file a VA service connected claim. It is beneficial to Veterans to visit the VA within one year after they return home. That way injuries can be documented.

* Many will be eligible now for the VA Home Loan once they return. https://www.va.gov/claim-or-appeal-status/

* Veterans are encouraged to record their DD 214 at their local courthouse. This way if they ever lose it they will be able to receive a certified copyfor free. All DD214's are kept confidential and only the Veteran is able to request it.

Remember to order your deployment yearbook before April 19th!

Families- consider buying one as a gift for your Soldier, so they can remember their sacrifices during a unique time in world history.

Soldiers- consider buying one for your loved ones, so they can see more about what we did here and to show them appreciation for their support.

There will not be a future opportunity to order, so act quickly!

To all the friends and family of the 1-137 AHB, we would like to thank you for your continued support. As always, we remind all soldiers, friends, and family to stay in touch with loved ones. For many soldiers, this can be a challenging time, being away from friends and family.

Announcement: It is strongly recommended that families not send mail to solders past March 17, 2021.

If you have not already please follow the Task Force Chickenhawk Facebook Group. This is where you can stay up to date with the 1-137 AHB. Please, if you have any questions, feel free to reach out through the group for more information.

We look forward to keeping you updated on all things Task Force Chickenhawk!

Congratulations to all our Soldiers who were patched, promoted or awarded this month!

Soldier Spotlight: SPC Devin Young, F Co 2-104 GSAB

Story by MSG Jonathan Means

SPC Young is an Air Traffic Controller in the Oklahoma National Guard. After vulunteering to deploy with the 28th Expeditionary Combat Aviation Brigade from the Pennsylvania National Guard he was part of a four Soldier team assigned to provide air traffic services. During that time, he continued to develop as a controller in his Military Occupational Specialty (MOS.) He contributed to the continued safety of the Army Aviation assets operating the area by applying the orders of the FAA JO 7110.65 and the regulations of the AR 95-2. The orders and regulations proved useful, but the vantage point lacked clear view and proper depth perception of the multiple landing surfaces. The limited line-of-sight control instructions ending with "at your own risk" transferring the risk of landing solely back to the pilot in command.

SPC Young and the members of the tactical terminal control system improved the area from which they controlled traffic. During this project we learned how many shovels of sand does it take to fill HESCOs1. After many shovels of dirt filled HESCO after HESCO the project nears completion. Many risks evolve during these projects. The one we combat frequently and is relatable globally is the morale.

Each Soldier ultimately finds away to drive on. SPC Young resumed working on his college classes. He worked diligently to stay ahead on his academic work, he was mitigating the risk of the next internet outage. His strategy was to stay ahead, so that when the internet was out at the deadline, he already submitted his work. That strategy paid off as he never missed a deadline earning a 4.0 for that semester. I believe that opens the question even more, how did this Soldier stay motivated as he worked traffic during his shift, shoveled dirt outside his shift, and continued to excel in his academic quest?

He wrote music. SPC Young actively practices a few hobbies to recharge. He composes music on the laptop, plays a trumpet, and roller blades. Sometimes they are at the same time as a court jester might ride a unicycle and juggle. Recently he has been attending karaoke night at the local MWR and shared a creation on FACEBOOK2. As you listen to the audio, read the lyrics, and imagine a famous singer in the genre performing it live for a post-pandemic crowd cheering wildly celebrating the gray sky' s turned blue.
