Distinctive Designer Touches Transform Homes

(NAPS)—With a little ingenuity and less money than you might imagine, local contractors can make some dramatic improvements in the way your home looks.

Giving your home a truly distinctive look can be as simple as choosing the right architectural details to add.

Think of architectural details as accessories for your home. The same way accessories pull a wardrobe together, house accessories can add interest to, define, revive or restore the look of your home.

Stylish door surrounds, elegant window mantels, shutters, dentil molding and classic columns not only add style but also increase a home's value.

Adding features need no longer mean adding continuing maintenance work. Architectural details are now available in low-maintenance materials that complement vinyl siding.

The Alcoa Building Products line of Images Designer Accessories has a wide range of functional and ornamental architectural features that blend with a variety of building materials, including vinyl and aluminum siding, brick and stone.

There are many details to choose from, ranging from the purely functional to the elaborately ornamental.

To make an entryway more dramatic, for example, you might use any combination of pediments, pilasters, mantels and a keystone overlay.

The pilasters or columns on either side of the door are fluted, while the pediment or overhead decoration above might have a dentil mold trim or keystone design.

These architectural trimmings were very popular in Colonial times and have remained so, throughout the history of our country.

They give the front door more prominence and often provide a balance that's more pleasing to the eye than a doorway that's unadorned.

Products include Accent Panels

Designer accessories, including fishscale panels in different patterns and accenting colors, decorative dentil molding and a distinctive starburst design, add a dramatic Victorian look to this home.

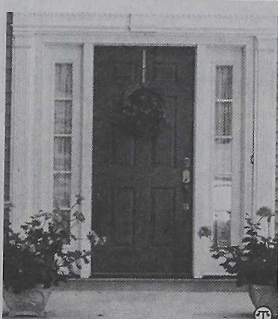

in four fishscale patterns, wainscot, dryer vents, fixture mounts and remount blocks. Decorative gable vents also come in four styles: half-round, octagonal, round and rectangular.

Anyone who has ever had to scrape and repaint an open-louver wood shutter will appreciate the idea of a low-maintenance shutter that truly looks like wood.

All Alcoa Designer Accessories are constructed of low-maintenance materials, ensuring years of lasting beauty. They are easy to install and are available in a wide range of coordinating colors to complement virtually any exterior color scheme.

These accessories offer the look of freshly painted wood with no chipping, cracking or rotting.

For additional information or to request a brochure on Designer Accessories, write to

To make an entryway more dramatic, use entry door surround systems like this dentil-trimmed design mantel, mantel overlay and pilasters.

Pets At Risk:

Bad Breath Isn't Funny Anymore

(NAPS)—Frisco caught the guest by surprise in the living room. He planted a big, breathy surprise smooch on her face. "Ugh! Dog Breath!" The room erupted in laughter.

It wasn't so funny the next day when Frisco had his yearly check-up. The two-and-a-half-year-old dog was diagnosed with gum disease, and he was in danger of losing a tooth if he didn't begin a regular dental care program.

According to the American Veterinary Dental Society, Frisco's case is not unique. Studies show that more than 80 percent of dogs by age three and 70 percent of cats by age three show some signs of gum disease. Bad breath could be an early warning sign of the dangerous gum disease gingivitis.

Pets Need Dental Care, Too!

During National Pet Dental Health Month in February, veterinarians are spreading the word that dogs and cats need good oral care. "Pets Need Dental Care, Too" is an educational campaign sponsored by the American Veterinary Medical Association and the American Veterinary Dental Society with an educational grant provided by Hill's Pet Nutrition, Inc. The program helps pet owners understand the importance of regular dental care for their pets.

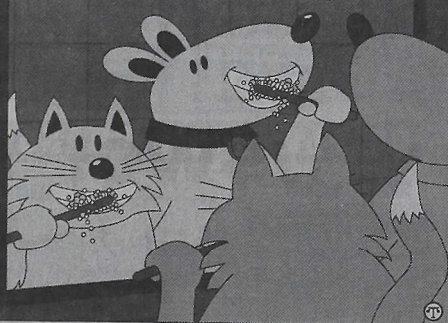

Particularly at risk are small dog breeds, such as Pekinese and Shih-Tzu. Experts say these breeds are more likely to develop tooth problems because their teeth are crowded into small mouths. This can create a haven for plaque buildup.

Cervical line lesions (CLL) are the most common disease of domestic cats. Studies show that about 28 percent of domestic cats that veterinarians examine have

CLL. Because the lesions often begin beneath the gumline, owners usually are unaware that there is a problem until the tooth is seriously damaged.

Prevention is the key to helping pets maintain good oral health. The American Veterinary Dental Society recommends that pet owners follow three important steps:

Step 1 VISIT YOUR VETERINARIAN

Just as dental visits are the cornerstone of a human dental program, visiting a veterinarian is the key to ensuring the health of your pet's teeth. A veterinarian will conduct a thorough physical examination of your pet as part of the dental evaluation.

Step 2 START A DENTAL CARE ROUTINE AT HOME

Removing plaque regularly from your pet's teeth should be part of your pet's home dental care routine. Ask your veterinarian about the procedure for brushing your pet's teeth.

Dog owners also may feed a specially formulated dietary food designed to help provide dental benefits. Specially formulated dietary foods can help reduce the accumulation of plaque and tartar from teeth while the pet is eating. Veterinarians can inform pet owners about this food.

Step 3 GET REGULAR VETERINARY DENTAL CHECKUPS

The family veterinarian needs to monitor the progress of your pet's preventive dental care routine much the same way a dentist monitors your teeth. Regular dental checks are essential.

The Need for Prevention

Once a pet's teeth display the warning signs—bad breath, a yellow-brown crust of tartar around the gumline, pain or bleeding when the pet eats or when you touch its gums—gum disease may already be present. For a professional dental check, call your veterinarian today!

The Ancient Greeks held Olympic Games every four years from 776 B.C. to honor the god Zeus. After the Roman Empire conquered Greece (100 B.C.), the games lost their religious meaning and in 394 A.D. Emperor Theodosius ordered them ended because of a decline in quality.

You commit a sin of omission if you do not utilize all the power that is within you. All men have claims on man, and to the man with special talents, this is a very special claim. It is required that a man take part in actions and clashes of his time than the peril of being judged not to have lived at all.

Are Teens Ready To Get Involved?

by Dr. Timothy J. Dyer,
Executive Director,
National Association of Secondary School Principals
(NASSP)—Some people—especially parents—think teenagers are only interested in music, clothes, parties, friends and food. But a new study by the Wirthlin Group shows that an overwhelming majority of teenagers today believe it is important to get involved in their communities.

Whether it's being the umpire at a local baseball game, raking leaves at a park or helping to feed the homeless, the study found that teenagers are eager to pitch in and help.

The nationwide study was sponsored by The Prudential Insurance Company.

Results indicate that more than half the teenagers surveyed believe their communities are good places to live. About 95 percent believe it's important for adults and teens to get involved in local civic, charitable, cultural, environmental and political activities.

That's a far cry from the listless, uninvolved 20-something Generation Xers depicted in the news and entertainment media. Survey results show that teens are concerned about their communities.

If this doesn't sound like most teenagers you know, the problem may be that they don't know how to get involved. Six in 10 teens surveyed say their schools do little or nothing to emphasize community involvement. Seven in 10 say their parents don't encourage involvement either.

Why Teens Don't Volunteer

American teenagers say other teens don't volunteer for community activities because they:

- Don't have time 91%
- Don't know how to get involved 74%
- Prefer TV, video, vacations, etc. 71%
- Have never been asked 60%
- Feel individual cannot make difference 57%
- Don't care about community 55%
- Lack roots in community 50%
- Are selfish 45%

Many teenagers who responded to a recent survey, said the reason students don't get involved is that they don't know how. Six in ten teens surveyed said their schools do little or nothing to emphasize community involvement. Seven in ten said their parents don't encourage involvement either.

The survey lays the groundwork for "The Prudential Spirit of Community Initiative." The program works to build interest in volunteerism and community service among young people ages 11-18 and features a youth awards program managed by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Through NASSP involvement, the national awards program will identify students in each middle and high school who have made exemplary, self-initiated contributions to their communities. The two most impressive nominees in each state, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico will receive $1,000, a silver medalion and a trip to Washington, D.C., next May. At a national event, 10 teens from that group will be recognized as national recipients of The Prudential Spirit of Community award, and will receive gold medalions, $5,000 and a trophy for their schools.

Want to get your teen and school involved in the program or nominate a youth you feel is deserving of recognition? Contact the principal of your local middle-school or high school.
