Adopt-a-family program brings back happy faces

Cpl Andrew B. Yurasek

Marines provide hope, security for those who need it most

FLORIDA CITY, Fla. — The devastation caused by Hurricane Andrew took away a lot more than homes. It also took with it the hope and security some families counted on.

Here at Relief Camp 4, Marines have been able to provide dislocated Floridians with some basic needs, while putting smiles back on some of their faces. The camp started an adopt-a-family program with hopes of making the move from houses to tents a little easier.

"We wanted to do something that would let families know we weren't just giving them food and a place to sleep," said 2ndLt. Jeff Jurgensen, Relief Camp 4 public affairs officer. "We want them to know we're interested in their lives and we're here to help."

Soon after families started arriving at the Florida City relief camp, Jurgensen asked for volunteers to help families. About 20 Marines have been matched up with families.

During their free time, Marines meet with the families, play with the kids, eat with them and help with any special needs. Jurgensen said the program has been successful so far.

"We're a combat-oriented unit," said LCpl Roosevelt Williams III, Battery I, 3rd Battalion, 10th Marines, 2d Marine Division, and Houston native. "I like helping people, it's a nice change from being in the field."

Williams was working in the Red Cross tent escorting dislocated residents to tents when Regine Snow and her son walked in. When Williams was helping the family bring their personal items to their assigned tent, Ronique grabbed Williams' hand. Since then, the two have been inseparable.

"Ronique took to him right off," Snow said. "Everyday he says he's going up front to see his friend."

Williams visits the family daily, talks to Regina, plays with her son and helps out whenever he can. Williams has been able to take some of the tension out of the Snow's life since they moved to the relief camp.

The tent city, which has become a second home for Marines, sailors and displaced south Florida residents, has now matched Marines and families with an adopt-a-family program.

"It's very different coming to a place like this," Snow said. "I never thought I'd be living in a camp, but it's nice that the military takes care of us."

"Williams is like a big brother to Ronique and it's very important for a little boy to have a big brother to teach him things and take him places — someone to look up to. I know he's busy, but he still finds time to spend with him."

Working a full day and then visiting families when they're done doesn't seem to bother the Marine volunteers.

"The program lets people know

Marines are not just fighting machines," Williams said.

When the Marines leave, brown matted sections of grass may be the only signature left behind. But the mark of good will — will last longer.

Brigade Service Support Groups 4, 6 deactivated

Cpl Dave Higgins

Brigade Service Support Groups 4 and 6 were deactivated in a morning colors ceremony at 2d Force Service Support Group headquarters, September 15.

The BSSGs' colors were cased by each group's commander and sergeant major in the presence of 2d FSSG commanding general, BGen George H. Walls Jr.

"I constantly remind Marines that our middle names are 'service' and 'support,'" the general said.

"These two units provided both of these in ample measure."

The deactivation ceremony began with BSSG-4 commander, Col Geoffrey B. Higginbotham, and SgtMaj G.W. Embrey casing the colors as the unit's lineage was reviewed for those attending the ceremony.

Activated September 1, 1976,

BSSG-4 was a task-organized unit that supported a brigade-sized Marine Air-Ground Task Force.

Throughout its history, the unit participated in major exercises and was oriented toward supporting an amphibious or Norway air-and-land Marine Expeditionary Brigade.

"Basically, BSSG-4 supported the 4th MEB, which has also been deactivated," Higginbotham said.

"That brigade conducted amphibious exercises in northern Europe, the Caribbean, the Eastern United States and, of course, Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm."

The group also conducted non-combatant evacuations at the U.S. Embassy in Somalia during Operation Eastern Exit.

As Col Peter R. Stenner and MSgt E.M. Thompson cased the BSSG-6 colors, those present heard of the group's brigade Maritime Prepositioning Force operations.

The unit routinely participated in major MPF exercises since its formation July 1, 1986.

It provided combat service support elements for combined-arms exercises and Panama Detachments during Operation Just Cause, and executed prepositioning operations during Operation Desert Shield.

Assigned as the nucleus of Direct Support Group 2, BSSG-6 supported the assault of 2d Marine Division and an Army mechanized brigade into Kuwait during Operation Desert Storm.

"Today starts the beginning of the year of drawdown in the Marine Corps," Stenner said.

"Part of that reduction is the elimination of the BSSGs and MEBs. It's time to go on to bigger and better things for the Corps."

The last BSSG-6 mission was providing humanitarian relief to Haitian migrants in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

THE CHATTER BOX

This week's question: On the television show "Major Dad," what actor do you think most accurately portrays a Marine?

"The Major does the best job because of the way he talks to both officer and enlisted." LCpl Roberto Oviedo, CoB, HQSPT Bn, MCB

"The Major portrays a Marine most accurately because his life is just like a Marine's life." PFC Boston Mann, 2d Bn, 4th Mar, 2d MarDiv

"The Gunny always seems to have herself squared away. She carries herself like a true Marine." GySgt Kenny Williams, MCB Main Post Office

"The Major because he has a lot of knowledge about the Marine Corps and uses a lot of our terminology." Cpl Tim Davis, Btry S, 5th Bn, 10th Mar, 2d MarDiv

"The Gunny because she always goes by the book and is serious about everything she does." LCpl Sheila Saeung, Service Co, HQSVC Bn, 2d FSSG

"The Major because of the leadership qualities he exhibits." Cpl George Henriquez, Recreation Division, HQSPT Bn, MCB

Airline fares lowered

Delta Airlines has introduced a military emergency leave fare program that provides more flexibility for active-duty military personnel and their dependents when traveling under special conditions.

The new program addresses a specific area of concern created by the mid-April restructuring of airline fares. All military leave fares were eliminated at that time sometimes leaving active duty members of the Armed Forces with no alternative to standard full coach fares.

Now with orders specifically marked "Emergency Leave," military personnel and accompanying dependents will be eligible for lower seven-day advance purchase rates with restrictions waived. At the time for ticketing the military passenger must present an active duty green identification card and a copy of leave orders specifically marked "Emergency Leave." Any dependents accompanying the passenger must travel to the same destination and must be ticketed at the same time.

The fares available under the program are Delta's seven-day advance purchase excursion fares. The fare program is good for travel within the United States, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Reservations and ticketing can be handled by any travel office or Delta ticket office.

Airline antitrust claims

Individual travelers who purchased tickets from the airlines for leisure travel may take part in the antitrust lawsuit against the airlines.

Airlines included in the lawsuit are: American, Continental, Delta, Midway, Northwest, Pan Am, United and USAir.

The lawsuit includes travel from, through and into the following airports during the period January 1, 1988, to June 30, 1992: Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Charlotte, Chicago (O'Hare and Midway), Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas/Fort Worth, Dayton, Denver, Detroit, Houston (Intercontinental), Los Angeles, Memphis, Miami, Minneapolis/St. Paul, Nashville, Newark, New York (JFK and La Guardia), Orlando, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Raleigh/Durham, St. Louis, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, San Jose, Syracuse, and Washington (National and Dulles).

Individuals are advised to contact the Airlines Antitrust Litigation Office at P.O. Box 267, Pennsauken, N.J. 08110-0267 to obtain a claim form. Claims must be filed by February 15, and in some cases, no documentation is necessary.

Workshops offered

The Career Resource Center is offering employment workshops at the Family Service Center, building 14.

"How To Turn Your Interview Into a Job" is offered today from 1430-1630. The workshop covers preparation tips including appropriate dress code and how to answer difficult questions.

The Hidden Job Market is scheduled for Tuesday from 1400-1600. The workshop will cover how jobs are created, steps to job hunting, how to tap into the hidden job market, analyzing job ads, and much more.

Due to limited seating registration is required by calling 451-3212.

Briefs

Education board to meet

The Camp Lejeune Dependents Schools Board of Education will hold its next meeting Friday at the Superintendent's Office, building 855, at 0830. The meeting is open to the public. Anyone desiring to have items placed on the agenda should contact the Superintendent's Office before the meeting.

Annual cookout scheduled

The John A. Lejeune Rod and Gun Club at building 1938 will have its annual cookout from 1300-1700 Sunday. Price is $4 for adults; $3 for children age 6-11. The public is invited.

Briefing team to visit

A Marine Corps Recruit Depot Parris Island, S.C., Drill Instructor briefing team will visit Marston Pavillion Tuesday for sessions aiming at encouraging Marines to apply for drill instructor duty.

The first two-hour session is for Marine Corps Base/2d Surveillance, Reconnaissance and Intelligence Group personnel from 0730-0930. The 2d Force Service Support Group/II Marine Expeditionary Force session is from 0930-1130, and the 2d Marine Division session is from 1300-1500.

All corporals to gunnery sergeants are invited to the sessions, which seek to educate Marines about the duty and clear away negative stereotypes. Call your command career planner for more information.

Dental parking reorganized

In an effort to improve their patients' satisfaction and other customers the Naval Dental Center here did an intense study and survey and discovered a concern with parking.

Working in close harmony with Naval Hospital Branch Medical Clinic staff, a plan was drafted and parking was reorganized with medical/dental staffs moving to an adjacent parking lot.

The result is an additional handicapped space and, except for spaced detailed for government vehicles, the remaining spaces behind building 15 are all designated as patient parking. There is also an overflow lot.

Find a few quality Marines

Marines from southern Georgia and northern Florida are currently needed to come out on 30 days permissive temporary additional duties to assist recruiters in their hometowns. This is an opportunity to earn points for promotion, spend time at home and help the Corps find a few quality Marines.

Specific areas where command recruiters are needed include: Albany, Valdosta, Statesboro, Kings Bay, and Savannah, Ga.; and Jacksonville, Gainesville, Daytona Beach, and Tallahassee, Fla.

For more information contact your first sergeant and consult Marine Corps order 1130.62A. Specific details are available by calling MSgt Dave Harding at (904) 448-8880.

Marines do more than take care of their own

In the bunker waiting for the explosives, the Marines looked at another. Sunlight filtered through the cracks of the roof and walls and to drag as slowly as the dust found in the sunrises.

Second warning, Marines ears as well as possible with and watched for fragmentation sent through the air over the blast shook the wooden planks and small clumps of dirt and rocks from the ceiling.

After the explosion, instructors from the training area left the Marines and checked over the area to see if the others to check the damage had caused.

ask to check and make sure that their students were well trained. The instructors of the training area make every day. One to do it right is always a priority since they may have to check fires or slow burning fuses and don't want to put their lives on the line.

The Engineer Training Area located at the F-12 range is part of 2d Combat Engineer Battalion, 2d Marine Division.

Although they teach engineers the aspects of military explosives and demolitions, they also fill their schedule with units from Camp Lejeune who want to enhance their training capabilities.

"We get every type of unit here for training," said 1st Lt. Chris W. Rollins, Engineer Training Area officer in charge. "Just about every unit from this base comes out for basic combat engineer skills training."

Teaching classes that range from land mine warfare to a night infiltration course, ETA instructors become very proficient in their job, said GySgt Barry M. Shaw, ETA staff noncommissioned officer in charge.

"The Marines here become total experts," said Shaw. "They are not necessarily involved in the operations of CEB, but they are able to provide the engineer service to other units."

Being able to become more skillful in the job you do is worthwhile, said Cpl William L. McCullough, an ETA instructor. "It's good to see the units that don't normally work with this type of equipment come in and learn how rather than just reading from a book and risk making a mistake."

"We have a good working knowledge of our MOS (Military Occupational Specialty) because we are constantly surrounded by it," McCullough said. "It also lets units that don't work with engineers very often see what we can do for them."

Using inerted mines and demolitions, student reference texts in the classroom as training aids, Rollins said the Marines who are taught at ETA have the benefit of getting to see some of what they are working with before going down range.

With static displays of field fortifications and obstacles that are located around the range the instructors are able to train all Marines regardless of MOS in military explosives and demolitions that will greatly enhance their survivability in a combat situation, said Rollins.

The Marines selected to be instructors at ETA are chosen based on recommendations and interviews, said Rollins.

"Most instructors already have the basic knowledge of combat engineers," said Rollins.

"They are then set up with programmed courses of instruction and become duty experts in their field."

The six NCOs who work as ETA instructors are knowledgeable in each of the eight classes that are taught, yet have designated primary and secondary courses to teach, Rollins said.

"The instructors do extra studying since they have the time for research to specialize in what they need to know," said Rollins. "The NCOs who teach out here are in a premier spot for engineers."

Rollins said that he feels he is working with the best NCOs in his field. "My job is more enjoyable when Marines take pride in what they do and excel," said Rollins.

The instructors often put in days that start at 0600 and last until 0100 the next morning, said Rollins. "Our busiest season is summer since we have reservists that come in and train."

This doesn't dampen the spirits of ETA Marines, however, even when they have to work on weekends, said McCullough.

"We don't deploy too often, so the long hours make up for that and we are able to show other units how to work with demo."

"When you enjoy your work there is a willingness to sacrifice some of your personal time for what you do," Rollins said.

"Working this close with enlisted personnel and seeing the knowledge they can retain is what makes ETA work."

Marksmanship still ranked high among Corps

LCpl Anthony D. Vorlas Jr.

Marksmanship Training Unit instructors teach self-actualization to get shooters to hit the block every time. Every Marine's life depends upon the ability to confidently kill with one well-aimed round. Marines throughout history have been recognized for their outstanding combat shooting.

The art and traditions of Marine Corps marksmanship are still being passed on at the Stone Bay rifle ranges. MTU instructor GySgt Leslie Mock is currently coaching 2d Force Service Support Group rifle team for a competition September 26. The 2d FSSG Marines will compete against Marine Corps Base, 2d Marine Division, and members of the North Carolina and South Carolina National Guard.

"Our primary and most important mission is the individual Marine's annual qualification. All of the team's practice time is scheduled between unit qualification days," Mock said.

The method of instruction Mock uses to consistently bring the shooters into the black is called "the three phases of the mind." The first phase is the conscious mind. Like a computer, your conscious mind must be programmed with the proper information to attain the desired output. The shooter's mind is programmed through hundreds of practice hours.

The required output is hits in the black. The shooter must consciously know what to do, when to do it and why.

The second phase of the mind deals with the union of the subconscious and conscious mind. The sequence of events that must be mastered to achieve a bull's-eye -- standing, sitting, laying, breathing, aligning the sights, maintaining alignment, making the hammer fall at the precise moment and hitting the bull -- must become one natural mental process. The shooter is only slightly aware of what is happening.

The third phase of the mind is the concept of self-imagery. The shooter confirms the conscious and subconscious programming and visualizes the bull's-eye happening. In the shooter's mind there is no doubt the round hit perfectly.

Every Marine is a rifleman. The philosophy of the mind is one way of improving readiness to complete the basic mission of every Marine.

CFC drive around the corner

The Combined Federal Campaign was formed in 1961 by presidential executive order as a once-a-year, on-the-job method for federal employees to help those in need, support medical research, protect the environment and further human rights. Except for service relief drives and emergency disaster appeals, the CFC is the only charitable campaign held in the federal workplace.

The 1992 Combined Federal Campaign kicks off on October 5, and runs through November 16.

This year more than ever before, Americans are asked to do whatever they can to help those who have suffered terrible misfortune from natural disasters. The recent devastation in Florida and Louisiana caused by Hurricane Andrew combined with earthquakes in California have severely taxed relief agencies. Such agencies rely on donations from caring Americans to be able to assist in disaster areas on a moment's notice.

8th Motor Transport Battalion: hub of transportation

Cpl David J. Ferrier

HARRIS FIELD RELIEF CAMP, Fla. — "You call, we haul," is a popular motto of truck drivers and others whose job it is to deliver goods. The city of Homestead, Fla., called the Marines of Company A, 8th Motor Transport Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group, who scurried to the aid of Hurricane Andrew victims, September 5.

They carried with them dozens of high-mobility multipurpose wheeled vehicles, 5-ton trucks, and logistical vehicle systems, commonly referred to as Dragon Wagons. The company is also reinforced by Marines from C and Headquarters & Service Companies who brought heavy-haulers, recovery vehicles and mechanics.

Like the rest of the Marines assigned to the Special Purpose Marine Air-Ground Task Force, the Motor T Marines found it difficult to comprehend the scope of destruction. "The level of devastation is unbelievable," said Capt Gabriel Patricio, CoA commanding officer. "It's hard to imagine that wind can do such damage."

Once the initial shock wore off, they wasted no time in getting to work, Patricio said. CoA is responsible for transporting everything the tent cities need to survive, from water and fuel to delivering mail and chow. They have also removed 11 5-ton tons of trash when a civilian contractor could not.

Although the Camp Lejeune-based Marines are used to North Carolina's heat and humidity, Florida's weather at times resembles a mosquito-infested sauna. A safety stand down took place throughout the camp September 8 to give everyone a chance to catch their breath and organize themselves a bit. The Motor T Marines spent the day performing tedious maintenance checks and laying out their tools and equipment in inspection form.

Although the heat could zap the Marines' motivation, there's no lack of motivation with the 8th Motor T leathernecks.

"Television can't do justice to the situation down here," said SSgt Michael Harbin, a platoon commander. "This is great to see Americans helping each other. Taking care of the homeless keeps us motivated."

"I think we've become a tighter unit by living together," said SSgt Scott Trott, 5-ton section commander. "Everyone is pulling together to get the job done."

Patricio agreed with his Marines about their stellar performance so far. "Everything has been going extremely well. Sometimes they get a little aggressive and want to do more, but the Marines like what they are doing."

"I think the military is well-suited to do a mission like this," said Cpl Martin Astin, a motor vehicle operator.

"It's really been worthwhile helping the community and seeing some happy faces. So many more people in the tent camps, they are responding to here to help."

Marines help volunteers offload food and other supplies for the victims of Hurricane Andrew.

Communicators do more than talk in southern Florida

Cpl Andrew B. Yurasek

FLORIDA CITY, Fla. — Communicators from 3d Battalion, 10th Marines do more than talk the talk; these "comm" experts walk the walk.

When the 2d Marine Division leathernecks moved into Arthur Vining Davis Park here to set up Relief Camp 4, they knew they had their work cut out for them. The former mobile home park had debris strewn throughout. After clearing the grounds and setting up their tents, they ran into another obstacle.

The telephone wires were down and there was no way to communicate outside the camp. When civilian telephone officials came to the site, they were able to rewire the lines, but they didn't have telephones the relief site desperately needed.

"That's where we took over," said LCpl James Baker, of Battery I, 3d Bn, 10th Mar and an Anaheim Hills, Calif., native. "We told them we had analog phones, so all they had to do was set up a junction box to run our lines from there."

"... when we were able to hook camp up with 'Ma Bell,' I felt helped in the restoration of Florida City.

— Cpl David Edgette

The phones 3d Bn, 10th Mar's communicators provided allows the commander the ability to run the relief site more efficiently. He can call Relief Camp 3 to receive updates on the relief effort there and the Red Cross can call for additional supplies while civilians phone families and friends.

"Communication is a key asset in an operation like this," said Cpl David Edgette, Headquarters Btry, 3d Bn, 10th Mar and Bristol, R.I., native. "Without it, there's no organization."

In addition to linking Relief Camp 4 to the outside world, the "commos" here have set up an internal network as well. Their mission is to provide communication inside the camp. They climbed 30-40 poles and trees, hung wire and installed 20 phones. The line they've installed a tored and checked they work.

"Comm is a 24/7 over everything,"

The communication work wasn't waste efforts not only reach corners of the camp four corners etched Andrew.

"Our job is to provide line communication were able to hook with 'Ma Bell,' I felt the restoration of Florida City," Baker said.

Long Live The Queen!

Known as the "queen of fibers," silk is relatively strong for its seeming delicacy. However, silk does require extra care to maintain its beauty and luster. Perspiration and body oils can do the most damage to silk by weakening the fibers. Using antiperspirants that do not contain high levels of metal salts and regular dry cleaning offer the best protection.

Spots and spills should not be rubbed, but gently blotted. Stained or spotted areas should be pointed out to your drycleaner before drycleaning. Be sure to indicate the type of stain: oil, beverage, or combination.

Loss of color or fading can occur when silk becomes wet with water. Some dyes will bleed or change color when exposed to sunlight or alcohol. If a bleeding problem causes serious color loss, the garment should be returned to the retail manufacturer is responsible for poor colorfastness.

As soon as possible, stained garment to drycleaner. Point out unapparent spills, such as white wine or ginger. When in doubt about care and cleaning of fabric always consult member professional drycleaner.

Mobile home park becomes relief site for hurricane victims

CITY, Fla. — The site is known to be the site of Camp 4, there is a "e" surrounded by a "t". What once used to be a park is now a relief site for hurricane victims. And, as residents move back to the park, they find they have new neighbors.

In the heart of the tent camp, there are residents who moved back to the trailer park. The Marines may be pounding nails all day and moving equipment around, or the homeless children might be playing in the recreation area, but they don't mind.

Mobile home park resident cleans up after Hurricane Andrew swept through southern Dade County.

"We didn't mind when the Marines moved in," said Pearl Kohler. "We knew if they came, the electricity and phones here would be fixed faster."

The Saturday before the storm, Pearl and her husband, Harry, were told everyone had to evacuate. So, the couple packed up their motor home and pulled out of their lot, leaving a gazebo and their personally landscaped yard behind.

"Living here 15 years, you get used to hearing hurricane warnings," she said. "We didn't think much would happen."

The Kohlers were the last ones to pull out of the mobile home park as they headed north. They drove for hours toward Lake Placid, N.Y. "We stopped to get a bite to eat and we slept in a parking lot," she said.

After Hurricane Andrew swept through southern Dade County, the Kohlers trekked back to their humble home. They still didn't realize the extent of damage south Florida sustained.

"We knew it was bad when we saw trees laying on the highway," she recalled. "But we still didn't think it was that bad until we reached the first residential section. All the houses were flattened — I knew we weren't going to have anything."

When they pulled up to the mobile home park, they knew they would have to start from scratch. They couldn't even pull their vehicle into the back gate because debris blocked the entrance. They ended up driving over a section of downed fencing, only to find their porch and several trees missing.

The Kohlers spent the next few days removing trees, pieces of metal and trash to uncover what was once their yard. They spent sleepless nights guarding their belongings from thieves and hoodlums until the roar of green machines pulled into the park. The Marines had landed.

"I was glad," Kohler said. "That meant I didn't have to sleep with a gun and flashlight."

While the leathernecks from 3d Battalion, 10th Marines, 2d Marine Division were cleaning the area and setting up tents for the relief site, the Kohlers were weeding and replanting trees and bushes. Their lawn was taped off with white, cloth tape so no one would disturb their lot's rehabilitation. But, even after dislocated residents began moving into the camp, the 76-year-old couple didn't mind.

"Oh, I don't mind," she said. "These people don't have homes and I do. As for the Marines, they're great. Whenever my husband and I do yard work, they ask if we need ice or water. I can't even pick up a shovel without them asking if they can help."

Marines, Kuwaitis use basic skills, teamwork during MOU training

SN C'had S. McKimson

CAMP MONTEREY, Kuwait—The shimmering waves of intense heat rose off the sand and distorted the images of the war-wrecked buildings.

The first impression might be that it is just another bombed-out building complex that has yet to be repaired from the savage war that rocked this country only two years ago.

A closer look revealed something much, much more.

Getting closer to the buildings, the camouflage hats of the 11th Marine Expeditionary Unit (Special Operations Capable) Marines seemed interspersed with the brilliant red berets of Kuwaiti soldiers.

The Marines and Kuwaitis were working together, cross training basic combat skills, the heart of the exercise.

This is all part of Operation Eager Mace 92-3. This was one facet of the cross-training exercises between Marines and Kuwaitis as they shared the different basic skills training and teamwork that are fundamental to individual combat skills.

The day's training was Military Operations in Urban Terrain. There were several different scenarios being taught, primarily Close-Quarter battle skills training.

The Kuwaitis had 103 soldiers from the Al Shadid Brigade participating in cross-training. There were 159 Marines from Battalion Landing Team 1/4 on hand to work with the Kuwaiti soldiers under the guidance of Capt Michael L. Owen, Company C commander.

Standing in the courtyard of one of the wrecked hulls that used to be a building, you could taste the yellow smoke as it drifted through the hot, dry air. A glimpse of camouflage passed through an opening in the smoke, and two more warriors quickly followed.

As the smoke began to dissipate, gunshots were heard from the rear guard covering the first fire team as it began the attack to secure the building.

The point man of the squad reached the wall beside the window.

He signaled the next two men forward. With that, he turned and disappeared through the open window. The only traces were the shots of his rifle echoing in the first room.

The next two men reached the wall and shout their names to the point man, to signal their entrance.

Like rounds through an M-60 machine gun, the men of CoC rushed into the room and began securing the building.

Their voices could be heard as they confirmed the room as secure.

Now the Kuwaitis, who had been watching attentively nearby, had their first shot at a full-speed run with blanks and smoke. They conducted the same drill near a mirror image of the previous work by the Marines.

The Kuwaitis learned quickly as they showed their newly acquired skills of urban warfare.

"The Kuwaitis are doing real well," said Sgt. George L. Earst. "They are grasping the techniques and fundamentals. Their execution is really good and the language barrier isn't a problem at all," added Earst. "We use universal sign language and they understand what we mean."

This was demonstrated as Cpl Cory D. Ball explained to the Kuwaiti soldiers how to use his weapon.

By pointing and gesturing he was able to make the Kuwaitis understand how the weapon is fired and how the safety is turned on and off.

The Kuwaitis of the Al Shadid Brigade were ready to do their full-speed run without the Marines.

As the Kuwaiti soldiers began their assault, the Marines acting as the opposing force prepared for them by throwing smoke grenades and firing their rifles to try and keep the Kuwaitis heads down.

This did not delay the soldiers of the Al Shadid Brigade as they ran across a large courtyard, the windows and in less than a minute.

There were smiles on the back as the Kuwaitis acknowledged

Although it was raining, Operation Eager Mace 92-3, the Marines of the 11th MEU (SOC) and the Kuwaiti Army had been cross-training.

11th MEU (Special Operations Capable) returns to desert for cross-training exercises

LCpl Bryan Snow

CAMP MONTEREY, KUWAIT—Just two years after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, the 11th Marine Expeditionary Unit (Special Operations Capable) are back, participating in rigorous cross-training with the Kuwaiti armed forces.

During a brief lull in the training schedule, the Marines of MEU Service Support Group-11 were still hard at work, providing the MEU (SOC) with its much needed support.

"The MSSG has been working 24 hours a day to make sure the MEU has as much support as possible," said 1st Lt Mark J. Waters, MSSG-11 motor transport detachment commander.

An MSSG is divided into several components, including landing support, medical, communications, supply and military police.

"The supply section has been working to keep everyone supplied with enough water to ensure our Marines don't get dehydrated," Waters said.

So far, there were no training-related heat casualties, due at least in part to the ample readiness of bottled drinking water.

The desert heat not only takes a toll on the Marines and sailors, but also on the many vehicles it takes to operate and efficient ground force. "Our maintenance guys are working around the clock, pulling engines, tires, and doing necessary periodic maintenance," said Sgt. Kevin A. Frey, Motor Transport detachment platoon sergeant, MSSG-11.

The MSSG Medical department set up a daily Battalion Aid Station (BAS) to help care for any training related accidents or other injuries.

"The medical department has been one of the only MSSG detachments to do cross-training with the Kuwaitis," Waters said.

Even though these Marines don't set the opportunity to the "high-speed" Marines as other guys, it have their jobs cut out

At the end of operation 92-3, the Marines of the 11th MEU will return to the ship Amphibious Battle Group for future exercises.

New pasta bar is 'tops'

Cpl Marnie L. Holdren

Each Tuesday and Thursday evening at Mess Hall 211, a master sergeant stands at the end of the chow line and greets Marines as they walk past with their trays full of pasta and garlic bread. Making sure the food is what they want and how they want it is not usual for Marine Corps chow halls, but MSgt Samuel Reyes Jr., 2d Marines regimental mess chief, wants to change that for Marines who chow down at the Two Tops' Pasta Bar.

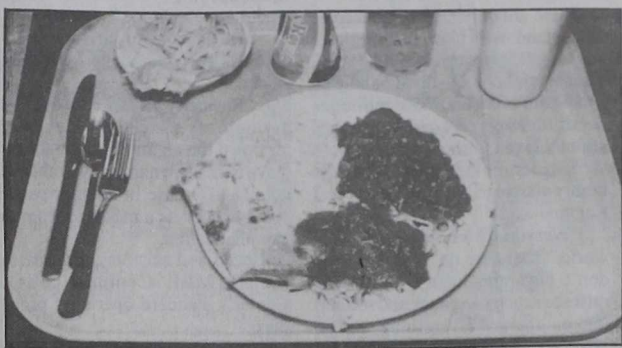

Offering a selection of three types of noodles and either meat, spaghetti or cheese sauce and a cold Italian pasta salad, Reyes said the pasta bar brings in 60 percent more business than the regular line.

"We determine per 100 the amount spent on each meal," Reyes said. "This pasta bar is cost-effective by creating enough to pay for itself and it's less expensive than the regular bar."

Bringing a pasta bar on line at Mess Hall 211 was somewhat of a challenge for Reyes. His chow hall feeds not only 2d Marines, but 6th Marines as well. The 6th Marines does not have a mess hall of their own so 2d Marines is host to them in Mess Hall 211.

With cooks from two regiments working with him and MSgt Steve D. Ferrell, 6th Marines regimental mess chief, they have been able to offer not only the pasta bar, but a deli bar and pancake house as well.

"The cooks get involved by initiating and cooking the meal," Reyes said.

LCpl Nikoletta Klimak

Cooks at Mess Hall 211 prepare a variety of pastas and sauces every Tuesday and Thursday evening for the Two Tops Pasta Bar.

LCpl Nikoletta Klimak

Marines wait anxiously to devour a big plate of pasta.

"They look forward to it because it makes their day easier so they don't have to put mass production efforts into one meal."

By using information as an aid to provide better service, Reyes said the positive response to the bar keeps the cooks motivated. Getting informal feedback to implement what they want lets the troops know their input is important and seems to bring them back for more, said Reyes.

"We take ideas on how to give better service to the troops here," Reyes said. "The troops are enjoying it and for those who can't get out in town, it adds variety."

Feedback from the troops on the pasta bar has been positive, said Reyes. "Just ask anyone here what they think of it."

SN Keith V. Brezinski, Company B, 1st Battalion, 6th Marines, said he enjoys the meal. "They should serve it consistently."

"I eat at the pasta bar every Tuesday and Thursday and prefer it over the regular menu," said PFC Darryl E. Smith, CoG, 2d Bn, 4th Mar.

The hard work that Reyes has put into his chow hall has paid off. Mess Hall 211 has received a certificate of commendation for superior performance and has been designated Outstanding Messhall for 2d Marine Division for two quarters.

Reyes said, although he has had more than 600 Marines and sailors go through his chow lines in a week, "My door is open for anyone to come and enjoy my pasta bar."

Speed, accuracy standard operating procedure for Comm Center Marines

Cpl Jeff Gradney

There is a very special office on the top floor of Camp Lejeune's building H-1. Anyone visiting that third floor's rear section comes face to face with ominous-looking grey double doors.

LCpl Jimmy G. Davis

Walking through these doors is a little like the opening sequence from the television series "Get Smart." At the end of the hallway, there's a blue door with a combination lock on it and a push-button panel combination lock on the side.

On a nearby wall, there is a small transaction window made of thick glass. It's guarded by cold, steel bars.

The whole area is marked by an almost clinical stillness and quiet.

That stillness is quite misleading, though. Behind that blue door and that plate glass window, there is constant activity, both human and mechanical.

This is the II Marine Expeditionary Force Communications Center. Something is always happening here, and someone is always working.

"Long weekends and holidays don't mean anything to our work schedule. We have people on watch 24 hours a day every single day of the year," said Gysgt Willy Williams, noncommissioned officer in charge. "The message traffic never stops."

Message traffic is the reason the comm center exists. "We handle virtually every official message that is received or transmitted by II MEF, 2d Marine Division, 2d Surveillance, Reconnaissance and Intelligence Group or any of their subordinate units," said 1stLt William England, officer in charge of the comm center. "In that capacity, we handle all types of messages from administrative pieces like permanent change of station orders to top secret messages for commanding general's eyes only. It all comes here first."

The messages also come in vast numbers. In an average month, the comm center processes about 30,000 messages.

There are only about 36 Marines who stand watch in the message center. Their schedule is tough. They work 12-hour shifts, handle an average of more than 450 messages per shift; 98 percent of the messages are processed without error.

"The comm center's work is highly visible to the units we serve," England said.

"Everything we do here is real world. There are no exercises. We don't have the luxury of making mistakes and going back and reflecting on them. Everything we do affects someone somewhere in an important way."

Everyone in the comm center staff understands the crucial nature of their work. Those staff members come from a variety of job fields.

Cpl Peter Dumas is an infantryman who works at the comm center through the Fleet Assistance Program. "It's a mystery to me how I got assigned here, but it worked out well," he said. "I'm very happy to be working here. It's a job that really needs to be done, and I'm happy to do it."

"We have to make sure the end product is good," said 2ndLt John Anderson, one of the comm center's watch officers. "Ensuring accuracy while keeping everyone well-trained is quite a challenge."

"We have to make sure everything is correctly done," Williams added.

"Basically, if a commander is trying to say something to anyone up or down the chain of command, we have to make it happen, whether it's to a NATO base in another part of the world or its a message from the commandant."

Speed and accuracy are parts of the II MEF Communications Center's standard operating procedure.

"These Marines do an essential job with remarkable efficiency under an incredible amount of pressure," Williams concluded.

Report examines women's role in Persian Gulf

Jim Garamone

American Forces Information Services

A Department of Defense study on women's performance during the gulf crisis shows they were less deployable than men and had a higher return-from-theater rate -- but both rates were small and did not hamper military operations.

Christopher Jehn ordered the report -- Utilization of American Women in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. Jehn is assistant secretary of defense for force management and personnel. The President's Commission on the Assignment Committee on Women in the Services, Congress, the military services and DoD will use the report with other sources of information when formulating policy.

The Persian Gulf war was the first large scale deployment featuring a significant number of women. More than 40,000 American women deployed with their units to the gulf region. The report says this was the largest deployment of military women in U.S. history. Women made up more than 7 percent of all U.S. forces in the area.

The deployment allowed the U.S. to track questions that have been raised for years. In the past, critics of women in the military said they would not deploy easily. In fact, they were deployed, these theories would experience a turn from deployment. Finally, critics raised about pregnancy rates. Some would get pregnant. Medical problem servicemembers from any other reason.

Information indicates 2 percent of men and women considered were not deployed for reasons.

The Army, Navy kept specific figures. Pregnancy accounts of the medically women. Even with the picture, 4.5 percent considered for deployment to go vs. 2 percent of men.

"Many critics of military used the pregnancy as an excuse to bash the of women in the military."

Jehn said he was the general conclusion. "Essentially, the report shows everyone -- men and women -- doing an outstanding job in the Persian Gulf. The overall conclusion went to show that our policies make Cockroaches can be dangerous to your health. 48 percent of asthmatics are allergic to roaches which can trigger asthma attacks.

How To Control Roaches And Asthma

Did you know that roaches can be a major trigger of asthma attacks? Researchers have found that 48 percent of asthmatics—almost half of the 15 million Americans who suffer from asthma—are allergic to cockroaches. For these people roaches are more than nasty household pests, they can be dangerous.

Here's why. Allergens from dead roaches and/or their excreta may remain in a building for a long time—even after cleaning. Dead roach remains also disintegrate and become part of the house dust that is inhaled and can trigger an asthma attack.

But today you don't have to live with roaches. Thanks to modern technology, all you have to do is to use bait trays where roaches are usually found to kill roaches for up to three months. When a roach eats the poison in a bait tray it lives long enough to crawl behind the walls and share the poison with the hordes of other roaches living there.

COMBAT bait trays also are the most effective roach control method for asthmatics because—unlike sprays and foggers—they do not bring additional respiratory irritants into the home.

If you or a member of your family have asthma: 1. See an allergist and have a skin test to determine if you are allergic to roaches; 2. Learn how to eliminate roaches and roach-proof your home by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a copy of COCKROACHES, ALLERGY AND ASTHMA, P.O. ### IT'S A FACT

The Hawaiian Islands were formed by volcanoes between 25 and 40 million years ago.

Black sand beaches may be found on the Big Island of Hawaii. They are the result of the explosion of lava that occurs when hot lava touches cold seawater.

Waipuhia Valley Falls on the island of Oahu are called the "Upside Down Falls" because its waters flow upwards and become a waterfall before reaching land.

As we live then, our spiritual flavor and substance is like the saltiness of the ocean getting into all of who we are and how we treat each other as men and women.

Whenever disrespect replaces respect and honor is shadowed by dishonor something has gone wrong with the mix of our core values and spiritual saltiness.

Our core values of honor, respect, and integrity taught us as Marines and sailors are ideals without a home if not incorporated into our lives and are often ideals without substance if not informed by our salty spiritual elements.

Sexual harassment is but one smitten of lives where the integration of appropriate salty spirituality and core values into every day living has not occurred.

The irony of it all, is that we know better, yet live magazine type lives, compartmentalized and not wholistic.

So today as you and I work, play, run, climb, lead and encourage each other, let us remember that God's people are salty folk called to be in the midst of life's stuff, leading with real substantive seasoning.

Local sailors to celebrate 217th birthday

Cpl Dave Higgins

October 13 is the birthday of the United States Navy, and Camp Lejeune sailors will commemorate their anniversary with traditional birthday balls.

The anniversary is also a time for Marines and sailors around the globe to honor their nearly 217-year heritage as brothers in arms and soldiers of the sea.

The U.S. Navy was created in 1775 by a reluctant Continental Congress at the insistence of Gen George Washington. The lawmakers approved a plan for providing and outfitting two naval vessels for the purpose of capturing British transport ships going to Canada.

The Navy/Marine Corps team embarked upon its first amphibious landing in March 1776. Eight ships under the command of ADM Esek Hopkins set sail to destroy an armada in Chesapeake Bay.

peake Bay.

Hopkins' ships were then diverted to Providence Island in the Bahamas, where the British housed a vast supply of powder and arms. If captured, this arsenal would reap great benefits to Washington's revolutionary troops.

After losing two ships to bad weather, Marines and sailors rowed ashore and attacked the British stronghold. The redcoats were so overwhelmed by the Americans, the fort was secured without a single shot being fired.

From these early beginnings to the present, the Navy/Marine Corps team has rapidly responded to the world's most volatile situations.

Today's multipurpose missions of amphibious assault, sea control or humanitarian support will, as always, find sailors and Marines side by side in defense of this country. And they'll be on station at the world's crisis points well into the next century.

Navy birthday balls are scheduled as follows:

The officers ball will begin at the Paradise Point Officer's Club with a reception at 1800 October 24. Dinner will be served at 1900, followed by entertainment provided by the band, Pride. Tickets are $20. R.S.V.P. with area representatives no later than October 15 for more information.

The enlisted ball's theme this year is "Women in the Navy." A 1700 social hour will start the festivities at Goette Memorial Field House, October 17. Entertainment will be provided by The Carousels after a ceremony entitled "50 Years of Women in the Navy."

The Child Development Center will offer free child care to anyone attending the ball.

Reservations must be made two days in advance. Contact your Navy ball representative for details.

Hospital nutritionist uses diet as key to her patients' health

Cpl Jeff Gradney

Four-year-old Jesse Clark lies listless in a bed at Camp Lejeune's Naval Hospital. He has a tubular apparatus attached to his left abdomen.

He is in the hospital, as he has been many times in his young life, because he must eat continuously. He takes in more than 4,000 calories a day through that tube leading directly to his stomach.

This may seem an incredible amount for a body so small, but it's necessary because he has a condition called malabsorption. To deal with problems like Jesse's the Naval Hospital has a special dietary and nutrition section.

"Food can be a type of medication" said LT Amy Lindberg, clinical dietician. "It's that way especially for people like little Jesse. He's getting the purest form of nutrition, elemental proteins that are already broken down for digestion."

As the hospital's dietician, Lindberg is alerted to any special dietary needs patients may have. Diabetic patients, for example, need special diets to regulate blood sugar levels. Other patients may have unusual food allergies.

"Our work here can be as simple as teaching our patients closer meal planning," Lindberg added. "It's like establishing a sort of nutritional balancing act for them, getting them back to the basics of meal planning."

Proper nutrition is more of a consideration in America these days than ever before. Even with this heightened diet consciousness, many people may not know enough about nutrition to eat for their health. For that reason, the hospital provides ongoing nutritional education programs.

"For some people, like our special diet patients, that education program means they can take better care of themselves when they leave the hospital," Lindberg said. "That means they may not show up later down the line with nutritionally induced problems. It's very similar to outpatient care."

"A lot of what we do here in nutrition is like community health care. It often takes a combination of medical, nursing and dietary work to keep some people healthy. Everything we do is in a team fashion," Lindberg said.

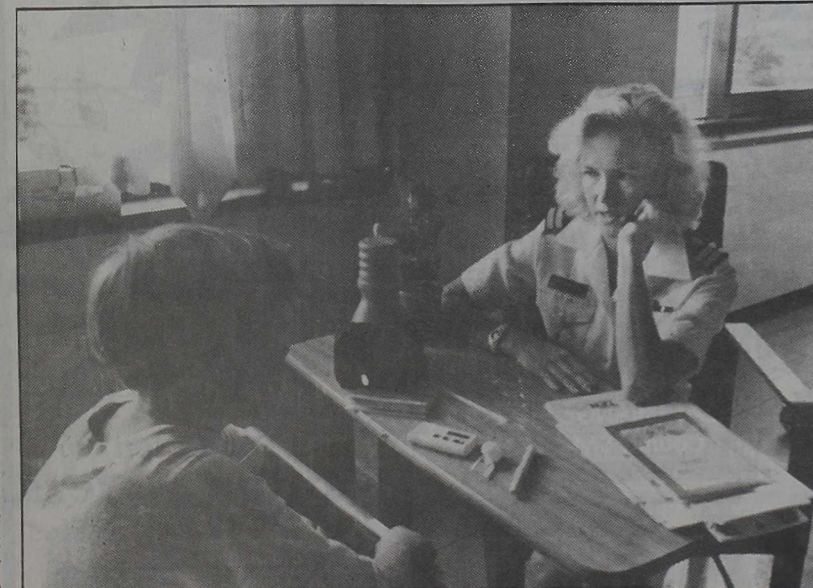

Lindberg receives special consult from doctors and nurses about patients with special dietary needs. She also stays in touch with special dietary patients through a daily hospital diet roster.

The whole hospital nutritional program covers a large scope. People suffering from clinical obesity or low body weight as well as others requiring prenatal or sports performance diets can all turn to the program for help. While they have what are considered "normal" nutritional needs, there are others who need special types of diets or nutrients just to live. These may be types of dietary emergencies. Lindberg says they try to diagnose and correct those types of problems early. "For something like that, prevention is the key."

"There are times," she adds, "when we're rushing around trying to work with a sudden special diet case, like a Marine who has been in an accident and has facial damage and can't eat. We have to find a way to feed them. Likewise, when they check out, if there's any special needs, like a liquid diet, we have to make sure that person has access to proper nutrition. If they have a meal card, for example, that might entail getting them a whole pad of prescriptions for special dietary supplements."

Lindberg said the hospital's nutrition program offers help for anyone who may have special dietary concerns. That help may come in the form of a special class, individual diet counseling, or just a bit of nutritional advice given over the telephone.

To help people learn more about the base hospital's nutritional program, they have a special diet line set up. The Diet Line's number is 451-4059.

LT Amy Lindberg, Naval Hospital clinical dietician, discusses a proper diet with Ivan Youtsey, a diabetic patient.

Dietician makes positive impact on health

Cpl Jeff Gradney

Many of the health care professionals at Camp Lejeune's Naval Hospital have winning bedside manners, but one of them also has an excellent table side manner.

She is LT Amy Lindberg, the hospital's clinical dietician. Her main duty is to make sure her patients are eating right.

Presenting a very athletic appearance, she is herself an example of proper nutritional and fitness habits. Her concerned professionalism is definitely that of a seasoned Navy health care professional, but her seemingly ceaseless energy and enthusiasm may remind you of a television aerobics and fitness personality.

That's not inappropriate if you also consider the fact that she heads up the physical readiness program for the entire hospital staff. Part of that means organizing a daily aerobics class for them.

"She's always busy," said Seaman Tamara Lawson, one of the food service specialists under Lindberg's command. "But she always finds time to take care of all her patients and help people who work with her. She's a good person, and she gives a lot of her free time."

"It seems as though no matter where I am, there's always someone at the other end of the hall waiting for help, and we enjoy helping them," Lindberg said.

"There are a lot of other duties, like today, in the hospital commanding officer's absence, I'm acting as the officer of the day," said Lindberg. "Suddenly I'm not just a clinical dietician any more, I take the calls, I assist in medevac operations and things like that."

Lindberg doesn't mind the extra duty. "That type of cross-training is advantageous to me," she said. "It helps me be a well-rounded person. In fact, one of the reasons I'm in the military is that I didn't want to work just one facet of nutrition. Here, I'm stretched to the limit, and I learn a lot more."

One thing the dietician doesn't have to learn is how to care about people. That comes naturally for her, whether she is checking on a young special dietary patient in a hospital ward or teaching a cholesterol class to a group of elderly people.

Lindberg genuinely enjoys what she does, she said, because she can make an impact.

"That's a reward within itself, if you can have a positive impact on someone's health. It makes you feel good," she said.

Hispanic-Americans play important role in U.S. defense

Army MSgt Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Hispanic-Americans have served and continue to serve the United States and the Department of Defense with courage and distinction, said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

The role Hispanic heritage plays in the United States wasn't officially recognized until 1968, when President Lyndon B. Johnson and Congress proclaimed Hispanic Heritage Week. Since 1989, Hispanic Heritage has been a month-long observance.

This year's theme for Hispanic Heritage Month is "500 Years of Hispanic Heritage, 1492-1992 -- Contributing to America's Progress." It continues to build on the themes for the last few years. The slogan "500 Years of Hispanic Heritage" has started each theme and focused on different aspects of Hispanic culture. In 1990, the other part of the theme was "Education Excellence, Key to Our Future," while last year's was "A Cultural Mosaic."

To recognize their contributions, DoD takes a part in the Hispanic Heritage celebration each year. There is no set way to celebrate the Hispanic contributions throughout the services. Each installation develops its own program, ranging from guest speakers and special meals at dining facilities to displays and sports events.

When thinking of their contributions to the country's defense, said Cheney, remember that 37 Hispanic-Americans received the Medal of Honor, the nation's highest military decoration. The medal was first awarded during the Civil War -- two Hispanic-Americans were among the first to receive it. Hispanics received the Medal of Honor for actions during the Boxer Rebellion, World War I and II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War.

Cheney said their actions have been a credit to themselves, to the United States and to their ancestry. "Many of these valiant Hispanics made the ultimate sacrifice and received recognition posthumously," he said.

Those who received the nations highest recognition include:

- Marine Pvt France Silva. He aided in the defense of Western legations in China for two months during the Boxer Rebellion in 1900.
- Army Pvt David Barkley. He

swam the Meuse River in France, crawling behind enemy lines to map artillery locations in 1918, during World War I. He drowned on the return trip. Barkley is the Army's first Hispanic Medal of Honor recipient; his Hispanic heritage was not discovered until 1889.

- Marine PFC Harold Gonsalves. He took part in action on the Okinawan island of Ie Shima 1945; when a grenade landed within a group of Marines, he dived on it, absorbing the explosion with his own body.

- Army Sgt Jose Lopez. He almost single-handedly kept his company from being overrun by Germans in Belgium on Dec. 17, 1944. His actions, which included killing more than 100 enemy, permitted the company to withdraw.

- Army SSgt Ysmael Villegas. He single-handedly charged five foxholes during an attack in the Philippines in 1945. He was killed while attacking the sixth. His actions inspired his men to attack.

- Army Cpl Rodolfo Hernandez. He continued to fire on onrushing assailants after his comrades withdrew during an attack in Korea in 1951. When he ran out of ammunition, he charged the enemy, armed with only a rifle and bayonet. He fell unconscious from bullet, grenade and bayonet wounds. His actions halted the enemy advance, enabling his unit to counterattack and retake the lost ground.

- Army Sgt 1st Class Louis Rocco. He accompanied an emergency medical evacuation team to evacuate eight critically wounded soldiers in Vietnam in 1970. The helicopter was forced to crash land. Rocco, severely injured, managed to pull the survivors from the wreckage.

Under enemy fire, man to safety.

- Marine PFC. Through severely injured soldiers in Vietnam in a location near unsuccessfully the grenades at the enemy moved into the open a grenade that destroyed the gun emplacement.

"Where Your Dollar Comes Back To You"

Senate striving to answer prisoner of war, missing in action controversy

Cpl Dave Higgins

Many former prisoners of war say that what kept them going day by day was knowing the American people would never give up looking for them. In their most dire moments of captivity, faith in their loved ones, their God and their country to find the truth about what had happened to them helped pull them through.

In his July 24 address, President George Bush renewed his administration's prior commitments to resolving the issue of Americans listed as POWs or missing in action. "Your long years of uncertainty must end," the president said. "And I am pledged to end them in any way I can."

The Senate Rules Committee heard testimony during summer 1991 concerning whether or not to establish a select committee on POW/MIA affairs. Thanks in part to the testimony by local attorney Vaughan Taylor, the Rules Committee voted unanimously to do so.

As the keynote speaker in a POW/MIA recognition service at the Protestant Chapel, Friday, Taylor spoke at length about the progress of the senate select committee.

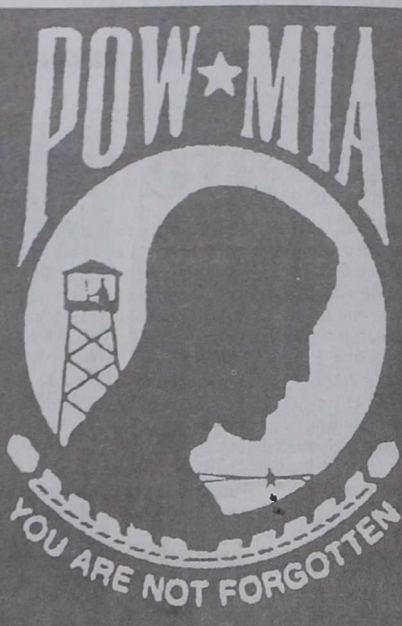

Taylor said the intent of the committee is to use its subpoena power to gather intelligence and correlate it to work out meaningful solutions on the POW/MIA subject.

The committee's top priority is to determine if there are any Americans alive from Vietnam, the years of the Cold War, or earlier conflicts such as the Korean War. Taylor said the whereabouts of remains of those who died during these periods will hopefully also be determined when the committee's report is tendered, January 4.

"It is my hope and the hope of the people on that committee that there may be still someone or perhaps several people alive, held in captivity in Southeast Asia," he said. "It was that hope and some evidence of that possibility that got me initially involved in this issue in 1985."

In 1980, Taylor resigned his commission as Army major, where he had served as a judge advocate and associate professor of criminal law. His tenure with the Army was during the period most American POWs returned from Vietnam.

Taylor joined the defense team for PFC Robert R. Garwood during that same year. Garwood, the last alive American servicemember to return from Vietnam, was court-martialed at Camp Lejeune.

Since 1985, Taylor has worked with the Defense Intelligence Agency and the Senate to find answers to the POW/MIA question.

Using private depositions in courthouses nationwide, Taylor said the committee is studying every piece of data from those who can share information on the POW/MIA issue.

Earlier this week, Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger were called to give testimony to the committee. Declassified intelligence reports have indicated that the Nixon administration knew live Americans were left in Vietnam.

"The evidence seems to corroborate the fact that the Vietnamese held some Americans after the war as security for war reparations," Taylor said. "We now know that people who believed that men were left alive after our war in Vietnam were right."

Taylor said he and select committee members believe America has no power to get anyone back who may still be alive. "We have to create an atmosphere in which the governments in Southeast Asia can save face and can themselves produce these people."

The way to do that, Taylor said, is to get international pressure on those governments.

"I do not doubt for a moment, based on my dealings with the Vietnamese, that if they thought the presence of American POWs would embarrass them, that they would rather destroy the evidence.

"They will respond to some gain," he said. "It's very difficult for the policy makers of this country to put a carrot out there for them without opening the doors completely so that we're relying simply on good faith."

Vietnam's representative to the United States, Trinh Xuan Lang told State Department officials recently that improved U.S.-Vietnamese relations appear to be hostage to strong MIA lobbying. Vietnam insists all captives were released after the war, and Lang said no evidence exists that MIAs remain alive.

Defense Intelligence Agency files in 1986, however, concluded that Americans were still alive in Southeast Asia. In his address, President Bush said, "Without further movement on the POWs and MIAs, we cannot and will not continue to move forward with Hanoi."

Senate members believe that former U.S. enemies may be instrumental in finding out what has happened to the more than 2,000 Vietnam MIAs, as well as American MIAs from other conflicts, Taylor said.

American recognition, safety and security for these governments should be contingent on their help on this subject.

For example, Russia has come forward with information on the fates of several Americans during World War II, the Korean War and the days of the Cold War.

"There have been more than 1,400 live sightings of Americans in Vietnam," Taylor said. "These live sightings continue to come forth all the time ... and therein lies tremendous hope."

"If there is someone alive in Southeast Asia and they could see you here today — concerned and recognizing their fight for survival — that would keep them alive."

"Having Dr. Kissinger and President Nixon testify for the first time, where they'll have to answer truthfully all the questions they may have answers to, will help us find answers like we've never been able to find them before."

"The sun is already setting for those men, so we are going to have to act quickly and diligently if we are going to have any hopes of bringing them back alive," he said.

Taylor added that finding just one alive American would be worth our previous efforts.

But, he concluded, "if we determine for sure that they're all dead, at least (when the select committee report comes out) a lot of people will be able to rest."

Marine ingenuity makes camp more like home

Cpl David J. Ferrier

HARRIS FIELD RELIEF CAMP, Fla. — Marines are known for their ability to adapt to any situation, whether it is a war in the desert or a hurricane cleanup effort in the United States. When Hurricane Andrew struck south Florida last August, most of the attention has focused on the damage it made homeless will rebuild their lives. Now, they are making the best of the situation.

Soon after the majority of work was done, the camp was built, chow lines ran smoothly and the camp began to take shape — various units of the 2d Marine Air-Ground Task Force tried to make a nearly hopeless situation more like home. Thousands of donated toys and baby products were handed out. A makeshift "Third World Sally Struthers" event was held where Floridians scrambled hungrily for food.

Once the situation had stabilized, the camp began to design ways to maintain everyone's morale. A makeshift basketball court sprung up on the television news vans; they didn't even have basketball at first.

Next, a stage which hosted various acts as well as providing children a place to play, followed by a wooden swingset.

For the Marines' entertainment, a stage was created, complete with chairs and a cover. Balls, footballs, baseballs and gloves were donated, and recently, a weight set, pull-up bars and a rowing machine were donated. Improvements for their tent were neglected, either. Wooden shelves and lockers were brought from becoming soaked in intense rains and mosquito netting was donated.

Dartboards, portable radios and decks were most likely to be found in every tent; games were synonymous with deployments. If an army man's stomach, Marines could circle the globe. The Army doles out peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and cases of soda by the armful. Some O's cereal can even sometimes be found at the breakfast tables.

Capt Dan Elzie, Company B commander, 2d Marine Support Battalion, said keeping Marines happy and keeping them out of trouble. His 2d Force Support Group Marines have built many of these items like the stage and pull-up bars.

"I've allowed them to build just about anything they want to improve their living conditions," he said. "I also tell them they are doing a good job, I make sure they are giving them a pat on the back. I make sure they are doing a good job," he said.

Improvements are continuing in the camp. More than 25 tables of recreational activities and projects have been donated for homeless families. The baseball field from homeless haven to a time post — remains a long-term goal.

Lend a helping hand

Local Marines come to aid American Red Cross

LCpl Jimmy G. Davis

Dealing with disasters is nothing new for the Red Cross, but when local Marines came to its aid September 15, the Jacksonville Chapter found the tables turned.

Fifteen Marines from Company A, Headquarters and Support Battalion, Marine Corps Base and General Support Maintenance Company, 2d Maintenance Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group lent a hand to help the local Red Cross chapter get things running smoothly again.

The local chapter had recently suffered a water leak which caused major damage to a storeroom in the back of the main office downtown.

"We had a major water leak in the beginning of August that almost destroyed a small building behind our office," said Kathryn Smith, Red Cross executive director.

Fortunately the shed was almost empty at the time of the accident. Only a few office supplies were slightly damaged during the flood, said Smith.

However, the accident did put a hamper on new plans the Red Cross had been considering.

The Red Cross presently stores disaster supplies on the second floor of the building and had been planning to change this for two reasons, Smith said.

"The supplies are hard to get at and to move since they are stored upstairs. We are growing and expanding and need extra office space, so we wanted to move the supplies to the shed," Smith said.

With the chapter's limited funding and the insurance deductible at $2,500 there was little hope that the building would be able to be used.

"We needed to do something and we needed help so we called Alpha Co.," Smith said.

"They had already called to see if there was anything they could do to help us before the accident. So I called them and asked if they could help with this."

Not only were the Marines willing to help, but more volunteers arrived than were needed to do the job.

"We got a few more volunteers than we needed so we started landscaping the yard also," said 1st Lt. James D. Wilmott, CoA executive officer.

"This place has never looked so good," said Smith.

"They are doing a fantastic job. The Marines came through again. We wouldn't be able to have that building anymore if it wasn't for them."

"It feels real good to be a part of this," said Sgt Stephen D. Clark, GSM Co, 2d Maint Bn. "I enjoy helping people. Helping Red Cross is helping them help people."

Marine remembered

Marilane Perkins Jacobson and husband, Lawrence, recently traveled from Los Angeles to mark the second anniversary of the dedication of building H-17N, the location of the 2d MarDiv Combat Camera Photographic Laboratory, in memory of her son Cpl William T. Perkins. Perkins was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously "for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his own life above and beyond the call of duty. During a strong, hostile attack, he saved the lives of his three fellow Marines by absorbing the blast of a grenade thrown into the Command Post area." The formal dedication ceremony in August 1990 was officiated by LtGen William Keys, then the 2d Mar Div CG. This is the second building aboard Camp Lejeune dedicated in honor of Perkins. In the early 1970s, building 11 housed Division Photo and bore the plaque detailing his heroic actions.

Perkins is also the namesake for the Camp Lejeune Chapter of the Marine Corps Combat Correspondents organization.

Know where wearing utilities is authorized, unauthorized

Cpl Jeff Gradney

Almost every day, Marines and sailors can be seen off base wearing their utility uniforms. They may be at gas stations, post offices or convenience stores. Some are well within base regulations — yet others are clearly in violation of the base order that governs off-base utility wear.

Many Marines and sailors may be misinformed about base order 1020.8U. Questions begin to surface, such as whether or not the uniform may be worn at off base

Uniform may be worn off base while commuting to, from work within a 50-mile radius post offices or convenience stores. These are the types of questions that often lead to violations of that base order.

"I think knowing and abiding by all such uniform regulations is an inherent part of Marine leadership," said LtCol Robert Banta, base adjutant. "Marines are Marines 24 hours a day, and part of that is being familiar with and following regulations wherever they are."

There aren't many "grey areas" in the base order. It's really quite cut and dried as to when and where the utility uniform is permitted off base.

The order states the uniform may be worn off base while commuting to and from home and work within a 50-mile radius of Camp Lejeune.

That means, generally, no further than Kingston to the west, Wilmington to the south or Washington, to the north. That means one shouldn't decide to drive from base to weekend liberty in Virginia while still wearing the utility uniform.

There are other circumstances when wearing the utility uniform off base is permissible. These include when dropping off or picking up children from day care, stopping to get gas and picking up vehicles at repair shops or garages.

The utility uniform is also authorized off base while stopping at convenience stores, banking facilities and "drive-through" restaurants or services. The only other exception is obvious: emergency stops for medical or automotive reasons are authorized.

Those are the only times the base order permits wearing the utility uniform off base.

The order also gives some examples of where the uniform is prohibited. These include at restaurants, supermarkets, grocery stores, off-base facilities, commercial stations and recreation areas such as theaters.

The uniform is authorized while conducting official business with public utilities, utility companies or other off-base shopping facilities. The base order states the uniform is worn off base neatly pressed and shined.

For more information, call order 1020.8U.

Football enters second week

Navy edges Radio 13-6

LCpl Mark D. Oliva

The Naval Hospital Rams defeated the 2d Radio Battalion Hornets 13-6 Monday night on the intramural field.

SN Cory Young led the Rams' ground game with 180 yards and scored the first touchdown with a 42-yard run in the first quarter. Young set the pattern for the Rams to follow the rest of the game.

With the Hornets receiving the first kickoff, neither team was able to move the ball past their line of scrimmage. Both defenses penetrated, causing mistakes in the offensive backfields.

Young sparked activity when he took a backward lateral from the 42-yard line and charged up the sideline for the first TD. With the extra point kick going wide, the Rams led 6-0.

The Rams defense held the Hornets offense to minimum movement on the next drive. But, their offense was unable to match the performance of their defense and was cursed with a turnover despite strong runs from Young.

The Hornets and the Rams clashed continuously in the middle of the field, neither offense able to make a dent. Complete passes were few due to the great coverage and penetration from the linebackers.

Rams' PO3 John Richardson finally broke away for a clean 35-yard TD reception. The extra point was good and the Rams were up 13-0 through the half.

With the second half underway the Hornets came back with a vengeance by craftily moving the ball down the field. Sgt Shawn Kirkwood swept the the defensive line and punched in for the Hornets first touchdown, taking the game to 13-6.

The Rams, unable to come up with an answer for Hornets second wind, turned the ball over. The Hornets wasted no time in the fourth trying to make up for the lost time.

They scratched and clawed their way down to the Rams 7-yard line, where they were held off for three downs. On the fourth down, with the two-minute warning having already been sounded, SN Reede Adams made an interception on the goal line and brought it back to the 7-yard line.

The Rams pushed the ball away from their own end zone in the next few plays.

With only seconds remaining, Young showed the Hornets who controlled the ball by scrambling 40-yards cutting, rolling and dodging his way before being taken down.

A Hornets running back gets hammered by the Rams' defense Monday on the intramural field.

'People's Race' starts next month in Washington

Cpl Michael E. McLean

MARINE CORPS COMBAT DEVELOPMENT COMMAND, Quantico, Va. — Although the biggest United States race this election year is for the White House, another race of grand proportions is going to be run through this Nation's capital.

The 17th Annual Marine Corps Marathon is October 25 and 13,000 runners are expected to converge on the streets of Washington.

The event, which begins at exactly 0900, starts at the Marine Corps War Memorial in Arlington and twists through historic Georgetown and the scenic District of Columbia before returning to the memorial.

The race course is a showcase for many famous historical landmarks to include the Jefferson and Lincoln Memorials, the Capitol and the Washington Monument. The season couldn't be better for such an event. The monuments are highlighted by the vivid pastels of fall covering the surrounding foliage. A cool average temperature of 45-50 degrees is common and many runners claim it to be perfect weather for long distance races.

Also known as "The People's Race," the event is open to the first 13,000 participants entering. All runners will be asked to sign a statement saying they support this nation's campaign against illegal drug use, believe illegal drugs have no place in American society or sporting events, and are drug-free themselves.

According to Marine Corps officials, the idea of a drug-free marathon is really the logical extension of the original goals of the event. Since the first Marine Corps Marathon in 1976, the Marine Corps has sought to emphasize the value of physical fitness and a healthy lifestyle.

In addition to recognition for a drug-free life-style, each participant will receive a T-shirt, commemorative patch and an official race program. Marathoners who successfully complete the race will also receive a finishers medal, completion certificate and an official results booklet.

There will be several events that will be conducted in conjunction with the Marathon. One of the most enthusiastically supported is the District of Columbia Special Olympics Mini-Marathon.

For the first time, Special Olympians from across the United States will participate in the five- and 10-kilometer events which begin 35 minutes after the start of the Marine Corps Marathon. Previously only Olympians east of the Mississippi have participated.

Historically, one of the most widely attended events is the Runners Exposition at the Doubletree Inn, Arlington, Va. It features approximately 80 vendors with merchandise ranging from shoes and clothes to posters and literature. The exposition runs October 23 from 1200-2000 and October 24 0800-1800 and is open to the public.

There will also be pre-race symposium speakers. Many of them motivational speakers there to support the first-time runners.

Highlighted speakers include Bob Wieland, a double amputee and veteran of the Marine Corps Marathon and Iron Man Triathlon, and Dr. George Sheehan, the year's keynote speaker. Sheehan is a Redbank, N.J., cardiologist and author of two best sellers, "Dr. Sheehan on Fitness" and "Running and Being." He also writes for "Runner's World" and "The Physician and Sports Medicine" magazines.

In addition to Sheehan and Wieland, eight well-known running authorities will give presentations on subjects ranging from diet and training to personal running experiences.

"More than half the runners in the Marine Corps Marathon will be first timers," said Sgt Bobby Baker, Marine Corps Marathon administrative chief.

The course is flat and perfect for first timers," he added. The entry fee for individuals is $21, and applications must be postmarked by October 1. A $9 late fee will be charged after this date.

For more marathon information or applications, write the Marine Corps Marathon, P.O. Box 188, Quantico, Va. 22134 or call (703) 640-2225 or (703) 690-3431.

Presidential Sports Award program encourages fitness

POLIS — The Council on Physical Fitness is offering its Sports Award as an incentive for Americans to be in good physical condition. Recipients between the ages of 26-34 accounted for 23.9 percent of all awards and 17.7 percent were earned by those 45-54 years old.

Individuals who earn an award receive a personalized certificate of achievement from President George Bush; a letter of congratulations from Arnold Schwarzenegger, the Chairman of the Council; an embroidered emblem signifying the sport in which the award was earned; a sports bag identification tag and a shoe pocket to hold valuables while an individual works out.

Program brochures and additional information for both group programs and individuals can be obtained at the Fitness Center, building 201 or by calling 451-3584.

23,000 Americans earned in 1991, which is just a symbol for them every year. The program is a public display of the fitness of our nation's citizens. The program is a public display of the fitness of our nation's citizens. The program is a public display of the fitness of our nation's citizens.

Camp Lejeune Marine tackles 308-pound Dolphin

LEAD, Fla. -- LCpl Erik Griffin said he and three other Marines from his unit were waiting their turn for a Dolphins shirt when they noticed someone throwing a football. A news reporter asked the Dolphins players if they would play a game with the Marines.

"They said yes, so the four of us wound up playing them. We had the ball, but it was intercepted," said Griffin, recalling the events leading up to his now famous tackle. "He was pretty big ... about 300 pounds ...

and I had to tackle him."

Sports Illustrated reporters on the scene were impressed enough with his tackle to write an article about the event which appeared in last week's issue.

"I jumped up and down when I heard that Sports Illustrated had published my part in the game against the Dolphins," said Griffin, who is working here with Camp Lejeune's 2d Maintenance Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group. "At first I thought they (my friends) were pulling my leg," he added.

Nearly 6 feet tall, the 26-year-old, 185-pound son of Baltimore's Jesse and Rebecca Griffin, said he learned his tackling techniques while a backup cornerback with his high school football team.

"I wrapped my arms around his ankles. He couldn't go anywhere but down," said Griffin. "My high school coach told me, 'if the guy is too big to hit high, then go for the legs below the knees.' Most of the time he'll go down regardless of how big he is."

The Dolphins played a 30-minute game with the Marines while children were watched. "It (the game) was good motivation and got our morale up. It was also good (because) you don't often get the chance to meet professional football players."

Griffin said neither team scored. "But they (Miami Players) were just playing around. We were serious because we couldn't tackle them unless we were."

Griffin, who joined the Corps in October 1988 at Baltimore's Towson Marine Corps Recruiting office, is even more serious about his job here.

If the ongoing relief effort in Hurricane Andrew's wake was the stature of the Dolphin's Gene Williams, Griffin, and the Marines like him would have tackled the job and completed it long ago.

Focus will be on wellness

Camp Lejeune's fitness center will be undergoing monumental changes in the near future as a result of a new Marine Corps order promoting healthy lifestyles. This new fitness outlook involves more than physical health. It encourages emotional, spiritual and overall wellness.

"It's a holistic approach involving areas such as physical fitness, nutrition, stress management and tobacco use and cessation," said Dr. Ronald M. Gerugthy, fitness center director. Gerugthy recently became director and has had extensive past experience in creating health programs for universities and corporations.

The fitness center will move from the Area 2 Gym to the current main exchange location, after the new exchange's 1993 completion. The staff and equipment will focus on physical fitness and the individual's overall healthiness, Gerugthy said.

"It's a wellness program unlike any other in the military," said Gerugthy. "I invision a close cooperation between the wellness center, Naval Hospital, Consolidated Drug and Alcohol Center and religious activities. All working for an overall healthy lifestyle rather than each operating in a vacuum, unaware of each other's contribution to wellness.

"Many people measure health by physical strength," Gerugthy said. "Physical wellness, on the other hand, means positive lifestyle and life changes that deal with the entire person rather than physical only."

Some of the elements of the program, as outlined by MCO 6200, include tobacco use and cessation. This will be a joint effort between the hospital and the center, said

Semper Fit that is available to anyone who may need help living a physically healthy life. Weight reduction, exercise programs and healthy eating assessments can be made by contacting the fitness center. These programs are tailor-made for the individual, Gerugthy said.

The new wellness center will be a sprawling fitness center containing state-of-the-art equipment, Gerugthy said. A human performance laboratory, the first of its kind in the military, will clinically assess individuals to determine what areas need to be enhanced, whether it be intellectual, physical or emotional. The facility will surpass many fitness programs found in universities and large corporations, Gerugthy said.

Also available will be back injury and muscle strain prevention classes. Demonstrations of proper weight lifting techniques, use of a exercise machinery and back injuries will be given.

Alcohol and drug abuse prevention and control is also a part of total wellness and will continue to be a responsibility of CDAC. "The base is doing an excellent job on substance abuse," Gerugthy said.

The new wellness center will offer preventive rehabilitation for individuals who have been injured and completed physical rehabilitation in the hospital. It will not only continue to build their strength,

Center gets new director

Kim Buckner

Dr. Ronald M. Gerugthy is heading up the new wellness program. He began working at the fitness center July 20 and has had extensive experience in outlining and managing corporate and university wellness fitness programs.

Gerugthy, who majored in pathology, earned his doctorate with highest honors from the University of California San Francisco Medical Center. He is a pathologist, forensic pathologist and a dentist.

His medical background and professional and academic positions have qualified him for his present position.

Gerugthy has designed and supervised individual, group and corporate fitness programs as designed comprehensive facilities.

Personal athletic participation includes track, cross country, football and soccer.

He came out of retirement to take on the responsibility of fitness director. He said he was impressed with the quality of personnel who works for the base. He has been extremely impressed with the leadership found at command levels. He said he believed the new wellness program has enormous potential.

"The base has so many programs," Gerugthy said. "I don't settle for having less than the best program in the nation."

The new wellness center will be a sprawling center containing state-of-the-art equipment.

Gerugthy. There will be a variety of programs including workshops designed to help those who want to quit smoking.

Stress management workshops are also a part of the program. Excessive stress can impact negatively on a person's emotional and physical wellness, Gerugthy said. Physical fitness and sports is also addressed. The center already has an extensive physical training program called abuse prevention and control is also a part of total wellness and will continue to be a responsibility of CDAC. "The base is doing an excellent job on substance abuse," Gerugthy said.

The new wellness center will offer preventive rehabilitation for individuals who have been injured and completed physical rehabilitation in the hospital. It will not only continue to build their strength, but also self-esteem, getting them back on full duty faster, Gerugthy said.

He stressed how important this program is now and for the future.

"In the past, most illnesses were bacterial, such as chicken pox and polio. Today we have vaccines for those. Now, major causes of death are cardiovascular, which are considered lifestyle diseases that can't be treated with vaccines."

This program, according to the order, will increase productivity, reduce costs and enhance military readiness.

Families are also encouraged to be involved. Programs focused on the youth will be held in cooperation with the youth center, Gerugthy said.

"If a family is unwell, it directly affects the Marine. I'm worried about his family. Hopefully this program will alleviate these type of stressors."

Paradise Point Golf Course makes putting less prudent

Cpl James A. Finch

Camp Lejeune's Paradise Point greens snatch golf from the grips of the prim and proper and make putting as plain as pickup basketball.

Cheap fees and quality service keep droves of common folk shuffling through the Gold and Scarlet courses for an average 90,000 rounds of golf per year, giving the pro shop a gross of more than $290,000.

Assistant manager and retired Marine SgtMaj Grant Beck describes Paradise Point as one of the most complete golf courses the Marine Corps offers. Two challenging 18-hole courses, three putting greens, two driving ranges, a shag ball range, rentable lounge area, snack bar, pro shop and fully stocked equipment room are the proof.

"I've played courses from South Carolina to Pennsylvania, most of which have the fancy country club image," Beck said. "We concentrate on providing quality service at steal rates. Anything a patron needs, whether it's lessons or special golfing equipment, we can provide."

The golf course is organized into three main groups — pro shop, issuing and maintenance. The pro shop has a manager, two assistant managers, a pro shop cashier and secretary. Issuing room attendants are responsible for pull and electric carts, range balls and all rentals. The maintenance crew cuts and polices the greens, cleans out the wooded areas, repairs bridges and cleans bathrooms on the course.

When big tournaments hit the base, the organization's attention to detail heightens. The big tournaments is the yearly intercollegiate tournament weekend of March. Thirty-three colleges from North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia, and one active-duty military team participated in last year's 21st annual meeting.

"As soon as the intercollegiate tournament starts, we start byron commencing. Last year, sponsors donated a total $20,000 worth of motion picture as free shirts, shoes, even a $1,000 hole-in-one. "About prior to the tournament, we send out letters to the clubs entraining them to know about the tournament and scoring hole. We also send out letters to the clubs, quets, speakers, prep the greens and fully stocked. The turnover file for the entire process is inches thick."

Even with big tournaments, an increased number of golfers and an almost $300,000 gross, the course shows a large profit. "We don't expect any money out here," Beck said. "A lot of money out here and pay less than $10 for greens of clubs and play from sunup till sundown. It's not uncommon to see a line of people off from hole one early on a Saturday. We're really required to do is break even."

Sports Talk

Cpl James J. Cohn

In almost every sport, the top two finishers face each other to decide the champion.

This does not hold true in collegiate football, though.

For some reason, the NCAA will not depart from its tradition of having conference champions play one another despite their rankings. This makes it possible for a team that is ranked first to play a team in a bowl game that's not even ranked in the top 20, and there's nothing they can do about it.

What we end up with each January 1 is a joke. The No. 1 team plays the No. 6 team while No. 2 and 3 face each other. It seems that most of the time the national championship winner wasn't ranked first before the bowl games began.

To add to the confusion of determining the champion, being the No. 1-ranked team and winning the final bowl game doesn't necessarily mean being named the national champion. The championship is decided by sports writers across the country. You know there's something seriously wrong when journalists are making the decisions for us.

I don't have a solution to fix the problem, but at least I can recognize it — which is more than the NCAA has done. I don't think that a playoff system would work because there are so many schools out there.

Because everyone is so worried about their rankings, we don't see as many good games. What athletic director with half a brain is going to schedule a non-conference game with a team that could actually beat them.

This is why Notre Dame is no longer going to play Miami. I think they're going to replace them on the schedule with Vanderbilt University.

Unfortunately, the college game has adopted a zero-defect mentality.

Enough college football, it is time for the German phrase of the week. I wasn't sure, but when I started this I thought it would help unify the European community. I'm just glad to have played my part in establishing the new world order. "Machen Sie mir das mal klar. Sie wollen jetzt eine persönliche Anzeige aufgeben, um die im schwarzen Leder gekleidete Frau zu suchen, die Ihnen ein Tritt gegeben hat und dann Ihr Gesicht leckte? Was für ein Monstrum sind Sie denn?" This translates to, "Let me get this straight. You want to run a personal ad looking for the woman dressed in black leather who kicked you and then licked your face. What kind of freak are you?" I'm outta here.

Dive weekend offers fun, education

J.P. McCann

North Carolina Aquarium

The North Carolina Aquarium at Pine Knoll Shores will host the North Carolina Dive Weekend October 9-10.

Morehead City and Beaufort, S.C., offer access to outstanding scuba diving areas. North Carolina's coastline is sometimes called, "The Graveyard of the Atlantic." Some divers consider this area the state's best-kept secret.

On a warm day it is common to have 100-foot visibility in offshore waters. The wrecks off the local coast range in depths from the Theodore Parker and the W.E. Hutton in 60 feet, to the USS Tarpon and the Papoose in more than 130 feet. Several professional dive operations provide transportation and services to enjoy this area's underwater scenery. The diversity of wrecks and preferred dive conditions present an ultimate situation for divers on all levels.

The event will begin with a reception and special program October 9 at the aquarium. Greg Davis, a producer and director of underwater video productions, will present his newest production, "Down with the Sharks." This video recounts the sinking of the German U-Boat 352, 30 miles off our coast, and contains interviews with survivors from a recent reunion of old enemies.

On October 10, dive charts will be available for offshore trips with advance registration. For those who stay ashore, the aquarium will be showing a series of quality films on marine life and underwater exploration. Featured among these will be a late afternoon premier showing of Rod Farb's newest production "Mission to the Monitor." To complete the day's activities, a barbecue dinner and evening program will follow. The introductory program, Carolina Dive, will be presented by Ray Scharf, director of Aquatics at East Carolina University in Greenville.

Next will be our featured speaker/presenter Bill Lovin. Bill is a published underwater photographer and producer. Beneath the Killing talk about one of his projects in a program Making of Return to Sharks and Shipwrecks.

The weekends' program is designed to be enjoyable and non-diver friendly. Time will be made to view the aquarium behind the scenes. Registration is required for participants.

The program features offshore diving, all reception and dinner everything except the pre-registration way. Call the aquarium for information and registration forms. Telephone (919) 247-4004. Mailing from 0900-1700. E-mail suggested due to the popularity of the event.

Fall brings beautiful colors

North Carolina Travel and Tourism

If normal weather continues across North Carolina, the state's forests will soon be ablaze in six to eight weeks with the reds, oranges and yellows of autumn.

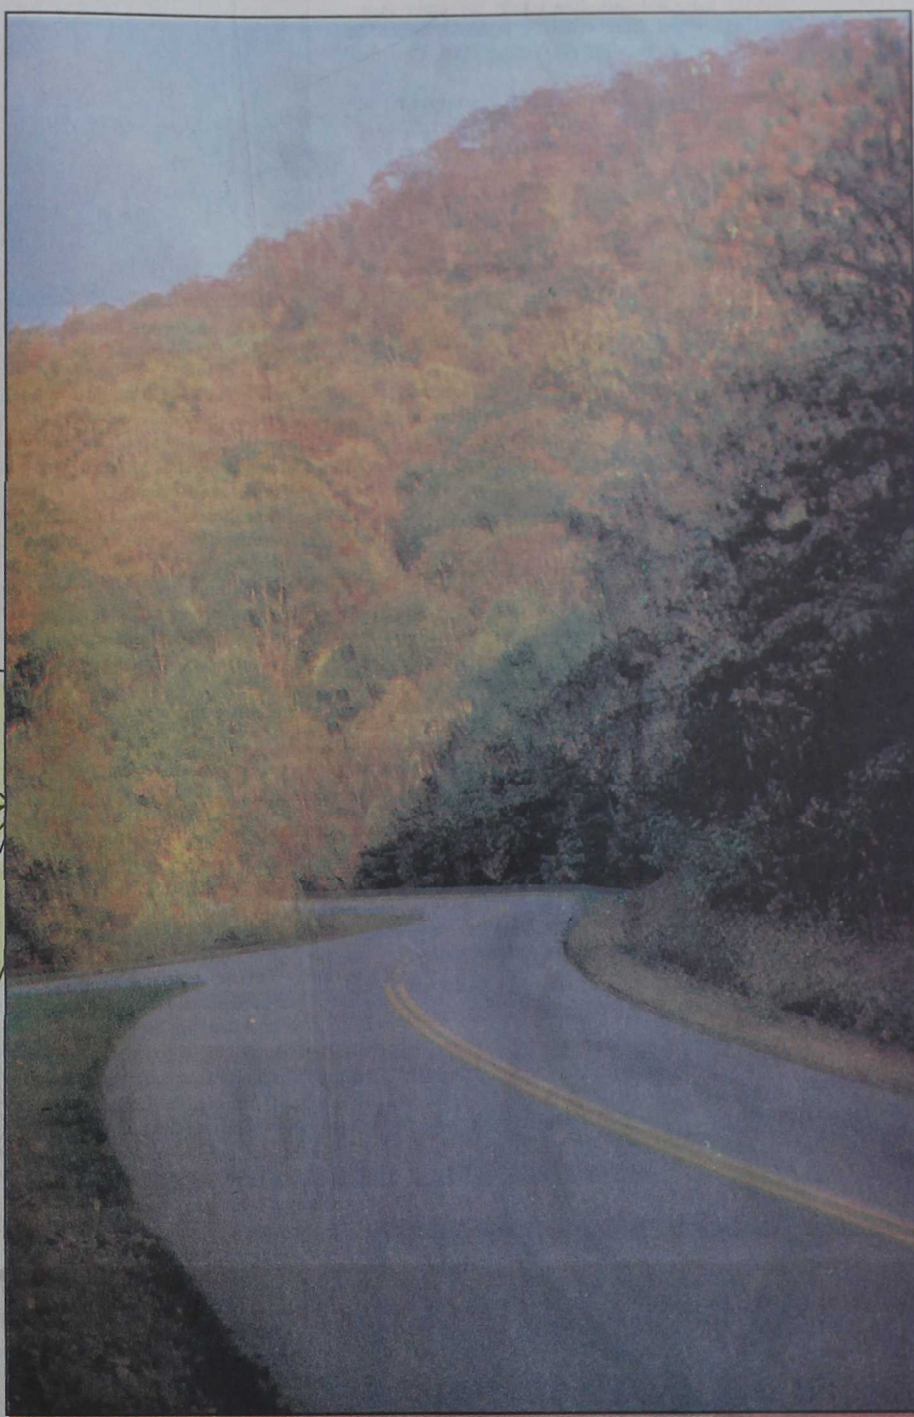

"From the looks of the heavy foliage on the trees and with the normal amounts of rainfall, the fall season should be really colorful," said Howard Parr, chief ranger for the Blue Ridge Parkway that winds for 270 miles through the Great Smoky and Blue Ridge mountains of North Carolina.

The Blue Ridge Parkway stretches from Cherokee in Swain County to Cumberland Knob in Alleghany County. Its scenic two-lane road provides spectacular overlooks for viewing fall color as it curves and dips and climbs.

Fall color in the southern mountains provides an amazing backdrop for the area known as the "Land of the Waterfalls." S. 64 West from Brevard in Transylvania County to Murphy in Cherokee County takes travelers on a tour of the southern highlands rich in the reds and yellows of maples, oaks and poplar.

Travelers in eastern North Carolina need not worry. They too can see brilliant reds, yellows and oranges in the coastal plain's hardwoods. N.C. 111 South from Goldsboro Kenansville crosses harvested fields lined with many oaks, maples and dogwoods. Another spectacular area of color is found at the Cliffs of the Neuse State Park, located just off N.C. 11 on the Neuse River in southwestern Wayne County.

For more information on scenic routes in North Carolina, call 800-VISIT-NC.

Autumn began Tuesday. The Blue Ridge Parkway will soon be ablaze with color.

Home is where the hurt is

Family violence month begins

Kim Buckner

Domestic violence is believed to be the most common, yet least reported crime in our nation, according to the National Woman Abuse Prevention Project. An estimated 3 million - 4 million American women are beaten each year by their husbands or partners.

More than 70 percent of battered women's children were victims of physical abuse or neglect.

Military families are no exception. Each month during the past year, about 178 new cases of domestic violence were reported to the base's Family Advocacy Program. Camp Lejeune's Family Counseling Center has programs designed to provide support and non-medical counseling.

But families aren't the only ones affected. Date rapes are also a problem. "Men batter to achieve and maintain power over their partners to get their own needs and desires met quickly and completely,"

Barbara J. Hart wrote in "Analysis of Male Violence."

October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month. The next edition of ACCENT, October 8, will focus on the various forms of abuse, why some women continue to live with abuse, and how to get protection and help.

"We're doing something that will benefit everyone," said MSgt Ben Torman, MCES logistics chief who coordinated much of the effort. "I'm so glad to see young people involved and I would gladly support any effort like this."

Several politicians, Onslow County representatives, members of Stump Sound Environmental Advocates, local church members and other citizens also helped with the effort, said to Melvin Shepard, Waterman's Association president. More than 1,200 bags of trash were collected by 405 volunteers.

Some of the items the group found included a stereo with two speakers, diapers, three walls of bathroom tiling, 26 bags of trash, a washing machine, car parts, lawn chairs and a bowling ball.

Students, Scouts join forces to clean beach

Story and photos by

The nationwide beach cleanup effort, Big Sweep, is past and Onslow Beach is better for it.

the Lejeune High School parking lot Saturday morning and headed for the beach. The cool, morning air soon gave way to the scorching midday sun. But this didn't stop the more than 100 volunteers from scouring miles of beach and filling their bags with everything from Christmas trees to frying pans.

Before heading out on their cleanup adventure the volunteers were outfitted with gloves, bags and a set of safety rules. The large gloves engulfed some of the smaller hands of the Brownies but this didn't stop their enthusiasm.

"We're gonna clean up so the birds won't choke and die," said 8-year-old Peri Chipman. Two-year-old Kate wasn't too concerned with trash, but her T-shirt pocket sagged under the weight of shells and rocks.

The group concentrated their efforts on the area past Risley Pier, a section not regularly policed by Marines. A large Navy landing craft, air-cushioned boat and several light armored vehicles roamed up and down the beach seemed to go unnoticed by the mostly military children as they searched for debris among the dunes.

The teen-agers, who may not have been quite as enthusiastic about being in the sun as the smaller children, had a deeper knowledge and concern for the condition of our environment.

"Without our environment, we can't survive," said Ryan Judkins, a Camp Lejeune High School senior. "You've got to take care of it if it is going to take care of you."

Members of Junior Girl Scout Troop 641 have gloves on and bags in hand as they sections of Onslow Beach.

Jarvis Toa Afualo, 11th-grader, agreed. "We use these beaches, we may as well keep them clean. If people aren't more aware, our resources could be depleted. We could run out of stuff we really need."

Twylah Hardison, Environmental Management Department recycling coordinator, organized the whole effort. "It's the third year we've done it. It's something we look forward to doing." She roamed the beaches, along with Mac Farrow, also from EMD, making sure everyone had everything they needed, including cool water to drink.

Some of the students who participated are part of an environmental club called Our Planet or H4OP. This LHS group was started by Pam Lindner, ecology teacher, and a variety of environmental events in Sweep.

Students from Jennifer Steimel biology class were also involved in cleanup. Some of the volunteers credit for their participation.

Once the bags of trash were a group headed for an enlisted club Welfare and Recreation quenched and satisfied their hunger.

J.C. Penney, United Way taking nominations for Golden Rule Award

Kim Buckner

Onslow County's many service organizations are filled with volunteers who devote time and effort improving the Jacksonville and Camp Lejeune community. J.C. Penney's Golden Rule Award is one way these hard-working people are lauded for their accomplishments.

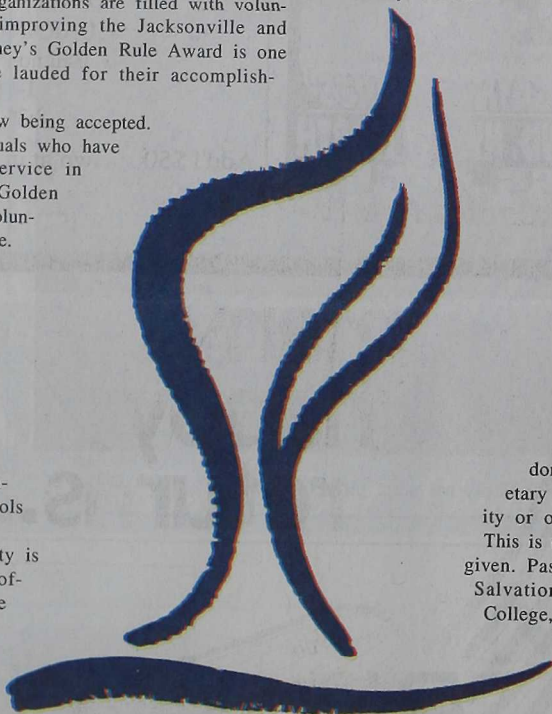

Nominations for the award are now being accepted. It is presented to groups and individuals who have performed outstanding volunteer service in their local communities. A special Golden Rule Youth Award is presented to volunteers 18 and under at nomination time.

The awards are named for James Cash Penney's first store, The Golden Rule, established in 1902 in Kemmerer, Wyo. "Penney was as much a man of moral principles as he was an astute, hard-working, and extraordinarily successful businessman. For more than 60 years, he actively participated in public and community life, providing grants to schools and churches."

The United Way of Onslow County is co-sponsoring the awards. "All too often volunteers put forth effort and are not recognized. We forget to say thank you," said John J. Caskey, United Way director, at the Golden Rule Award kickoff celebration September 17.

Also attending the kickoff meeting were members of the Girl Scouts, Council on Aging, Camp Lejeune's Morale, Welfare and Recreation, Ladies Auxiliary of the Fleet Reserve Association, and many others.

Chief Petty Officer Frank Van Winkle, who works at the Naval Dental Center here, also attended. He is nominating a civilian employee who works at the center for her efforts at the Parent-Preschool Education Empathy Report and Support Group, a department of the Onslow County Department of Social Services. She is an evening manager there.

Anyone can nominate a friend, group or themselves. Winners will be selected from among all nominations received by a panel of involved citizens and community leaders. The winners will receive a bronze sculpture of the "Flame of Freedom" designed by Greg Wyatt, and a monetary award to be donated to a favorite charity or organization.

This is the fourth local Golden Rule Award to be given. Past recipients include volunteers with the Salvation Army, Coastal Carolina Community College, and the Caring Community Committee. Winners of the local award compete nationally. Entry forms must be submitted or postmarked no later than October 8th.

Eligibility requirements and nomination forms can be obtained from the J.C. Penney catalog counter or by calling the United Way at 347-2646.

CAMP LEJEUNE IN THE YEAR 2000

"Whatever happened to the cones?"

Day care rates rise to meet

Kim Buckner

Camp Lejeune's child care fees increased September 15 by about $3 a week. This increase, directed by Headquarters Marine Corps, affected all Marine Corps installations.

The Department of Defense bases rates for child care on a family's total income, said Linda Smith, DoD's deputy director of family policy and support for child development and youth activities.

The annual rate increase came just in time. "We have been struggling to keep our doors open," said Judith Korol, Camp Lejeune's director of child development services. "We have had to cut back to bare bones."

Korol, soon after becoming director, did a financial analysis of the centers and found that the cost of caring for an infant for one week far exceeded what parents were being charged. This was direct care only. She did not include management, administrative, custodial or cooking costs. To keep the centers in operation, some programs had to be cut.

The Military Child Care Act of 1989 standardized DoD child care fees worldwide and required that fees be based on family income. DoD set graduated fees based on income, but each installation can set its fees anywhere within the limits. With the coming increase, for example, a family in the lowest income range, 11,000 or less, would pay $33 to $41 per child per week, based on the rate set by the installation.

Camp Lejeune does not charge varied rates within each bracket as recommended by DoD but rather charges everyone within a bracket the same rate. For example, a person making $11,001 is paying the same fee as someone making $27,000, double what someone in the bracket.

Some parents who more complain about other people's child care. Actually DoD all the children. Smith the real cost of child care per child per week. Hence results from the subsidy we receive child," she said.

SNEAKERS (PG-13)

"A burglar, a spy, a fugitive, a delinquent, a hacker, and a piano teacher ... and these are the good guys."

A brilliant caper with a perfect blend of comedy, action and suspense. Robert Redford plays a one-time radical sought by the FBI, and Sidney Poitier plays a defrocked CIA spy in this thriller about high-tech specialists who are hired to infiltrate security systems to test their effectiveness. A superb supporting cast includes Dan Aykroyd as a former burglar and River Phoenix as an overage juvenile delinquent, Ben Kingsley as the mad genius, Mary McDonnell plays Redford's love interest; but most impressive is David Strathairn's blind audio expert. Directed by Phil Alden Robinson "Field of Dreams." Music by James Horner, featuring Branford Marsalis. "Sneakers" is wildly entertaining, stylish, and rousing; a very cool, high-tech adventure, a thrill ride.

WIND (PG-13)

"The only thing better than winning something is losing it ... and winning it back."

This is a sports movie with soul -- a sailing saga. Carroll Ballard "Black Stallion," "Never Cry Wolf" directs this adventure epic about a fictional America's Cup race. A handsome hotshot and brilliant tactician (Matthew Modine) competes in the America's Cup, commits a blunder that causes the U.S. team to lose (for the first time in history), and then wins the Cup back. He is ably assisted by Jennifer Grey "Dirty Dancing," who is also his part-time love interest. The climactic race is the ultimate in movie thrills. It has splendid, breathtaking photography, and spectacular scenery. It captures the physical and intellectual excitement of the sport, the aggressive athleticism and split-second decision-making that turn competitive sailing into refined warfare. If you love the sport of boating and the wide-open sea, you will love this clean, refreshing adventure picture.

SINGLES (PG-13)

A poignant romantic comedy about male and females, with the likeness of television's "Melrose Place." "Singles" is tracking the restless hearts of six twentysomething friends who all live in the same Seattle apartment building. High-energy mating, dating, lying, playing games and living together are the concerns of every loose cannon or love-starved soul on the club scene in today's Seattle. Bridget Fonda "Single White Female," Matt Dillon "A Kiss Before Dying," Campbell Scott "Dying Young," and Kyra Sedgwick "Born on the Fourth of July" star. The perfect love story is witty, funny and savvy. It is a buoyant, perceptible today's young men and women making a go of it, differences and conflicting desires. Cameron Crowe at Ridgmont High, "Say Anything") functioned as and producer.

EDITOR'S NOTE: These synopses are submitted by Huneycutt, who views movies playing in the area.

RIVER from 1C

and fuel spills, sewage effluent, storm water runoff, soil erosion, vessels without sewage-holding tanks and other overboard trash also contribute," Shepard said.

For a such a small river (one that begins and ends in Onslow County), the New River is extremely valuable to the county, Shepard said. Onslow County produced $4,207,409 in seafood in 1991. This figure becomes monumental when the appeal to tourism, restaurants, seafood markets, and suppliers are calculated. University of North Carolina marine biologist, Dr. Charles Peterson, rates the river bottom as one of the state's prime areas for re-seeding clams, scallops and oysters.

Much can be done to help care for the New River, Shepard added. Education and awareness, enforcement of existing laws, media coverage, removal of all sewage outflows from the river, and people bending over and picking up trash even if someone else made the debris can help.

Saturday's volunteers were rewarded for their effort. A pig-picking with all the fixings was prepared and served after the cleanup. Local businesses donated food and money.

"We've been bringing the pony rides down for a couple of years now," explained Bill Logan of Lo-Di Farms. "We like to donate the rides for the kids."

Free carriage rides were also offered and gave weary festival-goers a respite from the sun.

The "Taste of Topsail," offered adults and children a delicious variety of edibles. Festival standards like hot dogs and chili to the gourmet delights of mussels in garlic and sherry sauce and shrimp scampi were all part of the broad spectrum of food offered. Desserts included ice cream, cookies and fudge.

"The food variety was great," said
Wilmington resident, Bonnie Callahan.
"We pigged out on hot dogs, ice cream and fudge. I'll definitely be back next year."

rine Division.

"The bands have been really good.
I've been enjoying myself along with my wife and son."

Shoppers had a wide array of merchandise for sale from regional artists and craftsmen, including prints from this year's featured artist, Beth Mudnen.
Her original watercolor, "The Pelican Crew," was available for sale on both prints and T-shirts.

The festival provided a perfect family-oriented weekend.

"It's just good, wholesome fun," said
Sgt John Wendling, Marine Corps Engineer School, Marine Corps Base. "Kids are out playing and parents don't have to worry. That's why I'm here with my girlfriend and her kid — to have some family fun."

The large, festival turnout came as no surprise to Sterling Bryson, a member of the Topsail Beach Economic Development Council which sponsors the festival.

"The outcome had been great," Bryson said. "We expected between 12 and 20,000 people to show up."

Bryson, who is on the Autumn with Topsail planning committee, added that all of the money raised will benefit the Topsail Island Community Center.

Horses pull carriages around the festival.

Live music played
throughout the festival from diverse groups offering pop,
rock, gospel, jazz
and beach music.

Callahan noted,
"I loved the music and enjoyed the dancing the most."

"The best thing about this festival has been the weather and the music," added
2ndLt Kirk Cordova,
