MEU Marines get chance to stalk BLT 1/8 'bad guys'

STAFF SGT. LEE J. TIBBETTS

MEU(SOC) CORRESPONDENT

ERRA DE RETIN, Spain — While stateside Marines were hunting the early part of November, the coiled and camouflaged 24th MEU(SOC) had a chance to fill their tags Spanish preserve here.

Instead of stalking bear, deer and coyote, though, MEU Marines were after Delta Co., Battalion Landing Team 1/8, designated "bad guys" for this joint amphibious operation with Spanish Marines.

After two days of reconnaissance, two teams were selected for air and ground assaults: the first was the enemy stronghold deeply dug in at the back side of the mesa, a four-mile long mountain range offering numerous deep ravines and jungle-like canopy for cover; the second was an enemy supply depot manned by Seabees from California and used as a staging area for three combined anti-armor team jeeps from Weapons Co.

As the sun peaked over the mesa Nov. 8, the first wave of AMTRACS and LAVS stormed ashore. Delta Co. landed a couple of platoons to the west of the supply depot via helicopters from HMM-365. A company of Spanish Marines was inserted by helos at the east end of the mesa.

Lt. Gen. E.T. Cook, CG, FMFLANT and BGen. M.L. Brandtner, CG, 2nd FSSG hold the Force Commander's Cup high.

Today (Nov. 28), the CG, FMFLANT, awarded his cup to the magnificent Marines and Sailors of 2nd FSSG. In doing so, he appropriately recognized that the cup meant more than athletic prowess — it symbolized all that sets 2nd FSSG apart as the "best in the force."

You have every right to be proud. Out of 18 events, 2nd FSSG took first place in 10, and second place in five. In some cases, both first and second place went to our athletes. This was a team effort. Every command participated — Marines and Sailors, men and women.

I can't begin to tell you how proud I am of each of you. Not only on this tremendous occasion, but every day. You are magnificent — you can do anything. I salute you and encourage you to continue the march.

The designated driver: someone you can really look up to

ELYN D. HARRIS

AMERICAN FORCES INFORMATION SERVICE

National Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week is Dec. 10-16, 1989. During the past seven years, the week has focused attention on the deaths and injuries that result from impaired driving. December was chosen because the Holiday season provides more frequent occasions to drink.

This year's theme is "The designated driver, someone you can really look up to," emphasizing the importance of designating a driver who will not drink alcoholic beverages.

Gerald Anderson, executive secretary of DoD's Impaired Driving Prevention Task Force, said, "It's a lot easier to designate the driver before you go to a party than to try to decide who is going to drive after everyone has had something to drink." Anderson added, "Just because a group has designated a driver does not mean the non-drivers could get drunk. Studies show that by the third or fourth drink, euphoria sets in and people make poor judgments that could harm even if they aren't driving."

Safety experts warn that because drinking impairs judgment, people misjudge their level of impairment and think they're in great shape when they aren't. This can happen to both the driver and the host. Hosts should insist that intoxicated guests spend the night or ride home with a sober driver. But the host may have had too many drinks — after all, he doesn't have to drive — and think a drunk guest is fine.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, more than 23,300 people died on America's highways in crashes where alcohol was involved in 1988. As a spokesperson for that organization pointed out, "Drunk driving strikes with a frequency and ferocity that would be national news if it were reported as a total each day. Instead, the victims are listed individually in the obituary columns in cities and towns where the tragedies occur."

State, local and military police are especially vigilant during the holiday season. Even if a person doesn't have an accident, he or she could still get stopped by a police officer. The penalties for drunk driving in terms of fines, increased costs or loss of insurance, bad record and adverse impact on career are severe for civilians and even more so for the military people.

Said Anderson, "It's not worth taking the chance."

Drunk Driving Facts

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration defines a traffic crash as being alcohol related if either the driver or non-occupant had a blood alcohol concentration of .01 percent or greater. A person with a blood alcohol content of .10 percent or greater is considered legally intoxicated.

Here are some drunk driving facts:

□ Between 1982 and 1988, 166,000 persons lost their lives in alcohol related traffic crashes — equal to one fatality every 22 minutes.

□ Between 7 p.m. and 3 a.m. on weekends, in some parts of the country, 10 percent of all drivers are legally drunk.

□ Between midnight and 4 a.m. on any night of the week, about 80 percent of fatally injured drivers are legally drunk.

□ More than 40 percent of all teenage (14-19 years old) deaths result from motor vehicle crashes; about half of these crashes involve drinking.

□ Approximately 8,000 people were killed and 200,000 more were injured in alcohol-related traffic crashes in 1988.

□ Drivers involved in fatal crashes who have been drinking use safety belts at a substantially lower rate than sober drivers.

Warfighting

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following column is derived from FMFM 1, WARFIGHTING. It will be presented as a weekly series to enhance the professional military education of our readers.

Equipping continues

Primary considerations are strategic and tactical lift—the Marine Corps' reliance on Navy shipping for strategic mobility and on helicopters and vertical/short takeoff and landing aircraft for tactical mobility from ship to shore and during operations ashore.

Equipment that permits over control of units in battle is in conflict with the Marine Corps' philosophy of command and is not justifiable.

In order to minimize research and development costs and fielding time, the Marine Corps will exploit existing capabilities — "off the shelf" technology — to the greatest extent possible.

Acquisition should be a complementary, two-way process. Especially for the long term, the process must identify combat requirements and develop equipment to satisfy these requirements. We should base these requirements on an analysis of critical enemy vulnerabilities and develop equipment specifically to exploit those vulnerabilities. At the same time, the process should not overlook existing equipment of obvious usefulness.

Equipment is useful only if it increases combat effectiveness. Any piece of equipment requires support: operator training, maintenance, power sources or fuel, and transport. The anticipated enhancement of capabilities must justify these support requirements and the employment of the equipment must take these requirements into account.

As much as possible, employment techniques and procedures should be developed concurrently with the equipment to minimize delays between the fielding of the equipment and its usefulness to the operating forces. For the same reason, initial operator training should also precede equipment fielding.

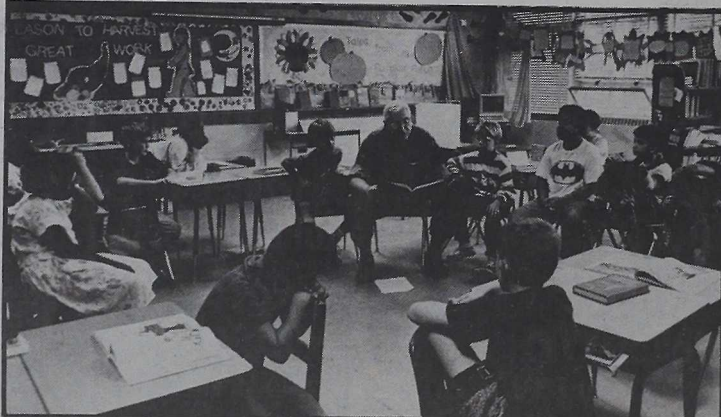

We must guard against over reliance on technology. Technology can enhance the ways and means of war by improving man's ability to wage it, but technology cannot and should not attempt to eliminate man from the process of waging war.

Next week: equipping continues

Marine found guilty of rape

Marine Cpl. Derek C. Collins was found guilty of and sentenced to 85 years confinement during a court-martial presided over by Col. Richard H. Hette Nov. 29.

Collins, a 22-year-old Marine from Harris County, Texas, was found guilty of one specification of three specifications of house breaking with attempt to commit rape, one specification of indecent assault, one specification of attempt to commit rape, and one from confinement and two specifications of assault. All the assaults took place in base housing.

Collins' confinement was limited to 50 years in a plea agreement.

In addition, Collins received a Dishonorable Discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and reduction to E-1.

Following a review of his trial, Collins will be transferred to the military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

DRMO Lot 203 found safe

The findings of a site safety report assessing possible health risks to workers at Defense Reutilization Marketing Office's Lot 203 has led the base to open the lot because no apparent risk to human health was found.

The decision is based on the results drawn from a variety of soil gas tests conducted in February and March. They indicated that no shallow soil contamination exists which threatens either the health or safety of workers at the site.

Lot 203 is a site maintained by the DRMO as a processing station for surplus government equipment.

ment. It was closed in January 1989 when two 55-gallon drums, one labeled DDT, were unearthed while an employee was relocating metal bunkbeds.

The site was re-opened Nov. 29, long enough to recoup the surplus equipment that is being stored there before it will again be closed so that a full remedial investigation of subsurface soil and groundwater contamination can be conducted.

'Toy for Tots' under way

The U. S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots campaign is in full swing. Developed in 1947, this program has provided millions of toys to needy children through the collection of new and unwrapped toys during the Christmas season.

In cooperation with local social service agencies, businesses, individuals and corporate sponsors, the Marine Corps Reserve challenges all to deposit a new unwrapped toy in one of the many collection centers aboard Camp Lejeune, and throughout Onslow County. For more information and drop off points, call 451-1725.

Vehicle tag office closes

The Vehicle Registration Tag Office will close Dec. 29. According to William S. Hiatt, commissioner of motor vehicles, the privately contracted office didn't generate enough revenue to make it profitable to operate.

Less than $10,000 per year was made, which wasn't enough to pay the average employee's salary of $11,960 per year, not including taxes and vacations. In addition, the current contractor, Beth Floan, handles double the normal paperwork and daily reports to run the satellite office.

One of the reasons for opening the office was because Marines were not allowed to stop in town in camouflage utilities. In September, those rules were relaxed.

2nd LSB "First in, last out"

STAFF SGT. NEVIN PRATT JR.
2nd LSB, 2nd FSSG

"First In, Last Out" is more than just a motto for the Marines of the 2nd LSB, 2nd FSSG. For them it is the credo they live by; their crest, like the red patch on their trousers, signifying selfless dedication to their fellow Marines.

That loyalty to II MEF received due recognition recently in the form of the National Defense Transportation Association's Military Unit Award. The award was recognition of 2nd LSB's unusual and outstanding performance in the field of military transportation.

The award was presented to Lt. Col. T.J. Greska, commanding officer, 2nd LSB, at the 44th Annual NDTA Transportation & Logistics Forum and Exposition in Seattle, Wa. Only one unit in each of the five uniformed services receives this honor.

Despite a very demanding training and exercise schedule during Fiscal Year 89, 2nd LSB elements participated in almost every II MEF exercise. This participation included providing the nucleus of a Combat Service Support Detachment for Combined Arms Operation 89, detailing Marines for Teamwork 89, and conducting 22 port operations requiring the loading/unloading of 73 ships. Through it all, 2nd LSB maintained a 91 percent readiness rate.

"Throughout the fiscal year, our Marines have worked long, hard hours in support of II MEF," Lt. Col. Greska said. "From the subtropics of Puerto Rico and Panama to the frozen fjords of Norway, this award is a fitting tribute to their work."

Other service recipients of the award were: 119th Transportation Company (Terminal Service) (Container), 24th Transportation Battalion, Ft. Eustis, Va.; USS San Jose (AFS-7); 475 Transportation Squadron, 475 Air Base Wing, Yokota AB, Japan; and the Coast Guard Cutter Cowslit (WLB-277).

Base freezes civilian hiring

AND LT. ED SPIVEY
GLOBE STAFF

A base civil service hiring freeze was imposed Nov. 27 as a result of a $3.2 million deficit in the base operating budget.

The commanding general of MCB, Maj. Gen. Donald R. Gardner, imposed the hiring freeze after operating budget projections indicated there would be a $2 million deficit from utility expenses and a $1.2 million deficit from other directed reductions if the base continued to operate at current budget levels.

The hiring freeze will not affect vacancies in civilian jobs related to the protection of life, property, health and safety of residents on base. Jobs such as utility plant operator, fire protection personnel, certain communications personnel, and personnel of the schools will not be part of the hiring freeze.

In his message, Maj. Gen. Gardner emphasized the need for commanders and managers to effectively and efficiently manage their work sections in order to further save money and use resources wisely.

The general also said that if the current hiring freeze does not correct the budget deficit, additional measures would have to be implemented.

In cases in which the freeze might severely hurt mission accomplishment and no alternative can be found, requests for exception should be directed to him for review by the Position Management Review Board.

Marines, veterans gather to remember Tarawa

GLOBE STAFF REPORT

Marines from the 2nd Marine Division, former Marines and civilians gathered in front of Julian C. Smith Hall on a chilly Nov. 20 morning to commemorate the 46th anniversary of the Tarawa invasion.

For the small group of Tarawa veterans at the ceremony, Nov. 20, 1943 began much differently. They were loading landing craft to go into battle on that day. Many of their fellow Marines would not be with them by nightfall.

The task force, the largest assembled in the Pacific to that date, arrived off the shores of the Tarawa Atoll around 3:30 a.m. It was a place most of the Marines had heard of only six days before but, after 76 hours of bloody fighting, one they would never forget.

The Tarawa Atoll, part of the Gilbert Islands, is a group of islets and coral reefs about 22 miles long that formed a ring around a large lagoon. The target of the invasion force was a tiny islet named Betio, which was only two and a half miles long and 800 yards across at its widest point with the highest elevation of 12 feet, located at the southwestern end of the atoll.

The importance of Betio was a Japanese air base there with about 5,000 Japanese defending it — the majority of whom were Imperial Marines.

The Japanese had spent 22 months turning Betio into a fortress.

There were around 500 bomb-proof pill boxes with interlocking fields of fire covering every approach to the tiny islet. Because of the defenses, this battle would be different from any the Marine Corps had ever fought.

The amphibious assault on Betio, contrary to doctrine, was made against extremely well defended beaches that the Japanese had vowed would take them 1,000 years to seize.

The first problem though was the coral reefs. There was only one entrance to the lagoon, and Betio had its own reef 400 to 900 yards off shore.

Only the first waves of Marines in amtracs, which were used in the assault role for the first time, would have no problem with the reefs. Unfortunately, there were few amtracs. Most of the other landing craft got as far as the reef, and the Marines had to wade ashore.

Shortly after 5 a.m., the Japanese began firing on the ships off the coast, and the Navy responded with its big guns — the battle had begun.

At dawn American planes joined in the bombardment to prepare the beaches for the Marines.

CPL. E.V. WALSH • GLOBE STAFF

IN THE HIGHEST TRADITION—As a Marine Color Guard presents arms, veterans of the battle for Tarawa render honors.

The heavy bombardment helped the first few waves get to the beach around 9 a.m. Once it lifted, the Japanese poured a heavy volume of fire on the assault beaches and landing craft. Landing craft were blown out of the water, and the Marines who were wading ashore suffered heavy casualties.

After an hour the regimental reserve, 1st Bn., 2nd Marines, was ordered in.

One veteran at the ceremony, retired Col. Maxie R. Williams, then Bravo Co. commander, 1st Bn., 2nd Marines, described what it was like: "I kept wondering how I'd get my troops ashore. I was utter confusion, all fire team and squad action."

A United Press correspondent, Richard Johnson, who went in with the Marines described their unbelievable bravery in assaulting the pill boxes against deadly fire. The only thing that would stop them is if they were "wounded beyond human ability to carry on."

Johnson wrote about wounded Marines he saw. "Men with gaping holes in their stomachs, almost certainly fatal, begged doctors to fix them up so they could return. One captain, shot through both arms and legs, sent his major a message apologizing for 'letting him down.'"

"They did their duty and in the process they wrote a chapter of history for the 2nd Marine Division, one which brings honor to all of us privileged to wear this uniform," said Col. John W. Ripley, CO of 2nd Marines, during the ceremony.

At the end of the first day, the Marines only had a foothold on the island. Part of the airfield had been captured, but it wasn't until the next day that the Marines got firm control of the battle.

The advance went slow because Marines had to take out the pill boxes one-by-one.

On the third day, at 1:15 p.m., the island was declared secure. There were 3,400 American casualties at Tarawa, over 1,000 of which were killed. Japanese casualties were estimated at over 5,000 killed and only 17 captured.

Two days later, Thanksgiving Day, the American and British flags were raised on the island (the Gilberts were mandated by Britain before the Japanese occupation). The Marines of Betio were just thankful on that day to be alive.

Remembering those Marines who participated in the bloodiest battle in Marine Corps history was what the Marines gathered 46 years later to do.

"We are guided by the spirit of such men as these, and we pray that they may be as proud of us as we are of them and of what they accomplished many years ago," Ripley concluded.

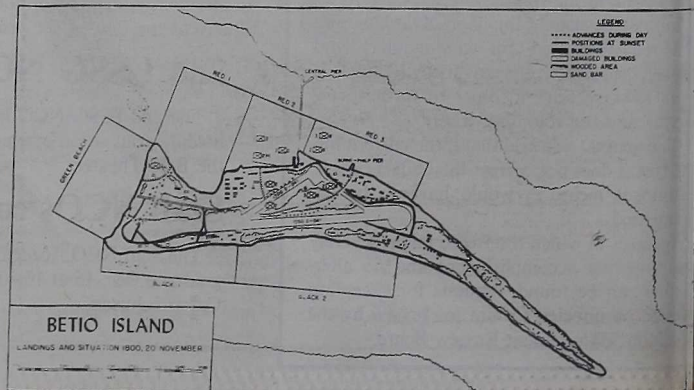

NOTE: The main sources for this article were: "Tarawa — The Toughest Battle in Marine Corps History" by Dick Hannah and "Beachhead — The Marines Own Story of the Battle of Tarawa" by Earl Wilson.

Healthy eating habits for the holiday season

LT. WENDY ALLARD, MSC
USNH

For those who have been struggling to achieve or maintain a desirable weight, the parties, special events and family get-togethers of the holiday season can pose a problem. During most of these occasions, food plays an important role — and there is usually lots of it. Who can resist the temptation of an elegant meal, those tasty snacks or a holiday treat — especially when everyone else is eating?

The following tips may help one to maintain control so one doesn't have to feel guilty when eating too much or deprived when one doesn't.

□ Don't go to a party feeling hungry. Have a sandwich, a bowl of soup or a salad before going, to take the edge off one's appetite ... one won't have the urge to eat everything in sight.

□ Eat only special foods. Holiday parties are a good opportunity to try new foods or foods one rarely has. Remember, one can have crackers, nuts, potato chips and dip any time.

□ Take only small portions. At buffets, try a small sample of those foods one really wants. One shouldn't feel like one has to load up one's plate or take some of every item.

□ Stay involved in conversations. It's difficult to eat while talking, so this is a good way to help avoid temptation. Conversations have no calories.

□ Choose a good location. Sit as far from the food and drink as possible.

One will need less willpower if that pattern of goodies is across the room.

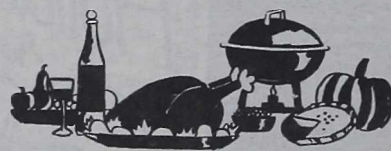

□ Learn to say "No thank you." There is usually a lot of social pressure from friends and family to "try some of this" and "have some of that." Don't feel obligated to eat more than intended.

□ Go easy on that alcohol. Alcoholic beverages are high in calories and low in nutrients. Twelve ounces of beer, five ounces of wine and one and a half ounces of distilled spirits contain equal alcohol. Be moderate and if drinking, don't drive.

Enjoy the holiday celebrations. If one does over-indulge, maintain a positive attitude. Balance off a not-so-healthy day of eating with a healthier one the next. Or, take an extra long walk.

A happy, healthy holiday season to all!

Admission day can be painless

LCDR CUPID BERRY, NC
USNH

As a patient enters the Camp Lejeune Naval Hospital, possibly to have surgery, he probably has questions. To help the patient prepare for what to expect on the day of admission, the staff of the naval hospital would like to give some helpful information.

Surgical patients may be admitted to one of three wards at the hospital: 3 East, pediatrics; 2 West, adult; or East, adult. After the Admissions Office has completed the in-patient record, the patient will be given directions on how to report to his assigned ward.

Upon arrival at the nurses station, the patient will be greeted by a member of the nursing staff and asked to verify that the information on his I.D. bracelet and "blue card" is correct. The patient should take time to review it again ... the bracelet will be used for positive I.D. when going to surgery, in giving medications, etc., and must be correct.

In addition to the bracelet being attached, a "Privacy Act Statement" and "Patient Data Base" must be completed. Patients are admitted in the order of their arrival on the ward. Please be patient!

Soon, a nursing staff member will take the patient's blood pressure, temperature, pulse and respiration. At this time, the nurse will ask questions about the patient's health and explain the rules and regulations of their particular ward.

Visiting hours for the surgical wards are from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day, except on the day of surgery. Parents may visit pediatric patients 24 hours a day. With the exception of pre-school sibling visits into the maternity ward, children under the age of 12 are not allowed on any ward. Phones and televisions are provided in the patient rooms.

Do not bring more than five dollars for the patient's protection. Jewelry of any kind, including dog tags and wedding rings, are not allowed in the operating room. Other personal gear such as electric shavers, blow-driers, radios, etc., must be approved for safe use by the Medical Repair Department before they can be used in the room.

The patient will be taken on a tour of the ward and shown where the payphones, ward kitchen, dayroom, and various other important areas of the ward are located. Once admitted to the ward, the patient may not leave the hospital compound without special liberty. However, he may sign out in the patient logs, kept at the nurses station, to walk around within the hospital.

At this point, hospitalization has begun. The patient's cooperation and participation will make the difference in his recovery. The Naval Hospital staff is here to provide the very best care. Welcome aboard!

New NAVCARE clinic opens

The new NAVCARE facility was dedicated in a ribbon cutting ceremony Nov. 30. The new clinic is located in the Piney Green Shopping Center on Highway 24 East.

On hand to cut the ribbon were Maj. Gen. Donald R. Gardner, CG, MCB; Rear Adm. Charles Loar, Medical Services Corps, Norfolk, Va.; Capt Hugh P. Scott, CO, Naval Hospital; and Charles R. Robbins, president of the health care corporation that is contracted to operate the clinic.

The ceremony had a carnival atmosphere, with the crowd of clinic employees, visiting VIPs and the local media enjoying food and refreshments provided by the contractor.

In his remarks before the ribbon cutting, Maj. Gen. Gardner praised the Navy Medical Corps for the life-saving treatment given to two Marines who were injured in a recent training accident. The general said, "I'm sure the families of our Marines will receive the same fine medical care."

After the ribbon was cut, the visitors were allowed to tour the facility.

The newest NAVCARE is one of 16 such off-base facilities that the contractor operates nationwide.

The Jacksonville clinic project director, Edward DeGroot, is a recently retired Air Force colonel. He commanded administrative and logistics support for the Air Force medical service.

"We're ready to serve the Camp Lejeune community. I'm a former military brat and know how concerned military people are that their families receive good health care," DeGroot said.

While the old NAVCARE clinic was still operating on its last day at the Triangle Shopping Center on U.S. 258, medical supplies and equipment were arriving at the new clinic.

The facility will see patients on a walk-in, no appointment basis. It has a radiology department with both standard X-ray and mammography capabilities.

Limited laboratory procedures can be done on premises. "We can do urinalysis, blood counts, throat cultures and pregnancy tests in-house," said Caressa Cooper, a medical technician at the clinic.

The new NAVCARE opened the next day and has the same operating hours as the old clinic: weekdays 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., weekends and holidays 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. The phone numbers are 577-1480, 577-2788, 577-1581 and 577-1683. Recorded information about the clinic is available by calling 577-1797 or 577-1891.

Lightning strikes twice during jungle training

CPL. F. E. CHARLES
GLOBE STAFF

Some obscure philosopher once said lightning never strikes the same place twice.

His theory on weather was literally blown apart by Alpha Co., 1st Bn., 6th Marines, during jungle warfare training at Fort Sherman, Panama.

It was the first morning of the battalion exercise. A steady rain had been falling for 12 hours, according to Staff Sgt. Jeff Dufour, platoon sergeant, 1st Plt. Dufour's squad continued patrolling its sector while the rain fell, thinking it would soon stop. The storm worsened with thunder and lightning, according to Dufour.

"The lightning took out the guide, radioman, the three squad leaders and the corpsman," he said.

The company command post called in a medevac. When it arrived army medics promptly treated the Marines and evacuated them to Gorgas Army Hospital. There they received further treatment and were later released.

With the platoon short-handed, the other platoon members were faced with reorganization and redistribution of equipment.

"Everyone filled in the way they should have," Dufour said. "It worked the way it was supposed to."

Meanwhile, the Marines continued to hack their way through the dense, wet jungle southwest of the Rio Chagres River toward the objective.

The rain continued pouring. Later that night lightning struck again. This time its target was 2 Plt. "Five of my Marines were medevaced to the hospital," said Sgt. David Grant, platoon sergeant. None of the Marines sustained serious injuries, and were treated and released.

After the second strike, Capt. Patrick Kanewski, the company commander, was concerned, but not overly superstitious about the loss of nearly a squad to natural elements. However, "3rd Plt. was becoming more superstitious by the hour," he said.

But their superstitions faded as the wet tropic night merged with the dawn of a new morning.

While the lightning struck the company with deadly accuracy, "freakishly" best describes the entire training episode. For the company, the strange happenings of their jungle training package began the day they got off the plane in Panama, the day before the failed coup attempt on Panamanian Gen. Manuel Noriega. The coup blew over — replaced by monsoon weather — and a day later 1st Bn., 6th Marine began jungle training.

They found the challenge of jungle warfare training not so much in learning to combat guerrilla elements, but coping with the environment and its peculiarities.

The Marines always seemed one step away from walking into a "sci-fi" flick ... swarms of bees thickened the sky, Goliath-sized spiders; ants that cut a distinctive 3-inch wide trail through the jungle floor and giant termite mounds gave more than one Marine a pause of bewilderment, according to Dufour.

After three weeks of living in a sci-fi movie, the Marines came away with a healthy respect for the jungle.

The Camel's Smile

If you look at a camel's face, it seems to be smiling. The Muslims explain it as follows:

The Islamic Scripture speaks of 99 names for God, such as merciful, almighty, etc. The Muslims say the camel smiles because he knows the 100th name of God and it pleases him. Christians also know the 100th name of God, and it is appropriately celebrated in the season of Advent. The name is "Emmanuel", which means "God with us."

Advent is the time for the "coming" or "advent" of God. Throughout Hebrew and Christian Scriptures, God is depicted as having visited his people. We should always be prepared for the visit, and Advent is the time set aside by various Christian churches to encourage conscious preparation for God's coming.

Our challenge during this time is not to become too engrossed in the external preparation for Christmas.

Then, like the camel, we too can smile with the knowledge of the 100th name of God.

Gunny thrives on adventure

CPL. E.V. WALSH
GLOBE STAFF

"If you want to get high, come get high with me," says Gunnery Sgt. Carl A. Hangsleben, operations chief, 2nd Bn., 10th Marines.

He isn't encouraging illegal drug use. He gets high a little differently ... his "high" comes from altitude.

For the ordinary person, falling like a brick from 7,000 feet might be scary, but then Hangsleben is no ordinary person.

Whether falling from outrageous heights with only a piece of fabric to keep him aloft or submerging into the ocean's depths with only tanks of air to prevent his cardiovascular system from going on strike, Hangsleben thrives on adventure. Hangsleben spends his weekends teaching others his hobbies: scuba and skydiving.

"There are a lot of Marines who stay in the barracks on weekends or just blow their money on a night on the town," Hangsleben says. "I try to give them an exciting alternative."

He holds a Class D skydiver's certification which is expert instructor status, as well as a scuba divemaster/instructor license.

Hangsleben's diving started while stationed at MCAS Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii, where he was assigned as the NCOIC of a swimming pool. "There was a recon company located behind the pool," Hangsleben explains. "I used to let them train there after hours. One day the company commander mentioned there were four quotas to scuba school he could not fill. He asked me if I would be interested, and I jumped at the chance."

Hangsleben hasn't stopped diving since. He now has more than 2,000 dives under his belt, and has even qualified his wife as a divemaster.

"I had taken some civilian diving courses, but I really learned how to dive at the U.S. Navy Diving School. They taught me everything there is to know about it," he says.

Hangsleben says that Drill Instructor School and the diving school were by far the most difficult he has ever attended.

He now wears the Scuba "bubble" insignia, even though he is an artilleryman. "Being scuba qualified in the artillery is very rare," he points out. "I just got lucky."

While on a tour in Okinawa, he continued his hobby and ventured into underwater photography, cave diving, wreck diving and night diving.

"I got involved in the teaching aspect of diving on Okinawa too," Hangsleben says. "I only wish I would have done it earlier."

When orders came to report to Camp Lejeune, Hangsleben thought it proper to leave Okinawa with a final dive, and it was his most memorable yet.

"I was on a 36-foot boat with a group of friends," Hangsleben says. "We saw a whale shark as big as the boat. It brushed by us and the boat moved about 10 feet."

Most people would have had flashbacks of the movie "Jaws" and cowered in a corner of the boat, but Hangsleben had other things on his mind.

"I grabbed my camera and fins," he says. "I wanted a closer look and some photos."

Upon reporting to Camp Lejeune, Hangsleben was introduced to skydiving, but only as a dare.

"I saw no reason to jump out of a perfectly good airplane if it was still flying," Hangsleben says, "but a group of Marines in the infantry company I was assigned to at the time were going to take lessons. They reminded me of leadership by example and talked me into it."

Seven years and 800 jumps later, Hangsleben is still jumping. He loves the thrill of the wind blowing on his face, bringing tears to his eyes and seeing the ground rush toward him before pulling the fine line

Jump veteran guides Marine's first jump

As I sat in the door of the airplane, my face was contorted into different shapes by the intense wind; I wondered one thing: why was I going to jump out of a perfectly good airplane?

Sure, I had wanted to jump for a long while—and I had already gone through the classes—but the basic thought of what I was about to do didn't sink in until now.

I looked down to the ground, 5,000 feet below, and my stomach churned. Butterflies had long gone, or so I thought. They now seemed the size of pterodactyls. My breathing sped up tremendously, and I didn't even want to know what my heart rate was.

My instructor, Gunnery Sgt. Carl "Hank" Hangsleben, a veteran of over 850 of these experiences, looked at my fear-filled face and chuckled. I was not his first student; therefore, he was used to the look in a "boot" jumper's eyes. With an ear-to-ear smile, he asked if I was ready.

Ready? This guy must be joking. Like he really expects me to crawl out onto the wing strut of this plane and actually separate myself from it? HA!

"ON THE STRUT!," he yelled to me; the wind was ripping at my body and hearing anything less than a major artillery explosion was nearly impossible. Before I knew it, I was actually crawling out onto the cold wing strut, my legs flapping in the wind like bedsheets on a clothesline.

When I firmly attached myself to the wing strut, I could think of only one thing — my mother. What would she think right now if she saw her son hanging on the wing of an airplane, flirting with fate?

So here I am on the wing strut being dragged around at 100 mph as the wind ripped at my face. My eyes began to water and all of a sudden... "GO!"

That two letter word that I was so fearful of rang through my head as the gunny pointed for me to leap. In a split second, my thoughts went back to the classes and what I had to do, but there was no way I wanted to separate myself from the security of the strut.

I don't know what made me do it, but for some strange reason I actually let go. Me, flying through the air. I couldn't believe it myself. But as I went through the steps — ARCH, LOOK, REACH, PULL, CHECK CANOPY — it seemed as though I was in space, or at least another world. I couldn't see, hear, say, or feel anything. Then it came: the jolt of the chute opening and my heart actually beginning to beat again. It had worked.

of life — the pilot chute ripcord. He loves it so much he planned to be married while skydiving, but settled for second best.

"While my wife and I were standing at the altar, the preacher asked for the rings and I threw a smoke grenade," Hangsleben explains. "This signaled a circling airplane above, and two skydivers personally delivered our rings from 5,000 feet."

Since becoming an instructor, Hangsleben has qualified more than 600 students in skydiving. Again, one of them was his wife.

"What I stress in scuba and skydiving is safety first," Hangsleben says. "We all hope we don't encounter a malfunction, but we train so we know what to do in case one arises."

Hangsleben proudly claims that out of the 500 Scuba students and 600 skydiving students he has trained, none have had a serious accident. He then knocks on a wooden table. "Just to make sure," he says with an ear to ear grin.

"Skydiving and scuba diving are very dangerous sports," Hangsleben says. "But the way I look at it is if you can't do it safely, there's no use doing it at all."

UNDER THE CHUTE—A skydiver gradually makes his descent to the ground. Only minutes earlier, he was freefalling at 7,000 feet.

I couldn't believe it. I had actually left a perfectly good aircraft, and my chute opened. I really didn't have anything to worry about because I was rigged with a main chute, a reserve and an automatic opening device to deploy my reserve if necessary.

The only thing I really had to worry about now was the hardest part of skydiving ... landing.

I had time to play around before landing, so I tried a few turns and "flairs," a way of actually stopping the chute in mid-air.

There was no sensation of falling, even though I was; at about 30 m.p.h. The chute, a 305 sq. ft. square rig called a RAM AIR, has a 10:1 glide ratio. Ten feet forward for every foot down, so the ride was smooth and pleasant. But not as pleasant as the view.

A total 360 degree view of the world. Words can not, nor will they ever begin to describe, the feeling of seeing the world under a parachute. Awesome is about as close as the English language will come to the feeling of having an unobstructed view all around.

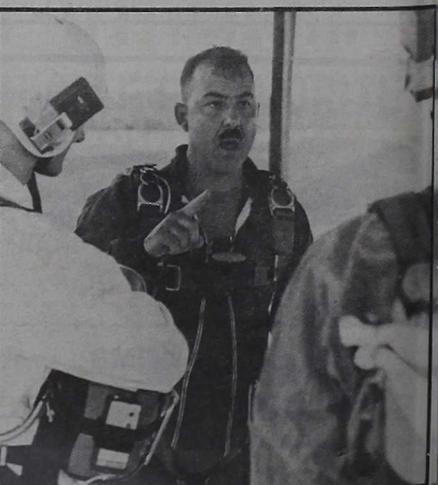

As I looked down, the ground started to rush towards me — fast. I could actually begin to see the drop zone.

After a few corrections to line myself up on the "pit" and check the fluorescent orange windsock for wind direction, I began my final approach.

Forty feet — the people were getting bigger. I saw faces. Smooth ride down to about 12 feet — my heart stopped beating again — and may adrenaline took over. FLAIR! I pulled down on my steering toggles and actually braked the chute in midair.

My feet stretched out to their limit, and I felt something. Ground. I was standing up! I actually landed on my feet. Four short minutes ago, I was sitting in the door of the airplane ready to take my destiny into my own hands, and now I was on the ground safely. I actually did it. Those on the ground were cheering, since I "stood it up" on my first jump, and after I realized I was safe and in one piece, I cheered too.

After making my first jump and returning several more times to experience it again, I can easily identify with the phrases jumpers live by: "Only skydivers know why birds sing."

Hospital claims All-Camp crown in 22-20 cliffhanger

CPL. DAVE MUNDY
GLOBE SPORTS EDITOR

If Alfred Hitchcock had ever done a movie about football, the 1989 All-Camp championship game would have been the source for the script.

The Naval Hospital held off 6th Marines, 22-20, to claim the All-Camp trophy in a classic battle that saw a thrilling finish which would have left even the Master of Suspense wide-eyed.

Tied 14-14 with 25 seconds remaining in the game, Navy scored the go-ahead touchdown on a two-yard dash by quarterback Seaman Brian Reese. Seaman Greg Tedrick hauled in a two-point conversion pass from Petty Officer 2nd Class Roger Gross to give the Rams a seemingly-safe 22-14 edge.

But the 6th Marines refused to be written out of the script.

On the ensuing kickoff, 6th Marines' Cpl. M. B. Randall gathered the ball in at his own 11-yard line, then cut to his right. Finding no blockers, he changed direction and set sail up the left sideline. He was eventually dragged out of bounds by his facemask after an 84-yard return that left the Geiger Tigers on Navy's 5-yard line with nine seconds remaining.

Two plays later, quarterback Cpl. A. R. Russell scored the touchdown from three yards out as time expired.

Victors, vanquished swap compliments

CPL. DAVE MUNDY
GLOBE SPORTS EDITOR

When it was all said and done, all the players from the Naval Hospital and 6th Marines could talk about was how good the other team was.

"That was the best team we played all year, no ifs, ands or buts," said Petty Officer 2nd Class Frank Dean after his Naval Hospital Rams downed 6th Marines 22-20 to win the All-Camp football title.

"We'd heard the teams in the (Red League) didn't hit like our league," said Sgt. Thomas Volpi of the Gold League champ Geiger Tigers. "But Navy proved us wrong. They stuck right with it."

For the Navy squad, the victory capped a roller-coaster season. After going 5-3 in the regular Red League season, the Rams beat 2nd CEB and MCAS New River to reach the All-Camp final. But Dean said the Rams still hadn't jelled until the fourth quarter of the title game.

"The last drive is when we finally came together as a team," Dean said. "We buckled down and decided to win the game. The team became the thing for us."

Quarterback Seaman Brian Reese gave credit for the win to his defense.

"We were sputtering all day," Reese said of his team's offensive attack. "If the defense hadn't been there for us, well . . ."

For the Ram defense, the key was stopping running back Cpl. T. J. Jones. That task fell to Seaman Greg Tedrick.

"You could see how quick he was and what he could do in the open," Tedrick said of Jones, who caught two first-half touchdown passes and finished with 88 yards rushing on 17 carries. "Most of the second half, all I wanted to do was stay right with him."

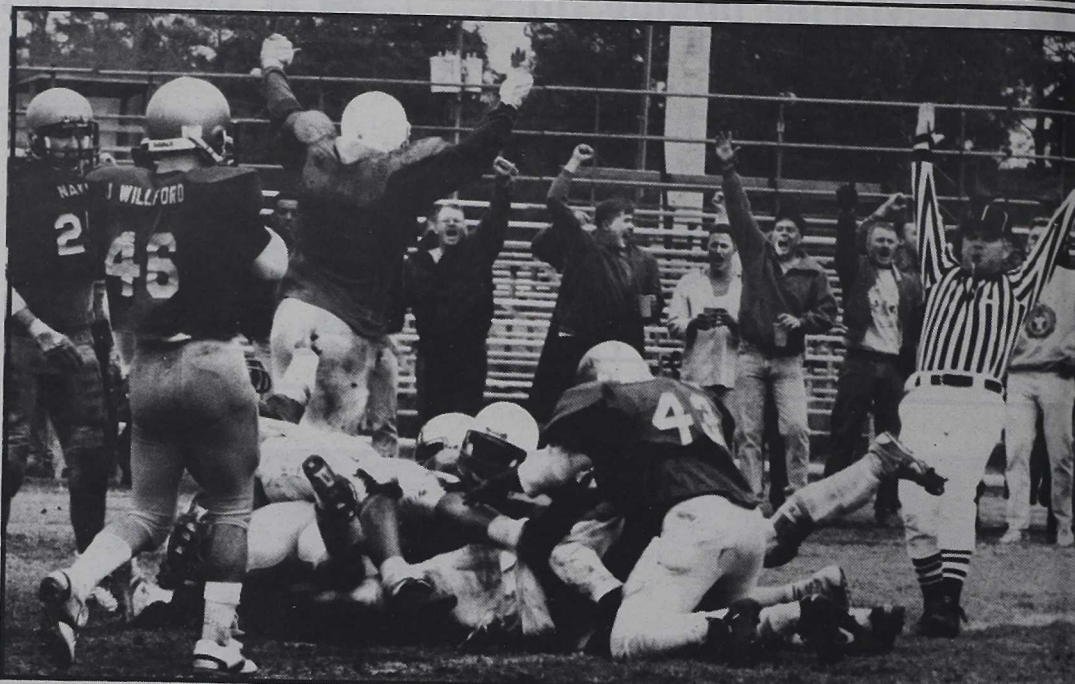

But the game's wild finish left more than a few of the players with a sobering thought.

"We have the FMFLANT (tournament) coming up," said Seaman Fred Robertson. "We might have to play them again."

The Rams and Geiger Tigers, it should be noted, are in opposite brackets of the FMFLANT competition, which begins this week — and could meet in another championship game Dec. 16.

THE THRILL IS ON—Sixth Marines players and fans erupt as an official signals "touchdown" after Cpl. A.R. Russell scored for the Geiger Tigers with no time remaining in Dec. 2's All-Camp championship game at Liversedge Field

But as a mob of fans crowded around the end zone, Russell's two-point conversion pass for Cpl. Sean Taylor sailed just out of Taylor's reach at the back of the end zone, and the Rams had a 22-20 win and the All-Camp trophy.

"That was football the way it's supposed to be," Maj. Gen. Donald R. Gardner, CG, MCB, told the teams after the game as he presented trophies to the winners and runners-up. "That was an outstanding football game."

From the opening kickoff, it was evident the league's two most free-wheeling offenses were ready to go.

The Geiger Tigers drove into Navy territory on their first possession, before Russell mishandled a snap, and Navy's Seaman Stan Martin recovered at the Ram 28.

Reese scrambled for gains of 10 and 24 yards as he engineered a 72-yard march in 11 plays to put Navy in front first. The Navy signal-caller hit Gross on a quick slant pass for a 5-yard touchdown to cap the march, and Petty Officer 3rd Class Donnie Hughes' two-point conversion run gave the Rams an 8-0 lead.

The Geiger Tigers answered less than two minutes later, when Russell found Cpl. T. J. Jones all alone in the flat and hit him with a swing pass. Jones sailed untouched 50 yards to the end zone, and Russell sprinted in with the conversion run to tie the score at 8-8.

The Rams weren't finished with the first quarter, however. On the second play following the 6th Marines kickoff, Reese called a play-action pass and found Seaman Apprentice Joe Olowofoyeku and Gross isolated on one Geiger Tiger defensive back. Olowofoyeku hauled in Reese's tall toss and rambled 62 yards for a touchdown that gave Navy a 14-8 lead.

A big kickoff return from Randall and a 20-yard burst from Jones helped the 6th Marines to a first-and-goal situation at the Navy 9-yard line on their next possession. But the Ram defense stiffened at that point, with Petty Officer 3rd Class Matt Sobolewski and Seaman Jarrod Davis leading the charge that forced the Geiger Tigers to turn the ball over on downs at the Navy 19 four plays later.

The Navy offense was stonewalled on its next series, and the 6th Marines took over at the Navy 21 after a punt return by Randall and a facemasking penalty.

Three plays later, the Geiger Tigers tied it up when Russell again found Jones alone in the flat for a 24-yard scoring play.

Both defenses took over at that point, and it was 14-14 at halftime.

The third quarter opened almost like the first, but after trading scores in the first half, it then appeared as if both teams would trade plays-called-back in the second.

Facing a second-and-25 from his own 20-yard line, Russell flipped a quick pass to Randall. Randall quickly cut across the field and darted 80 yards for an apparent touchdown, but the score was called back on a clipping penalty at the Navy 25-yard line. Two plays later, Jones coughed up the ball and Tedrick pounced on it at the Navy 37.

The 6th Marines came up with a golden opportunity two plays later when Reese lost the ball in a wild scramble and the Geiger Tigers recovered at the Navy 18. But Sobolewski read a screen pass by Russell and intercepted the ball, returning it 76 yards for another apparent touchdown. This play, too, was called back by a clipping call.

The defenses took over again until the waning moments of the game, with Sgt. N. C. John and Lance Cpl. Scott Ireland doing most of the damage for the 6th Marines, while Sobolewski and Tedrick kept the Geiger Tiger offense in check.

Navy began its winning drive at its own 45. Reese's 23-yard scramble moved the ball into 6th Marines territory, and Seaman G. Rogers picked up 12 more yards on a power run spliced between quick passes to Gross and Olowofoyeku that put the Rams at the 6th Marines 9-yard line with 1:40 remaining in the game.

Two runs by Rogers moved the ball to the 2-yard line, and on fourth-and-goal, Reese rolled out and found a seam to skip into the end zone with the go-ahead score.

slate of returning champions will line the field when the All-Marine boxing Trials get underway at 7 p.m. today at Goettge Memorial Field House.

All-Marine coach Roosevelt Sanders have returning champs Lance Cpl. Hughes, Cpl. Jesse Lucero, Lance Michael DeMoss, Lance Cpl. Ted Randolph and Sgt. Eddie Donerlson. Some 60 expected boxers begin the day tournament.

"We have a lot of people with a lot of experience coming back," Sanders said. "We're looking to build a team with more experience, especially in the lighter weight classes."

Donerlson, the current national and Armed Forces super-heavyweight champion, will carry the most impressive credentials into the competition.

"He's had a tremendous amount of success in the last year," Sanders said, "and Donerlson's wins over Polish and other champs in international competition. He should have no problem defending his title."

Donerlson was a silver medalist in the 1988 Olympics and will be among the favorites in the 125-pound class. Sanders said he is looking for continued leadership from Donerlson.

Hughes, Sanders said, is "better equipped for his try at the 139-pound title" than winning the 132-pound division in 1988, while DeMoss is also high on Sanders' praise list for his excellent boxing work. He'll be chasing the pound crown.

The crew of champs also has what is called a "rising star" in Lucero, current Golden Gloves 147-pound champion. Among the champions not returning is "King" Martinez, whose enlistment expired after he won his fifth All-Marine title last year. He had been expected to turn pro, but has been slowed by a knee injury.

Several newcomers and recent additions to the All-Marine team are also expected to do well in the trials.

One relative newcomer and an experienced veteran will be battling for the title at 156 pounds. Lance Cpl. Demetrius Jennings impressed Sanders in several West Coast bouts last summer, while Cpl.

Johnny Burgess is back after making last year's All-Marine trials.

Inexperience is the only drawback for Cpl. Davey Wilcox, who hopes to take home the 178-pound title.

Leonard, Duran clash 'Uno Mas' tonight

GLOBE STAFF REPORT

Almost nine years after their last encounter, which ended with Roberto Duran's infamous cry of "No mas, no mas," Sugar Ray Leonard and Duran will meet for the third time — "Uno Mas" — at the Mirage in Las Vegas tonight.

The 12-round fight for Leonard's WBC super middleweight title will be shown on closed-circuit television at Camp Lejeune's Goettge Memorial Field House. Tickets will be $15 at the door, with the undercard expected to begin around 9 p.m.

Leonard (35-1-1, 25 KOs), is coming off a 12-round draw with Thomas "Hit Man" Hearns at Caesars Palace June 12. Duran (85-7, 61 KOs) will make his first appearance since taking the WBC middleweight crown from Iran Barkley on a split decision Feb. 24.

The fight is billed as a rubber match between the two boxing legends. They first hooked up in June, 1980, in "The Brawl in Montreal," with Duran dethroning Leonard as WBC welterweight champion by pounding out a unanimous decision in 15 rounds.

The loss was Leonard's only professional defeat.

The two met again in New Orleans five months later. On that evening, Leonard gained revenge by consistently beating the champion to the punch. Duran suddenly quit in the eighth round, complaining of stomach cramps and uttering a plea of "No mas, no mas (no more, no more)." Leonard, a gold medalist at the 1976 Olympics, has retired three times since the "No Mas" fight. The first retirement came while preparing for a 1982 title defense against Roger Stafford, when he was forced to undergo surgery for a detached retina in his left eye.

He returned to the ring in May, 1984, halting Kevin Howard in nine rounds, but suffering his first-ever knockdown in the process. He immediately retired again.

Leonard returned a third time for a big payday fight against Marvelous Marvin Hagler in April, 1987, scoring one of boxing's all-time great upsets by outpointing the undisputed middleweight champion.

Duran's career, meanwhile, nosedived after the second fight with Leonard. The legendary "Hands of Stone," now 38 years old, moved up to the super welterweight division and lost a decision to Wilfred Benitez in January, 1982. His career seemed over when he lost a decision to journeyman Kirkland Laing in September of that same year.

Duran came back to stop Davey Moore for the junior middleweight crown, but lost a narrow decision to Hagler and was knocked out by Hearns. With his career again on the ropes, the Panamanian came back again on Feb. 24 to stun Barkley.

TAR HEEL TAILS

with Spivey and McLean

We promised you last week we'd have some venison recipes for you. Ya' know, there must be hundreds of ways to cook venison: from making stew to cooking it over charcoal. A few weeks ago we told you about some stew served to us by our good buddy Darol. Last week another good friend, Glen, served us some venison stew. He simply browns his venison meat in a pot and then adds his onions, peppers, potatoes and other accoutrements. He then lets the pot of stew simmer all day. This stew is hard to pass up.

An equally delightful and flavorful way to cook venison is to grill it. One recent sampling of grilled venison had been marinated in burgundy sauce for 12 hours. It was then placed over a hot charcoal fire and grilled until fully cooked several minutes later. When it was ready to be taken off the grill, it was lightly basted with a secret barbecue sauce.

One of our favorite venison recipes comes from France. It's called Venison Ragout. Ragout denotes the style of cooking in which chunks of meat are browned in a pot and then simmered in a sauce until tender.

The sauce is made from a stock of burgundy, mushrooms and onions. Added to this broth is a variety of liquors, which include brandy, sherry, bourbon, and ruby port.

To make this delectable dish, follow these steps: brown the venison chunks in a deep skillet. Remove the meat and replace with onions and mushrooms, stirring them until browned. Remove the onions and mushrooms and add the burgundy stock along with tomato paste. Turn heat off. In a separate bowl mix liquors with pasted flour, then add to skillet. Turn heat on and cook until just short of boiling point. Then add venison, mushrooms, onions and spices (garlic powder, black pepper, bay leaves). Cover tightly and bake at 350 degrees Fahrenheit in oven for one-and-a-half hours.

You can serve Ragout over your favorite kind of noodles.

Where to hunt?

Did you know there are some 240,000 acres of public hunting lands not far from the Lejeune area? These lands offer the sportsman a variety of game to shoot. Where are some of these lands and what do they offer?

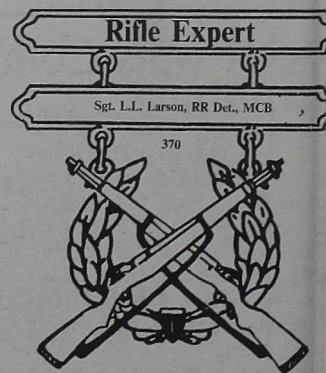

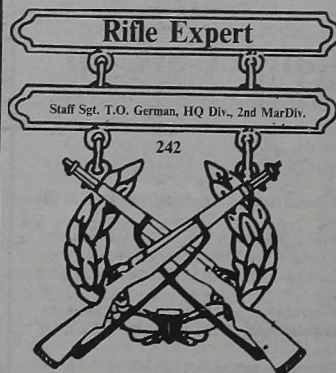

Hoffman Forest Game Land, which borders Onslow and Jones Counties, is a 30,000-acre state game land. This area offers some of the best deer hunting around. Other game species include quail and bear.

Holly Shelter Game Land, also a state forest land, covers almost 49,000 acres in Pender County to the southwest of here. Here, a larger game variety is found, including deer, rabbit, squirrel, fox, quail, dove, and waterfowl.

The largest public hunting land in the area is the Croatan National Forest to the north, which is spread out over Carter, Jones and Craven Counties. This 130,000-acre forest land has just about all the game species available in this part of North Carolina. With its mix of hardwood, pine and pocosin habitat, the Croatan has good numbers of quail, dove, waterfowl, turkey, deer, bear, fox and raccoon.

Until next week, keep your eyes open, your hooks sharp and your boots clean. Good hunting.

Big Shots . . .

Information for the Big Shots, which is a weekly listing of the high shooters from the Rifle Range, is supplied by the Rifle Range. Any questions concerning this listing should be directed to the Rifle Range Detachment at 451-7257. This week's listing covers the high rifle shooter and high pistol shooter during the week of Nov. 13 — 17.
