U.S. Army paratroopers assigned to Attack Company, 1st Battalion, 503rd Infantry Regiment, 173rd Airborne Brigade, train at night with deployable instrumentation system Europe (DISE). Its advanced combat tracking equipment, compared to the Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System, tracks every movement by each soldier via global positioning system and assists them by registering virtual and incapacitating injuries. Members of DISE monitor soldiers and conduct an after action review in the control room at the conclusion of the training. This activity is a part of Eagle Pangea Exercise in the Italian Army Capo Teulada Major Training Area on the Island of Sardinia, Italy March 11, 2021 under Covid-19 prevention conditions.
