Present, past 2d MarDiv Marines celebrate birthday

by Cpl. J.C. Saris

The 2d Marine Division's birthday celebration drew more than just today's active duty Marines. It also drew many members of the 2d Marine Division Association to share in the festivities.

Approximately 45 former Marines, many of whom had fought in the famous campaigns of World War II, returned to Camp Lejeune to celebrate the Division's birthday.

The veteran Leathernecks were given a tour of the base as well as its modern training areas and saw weapons in action during visits to the field.

The final touch to the week-long event was a full-blown birthday ceremony held at the Goettge Memorial Fieldhouse. The ceremony gave the floor to the president of the 2d Marine Division Association, retired Lieutenant Colonel Theodore Summers, who gave out five prestigious awards to outstanding Marines of the Division.

The first award was the Tarawa Award. This award is given annually to the winners in the Division Combat Rifle and competition. The winning squad in 1986 was from 1st Platoon, Kilo Company, 3d Battalion, 6th Marine Regiment. The team is currently afloat with Landing Force Sixth Fleet.

Sergeant Douglas Nolan accepted the award.

The next award presented was the Lieutenant General Julian C. Smith award. General Smith was the founder of the 2d Marine Division Association and the award bearing his name is presented each year to the 2d Marine Division's Marine of the Year. The winner for 1986 was Lance Corporal Peter J. Carbone, Anti-tank Company, 2d Tank Battalion.

The 'Follow Me' Award is presented annually to the platoon that, based on the results of the Inspector General of the Marine Corps and Commanding General inspections, wins the division drill competition. Receiving the award for 1986 was Headquarters Company, 8th Marine Regiment, Corporal Reid B. Hart accepted the award.

The fourth presentation was the Major General C.B. Vogel award which goes to the noncommissioned officer of the Year. The winner for 1986 was Sergeant Roland B. Wilson, Alpha Company, 2d Assault Amphibious Battalion.

The final award presented by the association was a new one. It was the John Henry Balch award, named for a Navy Pharmacist's Mate First Class. During World War I, while serving with the Sixth Marine Regiment in France, Balch distinguished himself by exhibiting exceptional gallantry, intrepidity, and bravery in the face of enemy fire.

He was awarded the Medal of Honor. The first winner of the Balch award was Hospitalman First Class John A. Meehan, 3d Battalion, 2d Marines.

The commanding general of the 2d Marine Division, Major General Dennis J. Murphy, and Sergeant Major J.V. Browne, gave out the final award of the ceremony, the Leftwich trophy. The trophy, for outstanding leadership, is presented annually in memory of Marine Lieutenant Colonel William Groom Leftwich. Leftwich was a highly-dedicated and much-decorated leader who was killed in action in the Republic of Vietnam in November of 1970.

The winner is selected by the Commandant of the Marine Corps.

This year's winner of the trophy was Major David W. Mauldin. He is currently serving as the Marine officer instructor at the University of Miami of Ohio. He was nominated for the award while serving as the commanding officer of Echo Co., 2d Battalion, 8th Marines.

The Leftwich trophy is not limited to the Marines of the 2d Marine Division, but out of the eight years that the award has been given, a 2d Marine Division officer won it six times.

CG's CORNER

The number of accidents at the intersection of Brewster and Holcomb Boulevards seem to be extremely high. This leads not only to the loss of personal property and injury to both military personnel and dependents, but also to traffic jams that increase time to get off base and prevent emergency vehicles from getting through.

I feel one of the reasons for this situation is that only the first vehicle in each lane can see the road guard. When the first vehicle brakes, rear-end collisions occur. I suggest a remote control be hooked into the signal control box for the traffic lights. This would allow more vehicles to see the traffic signal.

We have looked into the possibility of a remote control device for the traffic light at Brewster and Holcomb Boulevards and have checked with the Department of Transportation and engineer-experts at Northwestern University. Both state that development of a remote control device capable of handling the complex traffic patterns at this intersection is not feasible.

The number of accidents at the intersection is small, and those accidents have not been caused by people not observing the traffic controlman. The majority of accidents are between Brewster Blvd. and the Main Gate, and are caused by people following too closely and not being able to slow down, resulting in rear-end collisions.

The evening traffic pattern was put into operation in 1978 and over the years we have made several changes in the cone pattern to allow traffic to run smoother and to prevent accidents. Our statistics show we are succeeding.

HEALTH WATCH

Prenatal care a must

Story by LCdr. Joe E. Wilson M.D.
US Naval Reserve, Head Ob/Gyn

Prenatal care is the medical care received by a pregnant woman while she is carrying her unborn child. While this care is undoubtedly the largest single factor in helping assure a healthy child, there are many women within our community who just don't bother going to the doctor for such care.

The benefits of this care are almost countless. Problems with a pregnancy can be identified earlier and many problems can be avoided all together.

Special studies such as ultrasound and amniocentesis can help reassure the parents to be and help assure the child that is born stands the best chance possible of developing normally. The mothers nutrition, so crucial to normal fetal development, can be evaluated and any nutritional or vitamin supplements can be started.

Diseases such as diabetes and high blood pressure, which can arise during pregnancy and pose serious risks to the baby's health, can be identified and treated easily.

Since the benefits are so great, why don't all pregnant women seek care as soon as they suspect they are pregnant? Many women say they can't get to the doctor, don't have the time, or are afraid it will cost money. While there is time involved in seeking care, and it may be difficult to get transportation at times, these are the first of many responsibilities that come with the decision to have a child. There is little or no cost to the patient for prenatal care to eligible dependents, whether this care is received here at the Naval Hospital or at a civilian facility through CHAMPUS.

If you are pregnant or suspect that you may be, please seek the care you and your unborn child need and deserve. If you know someone who is pregnant but hasn't sought prenatal care, please let them know about this article and how important it is that they get cared for.

For more information regarding prenatal care at this facility, please call 451-4561 or 451-4562 during normal working hours. We look forward to helping care for you and your unborn child during this miracle we call birth.

UPDATE

On 13 February 1987, Marines throughout the world observe the 44th anniversary of women in the Marine Corps.

Although the call "Free a Marine to Fight" established the purpose of the Marine Corps Women Reserve during World War II -- women Marines served with distinction as far back as 1918. In fact, Opha Mae Johnson became the first woman Marine by enlisting on 13 August 1918 in Washington, D. C.

During World War I, women Marines handled clerical assignments -- allowing other Marines to fight -- until the armistice was signed on 11 November 1918. Before deactivation, the women Marine ranks numbered 305.

Since authorization granting women the opportunity to enlist in the reserve program took place on 13 February 1943 -- this date became the official anniversary for women Marines. However, the Women's Armed Service Integration Act passed on 1 June 1948 authorized women to join as a regular or reserve Marine. The act established women as a permanent part of the Marine Corps.

Today, women Marines number approximately 10,000 -- serving from private to brigadier general in practically every field. Whether attending officer training at Quantico, Va. or boot camp at Parris Island, S. C. -- running the confidence course and qualifying with the rifle -- women earn the privilege to be called "Marine."

To all Camp Lejeune women Marines, I offer my best wishes for continued success on your 44th anniversary.

Semper Fidelis,

J. E. CASSITY

UPDATE

It was a 'SADD' day at Lejeune High School

Globe Staff Report

Students at Camp Lejeune High School began this year's Student's Against Drunk Driving (SADD) campaign Feb. 4.

Students at Lejeune are joining other SADD groups nationwide to focus public attention on the dangers associated with drinking and driving. The campaign is being sponsored by Lejeune's Future Homemakers of America (FHA) Chapter.

The major public health problem for teenagers in the United States today is injuries associated with motor vehicle use, according to Dorothy Mazingo, Camp Lejeune High School. Forty-four percent of all night-time fatal alcohol-related crashes are in the 16-24 year old age group. In 1980 more than 7,000 teenagers lost their lives in auto fatalities.

Drinking and driving is the most often committed violent crime and a significant cause of death among our youth. It is the number one cause of death for Americans, up to age 30, Mazingo said.

In an effort to help eliminate the drunk driver and save lives, SADD members at Lejeune will provide a Contract for Life Between Parent and Teenager for all interested teens. The contract is an agreement between the parent and the teen, which promises safe transportation if the teen is ever faced with a drinking-driver situation.

FHA members working with SADD are planning special activities for key times when drinking may be an even greater problem. These activities will focus on prom and graduation weekends.

Many students have already demonstrated interest in the SADD program at Lejeune. They are willing to use positive peer pressure. As the SADD motto says: "Friends Don't Let Friend's Drive Drunk".

Eat right, smile bright

A good diet is essential for proper growth and development and for keeping healthy. Like the rest of the body, the teeth, the bones, and the soft tissues of the mouth need a well-balanced diet. A variety of foods, including vegetables and fruits, breads and cereals, milk and other dairy products, and meat, poultry, fish or nuts, should be present in everyone's diet.

Proteins, vitamins and minerals — especially calcium, phosphorus, and fluoride — are needed during childhood to help make teeth strong and decay-resistant. Since the teeth begin to develop some time between the third and the sixth month before birth, expectant mothers need diets that provide enough of these nutrients for the baby's teeth too.

Most of us know that foods containing sugars can be harmful to dental health. Sugars are used as an energy source by the bacteria in plaque, the thin, invisible deposit that forms on everyone's teeth. Plaque bacteria use sugars to produce acids that attack tooth enamel, eventually leading to decay. But it's not only sugars, it's also starches, such as those found in cereals, breads, and processed foods, that can cause the plaque bacteria to produce decay-causing acids. The amount of these fermentable carbohydrates (simple sugars and starches) you eat is only one element that determines the effects food has on your teeth. Many other factors are of equal or greater importance.

● Frequency of eating. Each time you eat a food that contains simple carbohydrates, the teeth are attacked by acids for up to twenty minutes. The more often you eat these foods, the more often decay-producing acids are formed.

● Physical characteristics of the food. Food such as raisins, dates, dried fruits, and toffee tend to stick to the teeth. As long as they remain in the mouth the bacteria in plaque continue to produce enamel-destroying acids.

● Time needed to eat the food. Foods such as hard candy, cough drops, and breath mints stay in the mouth for long periods. Your teeth are under attack by acids the entire time.

● When food is eaten. Some research indicates that certain foods, such as cheese, peanuts, or sugar-free gum, may be "friendly" to the teeth. Eating these foods along with, or after, foods that contain carbohydrates may help to counter the effects of the acids produced by the bacteria in plaque.

To ensure that your diet promotes good dental health, develop sensible eating habits. Limit snacks. Read the labels on food containers. Labels list ingredients in descending order, with the ingredient present in the highest quantity listed first. If some type of sugar leads the list, try to eat that food as part of a meal, not as a snack.

From the standpoint of dental health, the following snacks are reasonable choices: nuts, peanut butter (without sugar), milk, cheese, plain (not flavored) yogurt, raw vegetables, popcorn, olives, sugarless gum or sugarless candy, and coffee or tea without sugar. Consult your physician about excess salt, fat, or caffeine.

more than diet alone. Don't forget to brush your teeth thoroughly with a fluoride toothpaste at least once a day, floss your teeth daily, and visit your dentist regularly.

Once restricted, blacks fought to better Corps

Story by Sgt. Burt Carey

When the first black recruit stepped aboard Montford Point Camp Aug. 26, 1942, he set the stage for black people to become integrated into the Marine Corps for the first time in the organization's history.

Howard P. Perry, of Charlotte, N.C., was one of 13 black Marine recruits who arrived that day. Many men who followed those 13 have become legends in the annals of the Corps.

James E. Johnson arrived at Montford Point during 1944. His service book was promptly stamped "COLORED" as were all black recruit's books. His service book was also marked with the words "STEWART DUTY ONLY," relegating him to duty in the galley.

"Whatever job they give you, just remember, it's the greatest job they could give you in the Marine Corps or else they wouldn't be giving it to you," was the advice Johnson received from his father just before departing for Montford Point.

Johnson made such a fuss over his jobs and he retired as a chief warrant officer in 1965 after 21 years on active duty. He became the first black warrant officer in the Corps' history in 1960 and, after retiring, became the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Manpower and Reserve Affairs. He visited Camp Lejeune and the old Montford Point area Feb. 4 after speaking at the base's National Prayer Breakfast.

Johnson was preceded in the Corps by other admirable blacks. Men with the names of Gilbert H. "Hashmark" Johnson, Edgar R. Huff and Alvin "Tony" Ghazlo poured their sweat on the grounds of Montford Point during the early days of boot camp.

Hashmark, perhaps the most well-known black in the Corps' history, made his mark at Montford Point by entering boot camp at age 37 after six years with the U.S. Army's black 25th Infantry during the 1920s. He spent much of the 1930s as an Officers' Steward 2d Class in the U.S. Navy. He requested to depart the Navy for the honor of wearing Marine greens. It was because of his prior service he was called Hashmark.

Johnson's esprit and tenacity earned him the respect of his fellow black Marines as well as Montford Point's white drill instructors and officers. By 1948 he was a master sergeant and acted as the camp's sergeant major.

Huff was the Corps' senior sergeant major when he retired during 1972 and he held that rank longer than any active-duty Marine. Huff also holds the distinction of being the first black to retire from the Marines with 30 years service.

"I do remember very vividly 'Hashmark' Johnson and Ed Huff," Johnson said during his visit here. "Those men had such a profound affect on my life as a Marine. I saw them go through some real tough struggles and they would always defend their people. They loved us enough that they would take the heat for the rest. They were actually paving a way for the rest of us who came after them.

"We really owe an allegiance to those men for inspiring us to stay in the Marine Corps," Johnson said. "They would say, don't get out — stay in. Stay in and make it better. You cannot make it better by getting out."

Ghazlo trained thousands of black Marines in hand-to-hand combat during the 1940s using his experience as a former bodyguard and jujitsu instructor from Philadelphia, PA.

There were many other firsts for blacks. Jerome D. Alcorn, Otto Cherry and Robert T. Davis were the first black NCOs. They held the title of field cooks (corporals) as of Jan. 18, 1943.

Frederick C. Branch's wife pinned 2d lieutenant's bars to his Service A uniform Nov. 10, 1945 as he became the first black Marine officer. Although he was reverted immediately to inactive status, his promotion was a huge stepping stone toward ending racial segregation in the military.

Annie E. Graham, of Detroit, Mich., entered the Corps as the first black Woman Marine Sept. 8, 1949. Joined by Ann E. Lamb of New York, the two blacks integrated into Woman Marine boot camp during September 1949 and were graduated with Platoon 5-A, 3rd Recruit Training Battalion.

Second Lieutenant William K. Jenkins became the first black Marine officer to lead men into combat. He was a platoon leader in Korea attached to Company B, 1st Battalion, 7th marines from 1951-52.

Second Lieutenant Frank E. Petersen became the first black Marine pilot during 1953 and flew 64 combat missions in the Republic of Korea. He also holds the distinction of being the first black to be commissioned in the Corps from a Naval Aviation Cadet Program and, in more recent years, the first black general officer. Lieutenant General Petersen is the commanding general at the Marine Corps Development and Education Command, Quantico, VA.

"Being one of the first black Marines (and) one of the first black officers, then becoming the assistant secretary of the Navy...it shows you that things have really changed from what they were when I first came in the Marine Corps," Johnson said.

Why wait till you're over the hill to retire?

After 20 years of active duty with the Marines, you can retire with 50% of your base pay. Which means you'll probably be in your late 30s, early 40s. You'll be young enough to start a second career and still enjoy it. Plus, you'll have an advantage; your retirement pay. It can make things easier, give you breathing space maybe even give you a chance to do a few things you've always wanted to do.

When you're thinking about whether to ship-over, think about the benefits you have—medical, educational and retirement. Consider your pride in your job and security. Add up what you've been working for and the time you've invested in it.

There're still a few things you can count on. One is the Corps.

You can count on the Corps.

STAY MARINE.

NEWSBRIEFS

1987 Winter Concert

The 2d Marine Division Band will present its 1987 Winter Concert, Feb. 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the base theater. The hour-long program will include modern classics, stirring marches, and a tribute to romance as the love affair of "Porgy and Bess" is celebrated.

Income tax forms

The Base General Library has just received a shipment of Federal Income Tax Forms from the Internal Revenue Service. Some of the forms available include:

- Form 3903 - Moving Expense Adjustment
- Form 2411 - Credit for Child and Dependent Care Expenses
- Form 2119 - Sale or Exchange of Principal Residence
- Schedule W - Deduction for a Married Couple When Both Work

For more information about the availability of federal or state tax forms, call the Base Library at 451-3178.

Prices change March 1

Special Services activities will raise its prices on March 1, for the first time in seven years, according to Deputy Director Mr. E.L. Fox.

"The adjustments are intended to bring prices more in line to help offset actual costs of various programs, while generally maintaining current levels of services," said Fox.

Some prices will not increase, however, and others varying amounts, since services were evaluated individually.

Primary reasons for the general increase cited by Fox include shrinking revenues provided Special Services from the Marine Corps Exchange, reduced funds appropriated by Congress, and the general rate of inflation compounded over years since the last increase.

Fox maintains Special Services, "...still has everybody beat across the board," yielding some of the best value available per recreational dollar.

Prices remaining in effect until March 1 are detailed in Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune Bulletin 1710 of Nov. 13, 1985.

The Globe will have a list of price changes in the Feb. 19 issue.

Auction slated Feb. 19

A local Auction Sale will be held Thursday, Feb. 19 at 9 a.m. in Building 906. Bidder registration will begin at 8 a.m. Property may be inspected from 8 - 3 p.m. beginning Feb. 11 (excluding weekend) and ending Feb. 19. Property is located at Building 1117 and Lot 203. Bidders must be present to participate. Neither a bid deposit nor a partial payment will be required. Payment must be made in cash or by certified check.

Items for sale include desks, refrigerators, chairs, bicycles, bunkbeds, buffers, ranges, typewriters, vehicles, and other general property.

For more information call 451-5652, 451-2303 or visit the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office during inspection hours. The general public is invited to participate.

Separation brief

A Pre-Separation Brief is slated for March 27 from 8 a.m. - noon at the Base Theater, Hadnot Point. Marines scheduled for separation within 30 days from the date of the briefing, and who have declined reenlistment, should attend this brief.

LAV Marines create temporary command module

Story by Sgt. Burt Carey

A couple turns of a wrench, a bunch of creative minds, a bolt here, a nut there and a bit of paint was all it took for the Marines of 2d Light Armored Vehicle Battalion to build two temporary command vehicles for their command staff.

Enlisted Marines from 2d LAV Bn, 2d Marine Division, used two logistics-configured LAVs (or variants) to create field expedient command and control vehicles that will be used until the unit receives the manufacturer's model later this year.

"We didn't have to make any structural modifications to the vehicles," said Corporal Dwayne F. Kendrick, a Seneca, S.C., native and section leader for the two vehicles. "We used existing bolt holes and some scrap wood that we had or purchased on our own. We didn't weld or add on to the vehicles at all. Everything we've done can be changed back to original condition by just removing a few bolts."

What's in the logistics vehicle-turned-command module is unique. A bench that seats five Marines faces a large mapboard and six radios (four VHF, and one each UHF and HF). Its design allows enough room for the five rearward Marines to work independently of the vehicle's crew of three.

The variant designed by General Motors of Canada includes three swivel captain's chairs for the battalion staff officers. The new vehicles are due to arrive during the fall of 1987.

The battalion's 16 logistics variants are designed to carry ammunition, fuel, food and other supplies. In the fall, eight manufacturer-built command and control variants will be used by the Corps' three LAV battalions.

"We made all of these changes with the idea that we had to travel the same speed as line companies in the field, so they can take a lot of bumps and things like that without damaging any of the equipment," said Private First Class Robert E. Guerin of Bristol, Conn.

Not only were the Marines of 2d LAV trying to improve the battalion's ability to control vehicles while in the field, a few others were concerned with casualties. Because of that, LAV Marines won't have to worry about bumpy rides in five-ton trucks, jeeps or even high mobility, multi-purpose wheeled vehicles if they're wounded — they just catch a ride in one of the unit's four ambulances.

Yes, an ambulance LAV — another adaption to logistics vehicles by 2d LAV Bn. Marines. Brackets designed to hold four stanchions from CH-53E helicopters were fabricated in the battalion's welding shop then bolted to the vehicle's floor and ceiling. The brackets were bolted by using existing bolt holes in bottom plates, leaving no extra work for performing vehicle maintenance.

"What's really nice about this (configuration) is that we can tear it down and have this vehicle completely turned back into a (logistics) variant in less than five minutes," said Corporal Mark A.

Lanoye, a Headquarters and Service Company welder.

"Everything we used to change this into an ambulance didn't need testing because the materials were already approved for similar uses in other areas of the Marine Corps," added Sergeant James M. Lowry, the company's chief engineer. "Take the stanchions, for instance. They were already being used for medevacs on a '53', so we just took them and made all that fit in a LAV, knowing that they could hold three Marines without any problem."

The plan was the brainstorm of a corpsman who has since left the battalion. But Hospitalman 2d Class Raymond Garay picked up the program.

"It's a fantastic idea," said the 22-year-old from New York, N.Y. "We, as corpsmen, can do many things inside the vehicle.

"We used to have to transport patients in jeeps or six-bys (five-ton trucks)," said. "Those would only hold about two or three litter patients and it was very difficult to monitor how they were doing. Now we can put four litter patients in the LAV, three on the stanchion-support racks and one on the vehicle's floor for a much smoother ride. We also don't have to worry about getting stuck in mud or anything."

The Corps plans to outfit several variants of the eight-wheeled vehicle: the LAV 25, logistics, command and control, air defense, TOW system, mortar pad and electronic warfare. Logistics and LAV 25 have already been placed within Fleet Marine Force LAV battalions located at Camp Lejeune, Twentynine Palms, Calif., and Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Hospitalman Class Raymond Garay shows off the 2d Light Armored Vehicle Battalion logistics variant that was changed into a field ambulance. The litter stanchions can be removed and the vehicle returned to its original form within five minutes. (Photo by Sgt. Burt Carey)

Lakers clip Hawks' wings in Midget League battle

Story by Cpl. Val Bode

It was a battle of the bases.
It was a battle of the parents.
But most of all, it was a battle of the kids.

The five through eight-year-old Lakers from Marine Corps Air Station, New River challenged the Camp Lejeune Hawks Feb. 7 for the Jacksonville Midget League bragging rights. The game proved to be New River's as the Lakers clipped the Hawks' wings for the 18-10 win.

The young folk play a slightly different game than their older counterparts in the junior high and high school leagues — the baskets are lowered, the endlines are shortened and no pressing past half court is allowed until the last two minutes of each half. The best part of the game is that no one looks at the occasional four or five steps a player may make before he shoots or the "whoops" fouls that are as common to the game as dribbling and shooting.

Another big difference in the midget league is the talk on the court. The shy and sometimes scared children remain speechless and stiff on the court. Their main objective is just making it down the court without hearing the referee's whistle.

The excitement and noise level comes from the parents and coaches on the sideline. It is the parents screaming continuously that controls the game. Ever time a player stole the ball or scored, he had all he could do to find his parents in the bleachers for that longed-for smile or approval.

The only bad guy in this game was the referee. The parents' tempers and arguments were placed on the referee's shoulders, not the kids.

Top scorers for the winning Lakers were Matt Quinter and Matt Caudill with six and teammate Sarah Pearcy, with four. The Hawks were led by Erin Harvey with eight and Patrick Goodrich with two.

Devilfish swim team brings home gold

by IstLt. Joe DiBenedetto

On Feb. 7, I had the pleasure of taking swimmers to the Raleigh YMCA Invitational Swim Meet. Being the head coach for only three weeks, I was worried that these swimmers wouldn't adjust well to my techniques of coaching. This swim meet would be the test.

Being a prior long distance swimmer, I know how many yards a swimmer must complete to excel. The Devilfish team went from swimming 3,000 yards a day to over 4,500 yards in a single workout. They don't complain that they were sore or tired, they just grinned, gritted and said, "What? How far?"

This past weekend was the proof that hard work pays off. I had kids who had never been in a swim meet to swimmers who have competed for three years. On the whole, there were a vast majority of first times.

Children's talents varied in every respect. I had some kids diving off the starting block and doing racing turns for the first time in competition all the way to two swimmers qualifying for "A" level competition.

Swimming in the United States is split into competition levels based on time standards. They range from "C" level to "AAAA" level swimming. Each swimmer races against the clock, as well as the swimmers in the lanes next to him. A swimmer who comes in flat last, but improves his time is a winner. It's more significant to drop a time standard in a race, than get first place and not drop a time standard.

The three first places taken by the two Devilfish swimmers were particularly sweet. Brian Casto won the 200 and 500 freestyle, while Danny Head won the 100 butterfly. All three times went from "B" to "A" standard times.

The 200 freestyle and 100 butterfly were great races. Both Danny and Brian swam their races to a convincing win. Brian's 500 freestyle can only be termed as a duel. The 500 freestyle is the last and longest event (20 lengths of the pool.) It made no difference to Brian and his competitor. Both swimmers battled for the lead, exchanging positions over and over again. In the end Brian won. He improved his time by eight seconds, won first place and dropped a time standard. These three first place races were reflective of the Devilfish participating in this swim meet.

I'm extremely proud of the Devilfish's performance and know they will do just as well in their next meet in March. A special thanks needs to go to the parents who drive, support and keep the team going.

Cannoneers triumph over Base in 56-43 win

Story by Cpl. Tim Dougherty

Tenth Marines, playing on its own court, defeated Headquarters Battalion, Marine Corps Base 56-43 in Over-the-Hill League hoops action Feb. 4.

The victory was the 10th Marines third win with one loss, while HQBN fell to 2-2.

Neither team could build much of a lead in the first half but instead traded baskets. The last scoring contribution of the first half was by HQBN with a three point shot that gave it a brief lead at 32-29. Tenth Marines tried to tie the score with a three pointer at the buzzer, but it was an airball.

The second half meant more of the same, as the two teams traded basket for basket all the way until the last 10 minutes of the game when the score was knotted 39-39.

The next four minutes saw 10th Marines outscore HQBN 7-0 and build the first real lead of the game. With the ball and six minutes left, 10th Marines took a time-out to discuss game strategies.

Headquarters finally scored when David Kirkwood drove the lane and was fouled. His shot missed but he sank one of two free throws to make the score 46-40 in favor of 10th Marines.

Tenth Marines continued to score at will each time it had the ball while Headquarters tried to chip away at the lead. Each time Headquarters had the ball, Kirkwood drove the lane and went to the hoop. He was successful on one of two free throws each time. It wasn't enough, however, as Headquarters' final total was a mere 43 points.

With the game well in hand 10th Marines passed the ball around Headquarters' zone to eat up the clock. When time expired 10th Marines came out victorious with the final score 56-43.

ATTENTION ATHLETES

Globe Staff Report

In an attempt to enhance athletic performance and increase muscular bulk, some Marines have been using anabolic steroids on a regular basis as part of their overall training effort.

Increasingly, studies indicate the use of anabolic steroids can cause physical and/or psychological damage. Possible adverse side effects include: increased aggression, physiological damage to several body organs, particularly those of the cardiovascular system, and sterility.

To ensure the health and well being of every Marine and preclude injury, the unprescribed use of anabolic steroids is prohibited. Only military physicians may prescribe this drug for Marines. Violations of this prohibition are punishable under Article 92 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Parents, educators meet March 20-21

Concerned parents, educators and the general public will meet in nearby Wilmington, March 20-21, for an exciting forum of workshops exploring the course of education in an era of unprecedented dynamic technological development.

Camp Lejeune Dependents' Schools' Dr. Wesley E. Guthrie is Director of the Marine Corps Base Gifted Students program, and Conference Chairman. International, national and state experts in the field of technology will address participants in major speeches, with demonstrations of high technology, large and small group instruction, and hands-on workshops.

Keynote speakers will be Dr. Frank Withrow, Director of Technology, Young Astronaut Council, Washington, D.C., Dr. Edward Jacomo, head of the Department of Creativity, University Liggett School, Grosse Pointe, Mich., and Astronaut Sonny Carter, NASA Johnson Space Center, Houston, Texas.

A sampling of more than 50 workshop sessions available include: Creating More Creative People, Decisions! Moving Into the 21st Century, Creative Technology, Home is the Heart of It All and Reading, Writing, Seeing and Speaking: The Essential Skills of the Gifted.

While the conference is close enough for members of the Camp Lejeune community to commute, rooms are available by reservation at the conference site, the Wilmington Hilton.

Anyone interested in attending must pre-register no later than Feb. 27 for special rates on conference fees.

For more information telephone Dr. Guthrie, Camp Lejeune Dependents' Schools at 451-2461.

In keeping with our recognition for Black History Month, Lance Corporal Tracy Cruz will bring us more of her in-depth interview with retired First Lieutenant Anthony Mosley, first black band director...Sergeant Chuck Little recently attended The National Prayer Breakfast and found a tie-in there to Black History...Sergeant Jeff Schinker will bring us the highlights of the Second Marine Division's 46th birthday celebration...these stories and more can be seen on this week's Lejeune Report.
