HMMWV modernizes Corps' MT

Story by Sgt. Ray D. Adams

The Marine Corps' newest technological advancement in motor transport arrived here recently.

The High Mobility, Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicle (HMMWV—pronounced HUMVEE), is being implemented into 2d Marine Division units, replacing the aging 2,100 M151 jeeps. It will also replace the Gamma Goat, the M274 mechanical mule and the M146 trailer.

"Second Marine Division is one of the first units in the Marine Corps to receive the HMMWV," said Capt. Warren C. Frerichs, project officer of the HMMWV fielding team.

The fielding team, which was formed in July, is comprised of 65 Marines from division units. Fifteen of those Marines will guard the HMMWVs until delivery to the units.

"If we keep on schedule the last vehicle should be delivered during February," Frerichs added.

The HMMWVs are being delivered by trains and tractor trailers to the Transportation Management Officer, Marine Corps Base.

Once delivery is made, Marines from Motor Transport Maintenance Company, 2d Force Service Support Group, conduct a safety inspection on each vehicle. The vehicles are then transported to the HM-

MWV fielding team's processing facility at Camp Geiger for assembly.

When the vehicles arrive at Camp Geiger, 2d FSSG Marines will perform a limited technical inspection on the vehicle.

"The FSSG Marines check the transmission, steering, wiring and lights to make sure the vehicle is mechanically sound before turning it over to us," said Frerichs.

Six teams of five Marines each assemble a total of 100 HMMWVs a week.

The assemblers put roofs on, seats in, windshield wipers and mirrors on and install the fording kit," according to Frerichs. The vehicles, once completed are stored until delivered to the units.

When a unit takes delivery of the HMMWVs its jeeps and other vehicles are turned in, according to Frerichs. The aging vehicles will be stored until Marine Corps Logistics Base, Albany, Ga. decides on their fate.

"Some of the jeeps may be sent back to division to fill shortages...some may go to Albany to be rebuilt and some might go to the Marine Corps Reserve or Army National Guard," Frerichs said.

The HMMWV, the Corps' newest technological advancement in motor transport... faster, better, stronger...meeting the needs of today's Corps.

1/2 masters mountain warfare skills

Story by Sgt. Burt Carey

MOUNTAIN WARFARE TRAINING CENTER, Bridgeport, Calif.—The scenic, but rugged Sierra Nevada Mountains in Eastern California offer a refreshing background for Pickel Meadows and the Marine Corps Mountain Warfare Training Center's main camp. Situated at nearly 7,000 feet, instructors at the camp take advantage of heavy winter snowfalls to teach Marines cold weather survival; and steep, rocky cliffs during the summer for mountain warfare training.

The 1st Battalion, 2d Marines, 2d Marine Division, completed the winter training nearly two years ago. Now the battalion again finds itself perched in the heart of Pickel Meadows—this time for a grueling 28-day course in rappelling, climbing, hiking and basic mountaineer instruction. It is the last battalion to undergo summer training at MWTC this year.

The training is scheduled around a four-phase system during the summer package. The first is core training—when all of the 1/2 Marines learn basic knot tying, rappelling, cliff climbing and rope bridging. Phase two covers land navigation, medical evacuations, tactical patrolling and mountain picketing.

Cliff assault training highlights the third phase. The final phase is a four-day field exercise that combines all the Marines' mountain training into a tactical setting.

Taking a small portion of the battalion's manpower are two specialty courses designed to give the unit some resident experts for specific missions. Those are the Assault Climbers Course, attended by about 30 of the battalion's best mountaineers, and the Mule Packing Course, mainly used to aid Weapons Company Marines carry their heavy mortars, machine guns and other supplies and equipment.

The first snowfall of the season arrived Sept. 17 above the 9,000-foot level, sprinkling the exercising 1/2 Leathernecks during their second phase of training. The storm brought temperatures in the 20s and high, gusting winds, forcing slight training modifications due to slippery conditions.

All of the training is held at or above 6,700 feet making quick acclimatization a must for the sea-level, Camp Lejeune-based Leathernecks. Different portions of the training are conducted at nearly 10,000 feet in the Toiyabe National Forest.

Pickel Meadows is surrounded by mountains, the Sierra Nevadas to the west, Sweetwater Mountains to the northeast and the White Mountains to the southeast.

The training area itself, some 46,000 acres of land operated by a memorandum of understanding between the Marine Corps and the U.S. Forest Service, must be shared with vacationing civilians who use the national forest for hunting, fishing, back packing and more. Thus, live-fire training is not conducted.

The area was originally selected by the Marine Corps for cold weather training during the Korean War. Its climate and geographical location, on the 38th parallel, matched many of Korea's war-torn cold spots and gave Marines a chance to become acclimated to high-altitude, cold-weather operations before deploying with the 1st Marine Division in the Far East.

The average temperatures range from a low of 20 degrees Fahrenheit to a high of 60 degrees in the lower elevations. Upper elevations (up to 12,512 feet) range from 24 degrees for a low and about 50 degrees for a high. The lowest temperatures reach about -3 degrees Fahrenheit during January and the high hits 85 degrees during August.

The base camp of MWTC is located in Pickel Meadows, a gently sloped, grassy valley at the 6,762-foot level. Pickel Meadows was named after pioneer stockman and prospector Frank Pickel who moved into the area in 1863. He was murdered in his cabin, located near where the MWTC headquarters now stands.

Referral Service finds newcomers' homes

Globe Staff Report

If you have never found yourself new to an area with just a few dollars in your pocket and no roof overhead, you have not been fully initiated into the military way of life. The old salts could fill you with horror stories that would make your toes curl. But if you don't have the time to listen, take a trip to the Housing Office, Building TT-43, and use the Housing Referral Service there.

The Housing Referral Service has listings of houses, apartments, trailers, and condos on hand to fit one's needs and pocketbook.

But that's not all. Once settled into a new home one may suddenly become aware that all is not right when the roof the landlord said he fixed won't stop leaking. But the Housing Referral Service can help.

It works both ways, though. When that dog you told the landlord you didn't have barks all night or digs craters in the yard, the landlord can go to Housing Referral for help.

Whether the problems are big or small, the Housing Referral staff will listen and try to mediate between you and the landlord. They can't solve problems for you, but they can give you an unbiased opinion and get you going in the right direction in discussions between you and the landlord reach a stalemate.

Come to think of it, take time to listen to the old salts to avoid their mistakes by visiting the Housing Referral Service before making off-base housing arrangements. Good advice? You bet. It's in the fine print on your PCS orders.

HEALTHWATCH No butts about it--Part II

Story by Capt. Mary B. Kerdus NC, USN

Tobacco and its associated components leave tell-tale trails so doctors and dentists can often tell which patients smoke and which don't, without asking. Let's look at some of these trails.

Cancer: When the smoker takes a long drag on a cigarette, he pulls smoke into the most distant areas of the lungs. This causes the sticky tar, along with all of the other chemicals it carries, to be left on the membranes that line the air passages. The membranes become irritated and after a variable number of years the cells themselves become changed—sometimes into a cancer. About 90 percent of lung cancer cases each year are smokers; men who smoke over two packs per day have a lung cancer death rate 15-20 times higher than non-smokers.

Smokers have a greater risk of developing other forms of cancer, such as cancer of the mouth, larynx (voice box), esophagus and urinary bladder. Several studies show this increased risk to be about four times greater for oral cancer, six-ten times more for cancer of the larynx, four-five times more for esophageal cancer and two-three times greater for cancer of the urinary bladder.

Chronic Obstructive Lung Disease (cold): Pulmonary emphysema is a disease that is increasing rapidly; severe cases are most often found in relatively heavy cigarette smokers. This is such a crippling disease because the tiny air sacs in the lungs are destroyed and the lungs can no longer expand and contract easily to draw in and force out air. Oxygen isn't absorbed easily and carbon dioxide isn't expired sufficiently.

Chronic bronchitis is a persistent, recurring inflammation of the lining

Do you have a question about your health or that of your family? Write to HealthWatch, Education and Training Department, Naval Hospital, Camp Lejeune, 28542, and state your question. Due to publication space, it may not be possible to answer all questions. Names will not be printed in the column. Generally, answers will be printed within 3-4 weeks of receipt. Write to HealthWatch. We want to address issues that are a concern to you.

of the air tubes in the lungs. The cells in the lining produce excessive amounts of mucus causing the person to cough much more than normal in an effort to remove these secretions.

Atherosclerosis: Plugging of the arteries by fatty materials, primarily cholesterol, is enhanced by nicotine. Eventually the arteries supplying the heart, brain, and other organs become so clogged they are unable to carry enough blood to these organs. Heart attack, strokes and death are the end result.

Dental Problems: In addition to the various forms of oral cancer which can be life threatening, there are other things smoking does to your mouth. Ugly brown stains on the teeth is one. Bad breath (halitosis) is another, even if you brush your teeth very well. All of those inhaled and absorbed chemicals are exhaled from the lung tissue during normal conversation creating halitosis. "Hairy tongue" is another mouth problem that heavy smokers may have. Chemicals in the tobacco prevent tongue cells from sloughing normally, so they pile up creating a coating that may resemble a dog's hair dampened with water, and which can actually gag the smoker. Bacteria and food are trapped in these piles of cells and can cause bad breath. Yes, these last problems are esthetic and not life threatening, but they certainly are a social handicap and not particularly enjoyed by the dentist!

These are the main health problems your doctor or dentist may see if you are a smoker. Those tell-tale tracks of tobacco will make identification very easy, and will label you as a high risk for several health problems. A future column will talk about the passive smoker and his health costs from smoking.

Drill Platoon, Bugle Corps thrill crowd

Story by Cpl. Jamee Sosa

Precision-perfect Marines from the Silent Drill Team and the Drum and Bugle Corps thrilled crowds with their expertise during a performance Sept. 18 at Liversedge Field.

The Drum and Bugle Corps performed first, entertaining the crowd with selections such as Truly and Stars and Stripes Forever. Also known as the "Commandant's Own," the Drum and Bugle Corps is headquartered at Marine Barracks, 8th and I, Washington, D.C. The Corps is composed of 78 Marines recruited from civilian drum and bugle corps or other units from the Marine Corps. It performs every Friday evening at the renowned Marine Barracks Evening Parade during the summer months.

The Silent Drill Platoon, also headquartered at Marine Barracks, practices year-round to maintain its proficiency drilling. The 24-man team uses 10-pound M-1 rifle with fixed bayonet to execute its movements. The entire drill is performed without any verbal commands.

The performance was dedicated to former Prisoners of War and men Missing in Action from the Vietnam War in recognition of POW/MIA Day Sept. 1. The parade was reviewed by Major General D. J. Murphy, commanding general, 2d Marine Division and Major General J. E. Cassity, commanding general, Marine Corps Base.

Corps training chief visits Lejeune's areas and facilities

Story by Sgt. A. A. Brush

Brigadier General Frederick E. Sisley, newly assigned chief of staff for training, Headquarters Marine Corps, visited Camp Lejeune recently.

During his stay, BGen. Sisley observed several training areas and ranges and met with commanders and instructors to answer their questions. BGen. Sisley was shown new training devices and techniques being used and was satisfied with the progress, according to Colonel John A. Speicher, assistant chief of staff, training and operations, Marine Corps Base.

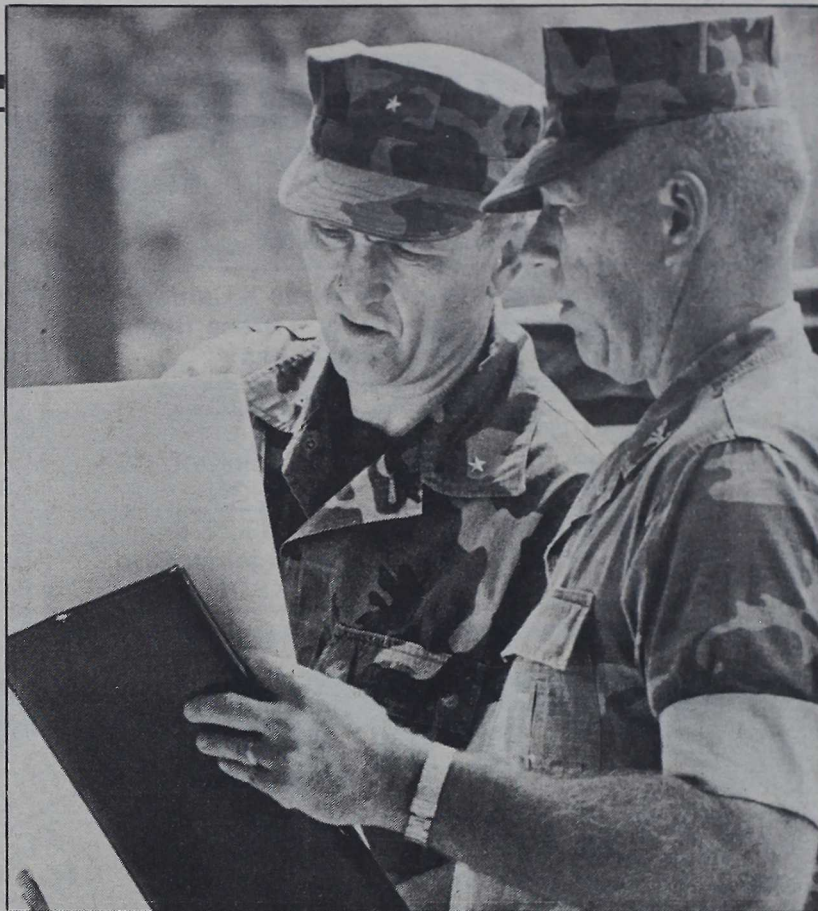

"General Sisley was very impressed with the training areas and the state of repair of the ranges. He was glad to see the ranges are still functional and said they looked better than any other time he had seen them," said Speicher.

Brigadier General Sisley also visited several formal schools. He got an opportunity to see what the bakers and cooks learn at the Food Services School when he ate there.

In addition, BGen. Sisley reviewed plans for the proposed new School of Infantry and other proposals for ranges and training areas for the next few years, according to Speicher.

Brigadier General Frederick E. Sisley (left), deputy chief of staff for training, Headquarters Marine Corps, plans his moves for his visit here, Sept. 10-11, while Colonel John A. Speicher, assistant chief of staff, training and operations, Marine Corps Base, looks on. The purpose of Sisley's visit was to observe training facilities and techniques available to Lejeune Marines. NEWSBRIEFS

Smokers' course

The Division Surgeon's Office is offering Smoking Education classes to all commanders and will schedule classes around the individual needs of each unit.

According to a Division Surgeon's Office Blue Letter, the program is intended to help Marines and sailors who smoke to determine how their habit contributes to their personal risk of lung cancer and other tobacco-related diseases.

The letter also stresses that, in most cases, once smokers give up cigarettes, their risk of lung cancer begins to steadily decrease until it approaches that of a person who has never smoked.

Classes available to smokers are:

A 30-minute General Military Training lecture on the hazards of smoking.

A Fresh Start Quit Smoking Program which consists of four one hour classes over a two week period which is sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

For more information commanders can call Petty Officer Third Class Patrick H. Kelley, Division Surgeon's Education and Training section at 451-1062.

Dystrophy carnival

The Cub Scouts of America, Pack 319, Jacksonville, will host a Muscular Dystrophy carnival adjacent to Lauradale Apartments at the intersection of Gum Branch Road and Aragona Street from 2-5 p.m., Sept. 27.

Various game booths, clowns and horse rides will add to the fun of the event. Also present will be representatives of the Jacksonville Rescue Squad and Police Department.

For more information on the carnival, call GySgt. Giltner at 451-3600/1508.

Policy changed

The Navy Medical Department has announced a change in the process by which Civilian Medical Facilities will be reimbursed for Emergency Treatment rendered to active duty personnel. As of October 1, the active duty member must submit itemized bills from the Civilian Medical facility to the appropriate Office of Medical Affairs (OMA). The Patient Administration Department of the Naval Hospital, Camp Lejeune will assist the active duty member in the completion of claim forms and answer any questions.

Emergency episodes covered by this process are those in which the active duty Navy/Marine Corps member is injured or suffers a sudden illness and a Uniform Treatment Facility is not immediately available. The member would then be treated at a civilian facility. (An example: A Marine is injured in a car wreck while home on leave and is taken to a civilian hospital). Medical care which is not of an emergency nature and which is provided to active duty personnel must be approved in advance. If non-emergency care is not approved by OMA in advance, the claim may be denied and the costs incurred will become the responsibility of the active duty member.

For assistance or additional information call 451-4101.

Shotgun zeroing

Shotgun and black powder zeroing will be held at Range F-5 off Hwy. 24 East, Sept. 27, Oct. 4 and Oct. 11 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Only shotguns will be fired on Oct. 11.

Shotguns will be fired at 35 and 50 meters; blackpowder at 50 and 100 meters.

The range will supply targets, but all other supplies must be brought by shooters. This service is offered to all active duty and retired Marines, dependents and their guests.

For further information, contact Mastery Gunnery Sergeant Mansfield at 451-5803.

Inpatient care changed

Beginning October 1, Naval Hospital, Camp Lejeune, will begin billing the private insurance companies of active duty dependents, retirees, retiree dependents and survivors of retirees when these individuals receive inpatient care in the Naval Hospital. Local officials point out, however, this action will not result in any increase in cost for these beneficiaries.

This action was mandated by Public Law 99-272 (10 U.S. Code 1095) and enacted by Congress on April 7. This law applies only to inpatient care—that care given to patients admitted to the hospital. The law also states that in those cases where the patient's insurance plan requires a co-payment or deductible from the patient, the insurance company is to pay the amount billed, but to deduct the amount of the co-payment or deductible. If the patient receives a bill from his/her insurance company for inpatient care at the Naval Hospital, the beneficiary should advise the company that public law 99-172 does not allow such billing.

Insurance industry officials have been fully briefed on the provisions of this law by Department of Defense officials. When one of the beneficiary groups listed above is to be admitted to the Naval Hospital, they must bring with them the following information:

- (1) Name of Insurance Company
- (2) Address of the Insurance Company
- (3) Policy Number
- (4) Date policy began, was amended, or renewed.

Any further questions can be addressed to the Patient Administration Department at the Hospital, Camp Lejeune, 451-4101.

Battery training improves Marine, artillery abilities

Story by Sgt. A. A. Brush

The stillness of the black, noiseless night was suddenly shattered by the thundering noise of the guns as the illumination rounds turned the battle field into day.

"We're training to be prepared for the Marine Corps Combat Readiness Evaluation Standard (MCCRES) we'll have in October. We'll be tested on our performance with the M109A3 self-propelled 155mm Howitzer. The evaluation is taken as a battalion, but we can't train very easily in such a large group here so it's essential we train at battery level," said Captin Phillip W. Beck, commanding officer, Oscar Battery, 5th Battalion, 10th Marine Regiment, 2d Marine Division.

The Marines have practiced everything, including running patrols, throwing grenades, operating crew-served weapons, and direct and indirect firing of the howitzer.

Training as a battery is to their advantage, according to Beck. In a combat situation a battery would be responsible for its own security and everything that goes on within its area.

"When we arrived here, I went out in advance patrol to help secure the battery position. The road guards were set up. Now I'm at the gun recording the mission and keeping track of the rounds," said Lance Corporal Marc A. Holloway, gun guide.

The communications team, fire direction control (FDC) section and the gun crew got plenty of opportunity to do their jobs during indirect firing using high explosive and white phosphorus rounds during the day and illumination rounds at night.

The communication Marines were hard at work bringing the positions together. "I find the things we're doing out here, like running the wire to all the positions and actually doing our job, exciting," said Lance Corporal Andy Vazquez, wireman.

"The comm. section is very important because without it, nothing would happen. A round can't even go in the chamber if comm. is not up to transfer the information to the other positions," said Gunnery Sergeant Robert Croxton, communications chief.

Communication makes it possible for the forward observers to pass the missions to FDC who then compute the data and call the missions to the gun line.

"We all work together, here, in this truck in order to get the job done. We're the computers; we take all the information and use the calculators to plot the target on the chart," said Lance Corporal Kenneth J. Hartsock.

Long before the first round can be fired, the gun crew Marines get quite a workout in preparation for the firing. They have the chore of unloading powder canisters and 95-pound rounds from trucks and setting them up in an orderly, easy-to-reach manner.

"It's hard work but it prepares us for real combat situations. We'll be ready and used to expecting anything to happen," said Private First Class Jim L. Smith, gunner.

Once the call comes from FDC with the correct deflection and quadrant the round is loaded and fired upon command. Throughout the process of firing, the crew constantly rids the area of safety hazards.

"This is great training and very beneficial for the troops. It's really the only way they can learn their job," said Sergeant Clark E. Newcomb, gun crew section leader.

"In this preparation for the MCCRES we're increasing our combat readiness and proficiency of technical and tactical skills. We can talk about it in the classroom, but it's essential to actually perform our mission," said Beck.

Marine/Air Force exercise puts personnel, equipment on mark

Story by PFC K. J. Bloomer

Look! Up in the sky! It's a bird! It's a plane! It's . . . It's . . . Beach and Port Company? Yes!

Marines from Air Delivery Platoon, Beach and Port Company, 2d Landing Support Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group, made a successful combat jump with full gear at Drop Zone Falcon recently. Six cargo delivery systems (CDS) bundles were also dropped onto the DZ as part of the operation.

"This is a joint exercise between the Air Force and the Marines," explained Major J. H. Parker, commanding officer of Beach and Port Company. "The Air Force provides the pilots and the bird, a C-141, and we provide the equipment, jumpers and a jumpmaster. It's good training for us and for the Air Force. They have to stay proficient with dropping air cargo and personnel."

The CDS bundles, weighing about 1,500 pounds each, were dropped with G-12 cargo parachutes.

During the operation the CDS bundles contained tires, but during combat the bundles could contain medical supplies, MRE's, water, ammo, or fuel.

"We can drop almost anything the grunts would need," said Parker. "When we have to get supplies to the troops, we use CDS drops. The drop was very successful today; the bundles were all together in the DZ. You couldn't ask for a better drop."

After the CDS bundles were dropped, the C-141 made three more passes over the DZ and 22 jumpers were dropped.

"Everything went just fine," commented Lance Corporal Taylor English, a jumper. "It was a success. When everybody lives and no one is hurt . . . that's a success."

The jump went smoothly; all three sticks of jumpers avoided the surrounding trees and made safe landings.

"It was great . . . but it was just another day's work. This is what we do. Jump out of planes," said jumper Lance Corporal Doug Cartwright.

Marines show each other the ropes.

Having friends who look out for you and who you look out for in return comes with being a Marine. Simply put, you count on the Marine next to you.

The sense of community you experience as a Marine isn't duplicated in the civilian world. It's more or less every man and woman for themselves. Which only makes sense when you think about it. After all, they don't have that much in common. They've never gone through tough training together. Very few have had to show their inner fortitude in difficult situations.

And those are probably some of the reasons why Marines have the pride they do. In themselves, their families, their Corps and country. Marines have a lot of experiences and training in common. Think about that if you're thinking about becoming a civilian.

You can count on the Corps.

STAY MARINE.

OPERATION BUSHMASTERS

Medical students practice skills

Story by Sgt. A. A. Brush

Medical students of the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, Bethesda, MD participated in Operation Bushmasters to practice their clinical skills in a chemically contaminated environment here recently.

"No other school in the country does this type of exercise. This school produces one fifth of the Navy, Army and Air Force physicians. We try to expose them to the situation before they graduate and start working with servicemen," said Army Colonel Ronald D. Bellamy, vice chairman of the Department of Military Medicine. "Our main object is to show the students how complex and difficult it is to work in such a situation. They also have to learn to protect themselves against a chemical attack."

In the scenario, contaminated patients were rushed to medical stations at Combat Town, where students quickly sorted the casualties according to their degree of injury and began decontaminating them. At one station, life-saving measures were performed. They treated one patient suffering from a sucking chest wound by placing a sealed cover over his chest.

"Now that we have eliminated the immediate injury, he can go on to another station and we can continue to work on life-threatening injuries," said Ensign Ralph Jones, team leader. "This is very good training because we have to be prepared for any type of situation. It's important to practice, because it will prevent problems in real situations and will help us save people's lives."

After the patients were treated at the "front line," they were carried on litters by medical students to stations where their specific problems could be handled.

As some students worked on the chest wound, another started an IV on the patient's leg. "His hands are compromised by burns, but he needs fluids. Out here we're doing what ever it takes to save lives," said Ensign Jonathan E. Cayle.

One complication that probably aided them in getting a different perspective was working in full MOPP (chemical protective gear) because they were gassed during their training, according to Army Captain Kim D. Mansfield, officer-in-charge of Operation Bushmasters.

"This is a real interesting part of their training. At our school we're responsible for not only ensuring they graduate as doctors, but also as good officers. It's a real challenge to meld their clinical skills with officer skills," said Mansfield.

The students participating in Operation Bushmasters will graduate next year and will work in military hospitals and medical units.

"We're playing the roles of corpsmen and troops as well as doctors, getting an appreciation for what they do. In the future, when we work with them we might think twice before giving some orders. We'll know what it's like to carry a litter in full MOPP gear," said Cayle.

Clothing sales prices to change effective Oct. 1

Globe Staff Report

Military Clothing Store officials say the price for some Marine Corps uniforms will rise Oct. 1. Cash sales will be closed Sept. 27-30 for inventory, leaving Marines at Camp Lejeune just two days to take advantage of 1986 prices.

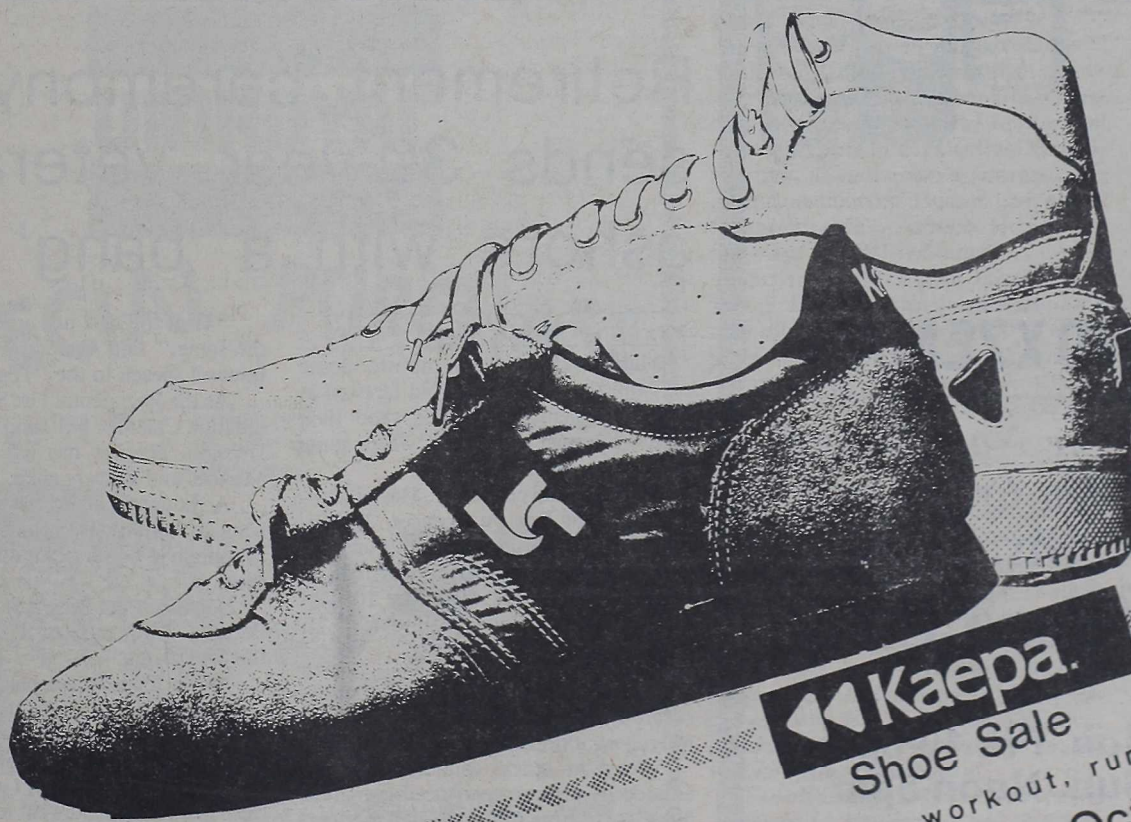

While the uniforms will be carried in a less-expensive duffel bag ($11.20), items such as the men's all-weather coat and both men's and women's green "alpha" uniform coats take dramatic jumps in cost.

The all-weather coat for men will jump to $54.60, a change of $15.97. The wool dress jackets will rise 5.25 to $70.50 for men and the polyester jacket take a 7.11 increase to $56.30.

For women, the wool coat will cost $11.45 more at $61.80 and the polyester version jumps $5.85 to $46.

Some uniform items will cost less, although the price change isn't as drastic as most increases. A complete listing of uniform price changes follows:

Retirement ceremony sends 30-year veteran ashore with a 'bang'

Story by Sgt. Ray D. Adams

Marines retire every month. Some leave quietly, while others bid farewell at joint retirement ceremonies. And then there are special ceremonies where some retire with a bang.

In an unusual ceremony, Master Gunnery Sergeant Roy A. Spencer, 3d Battalion, 10th Marines, closed the final chapter of his 30-year career by firing one of the tools of his trade...a 105mm howitzer, at Lucky's Mound (OP-2), recently.

"I had to inhale one last puff of smoke before I retired," said Spencer, a 14-year veteran of 10th Marines.

The short, stocky cannon-cocker was assisted by a very experienced gun crew. Nine staff noncommissioned officers from 3/10, with more than 178 years of combined artillery experience, had a hand in his grand finale.

"It's exciting to know that my unit went out of their way for me," he said. "They're giving me my roses while I'm still alive and I appreciate that."

Nearly 100 co-workers and friends went out of their way for Spencer, along with the 2d Marine Division Band and 2d Marine Division's commanding general, Major General Dennis J. Murphy.

"Trips to OP-2 just aren't going to be the same," said General Murphy in his farewell speech to the "Top."

As the Regimental Fire Support Coordination Chief for 3/10 and the 2d Marine Division, Spencer has left his mark on Marines and soldiers alike.

A mountain at Fort Bragg, N.C. has been affectionately renamed Spencer's Mountain in honor of his 41 training visits there.

Sergeant Paul Brown of Headquarters Battery, 3/10, spoke of the Top's influence on him.

"At a lot of these hail and fairwells you wonder 'is he really that good?' It's true about this Marine... he's my hero... he's like my dad in the Marine Corps. I remember when I was three days from getting out and went to say goodbye to Top and he talked me into reupping for six more. I trust him with my life," said Brown.

"Whenever I've worked with people I tried to teach them what I was doing or what I know so in case something happened they would be able to take over," said Spencer.

Master Gunnery Sergeant Spencer has left his mark on many people and places. He should be remembered for how he served and how he retired... with a bang.

Controlling Stress—

Basic rules of controlling stress the right way, such as BECOME AWARE OF YOUR ROLE IN YOUR OWN LIFE—are the same for everyone.

Take responsibility for your own life. Millions of people hate their jobs, yet do nothing to change. If a miserable job, or a miserably anything, is killing you, the time to get out or get control is now.

Learn to work with others. Be a coper rather than a moper. Adopt the attitude that "I can win. I can achieve."

Learn how to play. Make sure your play is free and spontaneous, not forced or compulsive. Happy adults always seem to have something of the child in them. Why not indulge a fantasy and take a spur-of-the-moment trip, or buy an outlandish outfit, just for yourself? You are worth it!

Story by Sgt. Burt Carey

A book entitled, "How to Toss a Salad in a Light Armored Vehicle," has been getting raves here, especially at the 2d Marine Division.

Corporal Keith Hudson, the book's author, won the Division's Chef of the Quarter competition here recently.

Actually, Hudson, 2d Light Armored Vehicle Battalion, isn't another author who tosses salads in armored vehicles, but he is the Division's best chef for the final quarter of 1986. Major General Dennis J. Murphy, the division's commanding general, announced Hudson the winner following a cook-off between Hudson and two other 2d MarDiv Marines.

Arriving at Mess Hall 122 at 3 a.m. Sept. 9, Hudson began preparations for a tasty dish of chicken ala king that would settle the palate of commanders, sergeants major and other high-ranking officials who voted on the outcome of the competition.

"They've all taken a lot of time to prepare for these meals," said Master Gunnery Sergeant Frank Lussier, the division food technician. "Everything they're doing here is on a Marine Corps recipe card. They select the products they want to make and select a menu to go around it."

Competing against Hudson were Corporal James Jackson and Private First Class Steven Greenwood. Jackson was representing the 2d Marine Regiment Headquarters and Greenwood the 2d Reconnaissance Battalion.

The original group of chefs competing numbered 15, but Hudson said he got an early jump on his competition by receiving high marks during a food service oral test board made up of regimental mess sergeants and Lussier. The board weeded the field to three finalists.

Hudson scored the highest marks on a written examination, part two of the three-phase competition.

His final test, the chicken ala king, was surrounded by homemade dinner rolls, noodles, and vegetables—all neatly arranged with culinary garnishments added to enhance the meal's appearance. His centerpiece was an ice carving of an 18-inch swan.

"Most of the people who come to judge are just looking for the appearance," said Lussier during the competition. "Most of them aren't food service oriented, so they don't know the little details—the nuts and bolts of culinary arts."

To ensure that the expert adjudication was included, Division Food Services Officer, Chief Warrant Officer-3 Lloyd Lee, invited members of the East Coast Food Management Team and food service personnel from the 2d Force Service Support Group and Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune, to view and taste the extraordinary cuisine.

Judges were asked to consider each Marine's appearance, how much initiative he displayed, the garnishings presented and the food's palatability.

"Chicken ala king isn't on the master menu any more," said Hudson as he prepared his meal's noodles. "I just followed the recipe card and made it the same as I would any other menu."

His chocolate cake was the talk of the mess hall as judges, cooks and Marines eating lunch commented on its luscious coverings: whipped topping covered with chocolate chips.

"I just try to take advantage of the experience I have and techniques I've seen in the last five years," Hudson added before lunch was served. Now he will have a chance to practice his technique during a two-week course at the Johnson and Wales Culinary Arts College in New York, pending his availability from the 2d AAV Bn dining facility duties.

Staff Sergeant Charles Henry, 2d LAV's mess chief, said he doesn't see why Hudson can't attend the course. "We'll find a way to send him up there," he said.

Hudson will also receive a trophy and a commendation from MGen. Murphy. Jackson and Greenwood will receive Meritorious Masts from their respective commands.

Corpsman discovers suggestions pay off

Story by Sgt. Al Vaughan

A 2d Force Service Support Group sailor found that making a good suggestion pays off.

Petty Officer First Class Ricky L. Stiverson, a hospital corpsman with Hospital Company, 2d Medical Battalion, received $700 at a group meeting for his suggestion on reutilizing expired drugs. His effort followed a path through miles of red tape that had been too much for anyone to penetrate and ended with the transfer of expired 6506 class VIII Medicinals to veterinary schools for animal research.

"I came about my suggestion while in charge of destroying expired drugs here," said Stiverson. "At that time there was no written procedure for disposing of expired drugs. We were permitted to destroy them at the landfill on base and we destroyed about $150,000 of expired drugs per quarter. However, because of storage constraints, here, we shipped over $489,000 of expired drugs to Marine Corps Logistics Base, Albany Ga. where they couldn't be destroyed due to environmental laws. That created a storage problem at Albany and other DoD installations.

Instead of taking a negative attitude about the problem and complaining to his superiors, Stiverson researched the problem for a solution. During his research the 36-year-old native of Decatur, Ill. found that bases without permission to destroy expired drugs had to stockpile them until a contractor was found to destroy them. He also said he discovered that USDA research projects were sometimes cut because they couldn't obtain certain drugs on their budget.

"I jumbled these facts around in my head until I came up with an idea that would solve everyone's problem," said Stiverson. "Once I worked out all the bugs, I got the order concerning the Navy Beneficial Suggestion Program and submitted my idea."

Stiverson stated in his proposal that his idea would reduce the cost of hazardous material disposal contracts for expired drugs, and reduce the storage problem of expired drugs. The idea would also supplement the USDA projects budget by allowing them to obtain drugs that may be too costly for their budget and reduce labor and material cost.

His suggestion: destroy the drugs here. After putting so much research into his idea, Stiverson said that he followed it through every phase to see if it was approved or not.

"By the time I was told I had won the money reward I already had a good idea that I had," said Stiverson.

Instead of spending the money on himself, however, Stiverson said he was going to use it for another idea he had been thinking about: making his family's Christmas a special one.

Professionalism: key to food service quality

Story by Sgt. D. K. Holl

When several staff noncommissioned officers meet at Camp Johnson's Staff Noncommissioned Officers Food Service Course, the students not only gain the knowledge of how to be a mess hall manager, they spend a great deal of time stressing their professionalism as a Marine, and how to instill those professional qualities into their troops.

"Professionalism is what it's all about for us," said 1st Lieutenant Dan P. Spino, Academics Officer, Food Service School. "I spent from 1974-1979 on the drill field and this school is the only place since recruit training where instructors will make a bigger impact or have more influence on students concerning their overall outlook on the Marine Corps. Everything we do here is to make the food for a serviceman better and help each Marine to be a Marine in every sense—totally professional."

Professionalism is stressed to the SNCO's from the first day of the course, beginning at 5 a.m. Throughout the nine-week course, the students, who range from staff sergeants to master sergeants, learn the most up-to-date techniques in food preparation and baking in garrison and in the field. Much of the course is spent on administration and the management of a mess hall. In order to graduate, the students must pass a variety of tests covering everything from paperwork to knowing several spices by their scents and appearance, and the detailed decorating of a cake.

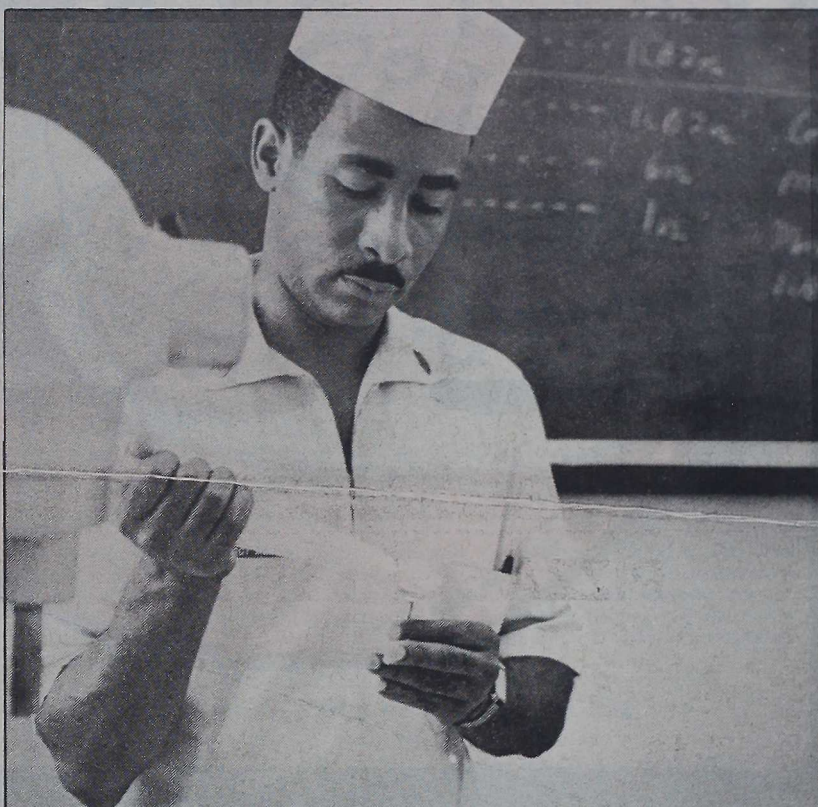

"For many of the students, the baking phase is the toughest because most of them are not bakers by MOS (Military occupational specialty). Before they leave here, they must be able to look at an item, such as a cake or pie or loaf of bread, and be able to tell exactly what is wrong with it. For example, they must know how an ingredient like salt can affect a food item," said Gunnery Sergeant Steven E. Kelley, who has been a baker instructor at the school since 1979. "It's that sort of attention to detail that we insist on here so these SNCO's can return to their work section with the same philosophy."

The course is not a one-time school. Several Marines take the course as junior SNCO's and then come back four or five years later to refresh themselves on the latest techniques.

"This is a great overall course. The baking has been the most difficult, but fun phase for me because I'm not a baker.

"But since SNCO's are required to know both the cooking and baking sides of the house I need to learn what I can, here, to teach at my mess hall," said Staff Sergeant Mike Wilson, assistant mess chief at Messhall 325.

"Food Service is truly a special field to be in as a Marine. It's a small field, with only about 40 officers, so we all know each other and have watched each other's careers since the beginning. The most unique point is that every food service officer, except for two women Marines, is prior enlisted, so we all really understand what the privates' lives are really like," said Spino.

Staff Sergeant Ken Moreno, baker instructor, demonstrates to students how to make a rose garnish for a cake. (Photo by Sgt. D. K. Holl)

The basic idea of the extreme professionalism and attention to detail for the Food Service Marines goes back to a very simple concept. "We try to take care of our Marines so they can take care of the Marines they serve," said Spino.

"It doesn't matter if a Marine is served outstanding meals 364 days a year. The only one that really counts is the last one. That's the one the Marine remembers."

1/2 Marines get 'roped' into mountain warfare

Story by Sgt. Burt Carey

MOUNTAIN WARFARE TRAINING CENTER, Bridgeport, Calif.—Small patches of snow covered the mountains to the south as Marines of the 1st Battalion, 2d Marines, 2d Marine Division, prepared to lower a comrade with a simulated injury to the valley floor. Two Marines scaled the steep rock face carrying the wounded Marine in their arms, their own safety only secured by an orchestration of ropes, rock and two wooden poles nearly 30 feet above.

The task wasn't simple, but these Marines don't expect anything to come easy in the Toiyabe National Forest. They have proudly distinguished themselves as the leaders of the infantry battalion in the practice of mountain warfare.

This is all part of the Assault Climbers course presented by instructors at the Marine Corps Mountain Warfare Training Center, normally a playground for vacationing civilians, but also a 46,000-acre piece of real estate used to teach Marines the basics of mountaineering.

Unlike regular, battalion-sized training packages taught here, the Assault Climbers course is for the elite of each of the 11 battalions that train here annually. While the remainder of the battalion continues with an extended core (basic) training evolution, these 32 Marines and one Navy corpsman have been distinguished as the unit's experts.

If a real contingency requires travel through or fighting in mountainous regions, these 33 servicemembers will lead the battalion over steep gorges, up and down cliffs and help with medical evacuation operations.

"This type of training is very important to have in case we go to war," said Corporal Barry Middleton, a Queens, N.Y., native. "If we have to do an assault or medevac somebody out, I'm proud to say that I know how to do all of this."

Another student in the course, 20-year-old Lance Corporal Jeff Barnett, used part of his chow time to reflect on his Columbia, Tenn., home. "I've been in the mountains back home, but I've never rappelled or anything like this," he said. "There's really not a lot of difference between the mountains except that these are a little colder and have a lot more cliffs."

And it's on those cliffs the students are learning the importance of knowing how to tie 12 different knots in ropes, how to climb sheer rock walls, build A-frame hoists and braces and how to medevac injured personnel.

"(The students) would actually be the lead echelon in mountain warfare environments," said one of the course's two instructors, Sergeant Ken Harrington. "They were all selected by their battalion—they're the elite climbers, the ones who showed the most motivation, knowledge and ability to learn during the initial core package."

At least one of those elite started from scratch. "Before I got here I was excited and, in a way, scared," admitted Lance Corporal Gerald Short, a 21-year-old Pennsylvanian. "I was scared because I'd never climbed anything like this before. Now it's easy. You just have to know how to grab hold and hold on. Once you get used to it, you're all right."

"I'll use this as a training aid to help teach new Marines coming into the battalion who have never been through this before," he said.

Another flatlander, Houston, Texas, native Lance Corporal K. C. Wooten, said, "Being an assault climber and being in STA (Situation and Target Acquisition) Platoon gives me greater opportunities for working in other high-speed operations and training. I've learned more in a period of a few days here than in months at other training bases, including Panama, Camp Pendleton (Calif.) and Korea."

Give credit for that to the instructors. "The instructors look like they're pretty experienced," added Barnett, an Alpha Company Marine. "The way they present the classes is real good. We can all understand exactly what they're talking about and that speeds up the training."

"If you would have told me a year ago that today I would be climbing steep rocks and cliffs without ropes or anything, I wouldn't have believed you," he said. "All of this is really hard to comprehend until you do it."

SPORTSMAN OF THE WEEK

JAMES D. COLE

Story by LCpl. V. S. Bode

It doesn't take a professional football player or coach to see outstanding talent on the gridiron. It can be seen in intramural sports, here, as well.

James D. Cole, Corrections Company, Support Battalion, Marine Corps Base, displays such talent on the Support Battalion's football team. The team's quarterback, Cole has passed for six touchdowns covering 317 yards. He also competed 19 passes out of 27, while running in two touchdowns himself.

"He's an inspiration to the rest of the team and does whatever it takes to win," said assistant coach Darryl L. Perkins, Support Company, Support Battalion.

Cole, 23, from Towson, Md., attended Dulaney High School where he played for the high school football team for three years. In his senior year, he was offered a scholarship to Canton Junior College in Maryland, but turned it down to join the Marines. His quarterbacking career didn't begin until he joined the Support Battalion three years ago.

Besides football, Cole enjoys basketball. He played on Support Battalion intramural softball team this summer.

"We're looking forward to playing in the Turkey Bowl in November," Cole said. "As long as we keep our defense alive, there'll be no stopping this quarterback can only perform as well as his defense and offense permits."

"Sportsman of the Week" is a regular column for the Globe. The names of athletes that could be considered good sportsmen should be submitted to LCpl. Bode, Sports editor of the Globe at 451-5655/5782.

10th Marines' J. W. Zanders blocks a punt in the Cannoneers 38-26 win over Headquarters Battalion, Marine Corps Base. (Photo by LCpl. V. S. Bode)

Cannoneers triumph Bruisers turn blue

Story by LCpl. V. S. Bode

It wasn't Headquarters Battalion, Marine Corps Base's night as the 10th Marine Regiment football team literally crushed them 38-26 in the Red League, Monday.

The Cannoneers from 10th Marines took charge from the start, jumping to a 7-0 lead after just four plays. The score came on a 35-yard touchdown pass to 6-foot-1-inch, L. White.

Marine Corps Base's Bruisers, unable to move the ball, were forced to punt.

In the next set of plays, White scored again, turning a five-yard pass into a 40-yard touchdown.

The Bruisers couldn't break the ice cubes loose as their next punt was blocked because of a bad snap. It gave the Cannoneers good position at midfield. A face mask penalty by Base then moved the Cannoneers to the 30-yard line. The Cannoneers K. L. Lee, capitalizing on the penalty, rushed in for six points.

With a 21-0 first quarter lead, the Cannoneers were stopped and the kicking team brought on. Field Goal kicker, C. A. Reina, sent it through the uprights for three points.

Time was beginning to run out in the half, when the Bruisers got on the board. The Bruisers bulldozed their way in from the two-yard line and on a quarterback sneak got the two-point conversion.

Base's defense toughened as the Cannoneers remained scoreless until the quarter.

The third quarter was filled with mistakes. The ball was turned over three times, three times in a row.

It wasn't until five minutes remained in the third quarter, that the Cannoneers regrouped and began to move the ball. Kenneth D. Ellison received a 40-yard pass to bring the Cannoneers to the Bruiser's five-yard line. The opportunity was not turned down as Tucker ran it in for his second touchdown.

The Cannoneers turned right and R. E. West intercepted a Bruiser at the Bruiser's 40-yard line. On the play, Lee weaved his way down the field to score his second of the night.

Minutes were flying by for the Cannoneers as they faced a 38-8 deficit. During the fourth quarter, Base punched in two touchdowns, but missed the two-point conversion on each.

Base scored at the three-minute mark and at the two-minute warning the Bruisers were knocking at the Cannoneers' door. Base's Paul Francis led the Bruisers for another Bruiser touchdown.

With no chance of winning, the Bruisers kept the desire alive, and thirty seconds left in the game, six minutes to end the fight, 38-26. The Bruisers started too late to catch the charging Cannoneers.

Cobras' Kris Kinnemore tries to slice the ball away from a Bulldog player in Saturday morning's match-up. The two teams remain tied for first place in Division 6. (Photo by LCpl. V. S. Bode)

Young booters seize the field

Story by LCpl. V. Bode

No one had to look for the excitement Saturday morning at the Stone Street Elementary School soccer field, where young Division 6 soccer players were out to show their stuff. The energy and spirit of the 4 and 5-year-olds only magnified their spectacular performance.

It was pandemonium from the start when Cobras' Kris Kinnemore, 5, booted in the first goal at the five minute mark. The ball was moved slowly up and down the field hidden amongst flinging arms and legs. At the end of the first half, however, the score was still 1-0 Cobras.

It must have been the fruit slices and orange kool-aid that boosted the morale of the Bulldogs during halftime. Recharged, the Bulldogs, with orange tinted lips, took the field with a determined "grrrrrrrr."

"The hardest part to coaching children this age is trying to keep their attention long enough to teach them something," said Cobras' coach Anita C. Marcantel. "All we can do is teach them the basic skills and rules of the game."

The second half was filled with emotion for players and parents. Dressed in their teams colored sweats moms and dads paced up and down field screaming directions and cheering their tired players on.

It wasn't until the third quarter the tempers began to flare—that is for coaches and parents. The Bulldog Eugene Lietz was clotheslined and crowd went crazy.

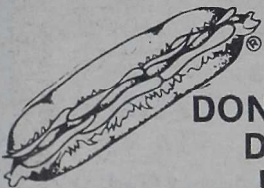

It was this incident that set up a quick kick for the Bulldogs. The kick was blocked and Bulldogs' Michael Swenck recovered the ball to score, tying the game 1-1.

Outstanding performances by Cobras' goalie, David Blake, 5, and Bulldog goalie, Harold Nyholm, 5, kept the minutes scoreless, ending the game with a 1-1 tie.

Both teams remain tied for first place with a record of 2-0-1.

In another Division 6 game, the Bulldogs stomped the Chiefs 6-0 with goals by Nowlin, Gene Macall, and Stevie Stone. The Hawks beat the Bears in a close game in Division 5. The winning goal was shot by Shawn Marose, 7.
