Beirut Memorial construction underway

Story by Sgt. Paul S. Younghaus

Construction recently began on the granite, brick and concrete memorial for Marines, sailors and soldiers killed in Beirut.

Exactly two years after the bomb blast at the 24th Marine Amphibious Unit headquarters, the final phase of the Beirut Memorial will be finished. In early November 1983, shortly after the Oct. 23 bombing which claimed the lives of more than 200 Marines and sailors, the Memorial project was begun.

In March 1984 the Jacksonville Beautification commission completed the first phase of the memorial with the planting of 265 Bradford pear trees along the median of Lejeune Blvd.

Funds for the pear trees and the memorial plaza at the entrance of Camp Johnson have continued to arrive at the beautification commission since late 1983. Almost $8,000 was spent on the trees for Lejeune Boulevard and another $148,000 is being spent on the memorial plaza.

Originally, the beautification commission had wanted to complete the memorial plaza by Oct. 23, 1984, but not enough money had been collected by that time. Sufficient funds were collected earlier this year, and with the late May ground-breaking ceremonies, the final phase of the Beirut Memorial Project was underway.

During the past month the plaza has begun to take shape. Last week the concrete walls, which will hold the six granite panels bearing the 269 names of Beirut and Grenada casualties, was poured. The parking area, the trail to the memorial plaza and the plaza itself have all been started.

"This is going along as well as could be expected," said Abe Rosen, chairman of the Beirut Memorial Task Force. "We will dedicate this site Oct. 23. Hopefully the granite panels with the inscriptions will be done by then."

"Our contract gives us until Nov. 4 to complete this site," said Woody Myers, vice-president of Onslow Construction and Utilities Company, the firm building the memorial. "We should have our part of the work completed well in advance of the Oct. 23 dedication."

According to Myers, there will be about 12 construction workers at a time working on this project. He said that his company is committed to doing the best it can on this project.

"I think that everyone who has donated something to this project, whether they donated five cents or $500, will be proud when it is completed," Myers said. "Our people are proud of being on this project, we bid this job at cost so we could build this memorial. But everyone who has had a part in this project will be able to say they remember those who gave their lives and that they care."

Fitrep schedule changed

Last year the first changes to the performance and evaluation system went into effect. One of those changes reduced the frequency of fitness reports from once a year to annually. Recently ALMAR 170-86 outlined new fitness reporting dates to correspond with the change in selection board dates.

Although submission of your own fitness report is no longer your responsibility, they can be tracked through your master brief sheet which contains a chronological listing of all fitness reports entered into the system. The brief sheets are sent out monthly, based on the last digit of your Social Security number. Marines entering the promotion zone will also receive a copy of their official military personnel file eight to 10 months before the selection board convenes.

The OMPF is a microfiche copy of documents essential to a Marine's career, and is the primary record used by selection board members. It's in your own interest, especially if you're in the promotion zone, to be sure that your reporting senior is aware of the new deadlines.

UPDATE

6th MAB Leathernecks celebrate anniversary

Story by SSgt. Hugh Hawthorne

Marines and sailors celebrated the 6th Marine Amphibious Brigade's third anniversary with a ceremony, July 29.

Held in conjunction with the anniversary celebration was the retirement ceremony for 6th MAB's Chief of Staff, Colonel Donald A. Hodgen. During the ceremony he received the Legion of Merit for exceptionally outstanding service as Chief of Staff.

Since its latest activation July 26, 1983, the 6th MAB has become the first Marine Air Ground Task Force to use the maritime prepositioning concept of deployment. Nearly 4,000 Marines and sailors from Camp Lejeune and other east coast bases deployed with the MAB to Florida, in March, for Maritime Prepositioned Force Exercise Agile Sword-86.

"Marines and sailors of the headquarters, what you have accomplished in the last three years won't be done by any other organization in a long time, if ever," said Looney. He listed their accomplishments, which include loading the four ships of the first active Maritime Prepositioning Ships squadron, and participating in exercises Bright Star-85, Agile Sword-86, and Ocean Venture-84 and -86.

BGen. Looney also extended his appreciation for support and assistance provided by the 2d Marine Division, 2d Marine Aircraft Wing and 2d Force Service Support Group. Those commands provide the ground combat element, aviation combat element, and combat service support elements, respectively, which flesh out the MAGTF during exercises and operations.

HEALTHWATCH Protect your skin

Story by Lts Paul M. Blose NC, and Mary Hartman, MC, USN

The summer sun can be loads of fun, but that same glowing orange ball can cause quite a bit of pain and suffering. For many people, the summer sun can cause significant burning and premature aging of the skin as well as various forms of skin cancer.

People with different skin types react in different ways to the effects of the sun's ultraviolet rays. Those with fair complexions (blonds or redheads) usually cannot tolerate prolonged exposure, while those people with a slightly darker skin type can be out in the sun a bit longer before the harmful effects take place.

For many of us, a little sun can go a long way toward causing redness and pain. A good suntan lotion with a sun protection factor of 15 will block almost all of the ultraviolet burning rays and give a great deal of protection. This SPF means you can go out in the sun for 15 hours and get as burned as you would have in 1 hour without the lotion. In reality the protection is not quite that good and these lotions need to be re-applied if you are out in the sun for more than 2-4 hours or if you are swimming or perspiring heavily. These lotions only block the burning rays and you can still tan while you use a high SPF sunscreen.

Small children and older people also have less built-in protection from the sun and shouldn't be over-exposed. Everyone has probably seen a child in a stroller who has been obviously sunburned and is fussing because he doesn't understand why he feels so bad.

There are some people who can not tolerate being exposed to the sun for even short periods of time because their skin reacts rather violently to even a brief exposure. These people should wear a SPF 15 sunscreen every time they are outside in the sun and consider extra clothing protection such as long sleeved shirts and hats.

Starting sunscreens in infancy can avoid permanent skin damage, skin cancers and prevent developing large numbers of moles. As we get older we lose our ability to tan and burn more easily.

Remember, there is no cure for sunburn and most of the available remedies can only help decrease some of the burning pain and keep the skin from drying out quite so quickly. It's much better to pay a little more attention first than to suffer later. Let's all enjoy ourselves this summer, and not let the summer sun spoil our fun.

New computer system makes dollars, sense for disbursing Marines

Story by Sgt. Ray D. Adams

A one-of-a-kind computer system that saves time, space and money is now being used by the Base Disbursing Office here.

For the past three months the disbursing office has run more effectively with the use of a Kodak Systems KAR 4400 (computer assisted retrieval system).

"The KAR system is the only one of its kind in the Marine Corps," said Joe Caron, operations officer of the Base Disbursing office. "There are other retrieval systems being used in the Corps but they don't have the capabilities this one does."

"The time it takes a voucher to be completed from beginning to end has been cut in half," said Caron. "The old process was long and very redundant."

Retyping names, social security numbers and voucher numbers was common with the old system, and attempting to find a voucher in the files could be a trying process.

The new system takes only minutes to process a voucher. The voucher is the photographed and put on microfiche for quick retrieval.

"With all the time saved it has freed our clerks to work on the additional 1,000 accounts we recently picked up from Cherry Point," Caron said.

With the use of small microfiche tape the size of a wallet, space is no problem. The KAR system can also print checks and reports.

From the reports, data can be checked to prevent paying interest payments. When the government owes a vendor money and doesn't pay by a certain date, interest payments have to be made. The reports have that date on them and can be checked on a daily basis, thus preventing those penalty payments.

"In the near future we will be able to make other payments, such as joins and separations," said Caron.

Center offers a stop for moving families

Story by Sgt. D. K. Holl

Marines are constantly on the move, transferring throughout the world to different bases and new jobs.

Unfortunately, the same is not usually true for military spouses and children who accompany their Marine or sailor from place to place. Setting up housekeeping in a new community is often a challenge; but finding an interesting, satisfying job is even more so for the thousands who arrive in new communities with varied backgrounds and skill levels.

The Marine Corps has implemented a new program to provide assistance in all aspects of career counseling for military members and their families. Employment Resource Centers will be established at 15 bases with Camp Lejeune being one of the first to implement this special program.

The Employment Resource Center opened recently, and is located within the Family Service Center, Bldg. 14. It's a convenient location for Marines and their families who are checking in or out of the commands aboard the base, according to Lieutenant Colonel Donna M. Campbell, plans officer for the Base Morale, Welfare and Recreation Department.

"When Marines are checking in to Camp Lejeune, their spouses can stop here and get a good start at seeing what's available in the surrounding community," she said. "Also, if a Marine or spouse comes in to see us before they transfer to another base we may be able to advise them on what's available at their next duty station."

Computerized job listings are only one of the services offered at ERC. Just as important as knowing what jobs are available is knowing how to apply for the job and what skills the job may require, according to Donna Graham, ERC Specialist.

"We can assist any member in a military household. We not only assist military family members to find jobs, we can also help Marines who are getting out of the service. Often it's hard for some Marines who have spent 20 years in the Marine Corps to know what skills they can apply to a civilian job. Every job in the Marine Corps has a civilian counterpart, and we can assist in finding it," Graham said.

The ERC offers employment workshops and seminars to address topics on resume writing, interview techniques, job search strategies, dressing for success, and translating present job skills into new careers.

Individual counseling is available for those who may not know what they are qualified for or how to apply their skills to various jobs. This is as helpful for wives who are returning to the job market at age 38 or 48 as it is for young people seeking their first job at age 18.

"We will sit down with you and show you how to write a resume that will bring out your very best, whether it's education, prior workskills, or your most notable achievements," Graham said. "We aren't able to actually get the job for you, but we can assist in the preparation and procedures."

"The ERC is a counselling service that provides a tangible form of assistance to our Marines and their families," said Campbell. "It's an extension of the many services already offered by the Family Service Center and one with a full range of information regarding employment—from lists of jobs available in the community to professional help toward improving job skills and awareness of the changes taking place in the job market. It should become a very valuable resource to anyone seeking assistance with employment matters. I hope people will seek help through this agency whenever it's needed."

Bad checks mean bad news for Marines

Story by Cpl. Jamee Sosa

A new Marine Corps order dated July 15, cracks down on bad check writers by allowing the Corps to deduct the amount of the bad check directly from Marines' pay.

The policy applies to checks written to base exchanges, clubs, welfare and recreation activities, open messes and commissaries. The policy will affect active duty, retired and reserve Marines. It does not apply to dependents or civilian working aboard Camp Lejeune.

"The exceptionally high standards expected of Marines extend to the writing of personal checks," the order says. "Marines are responsible for having sufficient funds in their checking accounts to cover the checks they issue and for promptly redeeming any checks returned as dishonored."

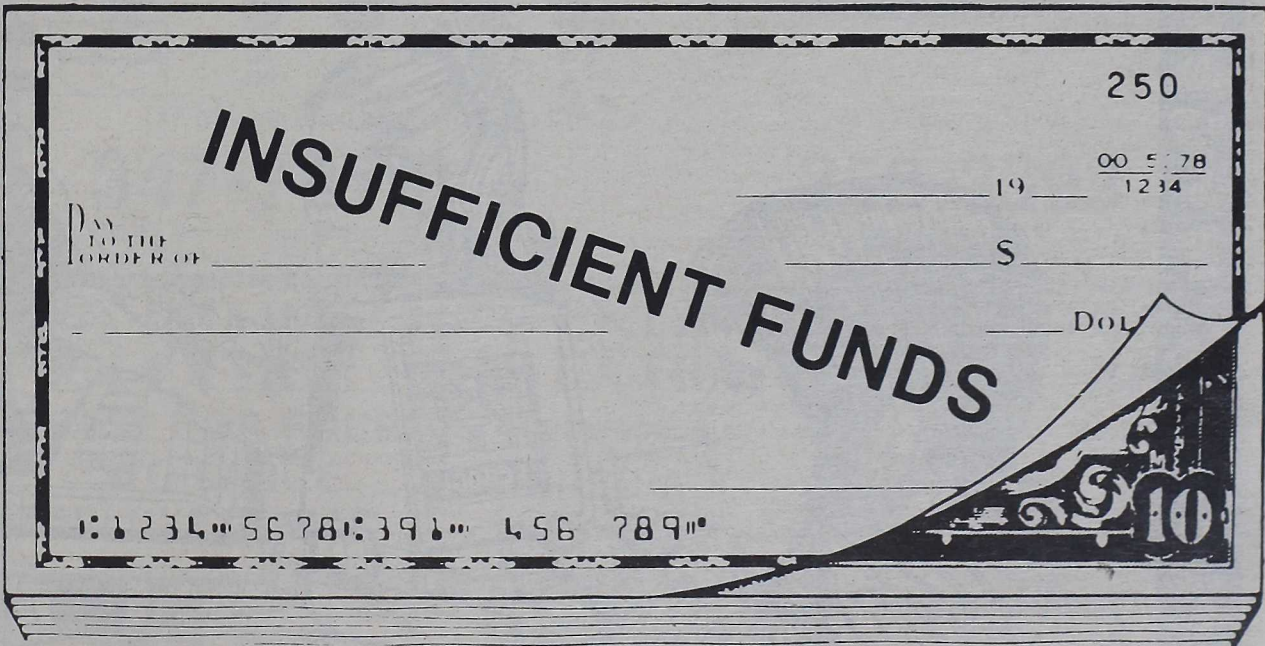

The order states that Marines will be given a "reasonable" opportunity to make restitution for writing a bad check. If Marines write a bad check, their commanding officers will be notified. The Marine will then be counseled regarding his responsibility to make timely restitution. The Marine will also be told that failure to redeem the check within a specified time period will result in a deduction from the Marine's pay. Marines will also be told that continued financial irresponsibility could result in disciplinary action and/or denial of promotion or reenlistment.

The deduction will be made in a lump-sum from the Marine's pay, according to the order. When the amount of the bad check is too large for a lump-sum deduction, the amount will be deducted over the fewest possible pay periods in order to minimize the government's collection costs.

Currently, the Marine Corps Base order is being written. This policy will be implemented at Camp Lejeune once the Base Order is complete.

Marines overcome obstacles

Expedient methods get the job finished

Story by PFC K. J. Bloomer

Marines are often required to accomplish difficult tasks under less-than-ideal conditions. Time is crucial . . . the mission cannot always wait for equipment to arrive. Knowledge, ingenuity and resourcefulness must be employed when a tough job must be done immediately and heavy equipment is not available.

Second Marine Division devil dogs from "A" Company, 2d Combat Engineer Battalion recently participated in a refresher course on shear rigging.

Shears consist of two poles lashed together at the top and properly anchored. A block and tackle is suspended between the poles and the shears are used for heavy lifting when machinery is not readily available.

"Rigging gives us that mechanical advantage when no lifting equipment is around," said Sergeant Keith Westmoreland, G-4 instructor. "If there is no equipment, we resort to basic tactics. It is certainly smarter to rig shears and use them than to load a lot of large, heavy gear by hand. The shears are so much easier and faster. They can also be used as a back-up system when lifting equipment fails."

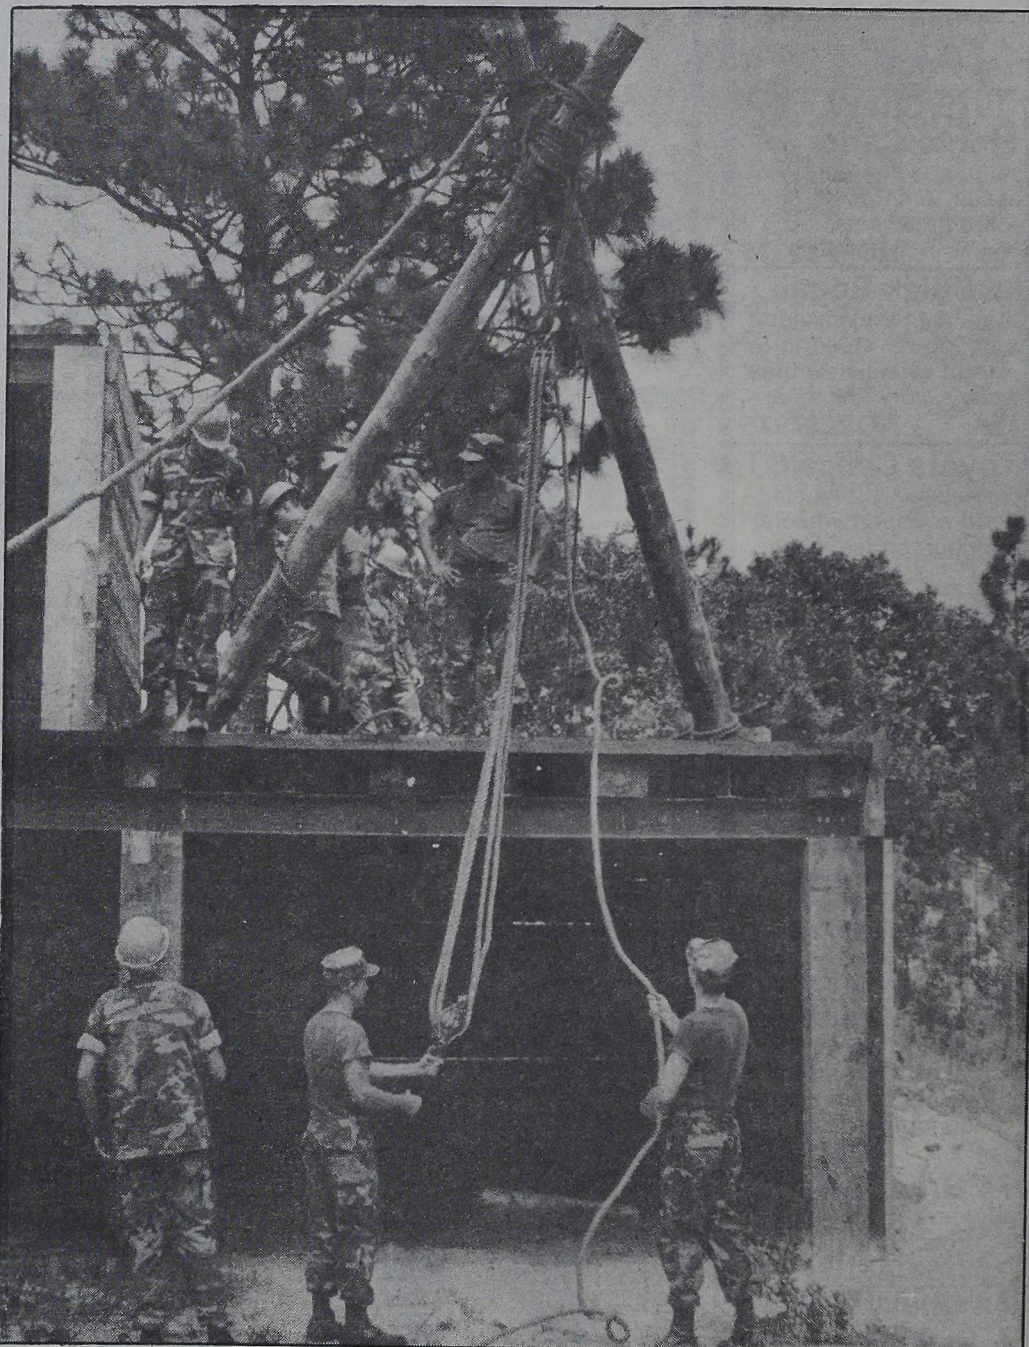

Shears can be used to lift engines, pallets, weapons and just about anything else onto the back of a truck. Using correct type of rope and 15-foot poles, a team of six Marines can rig and raise shears with a 3,000 pound capacity in about 20 minutes.

"First the poles are lashed together and secured. Then the guy lines are attached," Westmoreland said. "Next the block and tackle system is put on. The block and tackle includes the sling which hold the load. Then we stand it up, anchor it off and it's ready to work. For trained combat engineers, it's very easy and practical to set up."

All that's needed is the right type of rope, tools and skills. Engineers can cut timbers, use round poles, heavy planks or steel bars for the frame, depending on what's around. The shears can be anchored using different systems, again depending on what the terrain provides.

Rigging involves several factors. To effectively employ rigging devices, a Marine must understand anchors, knots and ropes.

"In order to rig shears, a Marine must know different types of knots and when to use them,"

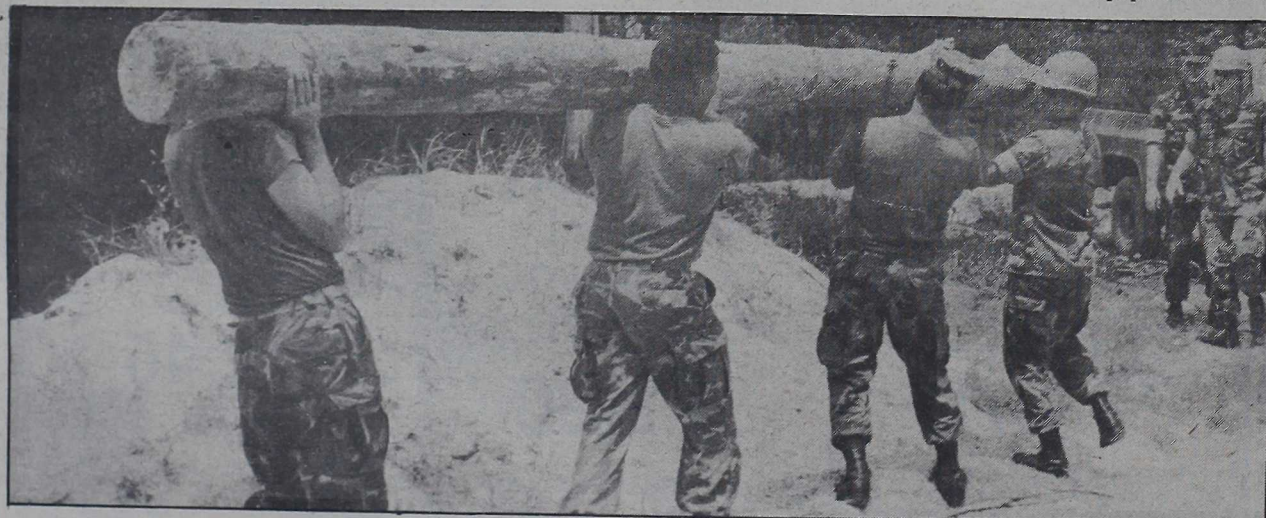

Combat engineers, having successfully constructed shears, can now use the rigging device to lift and load equipment. (Photo by PFC K. J. Bloomer)

Westmoreland said. "He also needs to know how to use what the situation gives him to work with. Poles and anchors will be different every time, because you never know what will be on hand when you need it. You have to use your knowledge and be resourceful to be effective."

Lifting and loading gear is an integral part of any field operation; equipment has to be moved to where it is needed at any given time. Proper lifting machinery may not be around, but the Leathernecks of 2d Combat Engineer Battalion will know how to do the job quickly and effectively with whatever equipment is on hand.

After carrying the 15-foot poles to the site, combat engineers will rig shears using only rope and tools. Shears can be rigged for heavy lifting when equipment is not available. (Photo by PFC K. J. Bloomer)

Telecommunications & Electronics Specialists CIA...where a career in COMMUNICATIONS speaks for itself

The environment in which you work can mean a lot to your professional success. It should be intellectually stimulating and vital, in an organization where you can assume as much responsibility as you need to challenge your talents. If this is the type of environment you need, here is your opportunity to use your telecommunications and electronics experience in projects of national importance.

At the Central Intelligence Agency, we recognize that your experience and training are valuable assets... skills that will ensure the success of our mission and your career. When you join us, you will be a part of a select group of professional men and women who apply their talents in a variety of assignments around the world. We have positions available for the following highly skilled, highly motivated people:

RADIO OPERATORS

The Central Intelligence Agency is seeking entry-level individuals who would like to pursue a career in our worldwide communications network. Experience in RF/HF radio, Morse intercept, satellite communications, or radio teletype operations is preferred but not required. Morse code ability at 12 GPM is also preferred, however, those passing a Morse aptitude test and an Agency general knowledge test will be favorably considered. Touch typing ability is required. Approximately seventy percent of your career will be served overseas with family. Starting salary is $18,544.

ELECTRONICS TECHNICIANS

These positions require an AAS degree in electronic technology or equivalent military/commercial training and experience. Knowledge of RF theory/circuitry, solid state and applications is also required. Starting salaries range from $19,740 to $21,056, depending on skills and qualifications. Thirty percent of your career will be spent overseas.

2d AAV Marines hone weapons systems skills

Story by Sgt. D. K. Holl

There were no waves breaking over the AAVs during 2d Assault Amphibian Battalion's quarterly field firing exercises at the G-7 range recently.

Marines from Charlie and Delta Companies spent five days reacquainting themselves with the armament system of the AAV-57A1, starting with the basics and working their way up.

"We try to get every company out here every quarter to fire the M-85 and M-60 machineguns. This gives the Marines a chance to get off the ramp (amphibious training) and into the field. Most Marines probably joined to be a part of the infantry, so this gives them the chance to shoot something," said First Lieutenant Julian V. Dees, executive officer, Delta Company, 2d AAV Bn.

The five-day training is taught continuously throughout the year by the battalion's gunnery instruction course chief, Gunnery Sergeant A. Q. Barlow.

"We teach our gunnery course in a series of progressions," Barlow said. "First, the Marines go through two days of classroom instruction. There they are reacquainted with the assembly and disassembly of the weapon, bore sighting, care and cleaning, fire command and fire control. One of the most important basics taught is how to draw an accurate range card, which shows a picture of the target area. Of course the main thing we stress throughout the course is safety."

Once the Marines complete the two days of classwork, they head out to the field for hands-on firing. Each crew of three takes turns firing the weapons, and performing immediate action when a malfunction occurs.

"Normally the crew chief is in command of the weapons. During training we give everyone the chance to fire so that as Marines move up in rank, or transfer out, we always have qualified replacements. All our Marines should be able to fire from a stationary position, on the move, and at night by using the night sights and their range card," said Barlow. "We practice all of this and we also fire smoke grenades during the three-day firing exercise. It's a lot to accomplish, but we get it done and the troops learn a lot."

"This is really important for us to know, so we all try to get the most out of it that we can, despite the heat. It's a good change of pace from the water ops we do, but the water ops are more fun," said Corporal Keith Carter, Delta Co.

"The most frustrating thing is keeping the weapons firing," said Corporal Robert Houghton, crew chief, Delta Co. "But at least this way we all learn how to perform immediate action. Everything we do out here is important to the mission. And since we are constantly supporting different operations it's important that we can handle anything that happens to our vehicles and our weapons."

Artillerymen defend democracy at Gitmo

Story by 1stLt. Kevin D. Taylor

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba—Tension between the U.S. and the communist government in Cuba has risen and the U.S. Naval Base is on alert. As the Air Force C-5 lands, jeeps and five-ton trucks hit the deck rolling. The Ground Defense Force has already prepared the howitzers and the fly-in artillery battery is on their way to man them.

A build-up on the communist side of the minefield has increased. The evacuation of military family members and other civilians at the base has begun. The surrounded Marines are digging in, a little more comforted knowing their artillery support has arrived and is ready to answer their calls for fire.

This is one scenario for the reinforcement and defensive exercise held June 16 through July 14 by Marines of 4th Battalion, 10th Marines. These Marines provide the ground defense force artillery support through the use of M198 howitzers.

Marines are deployed quarterly to support the ground defense force exercises.

"The training here has a lot of realism to it because you can see the Cubans in their towers observing you," said 4/10's admin chief, Staff Sergeant Thomas A. White.

While at the U.S. Naval Base, 4/10 participated in the defense exercise and also conducted individual and unit training.

The Marines marched the perimeter fence line, which is surrounded by the free world's largest active minefield and overlooked by guards from both sides.

"Seeing the guard towers and the minefields marked with signs and concertina wire makes you feel a sense of pride and responsibility," said Lance Corporal Dwayne F. Dineen, a unit diary clerk for 4/10.

The cannon-cockers participated in live-fire training with their small arms weapons, like the M72A2 Light Anti-Tank weapon, M60 machine gun, M203 grenade launcher and the M2 .50-caliber machine gun.

Swim qualifications and marksmanship training were also conducted.

In addition, the battalion's communications platoon had a chance to work with the latest communications gear. In conjunction with 2d Force Service Support Group's Information Systems Management Office, they tested a prototype system which the Marine Corps may use to send green machine data over long distances by a high-frequency radio signal. The test identified certain design features which may need modification before the system can be of use in a tactical environment.

The battalion's practice for their role of reinforcement and defense of Guantanamo Bay enabled the Marines to maintain their combat readiness, individually and collectively.

So, if one day the C-5 lands and the jeeps and five-tons hit the deck rolling, 4/10 will be ready to meet the challenge.

All-Marine Judo becomes way of life

Story by Cpl. J. C. Saris

You know you're doing something right when the number of All-Marine trophies you've won is catching up with the number of years that you've been in the Corps. Chester Evans is a nine-time All-Marine Judo champion and has been since he started practicing nine years ago.

For Evans, company gunnery sergeant for Headquarters and Service Company, 2d Combat Engineer Battalion, 2d Marine Division, trophies and medals come as often as PFT's. Evans claims the sport came pretty naturally for him.

"I started with judo when a friend of mine tried to interest me in karate. I had an injury that prevented me from practicing karate and that's when I found judo," Evans said.

From that point nine years ago, Evans made judo a way of life.

"The only way to get good at any sport is to totally dedicate yourself to that sport and no others. I hadn't participated in any other sport until last year when a friend of mine talked me in to playing a game of soccer," said Evans.

That 'way of life' theory has allowed Evans to compete all around the world.

He has competed in such prestigious places as Graz, Austria; Brussels, Belgium; Riccione, Italy; Sao Paulo, Brazil; and Seol, Korea.

After all that competition and more, Evans decided to retire.

When he retired, he was asked to take the position as head coach for the All-

Marine team.

"I feel that it's time to take what I've learned and give it to others. I'm a third degree black-belt and I think it's for me to calm down," Evans said.

Evans took his Marines to the Interservice tournament this year and was looking to pull himself from retirement.

"The team's 209-pounder quit two days before the actual tournament and they needed me to fight," Evans said.

After considerable persuasion from the team, Evans stepped on the mat to become the only semi-retired Marine to win his ninth All-Marine trophy. He also took an Interservice medal for coaching.

If you are interested in trying out the judo team but don't know if you got what it takes, Evans has some advice for you.

"If you can't handle hard work, you hate to sweat . . . don't even enter the gym, but if you've had any extensive wrestling training, don't sell yourself short. Wrestling is the best basis a person can have for the sport of judo."

This year's team is made up of interested women also. The national world councils have opened all competition to women and the Marine Corps is looking for those interested.

Evans offers instruction at Camp Geiger's Bldg. 822 on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday beginning at 6 p.m. For more information call 347-6188 or 353-4271.

Kelman sweeps FMFLant tennis tourney

Jeffrey Kelman dips for a low shot while playing last year's FMFLant champion Jay Lanier. Kelman beat Lanier twice during the tournament to take over as the 1986 FMFLant champion. (Photos by Cpl. J. C. Saris)

Story by Cpl. J. C. Saris

Jeffrey Kelman of the 2d Force Service Support Group swept the Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic tennis tournament by beating last year's winner twice.

Jay Lanier of the 2d Marine Division, last year's winner, took an early tournament loss to Kelman and was forced to battle in the losers bracket.

Lanier fought his way through to the finals only to find that Kelman was awaiting him with no losses . . . not even a set.

In the championship match, Kelman and Lanier started out looking pretty even.

Lanier obviously wanted to maintain his position as the FMFLant champion as he fought hard, but lost the first set 6-3.

Kelman clearly out-played the struggling Lanier in the second set as he destroyed him 6-0, taking the FMFLant crown away.

Kelman also took the open doubles championship with partner Gerald Weinacker. They beat Steve Simm and James Edmundson 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

In the senior singles division it was Charles Shelton overthrowing Edward Hill 6-2, 3-6, 6-2.

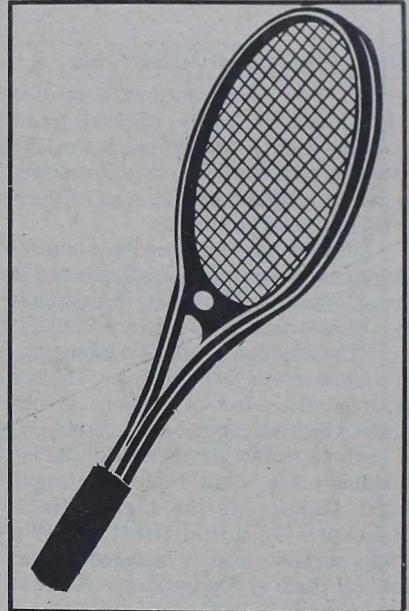

Below is a listing of this year's players and their units in order of finish.

Steroids aren't the answer

Story by Sgt. Cheryl Adams North

MCAS, New River—In their search for Mr. Goodbody, many athletes spend countless hours in weight rooms, working out and pumping iron. In this grueling quest for a body beautiful, a lot of them are also turning to steroids.

But what happens when these muscle-bound men start developing female breast tissue? Suddenly the ultimate in masculinity is transformed into borderline femininity.

"The condition is called gynecomastia. It is female breast tissue in a male. This is a potential side-effect of anabolic steroid abuse. Once the condition has developed, it tends to remain for the rest of the individual's life," said Navy Lieutenant Mike Dubik, Marine Light Attack Helicopter Squadron (HMLA)-269's flight surgeon who is assigned to the medical clinic at Marine Corps Air Station, New River, N.C.

Dr. Dubik is a member of the American College of Sports Medicine and has a particular interest in the athletic use of steroids. He said he has reviewed every major study on anabolic steroids, in both scientific and lay literature, and is concerned over the controversial health issue. Dr. Dubik believes steroid use in sports is a poorly understood area, and to help clarify some of the misconceptions, he wanted to get the word out to Marine athletes. The following report is based on the doctor's extensive research:

What are anabolic steroids?

Dr. Dubik: Anabolic steroids are synthetic hormones similar to the natural male hormone, testosterone. These synthetic hormones have a more potent anabolic (tissue building) effect than does testosterone itself.

How did the use of steroids first come about?

Dr. Dubik: Steroids were first used by the Nazis on German troops in World War II in an attempt to increase their aggressiveness. The first athletes to use steroids were the Soviets in the early 1950s. The use of steroids, especially in this country, has grown tremendously in recent years. Now, even amateur athletes have turned to steroids as a short-cut to attaining greater muscle size and strength.

Does the drug have any legitimate uses?

Dr. Dubik: Anabolic steroids do have legitimate medical uses. For example, steroids are used in the treatment of certain severe anemias and can also be used to stimulate sexual development in testosterone-deficient males.

Why do healthy people take steroids?

Dr. Dubik: Anabolic steroids are used by both professional and amateur athletes in many sports, particularly the strength sports such as body building, power lifting, and football. Athletes use these drugs in hopes of increasing their strength, lean muscle mass, and to allow more frequent training. Many of these athletes feel steroids give them a competitive edge. But more often than not, steroids are mistakenly used as a substitute for hard work, good training and proper nutrition.

Do anabolic steroids work?

Dr. Dubik: The use of anabolic steroids is very controversial. The first major area of controversy is whether steroids do, indeed, improve athletic performance. There have been no adequately done scientific studies to prove whether steroids do or do not work. Of the various studies that have been done, the conclusions are split about 50/50. However, close analysis of the studies would lead one to conclude that anabolic steroids probably do have some subtle effect in increasing strength and muscle mass. But this minimal increase will occur only under strict circumstances.

First, the athlete must be very well trained. Second, he must continue to train properly and intensely. Third, he must have a very high protein and high calorie diet. The athlete must strictly adhere to these guidelines for there to be any increase in strength. And even then, the gains are barely measurable.

The large gains one hears rumors about are, for the most part, exaggerations of a placebo effect. The athlete gets enthused because he thinks he has a "magic pill." His enthusiasm translates into more rigorous training, so he gets stronger and attributes it to the steroids. But the drugs have little effect at all. And if an athlete did gain some minimal amount of strength from the cycle of steroids, he would lose that strength shortly after stopping the drug.

Are steroids safe?

Dr. Dubik: This is the second major area of controversy. Anabolic steroids can have many undesirable side-effects. More than one-third of the users will experience subjective side-effects, such as increased aggressiveness and either an increased or decreased sexual drive. Many users will feel depressed once a cycle is over, as though withdrawing from a drug they're dependent on. Acne becomes worse during steroid use. Steroids can also cause baldness to accelerate, which is not reversible. The user may also experience muscle spasms and fluid retention.

Do athletes overuse steroids?

Dr. Dubik: Steroids can be taken by mouth or by injection, and are typically taken in cycles. The duration of a cycle may vary from one month to five months. Most athletes "pyramid" their steroids during a cycle, that is, they increase the dose to a peak then taper it off. They'll also "stack" steroids, by adding a second and sometimes third and fourth drug during the cycle. The amounts taken by athletes are sometimes as high as 10 to 30 times the recommended maximum dosage.

Are there any serious side-effects?

Dr. Dubik: Yes. As we already discussed, there is the unsightly and irreversible female breast tissue development. Steroids also adversely affect blood cholesterol levels that may increase the risk of heart disease. There's also a decreased production of natural testosterone, which may cause transient infertility.

Steroids can cause liver damage, including benign tumors, which is usually reversible. However, there have been reports of a deadly, malignant liver tumor which was induced by steroid use. Also, a rare disorder, called peliosis hepatis, has been associated with prolonged steroid use. This is a condition where blood-filled sacs develop in the liver: these can rupture causing severe hemorrhaging. And contrary to what one might think, steroid taken by mouth are far more likely to damage the liver than steroids taken by injection.

Also, the results of many animal studies show that the long-term use of anabolic steroids is associated with the subsequent development of prostate cancer. There's also been one case of AIDS reported, which was associated with steroid abuse; the disease was transmitted when "gym buddies" shared needles.

What are the risks for women?

Dr. Dubik: Anabolic steroids can cause liver damage and other serious side effects in any user, regardless of sex. However, women face additional problems such as menstrual irregularities and increased facial hair, which are both reversible. But steroid abuse also causes clitoral enlargement, deepening of the voice and baldness, all of which are irreversible.

Is there a place for steroid use in athletics?

Dr. Dubik: This is the third major area of controversy, and unfortunately, many people have exaggerated the muscle building effects of steroids. The result is that many young athletes see the drug as a key to success and neglect the far more important effects of hard work, proper training and good nutrition. Many magazines give the false impression that steroids are on the level of a nutritional supplement in terms of safety.

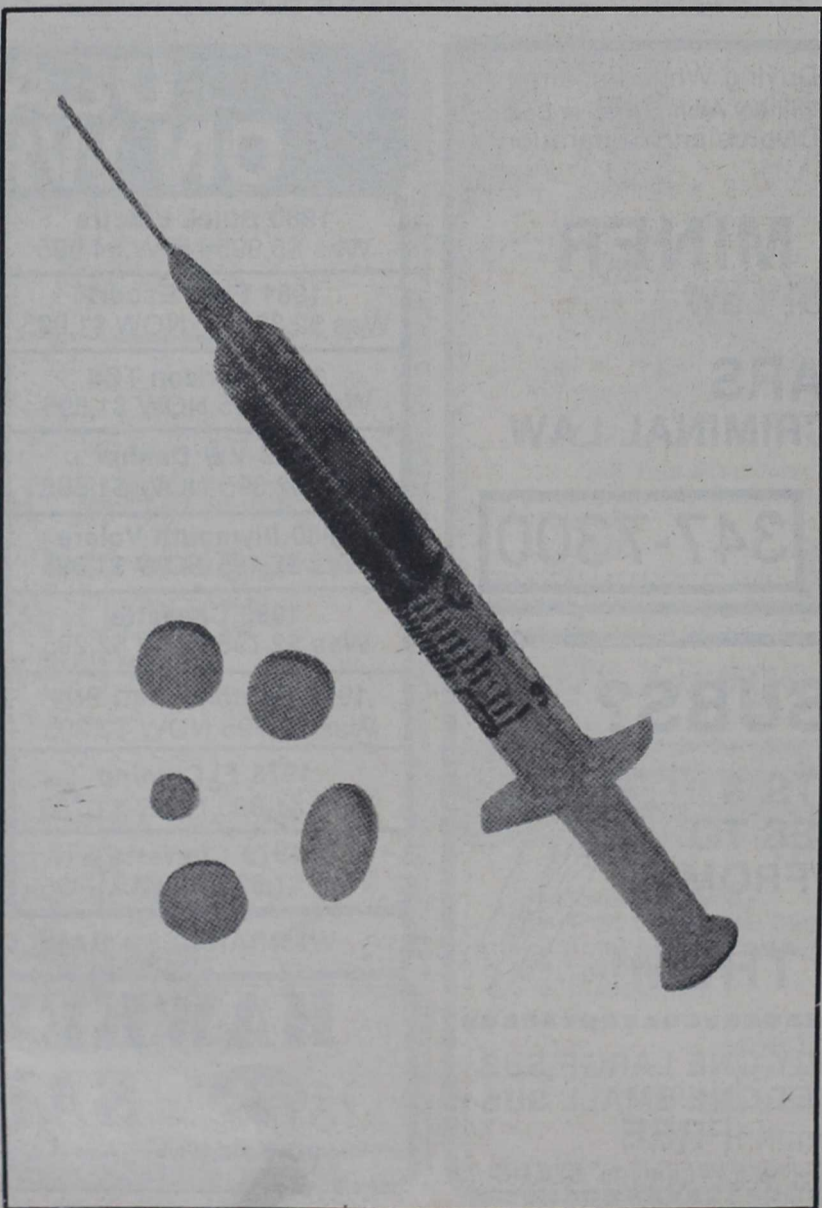

Also, a lot of athletes feel coerced into using steroids. They think their competition is using the drug and they don't want the competitor to get the edge on them. But if all athletes start using steroids, there is no competitive edge for anyone. Yet, the health hazards are shared by all. Besides what is the point of a sport anyway? Isn't it to promote health and healthy competition? Steroid abuse does neither.

What about steroids in the military?

Dr. Dubik: There is absolutely no place for anabolic steroid use in the active duty military. All servicemen, especially Marines, must be prepared to deploy at any time. This is incompatible with steroid cycling, but most important, a truly combat-ready Marine is not dependent on any type of drug for any reason. The key to a serviceman's success is not based on his size, but his skill as an individual and as a team member. And anabolic steroids offer only health risks, without benefitting the individual or the military.

What is the bottom line on steroids?

Dr. Dubik: The bottom line is—the debate over the effectiveness of steroids is bound to go on for a long time. But one thing is absolutely certain: athletes who are trying to build up their bodies by using steroids are tearing them down in the long run with needless health hazards.

There is no provision for repayment to creditors. The filing of a Petition for relief will provide an automatic stay preventing creditor contact with you or your employer.

CHAPTER 13 - WAGE EARNER PLAN

Allows individuals to petition the Federal Court for a (36) month repayment period to discharge indebtedness, without property repossession. Upon filing of the Petition individuals will no longer be contacted or threatened by creditors and a realistic budget will be established whereby creditors will be treated fairly.

SPOTLIGHT ON MENTAL HEALTH

A Healthier & Happier You

Ever notice how singing in the shower or humming along with the car radio helps you feel relaxed? Or how about the lullaby you sing to your children or the whistling you do while you work. They seem to be almost "magical" stress erasers.

In fact, music can actually help you feel less stressed. If you take some time to listen to the sounds of music, or make the sounds of music, you can help yourself (and perhaps others) to relax in the midst of a stressful time.

Make music a part of your life. You may be surprised at how it will calm you down and cheer you up. And just to get things off to a rousing good start, try singing today!

NEWSBRIEFS

Recruiter assistance

Marines from Idaho who would like to recruit in their hometown now have that opportunity.

All Marines processed through Boise MEPS who would like to work as a 30-day recruiter at Boise, Twin Falls, Burley, Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Rexburg and surrounding Idaho cities should contact their company or squadron First Sergeant and GySgt. J. E. Chnar at FTS 554-1790 or commercial (208) 4-1790.

A Permissive TAD recruiter receives SRB credit for each referral who joins the Marine Corps.

Warrant Officer reunion

The Officers of India Company, Warrant Officer's Basic course, 1-85 will be holding a reunion.

Anyone wishing to attend, contact Warrant Officer Wright, 2d Combat Engineer Battalion, at 451-1553/57.

Re-up bonus cuts

Headquarters Marine Corps has announced drastic cuts in the Selective Re-enlistment Bonus program effective, September 1.

Anyone who re-enlists on or before August 31 will receive a bonus, if their field rates one, under the multiples list.

The drastic cuts will leave only 87 occupational fields receiving bonuses compared to 227 on the existing list.

"With all these reductions . . . anybody that is even thinking about re-enlisting better do it now," said Master Sergeant Robert M. Percell, noncommissioned officer-in-charge of 2d Marine Division career planning.

Some MOS's will drop from a multiple of five to zero and all Zone C multiples will be completely cut out.

If a Marine has less than a year remaining on his contract, now is the time to re-enlist.

For more information, see your career planner or ALMAR 164/86.

DOD safety policy

The Department of Defense has reaffirmed its concern for the safety and occupational health of its personnel. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger has signed a statement urging all DoD personnel to support safety and occupational health principles. Mr. Weinberger said safety should be a major concern in all DoD activities on and off the job. In his statement Mr. Weinberger said, "Our commitments to strength and national security require that we emphasize the importance of our safety and occupational health programs." Secretary Weinberger said DoD has a good safety record, but can do better in preventing losses each year due to accidents and occupational illness. Mr. Weinberger is calling for full and enthusiastic support for safety in the working environment.

CHAMPUS test program

Champus is conducting a two-year test program to determine whether home health care will be less expensive than in-patient hospital care. Under the test program, CHAMPUS may share the cost of home health care for active duty families in the United States.

The test program will include payment for authorized homemakers and home health aid. The health care will have to be authorized in advance by CHAMPUS Headquarters. Requests must demonstrate that patient care can be provided less expensively at home than in a hospital setting.

For further details, see your CHAMPUS representative or call 451-4150/4151.

School board meeting

The Camp Lejeune Dependents Schools Board of Education will hold its next meeting on Aug. 18 at 1 p.m. at the Superintendent's office, Bldg. 855. The meeting is open to the public. Anyone desiring to have items placed on the agenda should contact the Superintendent's office prior to the meeting.

For Marines at Camp Lejeune, a recent change in policy has made it possible to fill these slots with locally hired help.

This change will allow Marines more time to train and give continuity to the dining facility.

Join us for a closer look at change and other happenings aboard Camp Lejeune on our report.

Lejeune Report is on channel 8 and 12, Mon.-Fri., at 4:45 p.m. Mon. at 8:05 a.m. and Wed. noon.

If you think you have a story the coming shows give SSgt. Dur Washington a call at 451-5616/5782.

Naval smoking policy outlines restrictions

HQMC Release

The Department of the Navy policy on smoking prevention and cessation programs was recently announced by the Secretary of the Navy.

"It should be made clear that we are not prohibiting tobacco use," the secretary said in a recent ALNAV. "Ours is a positive educational/awareness approach designed to provide the least disruption while improving our state of health and ability to maintain a high state of military readiness."

The smoking programs are aimed at creating healthier work environments and providing smokers with professional support to stop smoking without pressure to enter these programs against their will.

Under the Navy program, smoking will be permitted only if it does not endanger life or property, or risk impairing non-smokers' health. Tobacco use is not permitted in:

- Auditoriums, conference rooms, classrooms and libraries.
- Elevators, official buses, vans and shuttle vehicles.
- Gymnasiums, child care and youth activity centers.

The program calls for all commands and Morale, Welfare and Recreation activities to discourage tobacco use and educate people regarding its hazards.

Secretary of the Navy John

Lehman said all eating facilities ashore and afloat should have designated smoking areas when sufficient space is available for non-smoking and ventilation is adequate.

In buildings, facilities and separation between smoking and non-smoking people in work spaces whenever possible.

In medical treatment centers, tobacco use by staff members will be permitted in the presence of patients, and will be limited to private offices and designated spaces. Smoking by patients will be limited to certain areas.

The United States Surgeon General has determined smoking is the most preventable cause of illness and death. The environmental protection agency states that involuntary/passive smoking poses a public health risk larger than the hazard of air pollutants from all industrial emissions combined.

Medical evidence shows the use of tobacco can destroy night vision, eye/hand coordination, increase susceptibility to diseases and impair cardio respiratory endurance, exercise and stamina.

The Navy tobacco prevention program applies to everyone working in Navy occupied buildings, facilities, ships and aircraft.
