Scenes like this will become familiar on the main thoroughfares around Camp Lejeune when the North Carolina Highway Commission conducts its traffic survey August 14-23. Highway and State Patrol officials will aid the commission in the survey.

MD, Highway Officials Commence Traffic Survey

Police officials at Camp Lejeune will cooperate with North Carolina State Highway Commission in conducting an official traffic survey which will commence August 14 and will end August 23. The survey is designed to determine the need for a thoroughfare plan in the Jacksonville area.

When a motorist reaches a survey point, an interviewer will ask him three questions: 1) where did your trip originate, 2) what is your destination, and 3) what is the purpose of the trip. This will be the only information obtained from the survey. Names, license numbers etc, will not be recorded.

In cooperation with the Highway Commission, the Camp Lejeune Provost Marshal's Office has issued an area designation code for Marines and their dependents to use while in the interviewing situation.

The code which simply divides Camp Lejeune into numerical sectors is as follows: Central Area--#1, Industrial Area--#2, Divisions Area--#3, Courthouse Bay, Rifle Range--#4, On Base Housing--#5, Tarawa Terrace--#6, Knox Traller Park--#7, Midway Park--#8, Geiger Area--#9 and MCAF--#10.

During the interview, the motorist should reply to the questions as briefly as possible. If a Marine's wife, for example is driving from her home in Midway Park to pick up her husband in Building 1, she would reply as follows: I am coming from Camp Lejeune #8 and going to Camp Lejeune #1 to pick up my husband. If one forgets the code or is going to some other location, state the name and address.

Rotation Policy Told By CMC

Headquarters Marine Corps has taken 'immediate steps' to reestablish and maintain an equitable rotational pattern for Marines in all occupational fields.

Its ultimate goal, according to a release August 3, is "a minimum two years between overseas unaccompanied assignments for every Marine."

The release further emphasized that this was an immediate goal and not a "sometime in the future" requirement.

The increased manpower requirements to support the Vietnam fighting have shortened the rotation tours of many Marines because of their occupational fields, the report said.

Examples of the measures undertaken to cure rotation problems are; increased training output, selective volunteer Fleet Marine Corps Reserve and Class III Reserve active duty programs, approval by the Defense Department of Marine Corps requests for upgrading 11,000 billets in the U. S. to NCO level and cross-training between occupational fields.

The ALMAR commended those individual Marines who have been called upon to give more of themselves than others, saying that they have "measured up" to the additional hardships.

The release concluded by explaining that "fairness" is the key word in overseas assignments to the Western Pacific, and that every effort is being exerted to give every Marine an equitable tour in the states.

Driving Too Close?

One of the most consistent . . . and dangerous . . . traffic violations here at Camp Lejeune is following too close to a vehicle.

Commonly called tailgating, this violation can be seen almost any time during the morning and evening rush hours on Holcomb Blvd.

A general guideline for distance between cars is one car length for every ten miles-per-hour of speed. This doesn't leave any too much room for emergency stops.

Yet it isn't uncommon to see a string of cars with less than two car lengths separating them going down the road at 50 miles-per-hour.

When there are cars traveling too close, it is an open invitation to disaster. If the lead car has to slam on his brakes for some reason, the cars start piling up.

When blame is determined in a rear-end collision, the fault is almost always laid on the car in the rear. With a serious accident though, the matter of fault is rather academic.

No one cares very much where the blame lies while they are stretched out on the shoulder of the road waiting for an ambulance.

The tailgating driver is a driver in the wrong, who depends on the man ahead of him to be right. He depends on the man he's following to have brake lights in good working order, and he trusts that this man won't suddenly stop. Sometimes this trust is not well-founded.

According to traffic investigation officials, roughly 40 percent of rear-end collisions at Camp Lejeune are caused by drivers following too close to another vehicle.

The few yards between moving cars can be an important factor in getting home from work. If these yards are left between cars, you probably won't be involved in a rear-end crash. If you don't leave the gap, you may spend part of the evening on the highway, when you should have already been home.

'Freedoms Foundation'

The below entry was submitted through the Globe for consideration in the annual Freedoms Foundation Contest. For details on the contest check the July 14, 1966 edition of the Globe, or contact the editor, extension 7-5522.

Thank you for giving me this opportunity to express my feelings concerning the importance of our efforts in Southeast Asia, or for that matter, anywhere in the world where the God-given freedom of man is in jeopardy. Freedom, gentlemen, safeguards America.

History has taught us well that, when once a power-hungry tyrant or government gains a foothold in a weaker nation or area, the peoples of that land are eventually exploited to such an extent that they exist, more or less for the purpose of increasing the wealth of the conquering power.

Time and time again throughout the course of history, men have spilled their blood so that they or their sons might someday live in the dignity of freedom. Finally, with the break away from England and the settling of the American Colonies, mankind took it's greatest single leap up towards that ideal "that all men are created equal."

Out of the ensuing struggle for existence; from the taming of the wilds, the defeating of the English in spite of tremendous odds during the Revolutionary War, and the overcoming of numerous political, social and economic problems that plagued the new nation, emerged a strong foundation for freedom. On this foundation, gentlemen, Americans have built, in a comparatively short time, the strongest nation in the world.

People from all walks of life, with completely different backgrounds, have come to America, the land of freedom, and have found a fulfilling way of life. They have utilized the sound principals of democratic government to benefit themselves and their neighbors. They have worked together to solve mutual problems and have never failed to aid other freedom-loving peoples around the world.

Sirs, I do not think of America as a land mass with set geographic boundaries; instead I visualize it as an idea, something that exists somewhere in the hearts of all men.

Whenever freedom does win out, once and for all, over tyranny and dictatorship, then I don't think there will be a need for boundaries.

This parallels the conclusion of a book I once read where two great friends are forced apart by society because of their different ideological backgrounds. The conclusion was: "May we meet again in a land where nature flourishes and there are no chains."

All that I have attempted to express, upholds the hypothesis which I began with, that being, that the cause of freedom is the cause of America.

In the defense of freedom the American fighting man's ability, cunning, and spirit has never been equalled. Therefore, gentleman, I'm proud to be serving in the Armed Forces of America and just a little bit prouder to wear the insignia of the Globe and Anchor on my uniform.

August is here and the hot summer is quickly waning. Now is the time to try to catch up on all that reading you had planned to do all summer and just haven't had the time to get around to doing! Stop by the Base Library at your earliest convenience, select a good book, spend a pleasant few hours in a cool, comfortable spot and read!

Football season is just around the corner—perhaps you plan to play on the regimental team this fall or coach a little league football. "Football Techniques" written by Jim Moore and illustrated by Tyler Micoeau is here to instruct you in the rudiments of the game. The book covers kicking, passing, running, tackling and line play as individual techniques and then shows how they are combined into the overall picture of team offense and defense. Thirty years of coaching experience have given Jim Moore the ability to explain the game in a way that is easily understood and quickly learned.

Planning a trip to Washington, D. C.—or is the Washington area your new duty station? Brush up on places of interest in the Capitol City. For reading pleasure and historical knowledge, I heartily recommend "The White House," an historic guide published by the White House Historical Association. In times of crisis the eyes of the world are fixed upon 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. This is the White House, the seat of mighty councils and the place where a lonely man must wrestle with soul-searing decisions. This building—graceful, expansive, and unpretentious—is not only an awesome shrine, it is a home. This book is an authentic account of the mansion's history, its architectural significance, and its contents. This is sure to captivate the reader, and please the eye with its magnificent illustrations.

Ever since the public furor about flying saucers—unidentified flying objects—started some years ago, the USAF has conducted a careful investigation of each sighting. "Flying Saucers and the US Air Force" by Lt. Col. Lawrence J. Tacker, USAF, is the story of the long research and the findings. . . as exciting as it is revealing to the many partisans on both sides. This is one book that people on both sides of the flying saucers controversy will want to read. It presents for the first time the whole picture of extensive official investigation and findings.

For the surfing crowd John Severson's "Modern Surfing Around the World" is here for your entertainment. In this awesomely illustrated how-to and where-to book the editor and publisher of the "Surfer" magazine calls on eighteen years of experience to give an accurate and comprehensive picture of international surfing today. This book promises to be a leader in its field for years to come. Study this one and become that "king of the surfers" you wish to be!

Remember that whatever you want to do, you can do it better by benefiting from the experience of mankind that has been recorded in books. Improve yourself through reading, take advantage of your library today and every day—use it!

Hold on there! Before you start yellin' at your troops leaning on his elbows upon his desk something you ought to know.

Chronic daydreamers are more apt to reach goals than non-daydreamers. They have the edge non-daydreamers in the matters of creativity, resnes, and original thinking, too.

I read that, quite awhile back, in an article chologist Jerome L. Singer. He went on to study of daydreaming in hundreds of men and of various ages and walks of life showed that quent daydreamer has a higher degree of self- and a deeper insight into his own personality.

"Being better acquainted with his innermost and desires," he said, "he is better able to provide with adequate means of expression."

That, of course, is if he has sufficient insight and energy to translate his desires into action. E fails to couple insight with action, he will remain a wishful thinker, worse off than the dreamer who is more contented with his lot.

So, now that you know, go ahead and yell Raise cane, in fact, and get his elbows off the top, for there's one more, very important thing by the Singer study:

Daydreaming occurs shortly before sleeping.

Someone mentioned Melvin Miller the other day. I wondered how many Marines had heard the Melvin Miller story . . . wondered what happened to Melvin Miller.

For those who may not remember, Melvin Miller the guy who received a phone call—quite by accident—from a Marine looking for his misplaced automobile in Laguna Beach. Melvin received the call at his home in Peoria, Ill., at some improbable hour in the middle of the night. He talked quite a while with the Marine, and eventually wound up in Hollywood, Laguna Beach's Sandpiper for a reception, Tiajuana for the bull-fights, the El Toro Air Station on an inspection visit—only to find out that "The Melvin Miller Fund," headed by Captain who'd placed (or is it misplaced?) the call in the first place.

The story received national notice, Miller's name was in a traffic jam on Highway 101, and Melvin Miller in Laguna by television cameramen, photographers, Marines, pilots, and just about every other person on the street and off the beach.

Who except a Marine would have kicked off such a zany, hilarious scheme—to carry it off with such success?

And who—as far as that goes—except such a previously good natured tractor factory foreman in Peoria, Ill., named Melvin Miller, would have gone with it?

He was quoted in newspaper accounts as "These people are crazy—what makes them do that?" He was also quoted as saying, "But I'm not going to see this thing through, even if it kills me."

3d MarDiv Association Supports U. S. Policy

NEW YORK—Wholehearted support of U. S. policy in Southeast Asia, and of President Johnson's determination to protect South Vietnam from Communist aggression, was pledged in a resolution adopted unanimously at the July reunion of the Third Marine Division Association, Inc. at the Hotel Roosevelt.

Consisting largely of men who fought in the World War II battles of Bougainville, Guam and Iwo Jima, the veterans also commended the "valor and fortitude" of the new breed of the Third now fighting in Vietnam. Another resolution openly supported the efforts of law-enforcement officers and agencies to protect law abiding citizens, their lives and property from the harassment of pressure groups.

The record of the Third Marine Division from its World War II birth to Vietnam was traced by Major General William R. Collins, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, Headquarters Marine Corps, in his banquet address. General Collins termed the Third "truly expeditionary in character because it can travel half way around the world and be ready for immediate combat."

Robert E. Williams, Yaphank, N. Y., procedure analyst for Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's home office in New York City, and a World War II sergeant in intelligence, was elected association president succeeding Harold J. Melloy, Knoxville, Tenn. industrialist.

Going To RVN? Arrange For Pay

Assistance Command Vietnam, urges all personnel who have orders for review their pay status. In Vietnam, the usual pay alternatives are available and personnel has the options to have all pay sent to a bank or authorized agent taking part of it and having the balance on CONUS; or taking payment and allowing the balance to be carried forward. It is recommended that personnel possible new allotments should be made well in advance of departure from old stations, with appropriate dates. This insures that bills will not be withheld especially in cases of individuals who have the balance office send their money to a stateside bank.

Quotas Open For Retraining

Headquarters Marine Corps announced openings for sergeants through gunnery sergeants to retrain in the 211, Counter Intelligence. The 3d Marine Division has quotas available for retraining in this field. Interested personnel should contact their commanding officer for further information.

Emphasis Needed For NCO Training

A Headquarters Marine Corps directive requires that increased emphasis be put on NCO leadership training. The reason . . . more NCO's are being made faster than before.

By November the Marine Corps will have gained 85,000 additional men. This build-up has accelerated promotions.

In the near future about 18,000 lance corporals will be promoted to corporal. This points up the continued need for a dynamic NCO leadership program at all levels of command.

Commanding officers are directed by Marine Corps Order 5390.1, dated July 18, 1966, to ensure that NCO leadership is stressed in unit training programs. Wherever possible, separate courses of instruction will be conducted on this subject.

HELPFUL SERVING—A Marine from "E" Co., 2d Bn., Fifth Marine Regiment, 1st Marine Division, doles out a generous helping of hot food to a young Vietnamese from the village of Than My Trung (l). The Marines, who arrived in the village over three weeks ago, habitually share their one hot meal a day with the villagers. (Photo by PFC Roger B. Van Druff.)

9th Motors Opens School In Vietnam

DA NANG, Vietnam, July 19-- Neither an end nor a beginning was signaled when the 3rd Marine Division commander cut the ribbon to open Dong Ba School in Truong Dong Ba village recently.

For the 51 village families and Marines of 9th Motor Transport Bn., 3rd Marine Division, the ceremony was a milestone in an achievement typical of the civic action effort by Marines in Vietnam.

For the Marines who had acquired the materials and supervised the work, it was the culmination of their efforts. For the children, however, it was the start of a dream and of an obligation as well: the privilege of attending school.

Even on a greater scale, the new school was a milestone; a highpoint among many courtesies and favors extended by the motor transport Marines. In recent months, Marines had sponsored a laundry service, set up a regular schedule of medical aid, and delivered scrap lumber and other articles to the villagers.

No details were overlooked. Girls' and boys' uniforms were provided, textbooks obtained, a teacher was sponsored for certification by the government and a playground was built.

Four swings, seesaws and an original five-rope, revolving, "may-pole" were built by the Marines. Inside the schoolhouse, combination bench desks were constructed.

From its conception through to final construction, the school project was encouraged and supported by Major H. F. Jones (Alexandria, Va.), CO of the battalion.

But thanks must go principally to the battalion's Marines who actually supervised and performed most of the work.

Classes in the school are scheduled daily from 8:30 to 11 a. m. and from 1:30 to 4 p. m. Since virtually all the students--50 have already enrolled--are of the same education bracket, there is only one teacher and one grade.

Not wanting to rest on past laurels, the 9thMTBn. Marines are determined to make their work a tradition and habit.

Plans for their next project, the organization and sponsor of a Little League baseball schedule for young Vietnamese are well underway.

OPENING DAY—Children and their parents of Khue Truong (2) village gather around Marines of the 3d Tank Bn., civil affairs section as the village school is reopened after being closed for more than a year.

The Quest For Water

"Old Dan and I with throats burnt dry, and souls that cry for water--COOL, CLEAR WATER..."
 Whether you quench your thirst or shed a tear, wash your clothes or press them, you are involved in the everyday demand for pure water.

To soften water, cold lime slurry is injected by chemical feed pumps at the base of the cone-shaped spiractors. The water-lime mixture surges upward from the spiractor base through 15 feet of sand, which removes calcium and iron from the water.

FOR PURE WATER—Patrick Henry Barker, Quarterman, Water Purification Plant, discusses a facet of the precipitation process with his assistant, Claude D. Chadwick.

This base uses about 3,500 gallons per minute.

Base water production, a function of the Base Maintenance Department under control of the Utilities Engineer, is an operation that reaches every building, home and person at Camp Lejeune. The Water Treatment Branch is supervised by Patrick Henry Baker, Quarterman.

The operation uses six major water treatment plants, six minor treatment facilities, 75 deep wells, 170 miles of water distribution mains, 10 reservoirs and 13 elevated tanks. The operation requires the services of 29 men, more than 100 buildings and the support of the Maintenance and Repair Division.

Mr. Barker is also responsible for filtering and treating water for the training and recreational swimming pools here. His assistant, Claude D. Chadwick, was hired at the same time, and the two have worked for two decades in the main office located in the central water plant, Building 20.

Raw water is pumped from 35 wells, located at various sites around the Hadnot Point area, to an underground reservoir at the plant. Chlorine to kill harmful bacteria is added to the water as it flows in from the wells.

The average consumption rate at Camp Lejeune is 3,500 gallons per minute. Of course, the rate is higher about 6:30 a. m., when Base personnel start taking showers and perking coffee, and it drops after bed time.

Throughout the entire water treatment process, plant operators keep 24-hour logs of all plant functions, including quality and purity checks. In addition to plant operational checks, the Base Utilities Laboratory analyzes samples of water from points throughout the distribution system. Further tests are performed by the Base Sanitation Section of the Base Medical Department.

The plant has also incorporated a number of safety measures in case of power failure. Should the electricity fail, a gasoline generator is put into immediate use to run the auxiliary lighting system, the chemical feed pumps and the chemical mixing tanks. Gasoline-powered emergency pumps stand ready to pump water from the outlying wells. Water availability is insured 24 hours per day, seven days a week.

All in all, a cool glass of pure water at high noon, anywhere in the Camp Lejeune complex, tastes good—even at the price of 13.25 cents per thousand gallons.

HONESTY PLUS—Major General H. Nickerson, Jr., Base Commander, presents Mr. Charlie Gwynn a Certificate of Merit during informal ceremonies. Mr. Gwynn received the certificate for his honesty. While working in the commissary store, Mr. Gwynn found a wallet with $179 which he promptly turned over to his supervisor. The wallet was then forwarded to its owner.

Chaplain's Notes

A Balance For Living Today

Mark Twain once said, "If I were a heathen, I would erect a statue to energy and fall down and worship it."

Today, we as a nation have power unsurpassed by any nation since the beginning of time. Our powers for destruction in the atomic bomb, our powers for increased understanding of our universe in the space program, our military and economic power cause us to think of our nation as the most powerful force on earth. And indeed it is.

Our achievements are accomplished because we are a dynamic, aggressive, and vigorous people. Seeing our great progress in the past generation we are prone to worship this energy which we have harnessed.

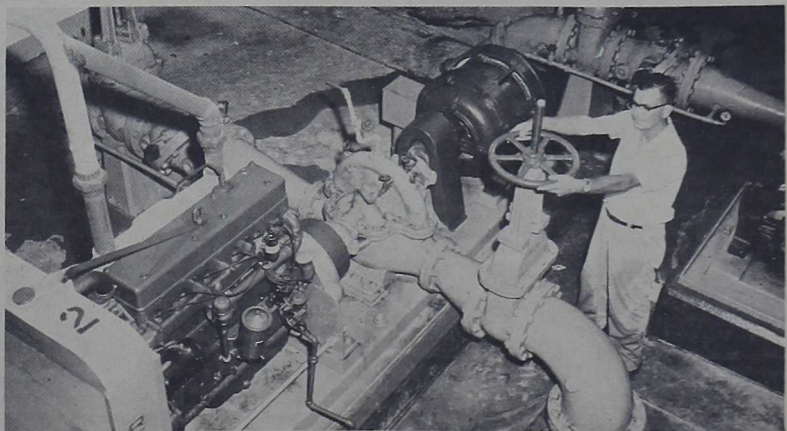

But with this there is a very real danger that we shall place ourselves in the position of gaining the world and losing our very soul. What we must constantly remember is that it is the individual who will continue to harness and use this energy. The strength of the individual, however, depends not only on his mental capacity but on his moral and spiritual strength. These must be built together.

Somebody has compared the principle of building a life with the principle of building a Gothic cathedral. Every new arch must be supported with new foundations. As the church is enlarged, the thrust from without must meet the push from within. So it must be with us. The more extensive our material achievements, the deeper and stronger must be our moral and spiritual foundations.

The only way in which we can balance our individual lives is to no longer fasten our entire thoughts on external things but to take time for meditation on our purpose in life, "Why are we here?" "Where are we going?" This will help us to find the inner serenity and peace which we desperately need.

—Chaplain R. E. Earnest

H. G. Padgett demonstrates the action necessary to switch the Water Purification Plant at Camp Lejeune from regular to auxiliary engines in case of emergency.

The Million Dollar Bubble Of Air Defense Operations

Can a "bubble" be worth millions of dollars? If it comes in 28 pieces and belongs to Marine Air Control Squadron-5 (MACS-5), it can.

The "bubble" is officially known as a Tactical Air Operations Center (TAOC). Separating into 28 parts, it houses millions of dollars in radar equipment used to control and direct aircraft in air defense operations on the East Coast. Marine Corps Air Facility, New River, is home of the "bubble" and MACS-5.

MACS-5 provides air surveillance and control of aircraft and surface-to-air missiles, and supports the Fleet Marine Forces. Three Marines staff the "bubble" on a 24-hour shift.

When objects are first detected on the sensitive radar scopes, a Tactical Air Defense Control Officer (TADCO) evaluates the data. He determines whether or not the objects represent an enemy attack, and if so, its strength. He then directs friendly aircraft, usually Marine Corps F4B Phantoms or F8 Crusaders, to the interception point. It may be either a day or night mission. The TADCO must therefore supply our aircraft with guidance information as a navigational aid.

Assisting the TADCO are a Senior Air Director (SAD) and a Fighter Air Director (FAD). It costs the government about $35,000 to train an air controller. Many have completed the six-week Airborne Intercept-Control Course at Glynnco, Ga. To become a SAD a controller must first be a qualified FAD. The SAD must understand the responsibilities of all personnel within his area of control and must be able to control the TAOC. Good judgment, speed and accuracy are important requirements.

The FAD is mainly responsible for all aircraft assigned to an interception mission and the interception tracks, as directed by the SAD.

Within MACS-5 are a transport unit, maintenance department, supply system, medical facilities and a communications set-up with a range of thousands of miles. MACS-5 is largely self-supporting.

The radar units are a vital part of the organization. If they failed to function, MACS-5 could not accomplish its mission. A well-stocked supply system and an adequate maintenance department keep the radar equipment in good working condition.

TWO LONG RANGE PORTABLE radar Control Center at Marine

Manning the radar systems is a tedious and complex task that calls for a highly trained Marine aviation electronics operator. Schooling is a "must" for this man. Most have attended the Air Control Anti-Air Warfare Operators' Course conducted by the Communications and Electronics School, San Diego. Usually, the electronics operator is also a graduate of the 32-week Radar Technician Course, which teaches all basic techniques of electronics and radar operations.

MACS-5 has two large radar units with a radius of approximately 200 miles. The squadron is also equipped with three smaller radar devices which can pick up signals within a radius of 100-150 miles. Each is highly mobile and easily relocated to suit the needs of the squadron.

The mark of a good Marine Air Control Squadron is the speed with which it can be ready for sudden or unexpected deployment. MACS-5 can be packed and ready to move anyplace in the world within a two day period. An advance party with a minimum of radar equipment can be dispatched in less than 24 hours. As complicated as the "bubble" appears to be, its relative simplicity is demonstrated by the fact that FIGHTER AIR DIRECTOR—Staff Sergeant Jason D. Warren plots the course of friendly and unidentified planes on radar inside the "Bubble" of Marine Air Control Squadron-5, Marine Corps Air Facility, New River.

INSIDE THE "BUBBLE", Lance Corporal Ronald Fritz, (foreground) calls Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point on the Air Control Combat Information Net and gives them locations of planes in the area.

Private Mark Austin puts the data concerning the planes on the board while Lance Corporal Robert Lucas plots their location.

After the 4th Marine Division assault forces established beachheads on Saipan and Tinian in 1944, Air Warning Squadron-5, the forerunner of MACS-5, commenced operation. Decommissioned in 1955, it was reactivated in October, 1957.

In May, 1963, MACS-5 went overseas to the Naval Air Station, Atsugi, Japan. A year later the squadron returned to the Marine Corps Air Facility, New River, where it has been since.

While at New River, the squadron's primary effort has been directed toward training personnel and the adaptation of new and more complex equipment. In addition to the normal mission of providing ground-controlled intercept training to the pilots and radar intercept operators of the 2d Marine Aircraft Wing's F4B Phantoms and F8 Crusaders, MACS-5 has also rendered valuable assistance to the Marine Corps Landing Force Development Activity in testing new equipment for use by the Fleet Marine Forces.

Lejeune Swimmers Sets State Mark

Stacy MacKenzie, nine-year-old ace of the Camp Lejeune Devilfish, splashed her way to an amazing victory and a new state record last week in the Carolina AAU Long course Junior Olympics held in Charlotte, N. C.

Stacy, swimming in the 9-10 age group, won the 100-meter freestyle in a time of 1:21, knocking two seconds off a state record that has stood since 1961.

According to her coach and father, Major J. M. MacKenzie, it is very rare for a nine-year-old to win this age group because many of the swimmers are almost 11-years-old.

Stacy's exploits added another chapter to the MacKenzie brother and sister act. Jamie, Stacy's 12-year-old brother, already holds a state in the 50-meter freestyle. In the Charlotte meet, won the 100-meter freestyle, and fifth in the 200 individual medley.

Three other Devilfish lived the elimination roumean feat, to qualify for nationals.

Andy MacKenzie, 11-old, finished seventh in the 100-meter freestyle, Gary was seventh in the 100 freestyle, and 16-year-old Wyss was eighth in the 100-meter breaststroke.

The Devilfish diving team attended the meet. J. Salsler, diving unopposed

Reenlistment Fable

Corporal Clem Bradshaw was raised in the boondocks . . . and showed it. He walked and talked slow and sometimes called cows in his sleep.

The city boys used to try to get Clem in poker games but they quit when Clem kept winning their money (He was lucky).

A car salesman rubbed his hands when Clem drove his '32 model puddle onto the lot. Clem drove away with a '39 fliwver and $18 to boot.

Clem shipped over for six years and drew a $5,318 variable reenlistment bonus.

A city slicker talked Clem into buying a little piece of land outside of town. Clem walks and talks slow, and he sometimes calls cows in his sleep. And if you're ever in Potash, Tenn., you might stop by Clem's place. He gives serviceman's discounts at his shopping center.

18 Parts Make 1 Medal Of Honor

How many parts are there to a Medal of Honor? According to Staff Sergeant Jimmie Howard, nominated for the nation's highest combat award for the defense of Hill 488, Vietnam, there are 18.

"It makes you feel sorta funny," Howard said. "There were 18 of us up there. Twelve of us got out."

In describing the courage and gallantry of his men, SSgt. Howard told how one of his men was knocked out by concussion. When the Viet Cong began to carry him away, the Marine, "... came to and killed two of them (Viet Cong) with his combat knife before he was killed."

It was similar instances that occurred throughout the defense of Hill 488 that led SSgt. Howard to make the statement, "It's hard to divide something like a medal but if anybody deserves it, it's the whole crew."

The 37-year-old Marine, a veteran of 16 years service, holds the Silver Star for his part in defending another hill in another war. The war was Korea, and the hill was known as Bunker Hill. That was almost 14 years ago.

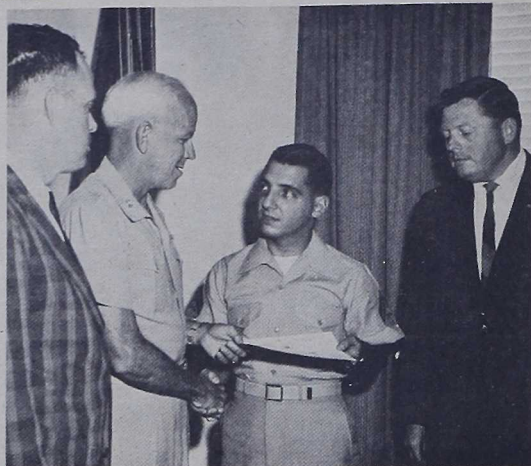

DOD Asks Fine For Kids' Uniforms

Homemade Marine Corps Greens may have a new price tag. . . $1,000. . . if a bill before the House and Senate Judiciary Committees becomes law.

According to Navy Times, the new bill would make it illegal, commercially or as an individual, to sell, wear or reproduce medals, decorations, badges, cap devices, ribbons, rosettes, emblems, patches, flags, seals, coats of arms, shoulder, lapel and sleeve insignia, and devices used to indicate grade, rating, branch, service or duty assignment.

Present law, as interpreted by the Justice Department in 1964, prohibits only the wearing of insignia that serve as identification. Maximum fine under the present law is $250.

The new bill, which provides a maximum fine of $1,000 for violators, was introduced to Congress by Army under Secretary David E. McGiffert, acting for the Defense Department.

550 2d MarDiv Marines Complete Driver Course

Five-hundred-fifty Marines from Headquarters Battalion, 2d Marine Division, have successfully completed the National Safety Council's Driver Improvement Course.

The eight-hour safe driving course was held for division Marines at Camp Lejeune during the week of July 25-29.

Civilian instructors from the North Carolina Industrial Education Center conducted the classes. In addition to the 550 Marines who completed the course, 21 division Marines became certified National Safety Council Driver Improvement Instructors. These Marines will conduct future classes aboard Camp Lejeune.

One of the purposes of the course is to demonstrate various safe driving techniques used in different situations while operating a vehicle. Another emphasizes the hazards of operating a vehicle at high speeds, and the final purpose, to instill in each Marine a sense of obligation to become a safe driver.

The division has set a goal for every Marine under the age of 25 to complete the course, and those personnel not completing the course are not permitted to drive on base.

Council Touring Camp Lejeune

Fifty members of the Neuse Development Council toured the base yesterday. Highlighting the visit was a trip to the First Infantry Training Regiment at Camp Geiger.

According to Albert Ellis, a local attorney and civic leader, the council is made up of members from eight counties, whose goal is to improve the area's industries, agriculture, recreation and travel facilities, and to aid in community development. Periodic cash awards are made to communities which show strong interest in self-improvement.

Although it is not supported by state funds, they do get advice from the state extension service and local agricultural specialist.

Reserve Major Leads 4 Lives

Major Nick Galafanakis, a reserve officer serving two weeks active duty with the 8th Marine Regiment, leads not three, but four lives.

In addition to his Marine Corps activities, Major Galafanakis is active in politics, practices law in Durham, N. C., and is an assistant professor of business law at Duke University. Although he teaches six to nine morning hours a week, the major observed, "I get downtown before most lawyers do."

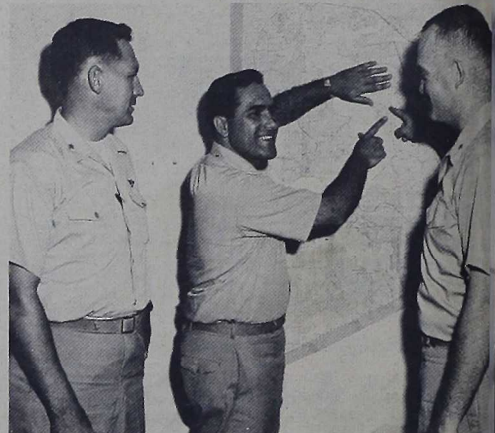

Major Galafanakis received his A.B. from Duke in 1951 and his LLB from the Duke Law School in 1953. He joined the Marine Corps Reserve in 1953, receiving his commission the same year. The major served with the 2d Battalion, 2d Regiment, 2d Marine Div as a platoon commander and legal officer.

After his release from active duty in 1956, then Lieutenant Galafanakis joined the 41st Rifle Company in Durham. As a captain, he served as the company's commander from 1961 to 1963.

The major, who received his latest promotion in June, is currently serving with Volunteer Training Unit 6, Raleigh, N. C.

While on active duty with the 8th Marines, the major is serving as Regimental S-3, a liaison operations officer, an liaison between the regiment and two Republic of Korea Marine officers, at Camp Lejeune on an eight-week training program.
