Marines Sweep Interservice Matches

Corps' Top Marksmen Capture 8 of 13 Events

The United States Marine Corps Rifle Team has bounced back from defeat at the hands of a U. S. Army Rifle Team during the 1963 Interservice Rifle Match to capture this year's week-long competition, winning 8 of the 13 matches fired.

Dominating the 13 match event from start to finish, Marine marksmen garnered a host of medals, cups, trophies and titles, including the highly-sought after Interservice Individual Rifle Championship and the Interservice Rifle Team Championship.

Marine SSgt. Donice R. Bartlett won the Interservice Individual Rifle Championship at the Marine Corps Schools' hosted competition with a perfect 500X 500 scoring with 62Vs.

Bartlett, currently serving with the Marksmanship Training Unit at Marine Corps Schools, compiled the highest aggregate score for the five matches leading to the championship.

The matches, designated after the five branches of the U. S. Armed Forces, began Friday, Aug. 7.

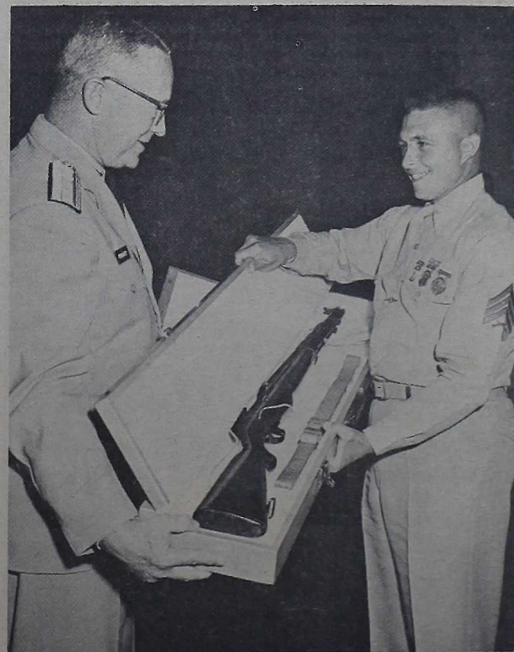

The match was fired in four stages with the Marines taking first place in three and second in the final stage.

The defending champions, the U. S. Army Team, fired 2455 and 221Vs to come in third, two points and four Vs behind the second place Air Force team. The U. S. Coast Guard placed fourth with 2419 and 176Vs and the Navy entry compiled 2418 and 158Vs for the fifth position. The Marine Corps Reserve Team placed sixth with 2388 and 166V scoring.

As the totals were posted on the bulletin board, Gen. Wallace M. Greene, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps was on hand to congratulate the winning team. Members of the team, captained by Col. Walter R. Walsh, included First Lieutenants David Willis and George M. Van Orden, MSgt. Otis T. Napper, Staff Sergeants Lewis T. Scoggins and Donald G. Barker, Sergeants James R. Bowen, Donice R. Bartlett, Jerry B. Tamlin and David A. Luke, and SSgt. Eric T. England.

Team coaches for the winning entry were WO Don L. Smith and MSgt. Jesse A. Dav-enport.

INTERSERVICE CHAMPION—Marine SSgt. Donice R. Bartlett, attached to the Marine Marksmanship Training Unit at Quantico is presented with a match-conditioned M-1 Rifle by RAdm. G. W. Pressey, on behalf of the Secretary of Defense. The presentation took place at the Shooters' Banquet in Daly Hall, during which Gen. Wallace M. Greene, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, promoted Bartlett meritoriously to his present rank.

VICTORY—General Wallace M. Greene, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, congratulates Colonel Walter R. Walsh, team captain and members of the Marine Corps team that won the Interservice Rifle Team Championship over the Air Force, Army, Coast Guard, Navy, and Marine Reserve. The victory was the first in the five year history of the Interservice Rifle Championship Match. The

The Marines scored 2460 out of a possible 2500. The Air Force was second with 2457, the Army was third with 2455, the Coast Guard had 2419 and the Navy 2418. The Marine Corps Reserve was last with 2388. The match climaxed a week of rifle competition at Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, by more than 600 shooters from duty stations all over the world.

Pay Bill Signed

President Johnson signed the $2 million military pay bill Aug. 13 which will provide raises for all enlisted servicemen except enlisted men with less than two years service.

The signing of the bill by the President insured that the increases would be reflected in the next military paychecks following the Sept. 1 effective date.

If "a picture is worth a thousands words," what then would be the value of the real thing? Would not the object itself create a clearer and longer-lasting picture in the mind?

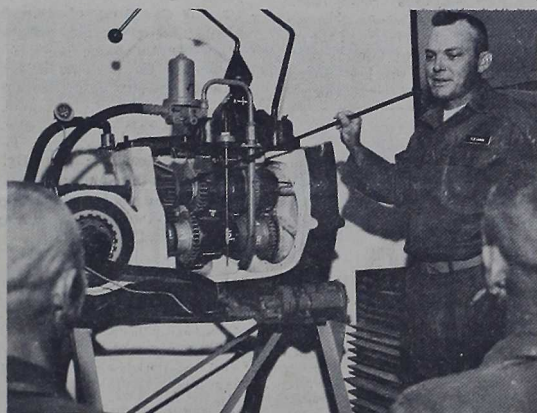

The instructors of Marine Corps Engineer Schools at Courthouse Bay found this out after adding their own alterations to the adage of the value of a picture. Their modifications resulted in a wide assortment of impressive and unique visual training aids. To date, these visual aids have increased the students' learning abilities and decreased the number of actual hours of instructions formerly required through the use of lectures, books, charts and pictures.

The school's improved training aids began coming into being last year when the Commanding Officer, LtCol. N. J. Dennis, sought the solution to the problem of ever-growing complexity of the latest mechanical systems.

Col. Dennis received his answer from his instructional staff's idea to create new training aids and improve on the older ones. Once the go ahead had been given, the instructors broke out the cutting torches, grinders, hack saws and paints and got down to the business of making their ideas a reality.

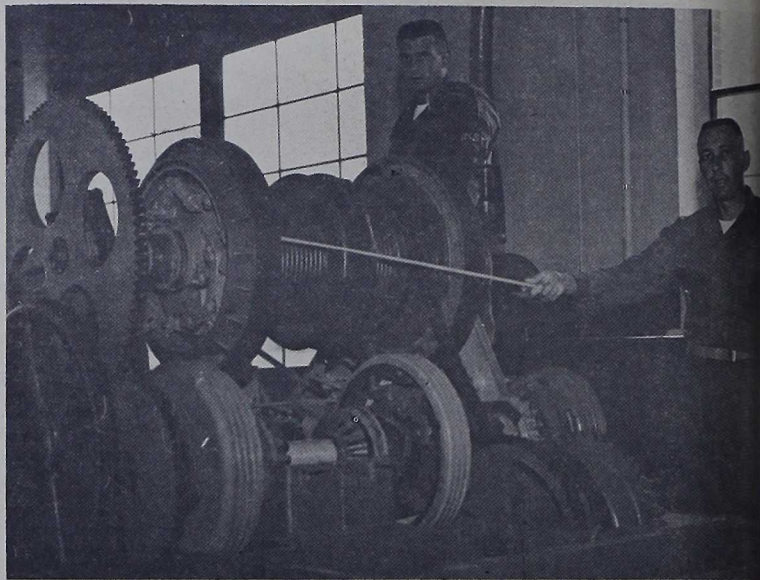

Their many hours of effort, from one and a half

GEAR BY GEAR, this tractor transmission is clearly explained by instructor SSgt. Charles H. Leach. Combining his effort with those of a fellow instructor, SSgt. Richard Bush, Sgt. Leach completed this visual aid after spending many off duty hours in its development.

THE PRIDE AND JOY of SSgt. O'Larry Lampkins is this cut-a-way, yet moveable, visual training aid used in the instructions on the standard axle. The cutting and painting required to complete this aid consumed nearly 80 hours of Sgt. Lampkins personal time.

OPERATING THE CONTROLS of this operational, cut-a-way visual training aid in crane mechanisms is SSgt. Merrill T. Morton, while GySgt. John H. Rausch points out the various

to more than 900, resulted in many unique, colorful, cut-a-way, operating, full-sized, interest-holding, visual training aids. These newest aids range in size from a small gear type oil pump to the king-sized hunk of versatility, the TD 15, a 19 and a half ton bulldozer, scoop loader, scraper and clam shell.

The hours of instructions saved by the use of the new aids varied according to the subject taught. In some cases, as many as 20 instructional hours were saved. Even though instruction time was shortened, the students have been able to get a clearer and a more complete understanding of the engines and transmissions of the equipment they would soon be operating in the field.

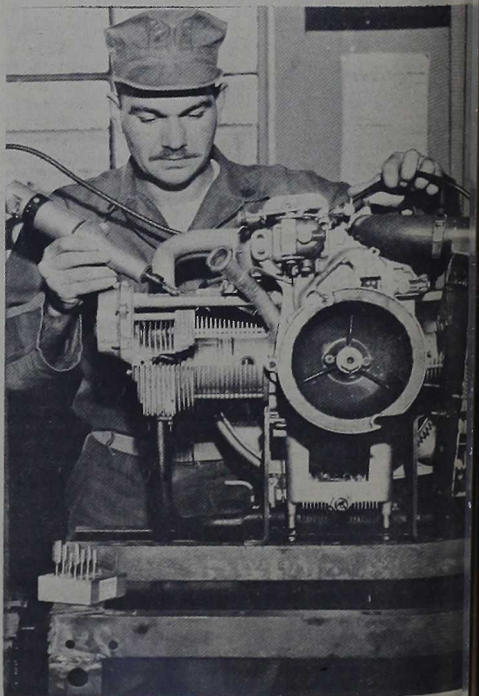

By the school's self-production of these aids, the Marine Corps has saved thousands of dollars. The cost of the school in producing the aids locally was only a small fraction of what commercial production would have been.

Generally, the training aids were made from items no longer serviceable. These items were then cut-a-way in such a manner as to expose the inner components and their arrangement and functioning. The inner components, which may be gears, bearings, pistons and other normally hidden working parts of an engine or transmission were then painted in accordance with a standard color code of the school, allowing easier recognition.

The development of these aids, showing the initiative and ingenuity of the school's instructors, is just another way in which Marine Corps Engineer Schools is continuing to improve in its mission of training efficient and competent engineers for duty with the "Force In Readiness."

THIS UPPER AND LOWER transmission system, used in standard road grader, took SSgt. Melvin J. Massie approximately 305 hours to complete for training purposes.

PUTTING FINISHING TOUCHES on the cut-a-way model of the standard military 10-horsepower gasoline engine, G. M. Schmidt smooths away rough edges left by a saw. Sgt. Schmidt spent approximately 85 of his own time in developing this visual aid for the Engineer School.

20 YEARS AGO

Marines Avenge Their Brothers Retaking The Island Of Guam

"The Japs have been known to withdraw from positions for tactical reasons, but never to run for their lives like these enemy stragglers on Guam." The speaker was Marine BrigGen. Lemuel C. Shepherd. The time was twenty years ago; August 10, 1944, after Guam Island, largest of the Marianas had been declared recaptured by U. S. Forces.

Japanese stragglers on Guam had good reason to run for their lives. The Americans had come to retake the 228-square-mile island and with them they brought terrifying destruction to the enemy.

Guam fell to the Japanese December 10, 1941. It cost Marine, Navy, and Army units 1,747 lives to reclaim the Pacific Island. The Japanese defeat was underwritten in 10,791 dead.

Before Guam was overwhelmed by Japanese forces, it was garrisoned by 153 Marines, a few scattered Naval personnel and an island defense company composed of Guamanians. An enemy force of nearly 6,000 took almost two days to wrest Guam from its tiny garrison.

The defense of Guam by a handful of Marines was related by Navy Chief Radioman George R. Tweed who hid in the jungled mountains of Guam for nearly 1,000 days after its capture. He was rescued by a Navy destroyer after his signal fires were spotted.

"I was home asleep the morning of December 8, 1941 (Dec. 7, U. S. time), when the chief radioman woke me and said, 'Pearl Harbor has been bombed and the Japs are at war with us.' I got up at once and reported for duty."

"Four hours later--about 9 a. m.--the first Jap planes came over Guam. They came continuously for two days, bombing and strafing."

"At sunset of the second day, Jap transports showed up on the horizon. The Japs began landing about midnight."

"We had so few guns, so little ammunition, there wasn't much we could do to defend."

"The Marines of Cabras Island, a narrow strip of land off the harbor (the western coast of Guam), armed only with machine guns, actually repulsed the Japs until their (the Marines') ammo gave out. A couple of one-pound guns on the ships in the harbor fired to the last while a single machine gun on Agaña height, above the town, the only anti-aircraft battery we had, exhausted its ammunition."

"The Japs forced a landing and rolled into town shooting."

"The Marines fought them street by street, house by house. One squad of Marines at the civilian jail had two Tommy guns. They fought to the last man." Asked if the "retreating"

Marines tried to defend the governor's palace, Tweed looked surprised.

"The Marines didn't retreat!" Tweed replied angrily. Marines had garrisoned Guam since 1899 when the Spanish ceded the island--the largest in the Marianas' chain--to the U. S. after the Spanish-American War.

The capture by the Japanese marked the first time that the island was out of American control in more than forty years. As the long years of World War II waned, the Japanese began losing ground in the Pacific. Marines hopped from atoll to atoll, island to island, wresting territory from a fanatical enemy who fought to the last man.

In the spring of 1944, Japanese forces began building up on Guam. Yet there was no indication that Americans would assault the island.

In June and July 1944, American bombers increased the tempo of their bombing raids on Guam.

On the morning of July 21, 1944--after 17 days of preliminary air and naval bombardment--the first waves of amphibious tractors laden with 3d Marine Division Leathernecks churned towards Guam's western shore at Apra harbor. The 1st Provisional Marine Brigade landed the same day.

Meanwhile, Navy ships kept up their relentless pounding of enemy installations with their big guns.

By mid-afternoon, Marines were climbing toward the hills along the coast in an effort to seize high ground. Tanks blasted away at Japanese strong-points as the assault gained momentum.

The following day, the American Forces beat their way through three miles of Japanese-infested jungles. By this time, a total of more than 8,000 enemy lay dead.

By August 6, the Japanese forces occupied only one-tenth of Guam. Extermination of the remaining enemy forces began the following day. American warships, planes, Marines and soldiers herded a last-ditch group of defenders into a 15-square-mile area and literally pulverized them.

The Marine and Army units drove a wedge within a mile of the eastern coast, splitting enemy forces and ensuring their destruction. This was the clinching blow.

Victory came to the Americans on the afternoon of August 10 when the island was declared secured. All that remained was to mop up small pockets of resistance which had been bypassed in the hasty onslaught.

Guam was almost as peaceful as it had been before the Japanese came. But the Japanese were still there. Their bodies littered the battle areas and smashed remnants of emplacements gave evidence of the fury of the battle.

The Americans had won a costly victory; the Japanese had suffered a dreadful defeat.

At the site of the old Marine Barracks on Guam, in which Japanese were quartered during the occupation, the American flag was raised. "To the Colors" was sounded by a Marine on a captured Japanese bugle. The Marines were back. They still are today!

U.S. OF AGANA surround the first troops of the 3d Marine Division to reach the island's capital.

Local Retarded Children Helped By Div. Marines

"home style" good-will mission conducted by a half-dozen 2d Division Marines has made school life more interesting for the 15 students at the Onslow-Camp Lejeune School for Retarded Children.

Distributing paint brushes, hammers, nails and an assortment of other renovation tools, SSgt. John P. Banahan, Battery E, 2d Battalion, 10th Marines; Sgt. H. S. Shelly, Headquarters Battery, 10th Marines; and L. Cpl. T. L. Ward, Headquarters Battery, 2d Battalion, 10th Marines, arrived at the school and began building, painting and repairing recreational equipment for use by the children.

Indianapolis Racer Scheduled To Speak At Safety Program

Agabashian, 11-time champion in the Indianapolis 500-mile race is scheduled to present the award-winning Chatham Highway Safety Program here Sept. 2 through Sept. 4.

Our racing stars on the program are Duane Carter, a veteran of 14 appearances in the Indianapolis "500," Johnny Boye 9 times in the "500" and Bob Veith, with 7 appearances. Representing the program, Mr. Agabashian uses his racing experiences to illustrate three basic points of safe driving: MENTAL ALERTNESS, COURTESY and GOOD COORDINATION. Included in the presentation is a 27-minute color film made at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Champion Spark Plug Company introduced the program to secondary school audiences in 1953 and developed a military version in 1957. Since then it has appeared at virtually every major armed forces installation in the United States.

For its efforts, the Toledo County has twice received the National Safety Council's Public Safety Award for Exceptional Service to Safety.

One of the most popular members of the racing fraternity, Mr. Agabashian is past president of the Champion 100 Mile Club, an exclusive group of race drivers who have averaged the 500 miles at Indianapolis without relief at 100 mph or more.

The Marines constructed a playhouse and a sandbox, erected a chin-up bar and a jumping board and painted fences around the school yard. In addition, the Marines gave the school a plastic swimming pool donated by Sgt. Maj. H. C. Murray, 2d Battalion, 10th Marines.

Mrs. Samuel L. Norman, Director of the School, says, "The children had almost nothing in the way of summer recreational facilities before the Marines came. Now, the equipment helps tremendously with our therapy. The children get the chance to exercise muscles which they couldn't exercise here before."

The mission began in early July when SSgt. Banahan attended a meeting of the local Retarded Association. He developed the idea of lending a helping hand to the school when Mrs. Norman asked for funds to buy paint for the school.

A short time later SSgt. Banahan contacted his battalion sergeant major and explained his ideas of aiding the school and asked the sergeant major if he knew of anyone who would be interested in helping with the project. Staff Sergeant Terrell, Sgt. Shelly, Cpl. Crozier and L. Cpl. Ward got word of the sergeant's good-will project and immediately volunteered their help. Together with some of Sgt. Banahan's neighbors, the Marines gathered wood, paint, nails, and other materials for more than a week before they showed up at the school.

Now that this project is complete, the 10th Marines "good-willers" have their sights set on the Camp Lejeune Pre-School, where they plan on doing the same type of thing for younger retarded children.

Free Installation

In a continuing drive for highway safety the Base Exchange will install exchange purchased safety belts and tires free of charge. Marines who plan to do extensive traveling over the Labor Day weekend are strongly urged to take advantage of this service.

Fair Facts

Time-Saving Pointers May Help Fairgoers

Since most Marines visiting the fair are usually on a tight time schedule, there are a few pointers that may help conserve time for seeing more things than expected.

One thing is to arrive at the fair early in the morning. The gates open at 9 and the exhibits open at 10. Pick out one of the big exhibits, such as General Motors which usually has a long waiting line during the day, and get in line before the exhibit opens. You will find that once the exhibit opens the line will go very fast and you'll be ready for another exhibit without having lost too much time.

Lines are also shorter during the lunch and dinner hours. And don't be afraid of going to the fair on weekends. The crowds at that time are generally no larger than the weekday crowds and have on many occasions averaged much lower.

Of course, time is not the only thing servicemen are interested in saving at the fair. Money is also an important factor. Food is really the only thing one must purchase at the fair and in most cases restaurant prices are very expensive.

The solution to this is to purchase sandwiches or box lunches in the city to take with you to the fair. Many cafeterias and food stores in New York City and surrounding areas prepare special World's Fair lunches which are much cheaper than buying food on the fair grounds.

Your Actions Control 'Time Bank' Dividends

What would you do if you had a bank that — credited $86,400 to your account each morning? — carried over no balance from day to day? — cancelled every evening whatever amount you failed to use during the day?

Well, you — as a member of the Armed Forces — have such a bank. The only think is, it doesn't deal in money. It deals in time. But somebody once coined the phrase "time is money," so perhaps it really makes no difference.

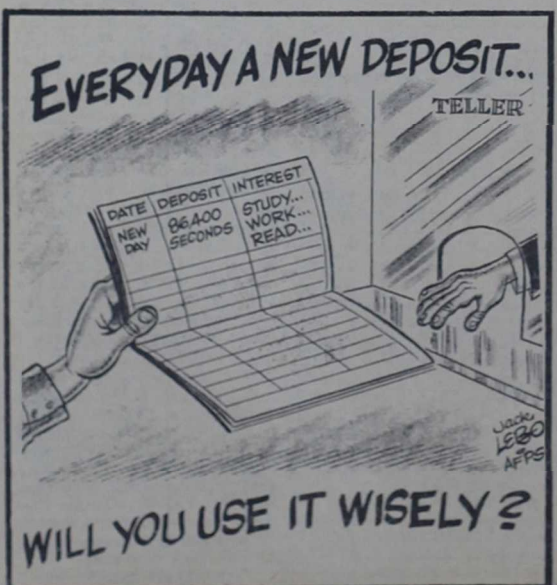

Each morning your individual account in this "time depository" is credited with 86,400 seconds. Each night, whatever amount of time you have failed to use to good advantage is written off — never to be available again.

When you fail to invest each day's deposits wisely, the loss is yours and also that of your branch of the Armed Forces and its mission.

There are many ways to take advantage of your account with time. You can attend school, take correspondence courses, use the library, or keep abreast of the political situation so that your vote will be a wise one. You can spend your time reading the daily newspapers a little more closely, so you'll know more about the world situation and have a greater awareness of your role in relation to it as a serviceman.

The list of wise time investments could go on for pages. But the important thing is, no matter which method you choose, you're going to wind up a better-informed, more productive person. Your life is going to be more valuable to yourself and to your country.

At the beginning of tomorrow's new day, each of us will be face to face with a bank account containing 86,400 seconds. It's up to you to decide how many of them you can afford to lose.

Chaplain's Corner

During a counselling interview with a man who was facing disciplinary action which could result in a court martial, a chaplain was asked the following question, "What is the secret to living a good life?" The young man who asked this question was very sincere. He actually wanted to know how he could stay out of trouble, and there was a way in which to lead a happy, purposeful life.

This question is one that is being asked more and more by young men and women today. It is being asked by those who are facing disappointment, difficulty, and discouragement. It is being asked by many who have searched the shallows of self-indulgence and have been disappointed.

It is on the lips of others who have tried to scale the rocky cliffs of materialism only to find it difficult and unrewarding. This question is foremost in the thoughts of those who have wandered aimlessly along the endless beaches of personal pleasure seeking purpose in life—only to end up tired and discouraged.

Is there a secret to happy purposeful living? If so, it is an open secret. It is a secret available to you and to me and to mankind in the Holy Bible.

Through this "Book of Life", God speaks to us directly in the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount. He answers this question fully and finally for anyone who is willing to listen and obey.

Have you read the answer to this question lately? The Ten Commandments are in Chapt. 20 of the book of Exodus. The Sermon on the Mount may be found in Chaps. 5, 6, & 7 of the Gospel according to St. Matthew.

If you will take time to study the answer in your Bible, you will have taken the first step toward living the open secret in your life. It is the truths contained in our Bible, instilled in the hearts and minds of men which are translated into happy, purposeful living.

MONTFORD POINT STAFF NCO CLUB

Drop by our club tomorrow night and enjoy a flounder or hot roast beef dinner with salad bar, all for only 75c. Come a little early and enjoy happy hour from 4:30 until 5:30 p.m.

Saturday night from 8:30 p.m. until the wee hours J. R. Williams will be on hand with his band to entertain for your listening and dancing pleasure.

Sunday we have rib eye steak dinners for $1.10 with salad bar. Then Tuesday night, come early for happy hour from 4:30 until 5:30 p.m. We also have chicken dinners for 75c.

Wednesday is game night. We'll have chicken again, only this time it will be roasted with trimmings for the small sum of 75c.

HADNOT POINT STAFF NCO CLUB

It's weekend time once again and what better place to spend a few relaxing hours than at your SNCO Club enjoying the friendly faces, pleasant surroundings, and especially the reduced prices featured for this occasion. "Happy Hours" start at 4 and goes until 6 p.m. Hungry? Try our special from the grill. A big tender juicy Ribeye steak for only one buck. A better deal is not to be had aboard the base.

If you stick around for the night time activities, you'll find the sounds of Bob Bilbertz and his T-Fones from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. As you probably know the T-Fones have just returned from the Caribbean where they were a tremendous success on the fence line at Gtmo, the beach at Vieques, and in the number three hold of APA 113. The only place they failed to make a hit was on the "crap" tables at the Caribe Hilton.

Friday night the galley special is a golden fried flounder dinner for only 75c. How do we do it? It's easy, the fish are stolen. If seafood isn't on your mind, how about a juicy little 3 oz ribeye steak for the same price. Remember, prices are born here and raised elsewhere.

Saturday night, back by popular demand, is Sam Seaburg and his 200 selections. For people who don't like music we have a blank disc on the juke box and for a dime you get three minutes of silence. (Only kidding, but it's not a bad idea). From the chef, we present the daddy of the goodies. It's a big T-Bone steak dinner for only $1.75. This beef comes from highly educated steers. As a matter of fact we take only the top three steers from each herd for use in our galley.

Sunday, how about bringing out the whole family for one of our delicious roasted chicken dinners for a dollar. Much less for the small fry of course. The chickens we serve are all corn fed, raised on wire, and never touched by human hands. (And if you saw our cooks you would believe me). Music tonight? You bet! It's that ole rascal Squirrel and his Aces. After his many smashing engagements throughout Onslow county, and sometimes even as far south as Holly Ridge, Alrich and the boys will beat it out at our house this evening from 8 to 12. This is a fun group folks so let's give them a big turnout.

By Tuesday night you should have recovered from the weekend so let's start it all over by patronizing our Game Night. We kick it off at 8 p.m. sharp and everyone will have a ball, and that's a fact. Come look us over and see what we offer for the discriminate gamer. Air conditioning, bright lights, elegant personnel, comfortable seating, outstanding service, and there's always that little extra something.

ADVANCE NOTICE: On Friday, Aug. 23, the big (17 piece) Don Grimes Orchestra and Floor Show will be at the club. Don and the boys will play for 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. with a floor show at the club, and remember, go to your club. Go to the club of your choice, but go to your club.

STAFF NCO BEACH CLUB

Throughout the summer, the weather has been against us as far as our evening activities were concerned but we are going to give it another try this Friday. Yes, there will be dancing under the stars at the club from 7 until 11 p.m.

Direct from the World's Fair where they successfully broke all entertainment records at the Mountain Dew Pavilion, we have the one and only, Squirrel and his Aces. Alrich and his boys have long been high on the popularity list and their current best seller, "OOH PAH PAH DOO, Part XXVI," is breaking records all over Fotney County, N. C.

They further provided all the background music for those three great aviation pictures "Cat On A Hot Tin Fuselage," "Don't Go Near The Propwash," and "Around The World In 80 Crashes."

See this terrific group in living color. LIVE! IN PERSON! on our 200 revolving bandstand one night only, this Friday, Aug. 21 from 7 come 11. (Sorry, only the first 1200 people will be admitted.) In case of incle, inculum, inklemu, RAIN... Forget It!

NCO CLUB

The NCO Club, the only club aboard Camp Lejeune, that consistently has top in entertainment, food and beverage has done it again. This time the only thing being repeated is the quality of the cuisine, quantity of beverage and the melodious sounds of the five musical groups scheduled for your entertainment.

Tonight the Downbeats will be the musical provider. Stop in after supervising the field day.

Friday night, the featured item on the menu will be Filet of Flounder platter, 75c. The Vons will be making the sounds to start the weekend off.

Saturday, we will have grilled golden brown Pork Chops for $1.20. To highlight the menu, for your musical entertainment, Bob Jones and his group will be spotlighted on the stage.

Sunday, try our choice Filet Mignon for $1.90 from the heart cuisine of the club. Turn that quiet evening into an evening filled with fun and come over to enjoy Don Sylvia and his band.

Monday, are you suffering from beginning of the week blues? Had too much sun and sand? Remember that your club provides the best in entertainment for the NCO's of Camp Lejeune.

Tuesday is Game Night, with the Game Night Special to be announced from the Dining Room.

Wednesday night a floor show! With Dave Brunett and his gang.

THE PINK PANTHER
Is it a mystery? Is it a farce? Is it a comedy? Is it a lampoon on the doings of the high jinx of the international set on the Italian Riviera? None of these things and of them, say the producers of Mirisch Company's Blake Edwards production "The Pink Panther" starring David Niven, Peter Sellers, Robert Wagner and Capucine in Technicolor-Technirama.

Twins' Wish Comes True: Now M. C. Lieutenants

Identical twins, James and Paul Van Riper decided when they were youngsters that some day they would join the Marine Corps. They realized that ambition in 1956 when they enlisted in the Marine Corps Reserve, and today they are second lieutenants, serving with the 8th Marines, 2d Marine Division.

The only children of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Van Riper of Pittsburgh, Pa., the brothers became interested in the Corps one day when their father settled an argument for them. While one youngster claimed the Army was the "best" service, the other upheld the merits of the Navy. The senior Van Riper then told the boys about the Marine Corps, and the argument ended.

Paul and Jim have gone through recruit training, advance infantry training, Officer Candidate School and Basic School together. They are currently rifle platoon commanders with the 1st Bn., 8th Marines.

A first meeting with the Van Riper twins is a startling experience. They are mirror images of each other, and it takes a while to distinguish them. The Marine uniform, with rank insignia and Organized Marine Corps Reserve Medal, makes the job of telling the brothers apart even more difficult.

Together they excelled during recruit training. Jim topped Non-Commissioned Officer school and was first in his Officer Candidate class. Paul won the Marine Corps Association award for being first in leadership in his Basic class. They also attended the U. S. Army Ranger Course.

They are experts on the rifle and pistol ranges. Only one point separates them when it comes to rifle shooting. Last year Jim fired a 232, Paul a 231. Paul, naturally, edged his brother with the pistol, 334 to 331.

Do they think alike? On separate occasions the brothers were asked why they intend to make the Marine Corps a career. Jim responded, "There is no doubt in my mind about the Corps. It is the best service." He cited the "professional" attitude of the Marine Corps and said he enjoys the responsibility given to individuals.

Paul's answer was similar. "There's nothing to compare with the challenges the Marine Corps provides." He added, possibly remembering what his father had told him years ago, "Nothing begins to stack up to the Corps."

Paul and Jim have always been together as often as possible. They attended grammar school and high school together. Though they went to different colleges, Paul to California State College California, Pa., and Jim to the University of Pittsburgh they weren't too far from home and the family was often re-united.

Like most identical twins, the similarity of their features confuses most people. As youngsters Jim and Paul puzzled relatives, teachers, classmates and friends. At Parris Island their drill instructor labeled them numbers one and two, and identified them accordingly.

Now the 8th Marines have the problem of distinguishing one from the other. Paul commands the first platoon of Company "D", and Jim the third Platoon of Company "B".

CONGRATULATIONS—Major General John H. Masters, right, is congratulated on being promoted to his present rank by his brother, Major General James M. Masters, Sr., following promotion ceremonies at Headquarters Marine Corps August 4. General Wallace M. Greene, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Masters pinned the twin stars to the new major general's uniform.

Recipe Of The Week

SHRIMP SUPREME

1 Pound Shrimp—fresh or frozen
3/4 cup flour
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. black pepper
3/4 cup beer
1 pound fat for deep frying

Clean the shrimp and wash them (a "Zippout" shrimp cleaner makes light work of this task as it removes the vein and shell in one easy operation. Cut along the back side of the jumbos only, as this makes them cook quicker.

Drain the shrimp while preparing the batter. Start heating the fat in a deep pan. A French fryer works best, however a frying pan will do. Mix flour, salt and pepper in a mixing bowl and add beer gradually.

Dip four shrimp in the batter and thoroughly cover; then lift with fork and quickly drop into very hot fat. Cook until rich golden brown. Remove from fat and drain on paper towels. Continue cooking shrimp four at a time.

Serve with your favorite seafood sauce. (This will serve four, but for those who really appreciate good seafood, you'd better buy an extra pound.)

Household Hints

no. 2-1/2 can of fruit or vegetables. If you leave the food or vegetables in the can, just open the can, throw the top away and fit the plastic one on.

For dingy candles, white or otherwise, try washing them in detergent and not too warm water. The candles will come out looking like new.

An easy way to store clothes and keep the moths away is this. Make some small bags of nylon net, or cut the foot part of old nylon stockings, put a short draw string around the top, fill the little bags half-way with moth balls and hang them on your clothes hangers with the clothes and sweaters.

The moth balls don't actually touch the clothes but the nylon lets the mothball aroma circulate through the closet. The nylon net bags, if that's what you use, look attractive in the closet and at the same time solve the problem of moths.

For travelers here's a great idea. To keep cosmetics, medicine and other paraphernalia in order, remove the tray from your overnight case and set it in the dresser drawer. It is replaced in the case for your travel and already contains the items needed for the trip.

Here's a thought. The new plastic tops which come on soft cans fit perfectly on a Miss Pam Dennis, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. N. J. Dennis of Camp Lejeune, will appear Aug. 27 in this year's Miss Onslow County Pageant when she crowns the new Miss Onslow County. Acting as master of ceremonies for the pageant will be Miss Jeanne Swanner the 1963 Miss North Carolina.

Bicycle Safety Clinic

A Bicycle Safety Clinic will be conducted for all Tarawa Terrace bike riders beginning Monday, Aug. 24, at the Community Center. Representatives from the Provost Marshal's Office, will be present to instruct in the rules of the road and bicycle safety.

The Clinic will begin with a general meeting at 9:30 a.m., during which all points of bicycle riding will be discussed. The meeting will include a question-answer period.

Following the general meeting the boys and girls present will be divided into small groups where practical training and observation of each child's riding will be conducted. All groups will have at least two training sessions, during the week.

cottons, corduroy, wide and fancy wale, velveteen, ottoman, and suede. Quilting provides new contrasts which puff up the surface of many cottons.

The smart young set will prefer corduroy which is highlighted in sport wear, suits and dresses. One of the newest fabrics of the season is a new cotton that looks and feels like leather, but is washable, porous and water-repellent. This new fabric is also dressy enough to be worn for those special occasions. Informal cottons cut on formal lines and formal cottons cut on informal lines make news for special events this season. Velveteen will be very good this year especially for big evenings where long dresses have suddenly become the rule instead of the exception. Contrasting cottons at the bottom with a velveteen top is one of the most unusual combinations.

All in all, this fall should prove to be interesting along the fashion lines at least.

FASHION HIGHLIGHTS

For fall fashion is the term used to describe the new styles in the mood of autumn. The stylish woman takes the weeks when the calendar says it's fall, but the thermometer registers summer temperatures.

Cotton and synthetics come into their own for the type of style which includes large quantities of back to school and college costumes. In this section of the country there is an unusually large demand for early fall clothing. Working girls as well as school girls usually need lighter weight clothing until autumn is almost over.

A lot of these early fall costumes this year is a free cut. The body is in but the skirt is not. Short flip skirts are very slim and often bare the legs. Skirts are cut with the hem from the hips. They include "A" lines, pleats and

Materials that meet the demands include richly textured

2d Marines' Top Squad Quantico Bound

Picture an open field, about 200 yards square, surrounded by pine trees and brush — maybe an enemy patrol too. Not a soul in sight, though somewhere in the woods, a jeep engine idles. Nothing moving, only the wind rippling the tall grass in the field, kicking up little clouds of dust through the trees.

Suddenly the wind carries in the sound of roaring aircraft engines, accompanied by the unmistakable pock-pock-pock of rotor blades, slapping against the warm afternoon air. Two choppers, hugging the tree tops, leap into view and waste no time setting down on the field.

The cargo? The legend "MARINES" on the fuselage tells the tale.

So begins the trial, not by combat, but against the clock and all the lessons of battle for top-notch squads of the 2d Marine Division competing for the honor of representing their regiment in the annual Rifle Squad competition to be held at Quantico, Va., next month.

Competing squads are subjected to nearly every test of their skills that a squad might be called upon to perform in combat, with a couple of twists thrown in for good measure. Airborne landing, approach march, proper employment of the five paragraph order, camouflage, fire discipline, night reconnaissance patrols, chemical warfare plus the constant physical strain of simulated combat conditions are just a few of the trials each squad must face.

Nothing escapes the watchful eyes of the instructors and judges, whose collective knowledge of infantry techniques binds them together as formidable critics in deed.

For the winning squad, it's well worth the effort and a crack at the Marine Finals. The losing squad, though perhaps disappointed, gains valuable experience in the process and must have a better chance at the same goal next year.

REGIMENTAL WINNERS—Their uniforms may not be the sharpest, after what they've been through, but they're standing tall and proud. This squad from Company "I", 3d Battalion, 2d Marines was chosen to represent their regiment in the All-Marine Squad Competition to be held at Quantico, Va., next month. Shortly after this picture was taken, these men went on a three-mile run, followed by a night reconnaissance patrol. At the head of his squad stands Squad Leader Sgt.

"LET'S HIT IT."—Squad moves out at high port as helicopter pilot guns chopper's engine for quick lift off. Under combat conditions squad must exit helicopter as quickly as possible leaving pilot free to make rapid departure from landing zone.

"YOU GOTTA BLEND, BUDDY . . ."—This pair of Marines make good use of available flora, as one adds a sheaf of leaves to his buddy's jacket.
