Pay Bill Moves To White House

Presidential Signature Expected This Month

With the passage of the military pay bill by the House, all that is needed for it to become law is the President's signature. The House speedily passed the bill by voice vote Monday, August 3, and if signed by the President this month military paychecks will be fatter Sept. 1, one month earlier than the pay bill proposed by DOD.

The pay bill gives an across-the-board increase of 2.5 percent to officers and enlisted men with over two years service. Officers with under two years service will receive an 8.5 percent increase, but the pay of draftees and enlisted men with under two years service will remain the same.

This is an increase of one tenth of a percent for enlisted men and officers with over two years service and a five and a half percent increase for junior officers over the raise proposed by DOD.

However, Assistant Secretary of Defense Norman S. Paul urged passage of the pay bill to demonstrate that regular military pay adjustments are now accepted policy as pledged by President Kennedy when he signed last year's pay bill.

In President Johnson's budget message to Congress this year, he reaffirmed the soundness of an annual review of military compensation and his support of this pledge.

When the pay bill is signed it will be the smallest raise for the military passed since 1922, but it will be the quickest to follow a previous raise. If it is signed this month, it will follow last year's pay increase by 11 months.

DISSATISFIED

Quick action on the pay bill by the House does not mean they were satisfied with it. Representative Mendall L. Rivers, whose committee handled the bill, pointed out that any debate on significant points of the Senate's bill would jeopardize its passage this year.

Representative Rivers, who is expected to succeed Rep. Carl Vinson as Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee next January, said, "I don't think this (the pay raise) is adequate, but it is the best we can do in 1964."

He added that if the Defense Department does not come up with a comprehensive new pay bill in January he would, and it would include enlisted men under two years, and that there would be committee hearings on it.

Mr. Paul said that he did not know whether Defense would have a pay proposal by January or not.

Because of Rep. Rivers' strong feeling on the subject of military compensation and his possible position in the House next year, an excerpt from his statement to the House on the pay bill is reprinted below:

"Now, let me give you my views on this proposal. When I say this is a modest pay increase that is the understatement of the year.

I am not impressed with comparability studies that have been prepared comparing military

MEMENTO TO MARINES—General Wallace M. Greene, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, left, presents a group of historic U. S. Marine Corps insignia mounted and encased in glass to a Commandant General, Royal Marines, General Sir Malcolm Cartwright-Taylor, right. Admiral C. C. Griffin, Commander in Chief, U. S. Naval Forces, Europe, center, was also present when General Greene called on General Cartwright-Taylor in his London headquarters. The memento was presented on the occasion of the Royal Marines' 300th anniversary. General Greene, attending the Tercentenary as the guest of the Royal Marines, also presented them three rifles representing eras in the histories of both Corps during which they fought side by side.

Two 'Med' Marines Cited For Life-Saving Rescue

Letters of Appreciation were presented to Lt. Everette S. Roane, Platoon Commander, First Platoon, Company "B", 2d Reconnaissance Battalion, and SSgt. Bruce M. Wincentsen, Headquarters and Service Company, Battalion Landing Team 2/6, July 21, for their part in a rescue mission which saved a sailor, attached to Amphibious Squadron Eight, from possible death.

Captain David S. Bill, Jr., Commander, Amphibious

Squadron Eight, presented the letters during informal ceremonies aboard the attack transport ship USS Monrovia (APA-31)

In the letter from Captain Bill, the men were commended for their immediate response to a plea for help when another member of the Naval Service became stranded on a cliff June 26.

Brooklyn Wherry Housing Refund

Francis R. Curry, New York attorney, is faced with an unusual problem. In 1963, after having obtained a $200,000 judgment, he was charged by a New York court to oversee the distribution of the $200,000 to servicemen. So far, he has only been able to give away half of that amount. His main difficulty is a familiar one. He doesn't have addresses of the servicemen concerned.

Mr. Curry was appointed special guardian in a tax refund case for military tenants who lived in the Wherry Housing near Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, N. Y. He was successful in securing the $200,000 and now is anxious that each man get his share. If you lived at Fort Hamilton Wherry Housing during the period July 1954 through June 1958, and if you have not already heard from Mr. Curry, drop him a line in care of Reilly, Curry & Gibbons, 225 Broadway, N. Y. 10007. Letters should state the apartment and building numbers, as well as the dates of occupancy.

NOTICE Road Closed

The Base Provost Marshal has announced that a portion of Highway No. 172 will be closed to all but emergency traffic August 10, from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Highway No. 172 from the junction of Lyman Road and Highway No. 172 at Triangle Outpost to the junction of Highway No. 172 and Sneads Ferry Road at Duck Creek will be restricted to all normal traffic.

Through traffic on Highway No. 172 when the road is closed will be re-routed on Lyman and Sneads Ferry Roads.

Money And Marines

By SSgt. L. E. WITCONIS

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Fourth in a continuing series on the Marine and his personal finances)

No intelligent Marine would start off on a field maneuver without sufficient clothing, equipment and rations to take him there and back. By the same token, no Marine could be considered wise if he took on more financial obligation than he could comfortably handle.

A Marine in the field is on the lookout for the extraordinary—measuring value against value before making a decision. The same should hold true in matters of personal finance. Sometimes the safest avenue of approach is the unusual. But unless the decision is evaluated one can easily overlook the dangers lurking in the shadows.

Insurance Policy Loans

When it comes to small cash loans, an outlet often overlooked is a loan on a life insurance policy. Americans today own over $600 billion worth of life insurance.

Yet, for every valid reason given in favor of borrowing on life insurance, another seems to crawl into view.

Loans are granted on almost every type of life insurance except term insurance. Rates are comparatively low at 4-6% interest annually. The amount of the loan is fixed at the loan value of the policy and is stated within the policy. The older your policy is, the higher the loan value—commonly known as cash surrender value. The pleasant, but often deceiving, part of borrowing from insurance companies is the knowledge that you will not be hounded for repayment of the loan. In fact, the only time you may be reminded that you have a loan in force is when you receive your statement of annual interest charges. Loans are made with a minimum of red tape. All that is required is a letter to the insurance company or the forwarding of a simple application. No questions, no credit checks and no personal embarrassment.

Flip the coin and you will find that not being pressured into repayment can work to your disadvantage. Marines tend to let repayment of loans from insurance companies slide by, until finally a landslide of interest charges fall due. However, the chief danger in borrowing on life insurance is that the amount of the loan decreases the face value of the policy, thereby lessening your protection in case of death.

Credit Unions

A well managed credit union may be the best answer to the serviceman's need for extra cash. Generally, loans are made at reasonable rates because credit unions operate under low overhead costs and are, for the most part, exempt from taxes and often have use of free office space and clerical help.

Loans are usually limited to $400 on unsecured notes at rates of 0.25% to 1% on the unpaid balance monthly, which amounts to 3-12% a year.

Losses on loans at credit unions are almost non-existent due to the close relationship of the credit union with the borrower. But because applications are placed before a board of fellow workers for approval, many servicemen balk at the idea of this type of borrowing.

Actually, the military credit union is tailor made for the Marine who decides to avail himself of its services. A majority of the loans are repaid through allotment and part of the monthly interest charges are normally deducted and placed into a savings account for the borrower.

Credit unions are formed as savings institutions and loan agencies for members only and are operated under Federal and state laws.

Pawnbrokers

When a Marine's credit worthiness is low it means only one thing. He has overextended his credit and should refrain from further borrowing. In most cases, such a person is forced to refrain because he cannot get credit anyway. This Marine then becomes an easy target for the pawnbroker, symbolically known in days past by the three spheres hanging over the door.

NOTE: In last week's article, a statement was made that "Banking laws of North Carolina limit commercial banks to 5% discount." This figure should have read "6% discount..."

Although the pawnbroker caters to the destitute, he too has his share of problems. With the rise of discount houses, pawnbrokers find it difficult to appraise the loan value of pawn items. Further, when he pawns objects which later are found out to be stolen goods, he suffers the loss. Perhaps this justifies the high rate of interest charged—as high as 15% a month but sometimes as low as 3%.

The sad case is the customer of a pawnshop who pawns and redeems a watch or other valuables as often as once a payday, either unaware of the high interest rate or highly improvident with his personal budget.

Boy's League Election

A meeting has been slated for tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Midway Park Community Center to elect officers to the Camp Lejeune Boy's League Advisory Board. The meeting is open to the public.

LCpl. J. L. Mooney

Marines In Action Inspire Talented WM Artist

The artist is only a pencil in the hands of time according to a renowned art critic but in the case of Woman Marine Lance Corporal Janice L. Mooney, father time has been guiding her hand since she was four years old. LCpl. Mooney is a member of the Art Department, Training Aids Library at Camp Lejeune. Her duties consist of making graphic charts, signs and posters but on her off-duty hours she paints scenes and like-like studies of Marine Corps life.

"In civilian life I painted mostly landscapes and animals", she said, "but military life changed that, because of the wealth of material I have found right here at the base".

Her material, as she puts it, is the material the Marine Corps was founded on, the Marine infantryman. Capturing the spirit of the Marine Corps "ground-pounder", and putting it on canvas has been her ambition since she joined the Marine Corps.

"I've always been inspired by the precision movement of Marines ever since I saw my first combat demonstration", she commented.

During a recent night firing demonstration held by the First Infantry Training Regiment, which LCpl. Mooney witnessed, she started working on a series of three paintings depicting the demonstration.

She usually arrives at the Art Department around 6:30 a. m. and works on her oil paintings until 8 a. m., when she stops to assume her regular duties. Her lunch hour is also spent painting.

"Since I have been working in this section as an illustrator I've learned a lot from the patience and understanding of a section head SSgt. E. D. Overbold", she said.

SSgt. Overbold, an accomplished illustrator and painter, presented MajGen. A. L. Boser, Commanding General, Marine Corps Base with a portrait of the late President John F. Kennedy which was forwarded to Headquarters, Marine Corps.

LCpl. Mooney enlisted in the Marine Corps Reserve, Raleigh, N. C. After completion of her basic training she was transferred to Marine Corps Base for duty.

She was assigned duties as Administrative Clerk with the Woman Marine Company and continued to paint on her off-duty hours.

After the Commanding Officer of the Woman Marine Company viewed some of her paintings (former Commanding Officer transferred LCpl. Mooney to the Art Department for duty as an illustrator.

"I've never wanted to be an artist", she said, "I took it up as a hobby, but the more I painted and studied painting the more I found myself deeply engrossed in it".

She became interested in painting as a hobby under the direction of her artist uncle who encouraged her. Her only formal art training consisted of high school art classes.

LCpl. Mooney is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Long Mooney, 1015 Spring Garden Street, Greensboro, N. C.

Promotions for Marines ready selected will continue to be made as vacancies occur.

The selection board for sergeant is scheduled to convene August 17.

NEW INSPECTOR — Colonel Glenn R. Long assumed the duties on August 1 as the Marine Corps Base Deputy Chief of Staff, Inspector.

BRIGADIER GENERAL RICHARD A. EVANS, a Reserve on active duty for training, is serving as Acting Assistant Division Commander, 2d Marine Division, from August 1-14. Battalion Landing Team 2/6 Upholds 'People-To-People' Program

Clothing Donated By Families Here Distributed To Needy Greek Children

WITH THE U. S. SIXTH FLEET IN THE MEDITERRANEAN, (Delayed)—Boxes of clothing, some paint and nails for repairs, and Marines of Battalion Landing Team 2/6 were set for some neighborly work that needed to be done in various villages in the Mediterranean area. Before BLT 2/6 left Camp Lejeune May 20, the BLT Chaplain, Lt. Robert Tate, U.S.N., Chaplains Corps, and a group of assistants, issued a plea for wearable clothing which could be distributed to needy people in the Mediterranean. The response was outstanding as families in the Camp Lejeune area contributed their gifts, and in a very short time 48 boxes of clothing were collected, sorted, mended, crated and ready to go with the battalion.

Upon their arrival in the Mediterranean, and while most BLT Marines were busy conducting training exercises, a small group of Marines under the direction of Chaplain Tate, loaded trucks with clothing and made their way through the mountains to the nearby villages.

Accompanying the Marines were interpreters and bishops who helped direct the way to selected villages. Everyone was greeted warmly and the people were anxious to see what the Marines had brought them. Crowds gathered around the trucks, and once the clothing distribution started, it didn't take long to pass out the designed boxes of clothing to each village.

Meanwhile, Marines and sailors working together, in other villages began another part of the BLT's People-to-People program. This consisted of repairing schools and churches by utilizing paint, white wash, nails and window glass. Some of the old buildings were in bad condition, so the crews had to exert extra effort to see that the repairs were properly completed in the allotted time.

Numerous large barrels were collected by some of the local workmen, and were used for mixing the white wash. Brushes were attached to long sticks to reach high places and the buildings were given a new face in short order.

Although the buildings sparkled with their coat of white wash, so did many of the sailors and Marines when it was discovered that they had virtually white washed themselves as well.

Fixtures inside some of the schools and churches were in a bad state of repair and needed major carpentry and painting. These problems were quickly remedied by hard work and various shades of paint which the men mixed. Broken window panes were also replaced.

It required a lot of hard team work, but everyone felt it was a great accomplishment and definitely worth the time when each project was completed. Villagers expressed their gratitude to the crew for what they had done and seemed proud of their associations with the BLT.

As BLT 2/6 continues its operations throughout the Mediterranean, there will be other such programs, conducted with the idea of promoting a feeling of mutual friendship and goodwill to the peoples of visited countries.

BLT 2/6 is the amphibious landing force for the U. S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean.

LOADING—Boxes of clothing are unloaded for distribution among villagers in the Mediterranean area. The clothing was gathered by Battalion Landing Team 2/6 prior to leaving Camp Lejeune on May 20. The BLT has conducted several such people-to-people programs throughout the Mediterranean.

DISTRIBUTION—Chaplain R. Tate holds a young recipient of a suit of clothes.

GREEK VILLAGERS gather around an interpreter and Chaplain R. Tate in hopes of receiving clothing being issued by members of Battalion Landing Team 2/6. The clothing was collected at Camp Lejeune by the BLT for distribution in the Mediterranean.

ISSUE CENTER—Villagers form an issue line to receive clothing being distributed by members of the Battalion Landing Team.

MAN YOUR BRUSHES—Marines and sailors of Battalion Landing Team 2/6 prepare to paint a school in a Greek village during a recent visit.

Armed Forces Members And Their Freedoms

Is freedom in the Armed Forces any different from freedom in civilian life?

Many men in service are sure that it is. Some will go so far as to say there is little or no freedom in the Armed Forces; that a civilian gives up his freedoms when he puts on a uniform. But a few moments' reflection may convince us that this is not true.

Some of our basic freedoms remain entirely unaffected when we enter the Armed Forces: we retain the right to vote, to worship as we please, to own property and to read any newspaper we wish.

The freedoms that are affected by military service are those involving public expression of personal opinion, and these are not abolished but only restricted somewhat more than they are in civilian life.

Military life requires a more stringent limitation of these freedoms than most civilian jobs, but that is only because the man in service carries a greater responsibility than most civilians. He is a member of the executive branch of the Government, under the President of the United States, and is directly responsible for the security of the Nation. His freedoms have to be restricted where the free exercise of them would interfere with that job.

Hence his freedoms are restricted to that extent. But they are not denied and they are not restricted any further than is necessary.

There is nothing to stop a serviceman from voting for or against the President in an election, or from arguing—in private conversation and apart from his military duties—about the rights and wrongs of his policies. These are his rights as a citizen and a voter, and since the exercise of them does not violate military discipline in any way, the Armed Forces have no desire to interfere with it.

The serviceman of today is carrying on a time-tested tradition. To the defense of American liberty he has, for the time he is in the service, pledged certain of the individual freedoms he enjoyed as a civilian. He can do so with full confidence that the pledge will be redeemed.

Chaplain's Corner

Edward Rowland Sill, one of our American poets, wrote a poem called "Opportunity", in which he paints a word picture of two contrasting reactions to the difficult situations presented by life.

He pictures a plain on which a furious medieval battle is being fought. Beneath a cloud of dust, stirred up by the conflict, one can hear men yelling and swords clanging against shields and spears. Then through an opening in the cloud of dust can be seen the banner of a prince in full retreat.

The scene then shifts to the edge of the battle field where you see a man standing with a broken sword in his hand and saying to himself, "If I only had a sword as keen as that blue blade with which the prince is fighting." So he flings his broken sword away and cowardly slinks from the field of battle.

The scene then shifts back to the prince who has lost his sword and is being hemmed in by his enemies. Staggering backward in retreat, he comes upon the broken sword which the coward has thrown away as useless. Running, the prince snatches it up and, "with battle shout lifted afresh", he faces his enemies and turns a seeming defeat into a glorious victory.

This is a description of what so often happens in life. How true it is that when the going gets rough in the battle of life, and the opposition stiffens, and the dangers thicken, there are those who become frightened. They seek some excuse, some reason for dropping out of the conflict because they are not well equipped. Life has given them a broken sword with which to fight, so they say, while others are armed with the blue blade of a prince.

All this Mr. Sill depicts most vividly in his poem: The coward complains of his sword and flings it away, then turns his back and slinks from the field of conflict. But the king's son—with his blue blade, which has been lost in battle—picks up the broken sword from the ground and wins a great victory.

This poem reminds us that a man's opportunity does not necessarily lie in his position in battle, or with the kind of weapon life has given him, but in himself. For another man with the same broken sword has many times won a glorious victory.

America's History

Francis Marion and his men are depicted here crossing the River Dan in 1781 on one of his many daring raids against the British during the War of Independence. These raids by the "Swamp Fox" cut British General Cornwallis' communications, reduced one English stronghold after another, greatly contributing to the final outcome at Yorktown.

In the early days of America's growth, keelboats were the principal means of inland transportation and of all tough men along the frontier, the keelboatmen were known as the toughest. Down stream travel, though perilous, was by far the easiest. Upstream travel was often a four month cruise from New Orleans to Pittsburgh.

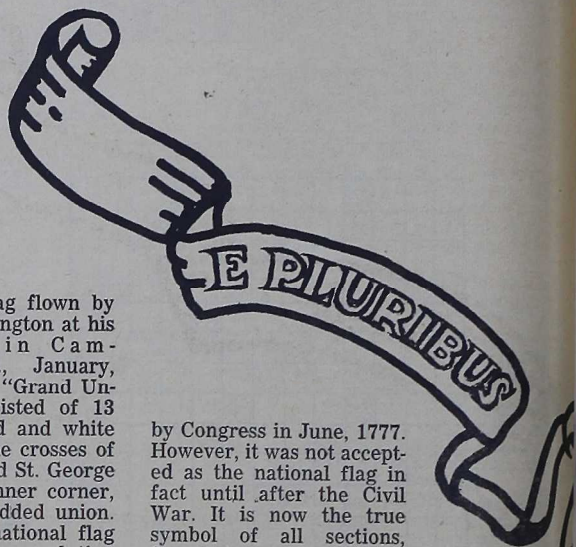

No other single internal improvement ever affected the country so profoundly as the completion of the Erie Canal more than 138 years ago. After overcoming the financial and planning obstacles the builders still faced the biggest. There was no digging machinery at the time to be used in digging a "ditch" through the many miles of wilderness. As the first boats made their way through the completed canal, militiamen fired cannons spaced along the shores to mark their progress from Lake Erie to Albany and on down the Hudson River to Manhattan Island.

The first flag flown by General Washington at his headquarters in Cambridge, Mass., January, 1776, was the "Grand Union." It consisted of 13 alternating red and white stripes with the crosses of St. Andrew and St. George in its upper inner corner. The present national flag originated in a resolution by Congress in June, 1777. However, it was not accepted as the national flag in fact until after the Civil War. It is now the true symbol of all sections, States, interests and aspi-

Among the great Americans contributing to the winning of the independence was a Colonel John Glover of Salem, Mass. It was he who piloted the outfitting of four ships, the FRANKLIN, WARREN, HANCOCK, LEE, that were the start of the American Navy. He organized the 14th

Front Of Her Heritage

On April 10, 1861, the demand for the surrender of the Union's Fort Sumter, Charleston, S. C., was given by Confederate Brigadier General Beauregard. The fort was ringed by Confederate batteries located at Castle Pinckney, Fort Moultrie and Morris Island and on April 12th, the bombardment of Fort Sumter began while Union relief ships were within hearing distance. Thirty-four hours later, after continuous bombardment, without one man being killed, Major Robert Anderson, the fort's commander, agreed to the surrender.

The resolute and heroic stand made by General Washington's rear guard in the Battle of Long Island, saved the Continental Army from disaster. Among those participating in this stand was an inconspicuous private, John Caldwell. This same man had previously been cashiered from the Army for his show of cowardice in the Battle of Bunker Hill when he held the rank of Captain in the Massachusetts Militia.

The soothing notes of "TAPS," as we hear them today, can be attributed to the whim of Daniel Butterfield, a New York State Militia officer, during the Civil War. While commanding his troops in the field, Butterfield was displeased with the "lights out" bugle call then used, which was adopted from the French. He had his bugler experiment with various notes until the present day "Taps" came out and it was gradually adopted by other camps and then the Navy. Later, it was even adopted by the French.

rations of a united people; an emblem under which men stood and still stand unhesitatingly and bravely against any enemy. General Anthony McAuliffe wrote: "To a soldier there is one moment above all others during which the Flag assumes supreme meaning. It is when the last volley is stilled and the Flag is gently removed and carried to where the mourners stand. A man has given his best to his country and she, in turn, gives back her best acknowledgement — her Colors."

The men who stood fast amid the crashing of rockets and cannon balls. For McHenry, Baltimore, Md., Sept. 13-14, 1814, did more for their country than any list to inspire the Baltimore Lawyer, Francis Scott Key, to write the poem which later became our national anthem. The city of Baltimore had been chosen to feel the force of the British Fleet's retaliatory measures for the invasion of Canada by U. S. troops. The British commander declared it his duty to destroy and lay waste coastal towns and districts found assailable. However, through the defenses of the city, organized by Army Major George Armistead of Virginia, Baltimore was found by the British, not to be assailable.

College Football Rules Undergo Many Changes

College football fans will watch coaches this fall use the most liberal football substitution rule since the wide open era of 1952.

Early this year the football rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association voted to allow wholesale substitution in college games. The new rule permits platoon substitution any time the clock is stopped. Two players may enter the game when it is running.

The only restriction in the way of unlimited substitution was a provision that a team must use one of its time outs in order to substitute a platoon when the clock is operating.

And with safety in mind, the committee also voted two other big changes into the rule book:

1. To boot any player out of the game if he maliciously uses his helmet or head to butt or ram an opponent's head, neck or face.

2. To cut down on dangerous runbacks of punts and kickoffs after a fair catch is called.

The "fair catch" rule says that if a player on the receiving team calls for a fair catch, the ball cannot be carried more than two feet in any direction even if it is bobbled by the receiving team.

The old rule said that such a ball was loose and could be picked up and ran.

But the committee said that since a fair catch was called for in the first place, obviously the situation was dangerous to a ball carrier who is usually vulnerable at the moment he is catching or picking up the ball.

Battle Still Raging In For Trps Softball

Although Headquarters Co., has walked off with the Force Troops Intramural softball championship by a sizeable margin a furious battle for second place and a berth in the Quad-Command tournament is being waged by two teams.

ANGLICO is currently holding down second place with a 7-3 record. Motor Transport Bn., is 6-3 with one game left against 8th Comm Bn. A win for Motor Transport will force a playoff for Force Troops in the Quad-Command tournament.

Devildogs Withdrawal Necessary Due To ECI Schedule Obligations

The Camp Lejeune baseball team was forced to withdraw from the North Carolina Semi-Pro Baseball Tournament Monday, due to scheduling problems.

To stay in the tournament, the Devildogs would have had to forfeit at least one game to Fort Dix, due to a conflict in the tournament schedule.

In the double elimination semi-pro affair Lejeune dropped their first game to go into the losers bracket, but then they won their next three games, the last one 1-0 in an extra innings duel against Shady Oak.

Lejeune could have won the tournament if they could have gotten six more victories. The ECIC race is shaping up as one of the tightest in years. Fort Bragg, the league leaders now have a 19-3 record, while Lejeune is in second place with 13-3.

The Devildogs, barring rain, played Fort in a double header Tuesday night (results not available at press time). If they won those games, and if they win the conference games at Fort Devens tonight and tomorrow night, the conference championship will depend on four games against Fort Bragg.

For the record, Lejeune will pick up four wins, by virtue of the ECIC Headquarters decision to count all games slated against Edgewood Arsenal as wins. Fort Bragg will get two games out of this decision. They had already beaten Edgewood Arsenal in two conference games before EA dropped out of the competition.

Lejeune vs. Benning

In last weeks action the Devildogs shellacked the Fort Benning "Doughboys" 11-4. Lejeune's lone run came in the second game, when Guy Parker, the top player on the Doughboys staff, kept the Marines pretty well hand-cuffed in the 7-1 game as he gave only six well spaced hits to the field fence.

Lejeune's lone run came in the second game, when sacker Dick Garcia wallowed 340 foot home run over the field fence.

Harvey Oxendine took the

The Marines collected 11 in the game, with Ron Hall and Hal Norton rapping home runs.

At Roxboro

The Devildogs had to play an extra inning Friday night beat Shady Oak 1-0 in what turned out to be the last game of the tournament for the Marines.

Dick Hall picked up his seventh win of the season, 1-0, only four hits and one ball in the eight inning.

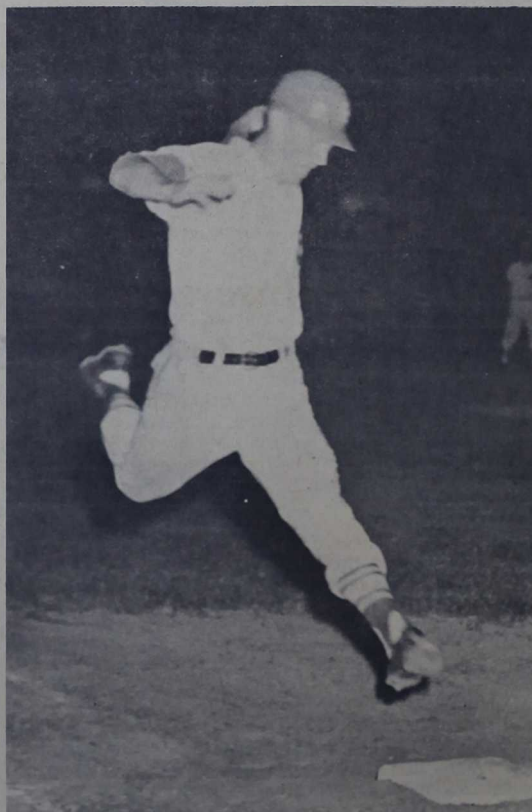

Meanwhile Skinner Montgomery, Shady Oak's pitcher was holding Lejeune to six hits until the eighth inning when Tom O'Brien, a Veteran backstop, accounted for three of the Lejeune finally got the ring run across in the bottom of the eighth, in the seventh inning game.

Hal Norton singled to field with one out. Then, two away Tom McHenry bled a 2-1 pitch to right. The ball hit once in the field and bounded into the surrounding Roxboro field. Norton came in winning run, and McHenry credit for a double.

Season Closes

August 16-17 the Devildogs will play Fort Bragg in two important East Coast Interservice Conference games out the season. These games will be played at Harry A. Field here.

DETERMINED TAG—Hal Norton appears to be putting extra effort into spearing first base in the Camp Lejeune-Fort Benning game last week.

Interservice Rifle Matches Commence Today At MCS, Quantico Rifle Range

QUANTICO, VA., — The largest group of Armed Forces shooters ever to compete in the Interservice Rifle Championship Match will be "squeezing 'em off" on the Calvin A. Lloyd Rifle Range here, Aug. 6-12, as Marine Corps Schools hosts the all-Armed Forces marksmanship tourney for the fifth consecutive year. According to the Match

Director, Major George E. Bartlett of Weapons Training Battalion here, 739 of the top rifle experts of the Army, Marine Corps, Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard, each service academy, and the reserve components of each service, are slated to compete.

The match usually lasts six days and some 600 shooters compete. This year, the unexpectedly large field has necessitated the addition of another day and certain changes in the sequence of events.

Hottest competition is expected in the last event of the match, Aug. 12, when sharpshooting teams from each service and its reserve component, will vie for the coveted Interservice Rifle Team Championship.

In 1961, the Army set the match record with a score of 2467 with 212 Vs. The V circle is located in the center of the bull's eye. In case of a tie, the number of Vs determines the winners.

The 1964 Interservice Rifle Championship Match will start at 7:30 a. m., Thursday, Aug. 6, with a practice match consisting of five events. Friday morning, the Interservice Navy Match and the Interservice Coast Guard Match will be fired. That afternoon, the Interservice Army Match will be held. Saturday morning, the Interservice Air Force Match and the Interservice Marine Corps

Match will be run. Last year, Army riflemen won each of these events.

The 1964 Interservice Rifle Championship Match will draw to a close on Wednesday, Aug. 12, after the Rifle Team Championship Match.

INTERSERVICE RIVALRY—Each Armed Force, its reserve component, and each service academy will be represented here Aug. 6-12, as 739 shooters from posts and stations throughout the world gather at Marine Corps Schools for the Fifth Annual Interservice Rifle Championship Match.

Montford Point Sergeant Re-enlists For Three Years For A Continuous This

MSgt. Frank O. Tarbox raised his hand and took the oath of enlistment in the Marine Corps for the third time and a total of 30 years and three months of active military service.

Sergeant Tarbox's days and evenings are kept filled by the six billets he holds down in the headquarters of Food Service Schools Company of the Marine Corps Supply Schools. His duties are those of Company Gunnery Sergeant, Career Advisory Non-Commissioned Officer, Personal Counselor, Military Training NCO, Formal Schools Leadership Instructor and Company Education NCO.

The latter duty is the most enjoyable to Sgt. Tarbox. Having completed 237 courses in the off duty education program and personally realizing the benefits derived from educational improvement, he feels he accomplishes something of value each time he enrolls someone else in the program.

Since October 1961, the Sgt. has had permanent and student personnel of the school enrolled in nearly 8,000 correspondence courses. The subjects chosen varied from military to civilian topics.

In his extraordinary efforts to get Marines to want to better themselves educationally, Sgt.

Tarbox has come to be known around the school as a "pusher."

Whatever and wherever may take this 49-year-old MSgt. in the remaining years of his career, it is certain Sgt. Tarbox will continue his personal drive to make the ideals of finer service for Marines.

Quick-Thinking Corporal Awarded Meritorious Mast

"Alertness and cool efficiency in keeping with the highest traditions of the Marine noncommissioned officer." "This was the keynote in the text of a Meritorious Mast read before two 1st Battalion, 6th Marines, 2d Marine Division corporals July 31.

Corporals George W. McClelland and Charles J. Blankenship received the congratulations of their Regimental Commander, Col. G. W. E. Daughtry for their quick thinking while on shore patrol duty last June in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

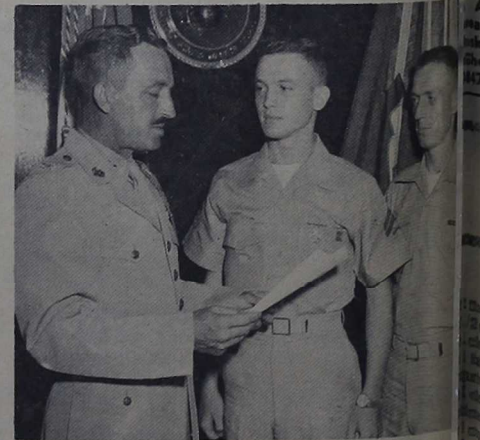

During their patrol they witnessed the collision of a civilian jeep and an automobile, which caused injuries to both drivers. McClelland went immediately to the nearby United Services Organization building and phoned for an ambulance, Blankenship directed spectators at the accident scene and rendering first aid to the motorists.

McClelland returned together with Blankenship, continued giving first aid to victims until the ambulance arrived.

The two Marines received their patrol duties, that they had done all to control the situation and the suffering of the parties.

The incident passed until Blankenship's request for a new packet. Replacement packet required a signature from Blankenship which he had the good use to which been put. This led to discovery of their action at the accident scene, and to Meritorious Mast.

TWO QUICK-THINKING CORPORALS—Corporals Charles Blankenship (center) and George W. McClelland, presented a Meritorious Mast by 6th Marines Regimental Commander, Colonel G. W. E. Daughtry during an informal ceremony at Camp Lejeune July 31. The corporals are members of 1st Battalion, 6th Marines, 2d Marine Division for "cool efficiency . . . alertness and attention to duty in keeping with the highest traditions of the Marine noncommissioned officer . . ." Blankenship and McClelland received the Mast for their actions following a two-car collision in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, last June.

Navy Relief Baby Clinic Now In Its Second Year

Since the opening of the Navy Relief's Well-Baby Clinics in Tarawa Terrace and the Gelger and Knox Traller parks in June 1962, the attendance has risen to an average of 170 per month.

Located in the Community Centers of the three quarters' areas, the clinics are operated by three Registered Nurses in conjunction with the Navy Relief and the Naval Hospital. The clinics are held once a month in each of the areas. The Gelger Traller Park Clinic is held on the first Tuesday of each month from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. the Tarawa Terrace Clinic is held on the second Tuesday of each month from 9 a. m. to 2:30 p. m., and the Knox Traller Park Clinic is conducted on the fourth Tuesday from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.

The clinics are designed to assist mothers in the care and treatment of their babies. Besides routine infant care, the nurses often refer the infants to the Naval Hospital for advanced medical care and, if necessary, may even arrange for the transportation to and from the hospital.

During April, May and June period of this year, the three nurses made more than 535 visits to the homes of new mothers and visited with more than 480 mothers in the family hospital. In addition to these routine duties, the nurses conducted pre-natal classes, which had more than 330 in attendance.

Of the three clinics established the two in the traller parks have the highest number of patrons, while the clinic in Tarawa Terrace claimed only 30 visitors during the second quarter of this year.

To add to its staff of trained volunteer workers, the Navy Relief will be conducting orientation classes for new members in the library of the New River Air Facility from Sept. 8-29.

The classes will be held from 9 a. m. to 12 p. m. each Tuesday during the designated period. The library is located next to the Air Facility gymnasium and swimming pool.

The orientation course prepares new volunteers for work as receptionists, clerks or as interviewers. This training is followed up by a period of on-the-job training to better acquaint the new members with their duties.

Another orientation course is tentatively scheduled for the Hadnot Point area sometime in October. The exact dates and times will be announced at a later date.

The NCOIC of the Base Dog Pound has issued an invitation to persons desiring pets to come to the Pound, located on the parachute tower road just beyond the entrance to the Drive-In Theater, and select a homeless dog.

Selection hours are from 3 to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

FASHION HIGHLIGHTS

With the fashion world in its eyes turned to this is the month in which ladies will discover they are going to be dressed in the coming winter.

Starting with skirt suits, it appears that the feminine is safe for another year. Girls are staying about the same length they were last season which means it will not be necessary to purchase a new skirt. The gored skirt as it be high on the list. Skirts and of course the skirt is still in. Day time seems to be sweaters and knee socks or nylons. For evening dresses seems to be less formal than ever but with a high, high heels. The take-up department, look is still natural but there is a lean toward a lipstick rather than the pale pinks which have been in evidence the last year or so. The natural look is again carried to the coiffure as the hair is being worn long with a slight curl at the ends.

Though the Paris fashions seem to be pretty much the same this fall a few surprises did appear. One of these appeared in the collection of Chanel de Parée when this year's informal attire was introduced. Instead of finding the form fitting slim jims and stretch pants as formerly, the sailor boy look has been adopted. Slacks are not as tailored and they tend to flare at the bottom of the leg. Of course slim jims and stretch pants with bulky sweaters are still very popular and quite the thing for the skid slopes and other winter activities.

Pink still seems to have priority as to colors and the Jackie Kennedy boxed suit still ranks high on the poll of favorites.

Brocades were much in evidence for very formal wear to the opera and premieres, and the low cut fronts seem to be ascending somewhat.

As to hats the pillbox chapeau is no longer the look of the moment. This year the style seems to be that of a round domed hat is anchored to the head by means of a chin strap.

That's it for this season from Paris. Wonder what they'll come up with next?

T.T. N.C.O. Wives

All E-4, E-5 families are encouraged to attend. Bring any dish of your choice. The entertainment for the evening will feature a Karate demonstration by Sgt. Donald S. Bohan.

Girls, August 18 is game night at the U. S. Naval Hospital. Any one interested in helping with setting up, please be at the hospital in the Red Cross Room by 6:30 p. m.

Household Hints

Those who camp know that matches often get wet. It has been found that by dipping the match heads in melted paraffin or wax the heads of the matches will stay dry and will light in spite of dampness.

For those malling breakables there is an easy way to protect the damageable objects and prevent the packaging from making a mess at the same time. The secret is this, fill plastic bags with shredded paper to make little pillows to cushion the breakables. Several of these little pillows could be made at one time and kept on hand with other wrapping material.

Here's a helpful hint for ladies who have been spending much of their time on the beach and in the water this summer. If your hair slips out of your bathing cap, cut off the top of an old nylon stocking and put it around your head before putting on the bathing cap.

KEEP LETTUCE FRESH

Leftover lettuce? Keep it crisp and tasty, even when repeated refrigerator door openings in hot weather tend to wilt it. Dampen a square of Kleenex twoply paper towels and wrap lettuce before putting in the crisper bin. Today's greens will be fresh for tomorrow's salad.

ONE OF 16—The famous "Soo" Locks of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., are one of 16 locks the USS De Soto County has passed through on her cruise of the Great Lakes. The three-month cruise began June 8, when the De Soto County left her base at Little Creek, Va. Since then she has had approximately a quarter of a million visitors on her decks, and has gone farther west (Duluth, Minn.) than any LST in the Atlantic Fleet.

Command Post Exercise Sharpens MEB Troops

Preparation for the forthcoming Operation GRASS-ROOTS-64 to be held at Camp Pickett, Va., Sept. 1-10 kicked off in earnest this week with a full-scale Command Post Exercise by the 4th Marine Expeditionary Brigade.

The complex facilities, built around an all-encompassing communication network, moved in convoy from 2d Marine Division Headquarters area yesterday morning to set up its operations in the field.

Within one hour after arriving at the exercise site, a small tent city had taken shape. Trucks laden with tentage and the office and communications equipment essential to a Brigade headquarters in field operation had dispensed their loads. Communicators began establishing a communication network that would enable the Brigade Commander, BrigGen. John G. Bouker, to control the movement and tactical operation of all elements of his command.

The large communication tent, equipped with blackout curtains for night operation, is the nerve center of the control complex. It is here that radiomen, teletype operators, and field wiremen assume responsibility for all incoming and outgoing messages of the Brigade.

Teletype and telephone wires spread out from the tent into every direction like pulsating nerves to provide inner-communication from the highest to the lowest echelon of command. Teletype facilities link Brigade headquarters with the attached Provisional Marine Aircraft Group, the tactical regiment of the Brigade, and the Overall Operation GRASS-ROOTS Headquarters (control unit for the guerrilla-counterinsurgency problem).

A radio network connects all elements of the Brigade and offers facilities for communication hook-ups to activities outside of the GRASSROOTS operation area.

The job of providing the physical plant where the Brigade headquarters units can do their work is the lot of the Headquarters Commandant, Maj. George J. Kleess. Can we do it? How long will it take? Do we have the mobility to move if required? These are but a few of the questions that he must answer. A CPX is designed to provide answers to some of the questions.

Physical Exam and Shots A Must For New Students

All children entering the first grade, and those transferring from another school system, must be physically examined and immunized prior to registering for the coming term of the Camp Lejeune Dependents Schools.

Proof of immunization must be in writing and signed by a civilian or military physician, or a health department director. Military or state shot cards will be acceptable if up to date.

Immunizations will be given in Ward 2, at the U. S. Naval Hospital from 8-10 a. m., Monday through Friday. Physical examinations will be given at the Base Dispensary, Bldg. 15 according to the following schedule. Children must be accompanied by either a parent or guardian.

GRASSROOTS GUERRILLAS—Three members of the guerrilla force of Operation Grassroots-64 demonstrate what is in store for members of the 4th Marine Expeditionary Brigade. Marines from the 2d Marine Division and Force Troops will make up the guerrilla force for the exercise. Approximately 6,000 Marines participate in Grassroots-64 at Camp Pickett, Va., Sept. 1-10. The exercise is designed to demonstrate what is in store for commanders, staff officers and troops who will have experience in large-scale counter-guerrilla counterinsurgency operations.

New Pay Bill

pay with Civil Service pay.

"This is not a pay increase that will do much for the military except to keep faith with the pledge that President Kennedy made when he said he would use his best efforts to assure that in the future, military compensation will keep pace with increases in salaries and wages in the civilian economy.

"This proposal does provide an increase and it can be argued, if you use the right set of figures, that it provides some comparability with Civil Service employees. But I don't know how you compare the responsibility of a Captain of a carrier or a Squadron Commander or a Regimental Commander with a GS-14 or GS-15.

On the other hand, I don't know how you compare the responsibility of a GS-14 or 15 with a Colonel or a Captain serving on a board waiting to be retired. The Civil Service employee, for the most part, has a continuing responsibility and his job does not change frequently. On the other hand, military personnel--officers and noncommissioned officers alike--in a normal career will have varying degrees of responsibility.

On some occasions, they will be paid far less than the responsibility they have assumed. On some occasions, they will be paid approximately the right amount for the responsibility assumed, and, in a few cases, will be paid more than the responsibility assumed. For that reason, I am not impressed with comparability studies, but I realize we have to compare military pay with something.

"Now if I am nothing else,

I hope I am practical. And one of the first things I learned early in life is that a bird in hand is worth two in the bush. I do not want to jeopardize the expeditious enactment of this proposal by suggesting changes what will increase the pay scales by an amount that might endanger its immediate consideration.

"So, I shall support this bill just as it is presented to us. It is simply a revised pay scale that will do little for our military personnel except to let them know that we are aware of their existence.

"If I am here next January, and if certain other events take place, and I should be Chairman of this Committee, or the ranking Minority Member, I will state here and now that it is my intention to introduce a bill that will provide substantial increases in military pay, that will provide substantial increases in subsistence allowances, and that will overcome this somewhat naive decision of the Internal Revenue Service with regard to dislocation allowances.

"In addition, by next January if the Department of Defense has not come up with a solution to the problems that have been created through the payments of proficiency pay and reenlistment bonuses, then I propose to begin hearings, if I am in a position to do so, on those.

"I shall support this measure just as the Senate has presented it to us because it is the only practical way.

I intend to do a great deal more for the members of our Armed Forces who are watching their privileges, their rights, their benefits being attacked from every side."
