Gen. Shoup Warns Troops Wedlock, Career Dangers

In a personally signed message to Marines, Commandant of the Marine Corps, Gen. David M. Shoup, has repeated his warning to lower-ranked and younger men that the financial road ahead for those who marry early is a rough one to travel.

When Cupid strikes, he is not interested in the Marine's rank or financial status. It is up to the individual Marine to take these items into consideration for his own good and for the good of the girl he is planning to marry.

The Commandant notes that recent statistics show that more and more first-enlistment Marines are getting married without too much thought and little or no advice on money matters. Too many of these early marriages are ending up as serious problems both for the individual

Base Hosts Symposium August 4-9

All 31 of the top NCOs who will act as representatives of their fellow leathernecks have been chosen and will meet at Camp Lejeune August 4 to kick off the week-long Marine Corps staff noncommissioned officers symposium.

Exactly what they'll talk about has not yet been officially decided. Headquarters officials are still sifting through a couple of hundred recommended topics to select those which will be included in the final agenda for the conference.

Known to be among the discussion subjects submitted to headquarters for possible inclusion on the agenda are ideas on uniform changes, proficiency pay, schooling, tour lengths, housing, enlisted-to-officer programs and MOS assignments.

The Sergeant Major of the Marine Corps, Sgt. Maj. Thomas J. McHugh, will attend the symposium with his wife. Headquarters will also be represented by Sgt. Maj. Frank A. Miller, symposium co-ordinator, who plans to take Mrs. Miller along.

Reserve Bill -Year Service

House has passed a bill at least four months duty and a total of service by men who the Reserves to full military obligations, which would make the Reserve enlistment program, due to expire now goes to the Senate.

WAVES' 21st Birthday

The proud tradition started by the Waves of 1917 is upheld today by the Waves of 1963 as they celebrate their 21st anniversary July 30th. When the United States entered World War I in 1917, women from all over the country felt the desire to serve their country and release the men to fight for our freedom. The women of today, who are Waves, are upholding this same tradition.

The Civil Service Commission made women eligible for enlistment in the reserves in 1917. The 11,000 women who enlisted and served proudly in the reserves were released from active duty by the end of 1919.

After the outbreak of World War II, women were once again given the opportunity to serve the country by freeing men for fighting, when, in 1942, Congress authorized the establishment of the U. S. Navy Reserves for women. At the end of World War II the Wave Reserves had 86,000 enlisted women and officers. The Waves became a permanent part of the regular Navy and Navy Reserves in 1948 by the War Relocation Authority Act.

Today there are 5,500 on active duty and 5,000 active duty. Their active duties include clerical workers, translators, technicians, fingerprinters, camouflage design and recruiting agents.

To the women who serve the Waves the GLOBE extends congratulations on this 21st anniversary.

You have continuously proved yourselves with devotion to corps and country.

We are confident the coming year will continue to prove the Waves as invaluable to the Naval Service as they have been in the past.

Services To Adopt AMA's Set Terms

The Department of Defense has ordered all services to adopt standard names and medical terms used by the American Medical Association.

Until now two multi-service publications prescribed the terms used in medical records, "Joint Armed Forces Statistical Classification and Basic Diagnostic Nomenclature of Diseases and Injuries" (NavMed P-1294), and "Joint Armed Forces Nomenclature and Method of Recording Psychiatric Conditions" (NavMed P-1303).

The Defense Instruction orders all diagnosis nomenclature for medical records be based on the "Standard Nomenclature of Diseases and Operations," 5th edition, published for the American Medical Association.

'68 New Zealand Pilgrimage Sheds By Division

A 1968 Pilgrimage II New Zealand was unanimously approved during the 14th Reunion of the 2d Marine Division in Denver, Colorado last week.

Jack E. Lee, 330 W. Road, Concord, Calif., and chairman of the 1968 Pilgrimage, said the association hopes to combine efforts with the 1st and 3d Marine Divisions as well as other Marine Associations "down under."

Lee, who as association president last February, headed the first journey to the island which hosted many U.S. Marines during World War II, said the reception last February beyond our wildest expectations," Lee said. "The of New Zealand opened hearts and homes just had twenty years ago."

Official functions for the journey included a tour through the capitol city of Wellington, wreath laying ceremonies and a dedication of the Prime Minister Keith Holyoake at the site of the New Zealand War II campsite.

Lee noted that New Zealanders hold up signs that read "Welcome Home" and "Please Come Back!"

The group plans to depart from Auckland, New Zealand, on a time base of the 3d Division.

Engineer Equipment School's Duty; Graduate Better Equipment Operators

With a staff of some 50 combat instructors, under the command of Capt. W. M. Vock, combat Engineer Equipment School, Courthouse, trains some 410 men and officers each year. Within the school there are schools for mechanics, Welders, Equipment operators, Engineer Equipment Chief's and Metal Workers. Each one is designed to train personnel of a certain rank in the necessary skills to qualify them for a MOS in the field.

There are 220 mechanics graduating from the school each year. The mechanics complete a week course in which they learn every aspect of the gas diesel engines.

Without the mechanics the equipment could not function properly at all times, but there is no other man who is needed as badly as the mechanic—Engineer Equipment Operator. During a 13-week course at school these men must familiarize themselves with, and learn the operation of some 96 major items, ranging from Crawler Tractors to Rock crushers.

These are just two of the missions of the school. There are training aids to be made for instructional purposes, maintenance of school rooms, and grounds. All of these things are in the hands of the instructors. They must know every part of the machinery, what makes them work and how to disassemble and assemble them. Each instructor must know and thoroughly understand his particular subject before giving a lesson on it. As much as eight hours are spent preparing for one hour of instruction.

The instructors spend much of their off duty time making and devising new and different techniques of teaching, for material is constantly being renewed and revised. Some of their most prized training aids are the cut-away models of motors and generators the instructors make themselves. As much as 180 man hours have been spent on one model.

All of this work and effort is directed to one thing, to give the student the ability and skill to keep the equipment operating at its best.

SHOUP —

Marine and the Corps according to Gen. Shoup.

He also points out that, although every Marine with dependents now is eligible for minimum BAQ, those with less than four years of service below the rank of corporal are not eligible for government transportation of their dependents and household effects. This puts these younger Marines behind the financial eight-ball, but too few of them either know this, or pay attention to its potential for trouble when Cupid's arrows strike.

With more than half of the Corps corporal or below, the problem is a big one.

Gen. Shoup believes the problem can be partly licked if the older Marines, both NCOs and officers, will pass the word along to their younger colleagues about the added responsibilities and financial implications involved with marriages, particularly among those in the lower pay grades.

INSTRUCTORS' FAMILIARIZATION—Each instructor must be thoroughly familiar with the subjects he teaches. GySgt. Aubrey E. Lincoln (left), and GySgt. Harlan H. Hodges familiarize themselves with the 1 3/4 yard capacity fork crane. They will disassemble and reassemble the vehicle before giving the first class of instruction.

Army School High Score Nets Plaque For Captain

Capt. Matthew P. Caulfield, commanding officer, "A" Co., 2d Recon Bn., completed the Army Counter-Insurgency School, July 3, with such high honors that a special plaque was awarded him by the Assistant and Deputy Secretary of State, Mr. Adam Yarmolinsky.

The plaque, about 12" high, bears the inscription "...U. S. Army Special Warfare School, Fort Bragg, N. C. Honor Student."

According to Capt. Caulfield, "the CI School is comprised mostly of Special Warfare instructions, including all military and paramilitary measures and activities related to unconventional warfare and psychological operations."

"The school also deals with insurgency in today's world," he continued, "and actual case studies of world problems are made—Viet Nam, the British forces in Malaya, and the French in Indo-China."

During the 12-week course, a two and one-half week field exercise is held to provide the student officers with ample opportunity to apply classroom instructions to problems under realistic conditions.

Capt. Caulfield was promoted to his present rank on July 12.

rine Division at Bougainville, Guam and Iwo Jima. During these campaigns, he was awarded two bronze Stars and the Legion of Merit with combat "V".

Lejeune Communicators Spread Out For Exercise

Elements of Force Troops' Communication Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. V. M. Mason, displaced last week to the site of the various parts of eastern North Carolina to establish a simulated Marine Expeditionary Force Headquarters and operate the AN/TSC-15 communications van in test object-by providing the facilities for the final link in the communications network.

Vieques Assault 1st For 24th MEU During PHIBULEX

Climaxing another phase of PHIBULEX 3-63, currently underway in the Caribbean area, members of the 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit stormed across the sandy shores of Vieques Island, Puerto Rico in tactical amphibious assault under command of Col. J. E. Johnson, 2d Marine Aircraft Wing, Cherry Point.

Since departing the Camp Lejeune area July 10, this is the first exercise for the 24th MEU, which is centered around the 2d Bn., 2d Marines commanded by Lt. Col. R. T. Bey. Two companies of the battalion crossed the beach in amphibious tractors while the remainder of the battalion landed behind simulated enemy lines in helicopters of Marine Air Group-26.

Once the beachhead had been established, troops moved inland from the beach to make contact with the helicopter-borne troops assigned to seize the island's airfield. Close air support for the operation was supplied by Marine Attack Squadron 533 from Cherry Point.

Editorials

Determination

DETERMINATION may be defined as "the mental quality, habit or power of deciding definitely and firmly; decision of character." This definition aptly applies to a Marine staff sergeant stationed at Camp Pendleton, Calif., who lost his lower left leg in a parachuting accident last fall.

Through sheer determination, this man has mastered an artificial limb that he helped design. To prove he can do as much now as he could prior to his accident, he has danced, gone SCUBA diving, piloted a plane and worn a boot on his artificial leg to get used to the extra weight.

His efforts have not been in vain — he has received permission to remain on active duty and go back to parachuting instead of holding a limited duty desk job.

Chaplain's Corner

Prayer is the elevation of our minds and hearts to God to adore Him, to thank Him for His benefits, to ask Him for His help and to ask pardon for our offenses. It may more easily be defined as talking to God or conversation with God.

We are instructed to pray often, particularly morning and night, before our principal actions and most of all in time of temptation. Christ Himself urges us to pray continually.

One good method of daily prayer is to offer each day at its very beginning, to our Creator. Some have the good habit of offering up every thought, word and deed of the day at awakening in the morning. You can use your own words but in essence you say the same: O Lord I offer you this day as a continual prayer. I offer you everything that happens this day — every thought I have, every breath I take, every beat of my heart, everything I see, hear, smell, taste or touch, every step I take. Everything today, Lord, belongs to You.

If we do this daily, we will continually live in the presence of God, grow in grace, and happiness will come to us a hundredfold in this life and happiness eternal in the life to come.

This type of life through prayer is a man's greatest contribution to peace amongst men.

The determination shown by this man and many others like him in all the services should cause us to stop and evaluate ourselves. Would we be able to accomplish this feat? Would our determination be great enough to overcome such a handicap?

We'll never know the full answer unless we find ourselves in similar circumstances. However, we can apply ourselves to our assigned duties and concentrate on self-improvement with a similar determination.

If each man in uniform applied himself with such determination to duty, can you imagine the overall improvement? For nearly 200 years, the U.S. military man has earned the respect and admiration of the American public. We can't expect to rest forever on laurels of the past.

We have to make a determined effort to "fill the shoes" of our predecessors.

REMEMBER

Years ago ... this week

24 JULY 1944—Northern Troops and Landing Force, commanded by Maj. Gen. Harry Schmidt, landed on Tinian, Marianas Islands.

25 JULY 1861—An Act of the Congress provided for an increase in Marine Corps strength to 93 officers and 3,074 enlisted men.

26 JULY 1947—The National Security Act became effective, providing for a Marine Corps of not less than three combat divisions and three air wings, and such other land combat, aviation, and other services as may be organic therein.

Over the past years the GLOBE has presented some fine editorials relating to the RESPONSIBILITY of drivers; enlightening words of wisdom all related to SAFETY.

This week is no different.

The subject is set forth in the cartoon.

But more serious still is the single car accident which occurred last week on Highway 17 prompting this editorial. Two Marines died and a third is recuperating in the hospital.

The owner of the automobile, possibly thru the efforts of an editorial, was cognizant of the additional safety that seat belts afforded. Yet, they were NOT BEING UTILIZED according to the North Carolina State Highway Patrol.

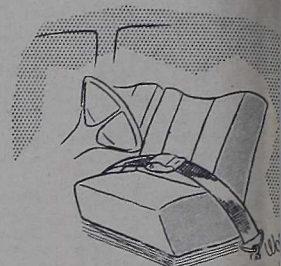

By what stretch of the imagination would you purchase an item of equipment adding to personal protection and then not use it!

This brings up the RESPONSIBILITY of a driver.

We don't have the "right" to drive an automobile. It is a privilege granted by the state to citizens . . . and they are expected to accept the RESPONSIBILITY carries.

This means each driver is RESPONSIBLE for his own safety and the safety of everyone who uses public thoroughfares including his passengers.

This RESPONSIBILITY

LIFE INSURANCE
YOU AUTO HAVE!

clauses obeying all traffic laws regulations because these laws enacted and made effect through a combination of experience and plain common sense.

As a driver . . . do you accept these RESPONSIBILITIES? Do you think of the safety of your passengers . . . and others?

If you have accepted the statement that seat belts will give you greater protection and reduce your chances of serious injury to third, and you have them installed, do you insist upon everyone in your automobile using them?

This is part of your RESPONSIBILITY.

Movie Reviews

THE UGLY AMERICAN
Like the novel on which it is very loosely based, this study of American aid in a southeast Asian country contrasts conflicting personalities and ideas. Starring Marlon Brando as the new American ambassador who is chosen partly because of his good relationship with Deang, the country's popular nationalist leader.

THE BIRDS
Alfred Hitchcock, the old master of contemporary horror, again uses his unequalled talent in deriving the maximum of terror from deceptively innocent backgrounds in his new movie, "The Birds." Scientists have estimated that there are billions of birds in America. Imagine, if you will, what would happen if they decided to mass and attack mankind. Hitchcock did, and with the use of hair-raising sound and photography effects, created a masterpiece of suspense. Hitchcock's new discovery, the petite and talented Tippi Heiden, makes her screen debut in this shocker.

KAMIKAZE
This is a documentary of Allied and enemy films concerned with the takeover by the Japanese Empire of the vast Pacific reaches, beginning with the paralyzing Pearl Harbor sneak attack and then moving to the ruthless action by Jap troops in the South Pacific, particularly the terrifying attacks by do-do die Kamikaze pilots.

IT HAPPENED AT THE WORLD'S FAIR
Elvis is back again in another of his post-service films which seem to have more taste and refined entertainment value than the earlier guitar-crashing, hip wobbling, marathons. Presley has not only refined his singing style, but has also developed his acting ability with a light humor which is a pleasure to watch. Set in the story-book background of the world's fair, the film is bright and fast-moving.

OCEANS 11
A group of discharged servicemen with playboy tastes and pauper pocketbooks, meet in Las Vegas for a reunion. They decide to put their service training to work in robbing five of the biggest casinos in Vegas and live a life of luxury. Full of suspense and light humor, the picture stars Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis, Jr., Peter Lawford, Cesar Romero, Angie Dickinson, Richard Conte and Joey Bishop.

2d Division Played Role Wel

Victory was hanging in the balance in the Pacific Theater of Operations during World War II, when a number of island hopping campaigns tipped the scales slightly as U.S. Forces pushed the enemy farther back toward his homeland.

Islands like the Marshalls, Truk, the Marianas, Western Carolines, the Admiralties, Emirau, Hollandia, the rived in their assigned areas off White Beach One and White Beach Two. Mine sweeping operations commenced and at 7:17 a.m., the first landing wave crossed the line of departure and began the 3,000-yard movement to the beaches.

Slight enemy resistance, described as 50-caliber, 20-mm. and 40-mm. fire, met the landing wave and two Division continued to filter ashore, the 4th Division expanded its island holding. By dark, the 4th Division had pushed south, while the 2d Division advanced to Airfield Number One, and Airfield Number Two.

Only token enemy resistance had been met and Marine casualties were small.

JIG-plus TWO Highest point in the 8th Marines on the left flank and the 2d Marines on the right, the 2d Division swept across the Ushi Point flats to the abandoned airfield.

Careful searches of each enemy position made certain that no defenders had escaped or gotten behind the advancing line.

The 3d Battalion, 8th Marines, followed the assault across the island and became the 2d Division reserve with the mission of clearing a built-up area about 500-yards east of Ushi Point airfield. The remainder of the 8th Marines, also 2d Division reserves, began searching for enemy stragglers.

Meanwhile, the 2d Division pressed rapidly across the island, arriving on the east coast at 12:30 p.m. There the division quickly reoriented its direction of attack to the south and moved out.

While the 2d Marines and 8th Marines spurred toward the east coast, the 6th Marines completed their landing on White Beach Two. The 6th Marines, then moved on line to the right of the division, and at 2:50 p.m., a patrol from the 1st Battalion, 6th Marines, encountered a large column of enemy troops approaching the Marines' lines.

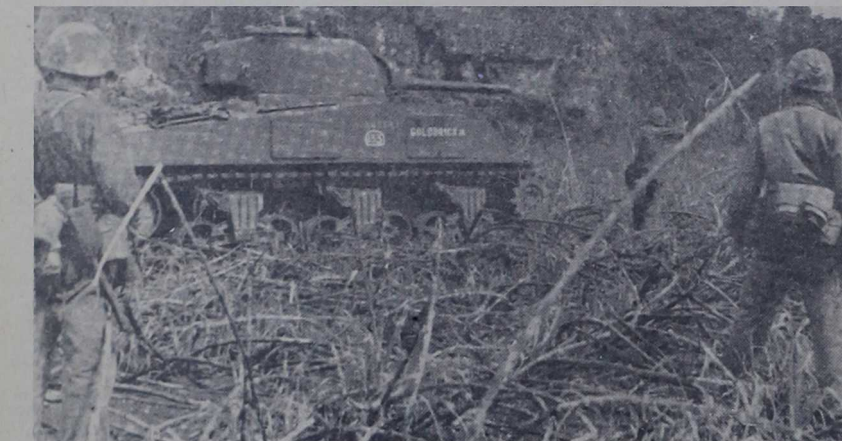

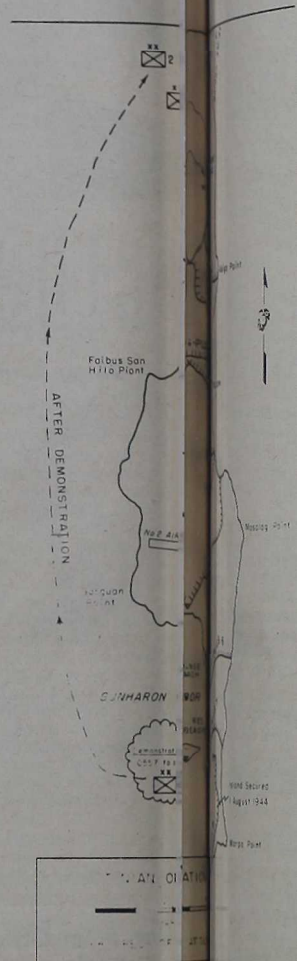

In the fire-fight that followed, the enemy point and connecting file were annihilated and the remainder of the column was dispersed.

Observation aircraft soon appeared over the scene and verified the patrol's report that considerable activity was occurring in front of the 6th Marines. Artillery and mortars immediately registered and chased the enemy from the area.

The 6th Marines neither saw nor heard any more from those forces during the day.

When the 2d Division stopped for the night, long gains had been made. Its 2,500-yard push to the east coast now made it possible for the landing force to attack in a single direction — south.

Opposition had been light and scattered, and casualties for JIG-plus TWO were two killed and 14 wounded.

Philippine Sea and Saipan became history.

Saipan was the operation which opened the wound in the enemy's side as Marines fought, bled and died for the tiny piece of Pacific real estate from June 15, to July 9, 1944.

Once the wound was open, the Marines poured salt into it by rolling over island after island — Guam and Tinian in the Marianas; Peleliu in the Palaus.

Tinian in particular is of interest to members of today's 2d Marine Division, for it was just 19 years ago that the 2d Division, minus Battalion Landing Team 1/8, boarded landing craft and moved to the island.

Located at 145 deg. east longitude and 15 deg. north latitude, Tinian measures 12 and one-half miles long and about six miles wide. It is separated from its sister island, Saipan, by a three-mile channel.

When the Marines commenced their attack on Tinian, the island was defended by slightly more than 9,000 troops — divided almost equally between the Army and Navy.

JIG-DAY

On July 24, 1944, at 5:30 a.m. just two minutes prior to sunrise, U.S. Navy control craft nosed into position at the Line of Departure; observation planes and "call-strike" aircraft flew to their stations — the former to watch and report, the latter to wait for missions.

Saipan-based artillery began pouring fire into designated areas while ships commenced a pre-assault bombardment in their assigned sectors. As the first rays of daylight appeared, the intensity of the bombardment mounted.

At 6 a.m., the tractor group, carrying assault troops of the 4th Division ar-or more Navy enlisted men and possibly a couple of Marines were wounded.

By darkness the defending forces were greatly outnumbered. Of 40,000 troops that would be landed, 15,614 were already ashore, including Battalion Landing Team 1/8, which was assigned to the 24th Marines, 4th Marine Division, as reserves.

The landing force established a firm toe-hold on Tinian and suffered only light casualties — 15 dead and 225 wounded.

JIG-plus ONE

On July 25, the 2d Marine Division started ashore. At 6:30 a.m., the 8th Marines commenced landing and at 2:30 p.m., Maj. Gen. Thomas E. Watson, commanding general, 2d Marine Division, closed his Command Post aboard the USS Cavalier and embarked with his headquarters group for the beach.

Maj. Gen. Watson opened his new Command Post on Tinian at 4 p.m., just 75 yards southeast of Maj. Gen. Clifton B. Cates, commanding general, 4th Marine Division.

While elements of the 2d northern half of Tinian, Mt. Lasso, faced the landing force on July 26. Possession of this 540-foot terrain feature would deny the enemy his best observation post for control of mortar and artillery fire.

Maj. Gen. Harry Schmidt, commanding general, Northern Troops and Landing Force, ordered the day's main effort in the center of the force zone of action against Mt. Lasso, and ordered it seized.

At 8 a.m., the 4th Marine Division moved out for the assault on Mt. Lasso, after the XXIV Corps Artillery (13 battalions strong) poured a five minute bombardment on the hill. Navy ships, the USS Tennessee, USS Cleveland and two destroyers also reinforced the fire and six destroyers were available for direct support if needed by the assault battalions.

Naturally the Marines expected to pay for the Mt. Lasso real estate, but, unaccountably, they met no resistance at all.

At 8:06 a.m., the 2d Division moved out for the east coast of the island. With the

JIG-plus THREE

Since the 4th Division was closest to Objective 0-4, Maj. Gen. the 2d Division was ordered to advance to Objective 0-5. This action would carry the 2d Division's front 27, and the 4th Division's front 27, would carry it only 100 yards.

At 7:30 a.m., the 2d Division moved out for the attack and the 4th Division pushed off to the east.

By 1:45 p.m., the 2d Division was in firm possession of Objective 0-4, and 15 minutes, the 4th Division had gained 350 yards of island.

After another set of interrupted operations, the 2d Division was ready to commence its advance to Objective 0-7.

The 4th Division moved out at 7:30 a.m. and the 2d Division moved at 10 a.m. progress was 100 yards about 350 yards this advance was not my resistance, to the nearest Division's objective.

While the 2d Division was making small progress, the 4th Division made the entire operation moved forward 4,000 yards and selves south of 0-5. The Division stretched more yards across the island.

With such a the 4th Division

the 25th Marines positions and front-line Marines heard activity, it appeared that the enemy was preparing for an assault.

Immediately, Marine mortars began thumping the spongy ground forward of the lines and the drenched Marines readied their weapons for the attack — none came.

When morning came, and the rain halted, the light revealed a battlefield strewn with 41 enemy dead and seven knocked-out machine guns.

Principal terrain feature for the 4th Division on July 30, was Tinian Town, a locality that the enemy had planned to defend from amphibious attack.

In fact, the enemy concentrated on the town's seaborne approach so much that all other directions — including the one used by the Marines — had been ignored.

Most of the prepared positions in the area prohibited — by their construction — enemy gunners from shifting their weapons and firing at the Marines attacking from the north. By this time, however, most of the enemy's coastal defense weapons were destroyed by ship, aircraft and artillery bombardment.

The only difficulty experienced by the 4th Division in its move to the Tinian Town flats came on the right flank where men of the 1st Battalion, 24th Marines, encountered several enemy machine guns and riflemen holed up in caves near the coast.

The tactics employed against these defenders were consistent, both in application and effectiveness: medium tanks and armored amphibians blasted the position while light, flame throwing tanks moved in close enough to pour streams of fire on the enemy fortifications. Combat engineers, carrying flame throwers, demolitions and bazookas followed the armored assault, covered by Marine riflemen and machine guns.

By nightfall, July 30, the two divisions had secured positions south of Tinian Town and Number Four airfield, then had extended east northeast to the coast.

JIG-plus SEVEN

On July 31, the enemy was faced with the unenviable situation of being compressed in the southern end artillery threw everything they could at the ridge line.

During this entire period, front-line Marines were directed to remain in their foxholes as protection against errant rounds — there were none.

At 8:30 a.m., the Marines jumped off on the attack. Enemy resistance was so tions — these, however, would not be completed in a matter of hours or days. Many honey-comb caves infested the cliff areas of the island and mopping-up was a task that required the Marines to virtually go in after them.

At noon, August 10, the 8th Marines, was assigned as part of the Tinian Island of Tinian. They could withdraw no farther.

Anticipating heavy resistance, Maj. Gen. Schmidt issued the most detailed operation order since the JIG-DAY landing — it contained a special naval gunfire annex. The annex provided that, in addition to those fire support ships working directly with shore fire control parties, the battleships USS Tennessee and California, the heavy cruiser USS Louisville and the light cruisers USS Montpelier and USS Birmingham would combine their efforts and fire power against the wooded cliff line facing the two Marine divisions.

During the period 6:00 to 7:15 a.m. and 7:55 to 8:30 a.m., the Navy warships threw approximately 615 tons of shells into their targets. Aircraft of the Northern Attack Force, including a majority of U. S. Army Air Force planes flying from Aslito airfield on Saipan, struck the cliff line when the Naval bombardment lifted. More than 69 tons of explosives were dropped by the 126 planes, and Marine strong that only slight advances could be made. One situation report stated that progress was being made in leap-frog fashion — advance 10 yards, hold it, advance 10 yards, hold it.

Enemy counter-attacks and infiltration was carried on throughout the night, and sporadic fire from small arms, knee mortars and artillery constantly kept the Marines on guard.

Casualties on both sides mounted.

JIG-plus EIGHT

Objective 0-8, which was supposed to have been reached by July 31, was still in enemy hands on August 1, so Maj. Gen. Schmidt ordered the divisions to continue their assault and seize the objective.

Both divisions commenced their attacks at 8 a.m., and though they met resistance, it was not as fanatical as the previous day. At 6:55 p.m., August 1, 1944, Maj. Gen. Schmidt declared the island secured.

All that remained now was the mopping-up opera-

Command. They continued to mop-up.

On August 25, the 1st Battalion, 8th Marines, was kept on Tinian, while other elements of the regiment returned to Saipan, just three miles distant.

On January 1, 1945, the 1st Battalion, 8th Marines, was relieved of mopping-up on Tinian, and they moved to Saipan.

After the Island Command took over, 542 enemy were killed. These 542 defenders tied up portions of one Marine regiment for five months and inflicted 163 casualties — 38 dead and 125 wounded.

The battle for Tinian ended officially in nine days, with more than 5,000 enemy troops killed, counted and buried; more than 9,000 civilians interned and 252 military prisoners.

U. S. losses, including personnel lost aboard the USS Colorado and the USS Norman Scott, on JIG-DAY, totaled 389 killed and 1,816 wounded.

Lt. Gen. Holland M. Smith, commanding general, Expeditionary Troops, evaluated the Tinian Operation as follows:

"In war as in every phase of activity, there are enterprises so skillfully conceived and successfully executed, that they become models of their kind. Our capture of Tinian, southern sister island of Saipan, belongs in this category. If such a tactical superlative can be used to describe a military maneuver, where the result brilliantly consummated the planning and performance, Tinian was the perfect amphibious operation in the Pacific war."

JIG-plus THREE advantage if they Since the 4th Division was the closest to Objective 0-7, so Maj. Gen. Schmidt ordered the 2d Division to advance to Objective 0-6A. This action would carry the 2d Division's front to within 1,000 yards.

At 7:30 a.m., the 2d Division was ordered to advance to Objective 0-6A. This action would carry the 2d Division's front to within 1,000 yards.

Can You Be Critical

(Editor's Note: This is the fifth of six parts of an article concerning retraining of personnel for a critical MOS reprinted through the courtesy of LEATHERNECK magazine.)

Contrary to the scuttlebutt muttered by a few disappointed job seekers, letters to Headquarters Marine Corps from troops in the field don't usually wind up in the "deep six" or lie unattended on the bottom of a clerk's incoming basket. To the contrary, such mail sets off a chain reaction among personnel of the department concerned.

Each request is considered in its merits and each reply is based upon findings derived from a complete research of the man's qualifications compared with the requirements of the directive governing the request.

To staff a request with such a thorough degree of accuracy and consideration—in justice to both the Marine Corps and the individual—the writer's jacket is pulled from the files and its contents are carefully noted. The final determination is based, not on snap judgment, but on the collective judgment and recommendations of several officers—and frequently of several sections—acting on the basis of the best information obtainable from all sources.

It won't take the Marine Corps long to find out if you're hiding your talents under a "bushel". And in this day and age, with the demand exceeding the supply of talented personnel, it isn't likely that your request for retraining will be ignored—if you have something to offer the Corps.

Shortage of skilled personnel is nothing new to the Marine Corps—nor to the armed forces in general. During World War, or the "War Between the States", as most gentlemen like to refer to the unfortunate period of country's history, the military skill at the outset of the struggle was the only call the 03, or trained man.

The Regular U. S. Army then only about 16, strong, or slightly less size of the Marine Corps to World War II, MIL were largely dress peffs, completely lacking bat training. In trying such green troops in class fighting outfit, the critical need then for experiential handlers.

While the 03 of the Marine Corps is considered the most important MOS structure—if not critical—he can take the exploits of a forlorn expert who later terror in the his enemies when came an infantry specialist name was Napoleon.

And the Marine who in the not-so-critical of Special Services consider his promotional opportunities in a be if he considers the merits of Abner Doubt is credited with invigame of baseball; Army thought he to on the "ball" to appo the rank of general.

10 Years Progress Marked By OWC Sitting Service

The Paradise Point Sitting Service came into being in 1953, to accommodate the needs of the mothers with small children who had many social and civic functions to attend and no daily available source of baby sitters.

It was in that year that the Officers Wives' Club became responsible financially as well as morally for the Sitting Service which up until that time had been an adjunct of the Nursery School.

In 1955, through the efforts of the Officers Wives' Club building committee, the Sitting Service was housed in a building of its own and the services in space, equipment and time were expanded. The Sitting Service operated out of the red the entire year, paying its own taxes with no margin of profit.

Up until May of this year the Sitting Service was governed by a board of 10 to 12 volunteer workers of the Officers Wives' Club. At present, it is governed by a committee composed of a Chairman, Mrs. C. R. Mann; Co-Chairman, Mrs. D. H. Slemmons; Senior Advisor, Mrs. C. L. Granger; President of the Officers Wives' Club, Mrs. J. Taul and the Supervisor of the Sitting Service, Mrs. Ben Stuts. The board was cut to its present number for more efficiency of operation. It acts as a liaison between the Sitting Service and the Officers Wives' Club. The Sitting Service is located in Bldg. 2624, near the Golf Course. Outside, it has a large fenced in play area with a swing set, tricycles and sandboxes. Inside, it has a large playroom with a blackboard, rocking chairs and a TV. Pull toys of all kinds, blocks, crayons and coloring books are among some of the play equipment. There is a large crib room with 13 cribs, all with non-toxic paint. Each crib is changed after use even if only used for five minutes.

There is a separate eating area with a convenient tables and chairs, low enough for the children to eat in comfort and with high chairs for the babies.

There are two attendants on duty at all times to care for the children. An extra attendant is provided when a reservation for the 31st child is received. Thus, there is an attendant for each 15 children in the Sitting Service. All toys, furniture and equipment is sterilized at the end of each day.

The Fire Marshal regularly inspects the premises and equipment so that everything is kept as safe as humanly possible.

Those eligible to use the Sitting Service are members of the Officers Wives' Club, their associate members, Reserve Officers Wives; members of the Officers Wives' Club at Cherry Point; Wives of Foreign Officers and bonafide house guests of the Officers Wives' Club.

The hours are from 8 to 11:30, seven days a week, with a special schedule on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. The rates are 35¢ per child, per hour, proportionally less for additional children in family and there are special day rates.

Lunch or supper is served if requested consisting of Peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, soup, crackers and milk. Kool-Aide and cookies are served three times a day.

For reservations or information call Dorothy Huber, Publicity Chairman for the Officers Wives' Club, at Tele. 6-6723.

Etched Cup Lost On Guam Recently Reaches Owner

As the Marines hopped from island to island during WW II, a young Marine private etched into his canteen cup, the itinerary of his outfit: "Don Lewis, 2/2/43 'F' Co, 2d Bn, 4th Marines (Espiritu) 'Santo' (Guadal) 'Canal', 'Vanguna' 'New Georgia', 'Noumea' 'Auckland', 'Emirau'.

Almost 20 years later that canteen cup was found on the shelves of a Marine unit's supply room in Fort Worth, Texas.

Captain J. D. Prater, commanding officer of the unit, went about the task of finding Don Lewis. He told his story

The Marine Recruiter in Elkhart, SSgt. J. M. Kittle read the article in Leatherneck and immediately called each of the 17 Lewis' in the Elkhart directory. Not finding the correct one, Kittle checked with the post office and at the old Route #3 address with no success.

A farmer in the area did remember a family of Lewis' that had lived near him but they had moved several years ago.

SSgt. Kittle decided to try his luck in South Bend, Ind., and enlisted the aid of a former Marine, D. J. Gessinger. Their first phone call proved successful.

Question: Are you Don Lewis?
A. Yes
Q. Are you a former Marine?
A. Yes
Q. Do you remember your serial number?
A. 468401

The search was over. Lewis said that he did the etching, with the point of a "mess kit" knife, and vaguely remembered losing the cup on Guam, and here the story must end because canteen cups cannot talk.

Don Lewis and Cup to the editors of Leatherneck. The editors confirmed and published the information on the cup and the fact that a Marine by the name of Don Lewis did enlist in 1942 and was discharged in 1945. Lewis's home address at that time was Route #3, Elkhart, Ind.
