NO. 50

Christmas Contest Canceled; Activities Planned

When Ole St. Nick arrives at Camp Lejeune this year, he will be disappointed to find no Christmas displays around the base, or verjoyed to find the Marines have taken the situation in hand and given Camp Lejeune a real Yuletide "face."

The reason he may be disappointed is that the annual Christmas Display competition in previous years will not be conducted this year. A big reason for the cancellation of Christmas Display competition this year falls largely on the second Division.

In most of the major units, the Division back from recent Vietnam exercises and the for the Division to maintain "force in readiness" at times, it was decided that Christmas decorations were too heavy to officially engage in the Christmas Display competition. However, all units and activities at the base are encouraged to decorate their buildings and for the Christmas season the past years. Displays or decorations will be selected on roof tops without approval from individual headquarters. Although no official judging will be made for dependent housing units or base units having outstanding building decorations, the GLOBE will canvass the area and select the various displays to be photographed and publish those selected in next week's issue.

In addition to the unofficial display competition, Camp Lejeune will offer a variety of Christmas festivities.

Marston Pavilion will be a Christmas "Disneyland" to Camp Lejeune youngsters this year. A holiday schedule has been arranged to delight and include all age groups. Starting off the Yuletide festivities will be a Christmas party for seventh and eighth graders. To keep the kids from getting underfoot while mom is baking the Christmas cookies and dad is setting up the tree, children's movies will be shown at the Pavilion. A Teen Club Christmas and New Year's party are two more occasions to be marked on the date book.

Santa will visit the gigantic annual Children's Christmas party to be held Dec. 21 in the Goettge Memorial Field House beginning at 2 p.m. All military personnel and their dependent children up to the age of 13 are invited.

Division Marine To Tour With Ed Sullivan Troupe

Being the son of a famous personality may have drawbacks for some young men, but for Pfc Robert Fontaine of 10th Company, 2d Battalion, Marines.

Robert, who is the son of the famous Frank "Crazy" Fontaine whose hilarious grins and daffy dialect tickle the Gleason TV Show viewers is a talented entertainer in his own right.

Following his entertainment debut in a 1950 Telethon with his father and comedy team stars Hope and Bing Crosby, Robert's friends call him "Uncle Jr.," later worked his father in a situation-comedy radio show.

Following graduation from school, Fontaine worked singing-star Fabian in Atlantic City's Chelsea Hotel, and the "Four Aces" on the Pier of that resort city before joining the Marine Corps 16 months ago.

Fontaine entertained in Boston, performing in night clubs and on local television.

Since joining the Marine Corps, the talented Marine has not had much opportunity to display his talents, most of his time being taken up by his duties as a Marine infantryman.

But recently, he received permission from his superiors to accept an invitation to entertain the garrison at the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base along with his famous father and the Ed Sullivan Troupe.

AND AWAY... WE GO!—Pfc Robert Fontaine, son of rubber-faced Frank "Crazy" Fontaine, supporting comedian Jackie Gleason's TV show, apes his famous parent for members of his rifle squad of the 2d Bn., 6th Marines. Fontaine, who recently returned from the Caribbean, will be re-visiting that area on an entertainment tour with his father and the Ed Sullivan troupe when they go to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Safety Tips For Holiday Decorations

With the Christmas and New Year holidays approaching, the memories of past years are re-kindled and the yuletide season is looked forward to with even greater expectation.

Each Christmas, carelessness in the form of improper use of electricity, combustible decorations and other means of holiday lighting result in needless tragedy.

To reduce fire hazards to a minimum and assure the happiest of holidays for Marine personnel and their families, a few simple precautionary fire prevention measures should be followed.

Do not use paper, cotton or other combustible decorations. Approved flameproof material may be acceptable but every effort should be made to use non-combustible decorations. If "angel hair" and "spray on snow" are used, the latter should be applied first.

When selecting a Christmas tree, if at all possible, pick a small tree for they are less hazardous. Find the freshest, greenest tree that can be found and as short a time before Christmas as possible.

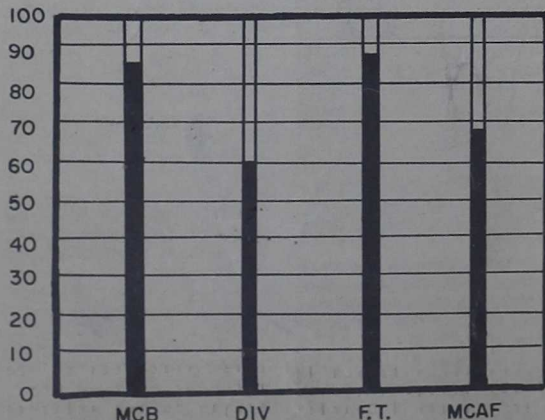

Once you have purchased the tree make a fresh slanted cut a few inches above the original cut of the trunk and keep the tree in a cool outside place with the base in a container of water. When setting it up, a day or two before Christmas is suggested, stand the tree firmly in a container. A substantial tree stand with a built-in water container is preferred; keep the container filled with water each day.

"Here comes Santa Claus! Here Comes Santa Claus!" right into Toyland! This year, Ol' Nick will visit "Babes in Toyland" during the following hours: Dec. 14 from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m.; Dec. 15 from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Dec. 17 through 21 from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Dec. 22 from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; and Dec. 24 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

CWO H. E. Wilson Engineer School Boasts Medal Of Honor Winner

Soft-spoken, humble and modest—but one-hundred percent Marine is CWO Harold E. Wilson, Medal of Honor winner for his acts of heroism against Chinese Communist Forces on the night of April 23-24, 1951 near the 38th Parallel in the Republic of South Korea.

CWO Wilson, who, on December 3, assumed the post of adjutant at the Marine Corps Engineer Schools, Camp Lejeune, was a platoon sergeant in Company "G" 3d Battalion, 1st Marines, 1st Marine Division when he displayed the gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty which earned him his nation's highest military award.

Already a veteran of the epic withdrawal from the Chosin Reservoir, CWO Wilson was with his company on the night of April 23, when Chinese Communist troops launched a fierce mortar, machine-gun, grenade and small arms attack on their position.

Although struck in the right arm and the left leg while braving intense fire to assist the survivors of a company outpost back into the line, Wilson nevertheless refused medical aid and moved about his men who were engaging the enemy from hastily-built foxholes, shouting words of encouragement.

As the intensity of the enemy's attack mounted, Wilson was struck twice more—once in the head and once in the left shoulder, but he again insisted on remaining with his men, even though denied the use of his arms to fire a weapon.

Even so, Wilson managed to keep his men supplied with rifles and ammunition taken from the wounded. While still directing the defense of the position, Wilson was blown off his feet by a bursting mortar shell, but again refused medical aid despite weakness from loss of blood.

Moving from foxhole to foxhole, directing fire, resupplying ammunition, rendering first aid and encouraging his men, Wilson continued to direct the defense of the position.

Finally at dawn on April 24, when the final attack of the enemy had been repulsed and only after Wilson had accounted for every man in his platoon, did the valiant Marine walk unassisted one-half mile to an aid station and submit to treatment.

Wilson also received the Purple Heart Medal with four stars and the Bronze Star with Combat "V" and the Presidential Unit Citation with one star for his Korean combat service.

When asked whether he thought he might receive some kind of commendation for his deeds at the time, Wilson replied crisply:

"No, just doing my job."

Jewish Services

Chanukah, the Feast of Lights, will be observed in the chapel in Building 67 at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 19. The Base Jewish Chaplain will conduct a Chanukah seminar discussing the historical background, rituals and customs of the holiday at this time. Regular Jewish services are held every Friday evening at 7:30 p.m.

'Frozen Chosin' Chills Recalled By Leatherneck

Twelve years ago today, a bone-tired group of professional soldiers were beginning a well-earned rest in a South Korean bean patch.

The men of the famed First Marine Division were thawing out their frost-bitten hands and feet in a sprawling tent city a few miles outside the city limits of the seaport city of Masan.

December is a bitter cold month in Korea. The winds that sweep down from the Manchurian steppes crystallize everything with their frosty breath. But in Masan that day, the climate—to the Marines at least—was like that of a Spring day.

These men who now snoozed comfortably in the straw next to their cherry-red oil stoves, or who slid down muddy company streets to seek out pals in other regiments were trying in their own way to erase a nightmare from their memory. That nightmare was their epic "fight to the rear" through crack Chinese infantry divisions dead set on annihilating the Marines. And they almost did it, too.

The First Division was seventy-eight miles from the nearest friendly seaport, and a stone's throw from the Manchurian border when the Chinese began probing the U. N. perimeter. The Division was soon left alone in the mountains overlooking the larger reservoir called "Chosin." Survivors of the battle can recall a few clear, cold nights just before the Chinese hit. It was so cold one's nostrils pinched with each breath. Sound carried a long distance in the brittle silence. The moon came up early and rose high over the ice far below. The scene was reminiscent of that old movie about the lost city of Shangri-La. Two or three nights later, it was black pitch and the 7th Marines were fighting for their lives. So was the 1st Regiment. . . and the Fifth who came to help.

The fighting was bare and the terrain was the real enemy. The temperature dropped to degrees below zero. For the four or five nights some of the men had no sleeping bags. So they survived until they could pick up one along the way. They survived by foraging blankets left in abandoned tents and trenches months before. They fought the real sleep that plagued even one fall asleep for more than minutes meant a gentle death from freezing. Some rines kicked each other awake and in firing order.

One company Gunny old men: "lose your rations hang onto that ammo! my who drops a can of ammo the slope goes after it. The rines were fighting to country. The infantry would three steps forward up and slide back two. The on a hill of several hundred meters in knee-deep snow.

Chow was short and frozen. Company armorers a few yards from the hills where Marines poured curate fire into wave after of animated quilted uniforms. The noise, and the confusion, the sudden feeling of panic, a man even when he accidentally discovers himself in the assigned job in the of the bedlam. . . it was the same at Chosin as at the hot fire-fight in our The Marine with his machine gun and his launchers did the job.

Bridge Building Record Broken By 18 Reserves

Records they say are made to broken, and that's exactly at 18 Marine Corps Reservists did at the Marine Corps Engineer Schools here last week ere they are currently undergoing training in combat engineering techniques.

Within five days the reservists instructed a timber-trestle bridge capable of two-way passage by class 30 military vehicles and spanning a small stream in the engineer training area of the Engineer Schools.

"It gave the men some practical experience in bridge building that was not included in their regular curriculum," said Sgt. M. M. Crocker, NCOIC of the bridge building operations. Designed by SSgt. Charles M. Brien, the bridge, measuring 24 feet, was put together with mostly saws, hammer and nails, according to MSgt. Crocker.

"The reservists had no previous experience in this type construction. Practically all their studies here at the Engineer Schools has been done in a classroom, and that takes in plenty of work," said Crocker. The Reservists had been assigned to the Engineer Schools from various FMF units following deployment of the latter to the Caribbean area during the Cuban crisis.

From 1950 until 1953, Templeton served as an instructor at the Turkish Armored School, Ankara, Turkey, and from 1953-54 as a battalion commander in the 1st Armored Division, Fort Hood, Texas.

After service with the Korean Military Advisory Group from 1954-56, Templeton instructed U. S. Reservists in his native Oklahoma. In June, 1959, he retired from the Army with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

The following August, Templeton joined the American National Red Cross as an assistant field director. Promoted to field director in February 1961, he was assigned to the Sheppard Air Force Base in Texas, his last station before coming to Camp Lejeune.

Clear Vision, Auto Equipment—Your Safety

Has anyone ever seen an unguided guided missile? There are Marines here who actually ride in them. They may be trying to hide the other cars or else hide themselves.

These drivers are actually playing hide-and-seek with the other vehicles. Visibility from inside a closed-up tank or other armored vehicle is very poor. A car is not an armored vehicle but it can become an unguided-guided missile.

The "Peek-A-Boo" drivers previously mentioned in the GLOBE are one menace but Camp Lejeune has others. These are the drivers who have their windows and windshields cluttered with unnecessary decals and equipment from helmets to large bags and baby car seats. Dirt does a good covering job also.

The convertible owners that do not care enough about safety to insure they can see through their rear view windows are as dangerous on the road as the other menaces. Just a little consideration for the lives of others, if not for the driver's own, is all that is needed to reduce traffic accidents and deaths.

Were a person who has never seen an automobile before to walk up to some of the Marines here at Camp Lejeune and ask what certain items of equipment on the car were for, it is doubtful that those Marines could give the correct answers.

The Marines in question must not know about the equipment on their cars because they seldom have it working properly. Each piece of equipment on the car is more of a safety feature than a convenience.

Begin with the brakes. The brake pedal is not just a raised foot rest. Pressure on the pedal, causes the car to stop or slow when it must. Of course, there are those Marines here who forget or neglect to stop. Some of those are no longer in the ranks of the living.

Even the horn is an item of safety, although some here are used only to notify a person inside a building that his or her ride is waiting. It would be nice to use the horn once in a while to wake up some sleepy driver that happens to be letting his car drift your way or to let pedestrians know you are coming through.

A rear view mirror is a handy little gadget. It lets you know if the part in your hair has been wind-blown away or it lets your date know her lipstick has not smeared. It also allows drivers to see the boxes and bags piled on the back seat of their car.

Why else would a rear view mirror be placed in a car? Just because its name implies it is for viewing the road and traffic to the rear, does that mean that's what it's for?

A driver may often wonder where the cars that pop into view around him come from, but if he were to use his rear view mirror correctly, he would know. They come from behind. A rear view mirror also helps to let a driver know if the police are beginning to follow him.

Now if you were to look out your windshield, either at the top or the bottom, you should find two narrow stainless steel rods with thin rubber strips connected. These have come to be known as windshield wipers.

When a man gets something in his eye, his first instinct is to rub it. Until the obstruction is out of the eye, the man has a difficult time seeing properly. Thus, there are windshield wipers on your car. Not to wipe your eyes, but to keep your vision clear while driving—or attending a drive-in movie on a rainy night.

Perhaps there are some Marines at Lejeune who are

"HI-WAYS ARE HAPPY WAYS—As long as they're safe ways" might be one of the slogans for the coming holiday season. Lt. Col. W. W. Atkins, Exchange Officer, gives a few pointers to Charles T. Silance, mechanic, as he installs a seat belt around the waist of four-year-old Kevin Tucker. To promote safe driving for all personnel and their families, the Base Service Station is now selling seat belts at cost price and free installation at the base service station. Hours are Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. during the entire month of December. (Photo by Pfc E. J. O'Neill)

Vandalism Costly At Capehart

The current outbreak in vandalism in the all-new Capehart Housing area has caused a lot of concern, effort and a lot of man hours of work for CWO O. W. Bailey, Officer-in-Charge at Base Telephone, and his men.

At the present time there are forty-two emergency phones that are placed at strategic points at Capehart to enable personnel and their dependents the means to place calls in the event of an emergency.

During the past month and a half, approximately a dozen phones have been vandalized. Vandals have cut wires with knives, burned telephone cords with cigarette lighters, removed the speakers and/or the receiver or removed the entire unit.

As CWO Bailey stated, "The phones were put in the Capehart area for the dependent families there. The occasion might arise when a dire emergency exists. What if the phone were out of order? What then? Let's use the phones for what they have been intended—use not abuse."

"gunny" enough to want their cars to sound like a tank or six-by coming down the road. That is one way of letting the Base M. P.'s know you have a defective muffler.

If a person were to walk in front of his car, and look at the left and right corners, he might just happen to see two (or four) small glass globes. In the rear of the car, the man is liable to find two small red-shaded glass discs or plates. After seeing these and still not knowing what they are for, the man could get in the car and turn or pull the knob marked "lights." Getting out of the car again and walking to the front, a ray of light would be shining on the man's trousers and in the rear of the car, a tint of red would shine on the man.

Surely these lights are not just for decoration. They must have some purpose. They do. Between the period of half an hour after sunset until half an hour before sunrise, or at any other time when the light is insufficient to clearly see up to two hundred feet ahead, these lights are to be properly used.

Very few people like to attempt walking through an open door and suddenly have it slammed in their face. Doors do not have stop lights on them to designate a "stop" but cars do or should.

A stop light in proper working order can save the car in the rear from trying to climb into the seat beside you. A string of cars traveling down the highway could suddenly act like a closing accordion if the car in front stops quickly or without the proper warning signals.

No one is a perfect driver. There are good drivers though and there are bad. With a little more care and caution, a little more consideration for the rights and safety of others, everyone can be a good driver and not a statistic or casualty.

An Editorial From The Commanding General

Motor Vehicle Accidents and the methods and means by which we can prevent them continues to present one of the most difficult problems that we are faced with today. Many believe that the fatalities, injuries and property damage experienced through the careless operation of motor vehicles is the price we must pay for the use of this mode of transportation and that no effort, regardless of how great, will reduce the toll. Experience has proven this belief to be erroneous. Those groups among our population who have approached the accident problem with an aggressive, balanced program including enforcement, education, and engineering have succeeded in reducing the mass slaughter to a bare minimum.

A spasmodic, "special holiday" type program conducted for the sole purpose of necessary compliance with orders from higher authority, and presented by the most junior, untrained and inexperienced NCO will not produce these results. The Motor Vehicle Accident Prevention Program, in order to reap effect, must have day-to-day, wholehearted and sincere support of every Officer and Staff NCO. If each Officer and Staff NCO would say a few words about safe driving, and say them with sincerity and conviction, each day and each time they are in contact with their men, the results in accident reduction would be gratifying.

The principles of leadership, and more aptly, "moral leadership" call for the development of proper attitudes and perspectives through examples being set and the correct attitudes being demonstrated by our leaders.

There is no area in the world today where this can be more appropriately applied than in Motor Vehicle Accident Prevention. There is no task which is more personally rewarding than that of saving human life and suffering.

If all "hands" pull together, we will reach the goal of effectively reducing death, injury and property damage from motor vehicle accidents.

If You Ask Me:

SEAT BELTS — PRO CON?

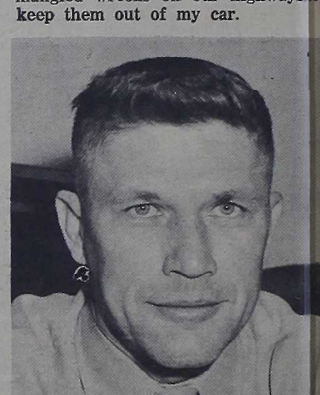

2D LT. JOANN CANAL, Executive Officer, WM Company—I think seat belts should be mandatory auto equipment. Many "minor" accidents result in injuries (and scars) which could have been prevented if occupants hadn't hit mirrors, radio knobs and other auto bric-brac.

PFC JOHN M. KUBIS, HqCo., H&SBn—It is impossible for anyone to say anything derogatory concerning seat belts. Since their innovation they have helped save many lives. For the price of a few dollars, a few seconds and a little inconvenience one can buy an extension for a life which may have otherwise ended. I have seen too many mangled wrecks on our highways to keep them out of my car.

PVT. GEORGE R. HOPKINS, Mail & Files, H&SBn—Anything which offers at least a deterring force to the useless almost sacrificial slaughter of human beings on the American highways is, in my opinion, an essential commodity to the wise automobile driver. That seat belts can and do save lives is a fact. The responsible and intelligent driver should, for his own safety as well as his passengers, invest in the security of seat belts.

SSGT. W. M. SMITH, JR., NCOIC H&SBn, Special Services—I wouldn't mope my car without seat belts. I think they have cut down casualties at least 50 per cent and with the amount of accidents on the road today it pays to have all the protection possible. For such a little investment you receive so much.

The Latest Word

Secretary of the Navy Fred Korth has announced that a majority of the dependents of Navy and Marine Corps personnel permanently assigned to the U. S. Naval Base, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, are being returned to Guantanamo before Christmas.

Approximately 1,400 of the more than 2,000 who were evacuated at the beginning of the Cuban crisis are expected to return by the first available transportation to join husbands and fathers whose tours of duty at Guantanamo extend beyond April 1, 1963.

The Military Sea Transportation Service transport USNS Upshur will sail from New York Dec. 19 with space for 400 dependents. Air transportation was to be available in Military Air Transport Service flights from Norfolk beginning Dec. 11.

Personnel ordered to Guantanamo after today will be permitted to take their dependents in accordance with instructions effective before the Cuban crisis.

The Fifth Marine Expeditionary Brigade, commanded by Brigadier General William T. Fairbourn, USMC, is now embarked in ships of Amphibious Group Three enroute to home bases in California. The Expeditionary Brigade consists of four battalion landing teams, a helicopter squadron, and supporting units. It was moved from the West Coast to the Caribbean during the crisis in ships of Amphibious Group Three, a Pacific Fleet unit commanded by Rear Admiral Nelson Johnson.

Also embarked with the MEB is a battalion landing team which was lifted to Guantanamo.

The more than 18,000 Navy and Marine Corps personnel in 20 ships began to arrive at the Panama Canal for transit December 2. The entire group is expected to arrive in West Coast ports during the period December 11-16.

The Marine units will return to Camp Pendleton, El Toro, and Twentynine Palms, Calif.

The four battalion landing teams of the 5th MEB, and their commanding officers, are:

1st Battalion, 1st Marines, Lieutenant Colonel M. M. Blue; 3d Battalion, 1st Marines, Major W. J. Masterpool; 4th Battalion, 7th Marines, Lieutenant Colonel R. B. Prescott; 3d Battalion, 1st Marines, Lieutenant Colonel Frederick Simpson. The airlifted battalion landing team was the 2d Battalion, 1st Marines, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel William Geftman. Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron 41 is commanded by Lieutenant Colonel T. J. Ross.

THE LION

An unusual, often stirring and frequently exciting picture has been made of the novel by Joseph Kessel. The unusual character of the story lies for the most part in its locale, since the film was shot in its entirety in East Africa, on the Kirinyaga Game Reserve in Kenya, with the added values of Cinemascope and De Luxe color, the picture is almost breathtaking at times in its scenic effects and the views of the animals native to the area. Starring roles are played by William Holden, Trevor Howard, Cupucine and Pamela Franklin.

WHITE CHRISTMAS

Bing Crosby, Danny Kaye and Rosemary Clooney make up the cast for this winter wonderland of musical comedy. The whole story takes place in the service. Good entertainment for children.

THE FIREBRAND

Kent Taylor, Lisa Montell and Valentin de Vargas, better known as a Rudolph Valentino-look-alike, star in this western adventure backgrounded against the ever-alluring atmosphere of the great California Gold Rush. De Vargas is cast as the feared-and-fabled Joaquin Murietta, a sort of Robin Hood-of-the-west, moving relentlessly into combat against political aspirant, California Ranger, Kent Taylor. Lisa Montell is seen as Senor Murietta's sweetheart.

MORGAN THE PIRATE

This adventure story centers around the early exploits of Henry Morgan, the renegade pirate who later became a knighted admiral in the King's Navy. The film unfolds in Panama when it was the richest city in the 17th Century America and follows Morgan through a series of romantic and swashbuckling escapades culminating in his capture of that fabulous treasure-laden outpost. Steve Rease stars as Morgan and Valerie Lagrange portrays his lover, Dona Inez.

...AND GRAB YOUR RESERVE CHUTE—SSgt. Charles E. Duncan, Jr., right, Platoon Sergeant of Pathfinder Platoon, 2d Force Recon Co., gives instructions in the body position used by Pathfinders in free-fall parachuting. This a different position than is used by civilian sky-divers.

Today, the 2d Force Reconnaissance Company, Force Troops, is a vital part of the Marine Corps' "Force in Readiness"; ready to meet any emergency that might arise in any of the trouble spots of the world. One important part of the Force Recon company is the Pathfinder Platoon.

What is a pathfinder? The dictionary defines a pathfinder as, "one who discovers a new route in untraveled regions," and this definition applies very well to a Force Recon Pathfinder team.

The Eyes And Ears Of The 2d Marine Force Recon

Missions

The Pathfinder missions are to provide limited terminal guidance to assault waves of helicopters, and when required, to provide landing assistance and related traffic control facilities for helicopter assault operations conducted during periods of reduced visibility or daylight operation. Other Pathfinder missions are to provide pre-L-hour reports of enemy activities, obstacles, weather and radiological contamination encountered in the landing zone during daylight and night helicopter assault operations. In addition, the Pathfinders clear, mark and prepare the landing zone for assault helicopters, and furnish emergency communication support and assembly aid to helicopter landed assault troops.

AND HERE'S DZ CONTROL—Cpl. B. W. Floyd, of Pathfinder Platoon, holds an aerial photo study of a proposed drop zone for a class of trainees, as he qualifies as a jumpmaster.

The Pathfinder platoon consists of a platoon headquarters and four teams. Each team is a basic tactical unit, consisting of one officer and nine enlisted Marines. The team is a well balanced, highly flexible, well trained organization capable of performing combat Pathfinder missions employing various proven methods of transportation for delivery to and into helicopter landing areas under adverse conditions.

Composition

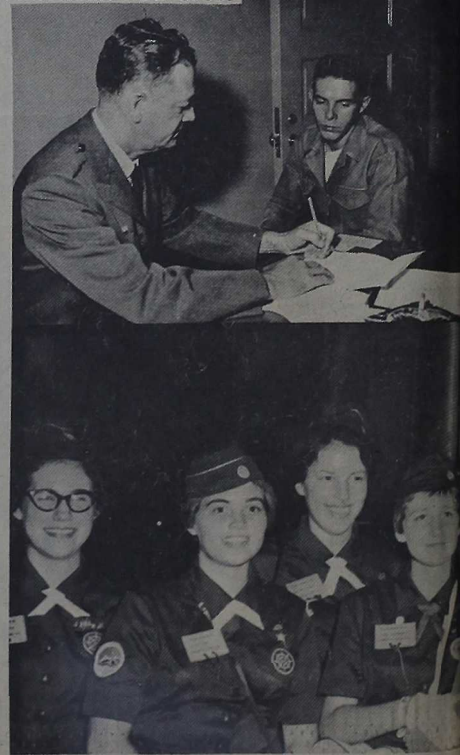

In addition to supervising the establishment and operation of the Helicopter Landing Zone, the Team leader (a lieutenant) may also act as the ground to air radio operator. He is the team's jumpmaster for parachute operations.

The Team Sgt. (Staff Sgt.) assists the team leader in supervision and operation of the zone and is responsible for setting up the defense of the landing zone control center and is a qualified jumpmaster. Each team provides three landing site NCO's (Cpls.) These aptly named individuals select and operate the actual landing points within a landing site. In addition to knowing the basic aerodynamics peculiar to the helicopter, its limitations and capabilities, they are extremely knowledgeable about factors that must be considered in the selection of landing sites, such as: type of helicopters to be landed, number of copters, ground slope, surface and condition, obstacles, prevailing winds and enemy situation. For night operations these NCOs are responsible for setting up correct lights, aiding helicopters in alignment of the approach landing by means of signals and provides any assistance required of the assault troops and keeping constant communication with the control center.

Three fieldmasters, LCpls. or below, mark landing points, either by color panels or lights as necessary, remove or mark obstacles and assist the landing site NCOs when needed. They also act as troop guides and constantly maintain communication via the Pathfinder communication net. The importance of these individuals cannot be stressed enough during landings under total darkness.

Next in line is the Pathfinder ground air radio communicator. Although not specifically school trained in aircraft traffic control, he is the key to the smooth, uninterrupted landing plan from the standpoint of the zone, considering the many mishaps and occurrences not normally planned upon and prepared for. His job becomes critically important under reduced visibility or night-time operations. Conduct of radio traffic from Pathfinders to helicopter Flight Leaders normally would involve the following: local enemy situation, wind direction and velocity. This job calls for an experienced level-headed, conscientious man thoroughly checked out on the FM/UHF radios he must employ.

The last member of the well balanced team is the machine-gunner. He and his weapon will be employed to provide defense of the control center. He is also a "Jack-of-all-Trades" in that he can perform the other jobs of the team, communicator, landing site NCO, fieldmaster or used as a messenger and runner.

Other equipment used by the Pathfinder team are, radios, hatchets, machettes, wire cutters, tree climbers, light and heavy demolition kits and standard size axes. In addition, each Pathfinder team employs nine M3A1 submachine guns and two M-60 machine guns for defense of the landing zone.

Pathfinder teams may be delivered to a landing area by parachute, helicopter, fixed wing aircraft, motor vehicle, amphibious landing or infiltration as a ground patrol. Parachute entry is the most desirable entry into the general vicinity of landing zone, because of its silence and accuracy.

Normally a Pathfinder team is attached to an individual helicopter squadron when deployed.

Once the assault troops are directed to a predetermined position and Marine riflemen move forward, the Pathfinders withdraw — mission accomplished.

Before a Marine can become a fully qualified member of a Pathfinder team, he must be trained in a specific skill or skills to be used in his work. There are many formal schools available to Force Recon personnel to enable them to learn new

FINAL CHECK—SSgt. Kenneth R. Monell, left, of Pathfinder Platoon, checks the reserve parachute of LCpl. Arthur L. Barrett Swishes 39, But Lejeune Still Bows, 50-48

Camp Lejeune's one man gang, Jim Barrett put on a stellar performance last Wednesday evening when he personally accounted for 39 of the Lejeune total of 48 points. His personal effort however was overshadowed as Dixon High School took a close ballgame by a 50-48 count.

Dixon in the first half built up what proved to be an unsurmountable lead when they walked off the court at half time sporting a 27-14 advantage.

In the third quarter the locals put together their first offensive threat of the evening as they outscored Dixon 16-11.

Trailing by eight the Lejeune five continued their scoring surge into the fourth period of play to bring the final point spread to just two points.

The outcome of the game was decided at the foul line as Lejeune hit on just eight of 18 attempts and Dixon hit on 12 of 19.

Lejeune's record slipped to 1-2, while Dixon remained undefeated with a 2-0 record.

Note of interest to all Le-jeune fans is that Jim Barrett increased his three game scoring total to 74 points for a 24.7 per game average.

Lejeune will host Beaufort in their next action Wednesday, December 12.

300 Attend Boys' League Banquet At Hadnot Point

Over 300 enthusiastic players, cheerleaders and parents jammed the Hadnot Point Staff NCO Annex Friday night for the Boys' League annual football banquet.

Following the Invocation given by Chaplain L. O. Seegers, Lt. Col. R. N. Davis of the Infantry Training Regiment assisted in the long-awaited presentation of the 1962 awards.

Eight teams of the Midget and Tiny Tot Leagues left their season's rivalries behind them as they cheered the presentation of the Championship Cup to Coach Clark of the Colts and individual plaques to the entire team.

The high point of suspense came when the sealed envelopes containing the names of the coaches' selections for "Most Valuable Player", "Most Valuable Lineman" and "Most Valuable Back" were opened.

Roars of approval greeted the announcement that Bruce Williams, captain and halfback of the Eagles had been given the coveted title of "Most Valuable Player"; Lewis Distefano of the Bears had been chosen "Most Valuable Lineman" and Carl Wiggins from the Redskins had repeated as "Most Valuable Back".

All football players were given letters appropriate to their teams as mementos of a season of callisthenics, long practices and hard fought games.

Not forgetting the feminine contribution to the gridiron season, Mrs. Rose Agnew, director of the cheerleaders, presented trophies to Miss Cheryl Butler and Miss Becky Williams, cheerleading queens of the Midget and Tiny Tot Leagues.

Following these awards, Lt. Col. Davis spoke on the importance of physical fitness and moral direction in the life of the nation's youth. Col. Davis emphasized the need for programs such as the Boys' League when, at present, only one out of four of America's young men can meet the minimum requirements for entering the armed services.

The finale of the evening was a "training table" feast of chicken, ham, roast beef and all the trimmings. The successful 1962 Boys' League football season had come to a happy close.

Davis, who presented the awards at the Boys League annual football banquet, stands behind the coaches' choice for the most valuable players: Carl Wiggins, left, "Most Valuable Back"; Lewis Distefano, center, "Most Valuable Lineman," and Bruce Williams, right, "Most Valuable Player." Hot Marines Head North On Road Trip

The Quantico Marine basketball squad, with victories over American University and Ft. Eustis on their slate, departed for New England last week on a northeastern swing against service opponents. Coach Ira Norfolk's Leathernecks will meet Otis AFB, Ft. Devens and Desant of Norfolk before returning to Marine Corps Schools for their home opener next Tuesday night.

Brian "Puddy" Sheehan, former Georgetown University star, sparked the locals in their wins over American U. and Eustis. The diminutive backcourt ace registered with two foul shots in the final 19 seconds to beat the AU Eagles and pumped in 28 points in the Marines' victory over conference opponent Eustis.

Coach Norfolk plans to use his same starting lineup on the road preparatory to the homecoming lidlifter against powerful Ft. Belvoir. Sheehan and Jim Mullen remain fixtures at the guard positions. Dick Hall and Derek Dickinson will be at the forwards, with Gary Koenig at center.

Marine Corps Schools will gain host the Christmas basketball tournament beginning Wednesday, Dec. 19, at Larson gymnasium. The 1961-62 defending champions have invited such outstanding quintets as Ohio Northern University, West Virginia State, Illinois State Normal, Old Dominion of Norfolk, and Lehigh University to the holiday classic.

Hornets Stung By Quantico Marines

The Quantico Marines staved off a second half rally to romp over the Fort Devens Hornets 10-92 Saturday night at the Fort Devens Sports Arena.

The Marines pressing man to man defense coupled with the hot shooting of Dickinson, Mullen and Sheehan helped Quantico pull out to a comfortable 33-40 halftime lead.

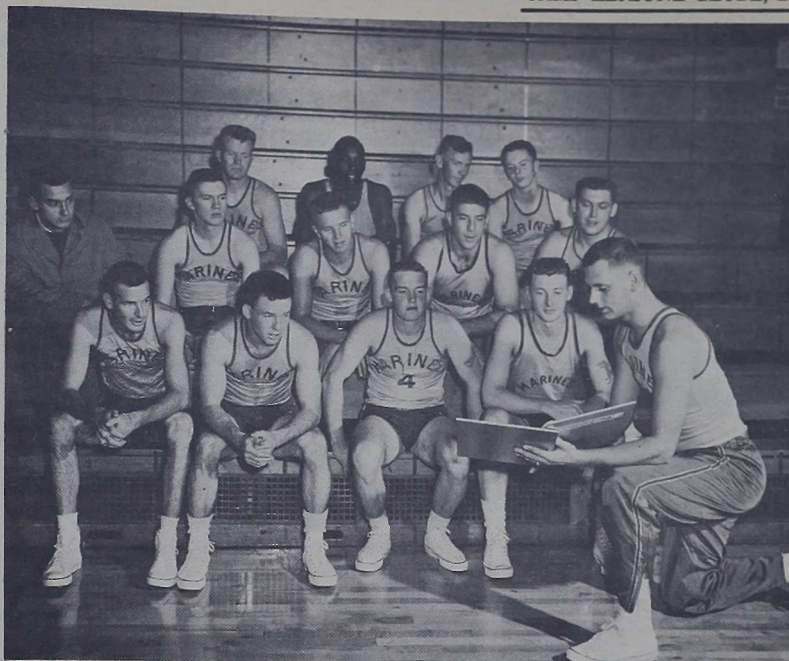

The Hornets came back to life in the second half with Patvin and Stead leading the scoring charge. Midway through the period Devens closed the gap to eight points. Then with two minutes to go three straight baskets by Dickinson iced the game for the Marines.

High scorer for the game was Ed Dunn of Fort Devens with 22 points. Quantico had four players hitting for double figures in the scoring column.

Fort Lee Travellers Take First Step Toward Interservice Conference Cup

FORT LEE, Va., Dec. 6--The Fort Lee Traveller basketball team squeezed past the visiting Fort Belvoir Engineers, 53-52, here tonight to capture their initial win of the East Coast Interservice Conference season. It was the ECIC opener for both clubs.

Talmadge Milan, only returning veteran to coach Taylor H. Sanford's crew, led the Trav in scoring with eight field goals and one free throw for 17 points. Leader for Belvoir was Phil Netto with seven field goals and three foul shots; an identical 17 points.

Fort Lee took an early lead and held it to the halftime intermission when the Trav walked off the floor with a 29-22 margin. Big leader for both clubs at that time was Milan with 13 points.

In the second half, the Engineers quickly caught up on two-pointers by Jim Fibbe and Jim Wester plus four more by Jerry Bartley. Milan dropped two in for Lee, but Netto matched him and the score stood 31-all until Herb Lee and Tom Bratcher hit a field goal apiece.

Fibbe followed with two from the foul line, Netto hit two points from the floor and Dick Smith added a charity shot to go ahead 38-35. The Trav's Carter Brandenburg put his club ahead by one until Barkley tied this on a foul shot.

Herb Lee hit two from the floor for a 39-37 Trav edge. Wester followed with two quick baskets and Netto hit one as the visitors again went ahead.

Bratcher took advantage of a fast break hitting on a hook and Brandenburg tallied two himself as Lee again tied the score this time at 43-all.

Netto was next to drop two points in, but again Belvoir did not command a lead very long as Dee Maynard had a floor score. Bartley came back with two, but then Milan got hot for one field goal and Maynard notched four points from the floor to place Lee in a 50-46 lead.

Netto hit two more field goals and Bartley and Wester one each, but this was not enough as Oscar Lofton and Brandenburg each sandwiched in one two-pointer each.

The "Clerks" were led by "Shots" Windbush, a five foot, eight inch forward with 22 points, and followed closely by guard Ralph Brown with 20.

Topo's defense could not stop the hard driving five from Headquarters, nor could they muster an offensive drive of their own to bring them in the range of the "Clerks". The score at halftime was 34-10.

In the second game played on December 4, saw 2d Composite Radio lose a close game to 8th Comm Bn 65-61 when 8th Comm Bn put on a scoring drive with five quick points and held off the Radlomen for the rest of the game.

Leadership, Stressed To New Grads

Colonel S. M. Kelly, Assistant Chief of Staff G-1, at Marine Corps Base told graduating classes at the Marine Corps Engineer Schools here last Friday morning they have an opportunity to become indispensable to their permanent units.

Former commanding officer of the Engineer Schools, Col. Kelly was guest speaker at the graduating exercises for 19 Engineer mechanics and 11 metal workers.

"You are leaving here better Marines, with more confidence in yourselves, and with a basis on which to build a successful career for the future," Col. Kelly told the graduates.

"You can become leaders on a small scale, without attaining the stature of a Napoleon or a MacArthur. All you need is to know your job and to do it well," said Col. Kelly.

Officers Installed In Club

Snow fell last Thursday here for the first time this year making the Midway Park Wives' Club's installation of officers held in the Midway Park Community Center an even more special occasion.

Paulette Whiting, the newly elected president, was doubly thrilled; both of her new position and, being from Florida, of seeing snow for the first time.

Chaplain D. V. Page, Midway Park Chaplain, presided over the Installation Ceremony. Assisting Mrs. Whiting in wielding the gavel is Vice-President, Edwina Campbell. Secretary, Sue Harwood, will be busy jotting down the minutes from now on while budget minded Ellen Link handles the financial business and Sgt. at Arms, Kathleen Rittenhouse keeps "order in the court".

Economically speaking, it's Vernita Henry as business manager. Jean Self is the new historian and Olive Conway and Pat Ford will work together on publicity. The new board of officers will hold office for a six month period.

Witnessing the Installation were special guests: Base Sergeant Major R. O. Baker, housing directors, Mr. A. P. Olmstead and Mr. A. W. Dalton; Camp Lejeune's Recreation Director, Mr. Selwyn Orcutt and USO representative, Peg Vegass.

A colonial Christmas fireplace scene provided a bit of yuletide atmosphere as did the pine cone and candle centerpieces.

Approximately 40 wives attended the Installation and the buffet which followed.

MCAF O' Wives Hold Christmas Luncheon

The Air Facility Officers' Club was a lovely Christmas scene last Wednesday as members of the Officers' Wives' Club gathered to celebrate their yuletide luncheon.

The theme, "It's Beginning To Look A Lot Like Christmas," was carried out in the decorations throughout the club. The focal point was a natural long-leaf pine Christmas tree draped with garlands of popcorn and cranberries. The honor table was centered with a festive arrangement of red carnations and at each setting was a red pine cone topped by a Santa's head which held the place cards. Sprays of holly were placed along the center of the long white tables interspersed with very unusual candelabra effect arrangements which were made by placing Christmas balls in inverted glass goblets tied at the stem with ribbon and topped by a tall candle. Mrs. L. C. Ritter and wives of MAFS were hostesses and much credit goes to these ladies for a very successful affair.

Mrs. Frank A. Shook, club president, welcomed special guests: Mrs. J. P. Berkeley, Mrs. W. B. Kyle, Mrs. F. L. Wieseman, Mrs. R. M. Tompkins, Mrs. Anthony Caputo and Mrs. W. L. Noren from Camp Lejeune.

From Cherry Point were: Mrs. P. J. Fontana, Mrs. R. C. Mangrum, Mrs. J. P. Coursey, Mrs. V. R. Martin and Mrs. W. R. Bartosh.

Those invited from Jacksonville were: Mrs. J. B. Robinson, Mrs. W. R. Page, Jr., Mrs. Mitchell F. Allen, Mrs. R. P. Mendelson and Mrs. C. O. Winter.

A social hour preceded the luncheon which consisted of pineapple-cheese salad, baked ham with raisin sauce, sweet potatoes with rum sauce, green peas, hot rolls, coffee, Christmas cookies and lime sherbet.

Mrs. M. M. Godwin of Jacksonville presented an interesting and colorful program on the making of Christmas decorations for the home. Mrs. Godwin demonstrated the making of several centerpieces, door sprays and wreaths, which were later presented as door prizes. Those winning prizes were: Mrs. Eleanor Dooley, Mrs. Carol Nelson, Mrs. Jenny Chambers, Mrs. Mary Ann Steed, Mrs. Pat Beckett, Mrs. Bobbie Reid and Mrs. Sandy Johnson.

Children Tell Christmas Story Via Slides, Songs

Next Sunday evening will be a special one at Camp Lejeune base chapels. Long before the hands of the clock swing 'round to 7 p. m. many people are expected to slip quietly into their seats to await the start of the annual Christmas pageants.

The chapel at Tarawa Terrace presents their Christmas pageant the same night, beginning at 6:30 p. m. At Hadnot Point, starting promptly at 8 p. m., a special choral program will begin at the Protestant Church.

This year, for the second season in a row, members of the Montford Point congregation will present a different type of holiday performance. Instead of the usual Nativity scene featuring actors appearing in person, color slides will flash across the screen as the children's choir sings appropriate hymns and carols.

This idea of using colored slides to portray religious themes is gaining popularity. Familiar Bible stories, Christmas and Easter scenes are shown in religious education classes throughout the country.

Montford Point Sunday school superintendent GySgt. Richard Geary secured the services of a professional news photographer who took the slides: Captain Guy Ward painted the background scenery: CWO and Mrs. Robert W. Groom constructed paper mache rocks and a realistic palm tree. The overall production was supervised by Lt. Cdr. Knox O. Scott, Montford Point chaplain, and MGySgt. Alex Diaz, chapel choir director.

Staff Wives Make Installation Plans

Forty two members of the Staff Wives' Club met last Thursday evening at the Tarawa Terrace Community Center to choose their new officers and make plans for the Installation.

The installation will be combined with a Christmas Party Dec. 15 at 6:30 p. m. Those wishing to make reservations may call Edna Hoyt at 346-9316.

Chaplain R. W. Kiefer will preside over the ceremony and install the new officers who will hold office for the coming six months. They include: Mrs. Albert Benson, president; Mrs. Rodney Hoyt, vice-president; Mrs. Rodney Burns, recording secretary; Mrs. Francis Inman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John Glynn, treasurer and Mrs. Wm. E. Holland, Sgt. at arms.

It was also decided that the Thrift Shop will be open as usual from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. on Wednesdays and from 10 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. on Fridays with the exception of Wednesday, Dec. 26.

Norfolk Marine Rescues Utilities' Globe, Anchor

FLEET MARINE FORCE, ATLANTIC, NORFOLK, VA. —

Take away his famed Eagle, Globe and Anchor emblem and the average Marine feels naked and empty. No one knows this better than MGySgt. George L. Wagoner whose immediate action, when he heard of a Department of Defense order stripping Marines of their beloved emblem, has earned him a Letter of Commendation from the Commandant of the Marine Corps.

The standardization directive decrees the same type of utility uniforms will be distributed to the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps soon without the Marine emblem.

"When I found this out, I had to come up with something. Since there was no way to alter a DOD directive, I had to find a way," said the sergeant who is Supply Chief in charge of the Individual Clothing Supply Detachment, Norfolk, Va.

The result of his research, a hinged, pre-cut brass stencil, is as simple as a safety pin. But it has brought approval of Headquarters Marine Corps and will insure that Marines, wherever stationed, will continue to wear the distinctive Marine distinguishing device and the letters "USMC" emblazoned on the utility breast pocket.

The unit, which folds in the center, allows one half to slide into the pocket. A pre-cut hole, fitting over the pocket button locks the stencil in place and guarantees "same place" stenciling in each instance.

DOD Outlines Revisions For Fitness Policy

The Department of Defense's new physical fitness program has been broadened to include military personnel over 40 and those not on active duty.

A new directive sets forth broad policies for the physical fitness program formulated by C. B. "Bud" Wilkinson, of the President's Council on Youth Fitness, and members of his staff who worked with the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower.

The directive provides for programs which will include Ready Reserve personnel who are members of organized units or who are otherwise on a drill pay status, and Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC personnel.

It sets weight control standards for all personnel with special emphasis on personnel over 40. Formerly those over 40 participated in physical fitness programs only on a voluntary basis.

Plans are currently underway to develop physical fitness programs in schools for dependents of military personnel.
