Unit Mission

Headquartered in Daegu, Republic of Korea, the 19th Expeditionary Sustainment Command is the largest forward-deployed multi-component ESC in the U.S. Army. 19th ESC provides Operational Sustainment and Mission Command of sustainment operations for 8th U.S. Army. On order, 19th ESC executes Non-Combatant Evacuation Operations (NEO), Combined/Joint Reception, Staging, Onward Movement, and Integration (RSO&I), provides support to Joint Forces and is prepared to provide mutual support to coalition forces.

The 19th ESC commander serves as the Senior Army Officer stationed in Area IV, which is the southern hub for sustainment and power projection on the peninsula. The ESC consists of approximately 5,600 assigned personnel spread across the Korean theater of operations. Collectively, the 19th ESC comprises a team of professionals to support all U.S. troops stationed in the Republic of Korea.

By working with multiple strategic partners, the 19th ESC integrates and synchronizes strategic sustainment capabilities with operational and tactical requirements throughout the peninsula. These partners include the Army Materiel Command's 403rd Army Field Support Brigade, the Military Surface Deployment and Distribution Command's 837th Transportation Battalion, the Defense Contract Management Agency-Korea, the 411th Contracting Support Brigade, the U.S. Army Medical Materiel Center-Korea, DLA Energy, and DLA Distribution.

Another unique and critical part of the 19th ESC mission is the combined nature of all of its operations in Korea. By closely working with ROK Army counterparts, to include the ROK 2nd Operational Command, the ROK Transportation Command, and the ROK Logistics Command, the 19th ESC builds on the strong alliance between the United States and the ROK to improve effectiveness and efficiency in sustaining units throughout the Korean theater of operations.

In conjunction with its partners, 19th ESC manages the southern hub, which is the sustainment and power projection backbone for the peninsula. It works closely with the U.S. Army Garrison Daegu to improve installation capabilities and services that enable the sustainment mission and improve quality of life for Soldiers, civilians, and families who live in the area.

Additionally, the ESC's outreach efforts through community relations programs such as the Korean American Friendship Circle and the USFK Good Neighbor Program, combined with continued relationships with local governments, help promote partnerships and cultural understanding between 19th ESC and the surrounding communities.

Team 19... Winning the "Fight Tonight!" since 1964

Unit History

The 19th General Support Command was activated in Seoul, Republic of Korea, July 15, 1964.

In 1972 the 19th General Support Command was relocated to Daegu as a part of the consolidation of Eighth Army Support and Depot Commands. The 19th remained part of the U.S. Army Korea Support Command until that command was dissolved. The 19th then merged with the 23rd Support Group to form the 19th Support Brigade (Provisional).

In November 1974, the 19th became a non-divisional brigade.

In March 1977, the 19th was designated as the 19th Support Command.

On February 14th, 1994, the 19th Support Command was re-designated the 19th Theater Army Area Command, headquartered in Daegu.

On June 16th, 2000, the unit was re-designated the 19th Theater Support Command (Provisional). On December 16th, 2005 the unit was re-designated as the 19th Expeditionary Sustainment Command

The 19th Expeditionary Sustainment Command's shoulder insignia features the outlined shape of the Rose of Sharon, the insignia is bordered in yellow and has a divided background of red and blue, taken from the central symbol of the Republic of Korea's flag. The insignia is proudly worn on the sleeves of all 19ESC Soldiers from the sea to the DMZ.

The 19ESC crest is set in gold. The blue and red colors symbolize support, while the keystone arch, from the Independence Gate in Seoul, signify the unit's activation and service in Korea. The blue contiguous stars denote the unit's organization under the COSTAR concept and the command and territorial controls in the assigned areas. The single flower, the Rose of Sharon and nine segments of the arch denote the command's numerical designation.

Like many others, the 19ESC G1 had to adapt to and overcome the challenges presented by COVID-19. It was a tempestuous but rewarding year for the G1. These challenges brought out the finest in our Soldiers and ultimately made each G1 Soldier a more proficient Human Resources Professional.

The G1 trained for and participated in several key exercises to include CCPT 21-02, CCPT 21-02, CPX3, War Fighter 22-01 and provided personnel accountability and strength reporting for Korea Rotational Forces (KRF) #10. Key personnel completed the IPPS-A T3 training in early September. Our Strength Team successfully executed two AIM2 Cycles for over 200 positions. The Essential Personnel Services section processed over 1,700 awards and 1,200 numerous actions to close out the year.

19th Expeditionary Sustainment Command (ESC) G3 had an eventful 2021 as they continued to plan and synchronize operations across the 19ESC, joint partners, and Republic of Korea Army (ROK-A) partners across the Peninsula. The team's decisive operations focused on numerous ROC Drills and training exercises from CCPT, Warfighter, Korea Rotational Force, Combined Distribution Training, and RSO operations to support subordinate commands and strategic partners and to prepare to take a fight tonight posture.

We continued to battle track and execute coronavirus vaccination and booster vaccine rodeos that included our Area IV partner units, along with conducting courageous channel non evacuate operations training in efforts to protect the force and enhance readiness.

Lastly, the team implemented a successful 'This is my Barracks' initiative to increase the number of positive interactions among the Team 19 family living in the barracks and quarters as our way of putting people first. All efforts enable us to continue to build interoperability with our ROK Alliance and strategic partners throughout.

MAJ Frederick Dequina
G4, OIC

MSG Chukwuma Okochi
G4, NCOIC

2021 has proven to be a very busy year for the 19ESC G4 Team, and the pace did not relent till the very end.

Internally, we exercised, and refined, internal staff processes through the participation in three key unit exercises – Combined Command Post Training (CCPT), Command Post Exercise (CPX) and the culminating event: Warfighter. This provided us the opportunity to review and update our internal standard operating procedures (SOP) as well as higher-level plans which needed attention. We also found time to reflect on some internal issues with maintenance, property book, and food service operations which led to multiple operations orders being drafted, or coaxed us into revising current procedures to correct any future occurrences and maintain an overall high readiness for 19ESC in order to be ready to “Fight Tonight”.

Outside of the section, we were engaged in a multitude of initiatives: we supported two command inspections for our subordinate units (MSC-K and 94th MP), coordinated the lateral transfer of (93) M1165s from 2ID, executed furniture replacement for multiple 19ESC sections worth over $240K, negotiated with the Department of Public Works (DPW) to replace the aging headquarter building HVAC system. And that’s just the last six months. I would be remiss if I didn’t mention the FY21 Department of the Army-level winners within the 19ESC for maintenance and supply excellence that the G4 Team assisted.

With all that said, the 19ESC G4 team looks forward to the next round of challenges 2022 will bring.

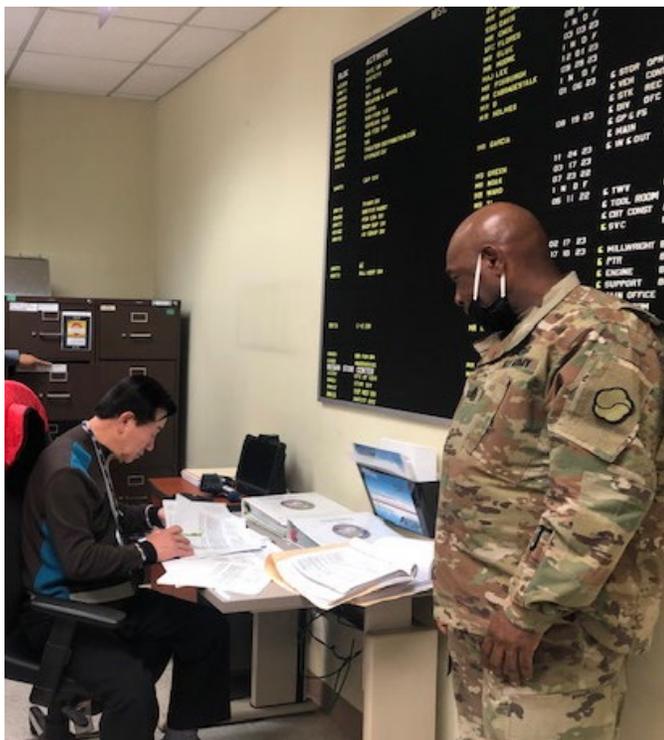

“Get ‘er done!”

19th Expeditionary Sustainment Command (ESC) G9 had an eventful 2021, despite COVID-19 restrictions across the Peninsula and Republic of Korea (ROK) formations. We continue to enhance the development of the interoperability program in the human, procedural, and technical domains through GO-level and staff-level engagements with our strategic ROK Army (ROKA) partners. In particular, we made significant progress with 2OC HQ and subordinate Regional Defense Divisions especially with communications equipment.

In the Human Domain, G9 facilitated engagements with ROKA TRADOC units such as Army Consolidated Logistics School, ROKA Signal School, and the Korean Army Academy at Yeongcheon by providing ROKA junior officers and cadets an overview of 19ESC's logistical capabilities, lectures, demonstrations, and tours of logistical facilities.

G9 continues focus on MIL-to-MIL relationships by attending combined airborne operations and facilitating combined GO-level golf events. It's been an honor working with the 19ESC and Korean partners in service to the Alliance.

19th ESC Commanding General, Brig. Gen. Steven Allen presents the 8th Army Civilian of the Quarter Award to Ms. Chang, A Yong (19th ESC Community Relations Assistant)

2020 was a year filled with many uncertainties when health officials in Daegu, Area IV, discovered the first case of COVID-19 in Korea on 18 February, in which it caused a rapid escalated spread of the pandemic in a city of more than 2.4 million citizens. 19ESC fought strong to ensure the force and community were safeguarded and well-protected from the pandemic, in addition to the elevated health protection conditions of Charlie—next to the most severe and highest level. During the perilous times beginning in the early-onset of 2020, 19ESC Community Relations (COMREL) actively worked cohesively with counterparts and key members of Daegu city, in an effort to promote solidarity while contributing to protecting the force and “bubble.” 19ESC COMREL bridged the gap for strategic key leader engagements between the 19ESC Commander, to include the 19ESC Deputy Commander (many times accompanied by the 19ESC Command Surgeon), with local senior public health and medical professionals and leaders situated throughout the greater Daegu city, aiming to “kill the virus” through strengthened combined partnerships. The ongoing combined effort between 19ESC and Daegu city made significant and greater strides forward against the COVID-19 pandemic in 2021. The ability to face challenges of the scale and magnitude together, head on, is what continues to truly make our alliance and solidarity great. Throughout the year of 2021, 19ESC COMREL set forth to cautiously revitalize the USFK Good Neighbor Program, which was significantly impacted due to the COVID-19 pandemic. With this, various alliance-building efforts were cautiously reinstated ranging from leadership talks given to local university students, to include military cadets; to actively expanding strategic key leader engagements (whether conducted in-person or telephonically) in various categories under the good neighbor program, consisting of government, medical, academia, law enforcement, law & order, and industry to name a few. In particular, key leader engagements which were expanded and strategically conducted throughout the greater Daegu, Gyeongbuk and

Community Relations (COMREL)

Busan regions truly served to reinvigorate and strengthen the overall partnership line of efforts (from an operational and non-operational perspective). While revitalizing the overall good neighbor program was of importance in the year of 2021, truly showing our bond and solidarity with the city of Daegu was of priority. With this, midway into the year of 2020, 19ESC COMREL started and began promoting a 19ESC solidarity campaign with the initial solidarity messaging, “Be Strong Daegu” which was well-received by both the city of Daegu and the 2nd Operations Command. The initial messaging continued into the year of 2021, in which it was later replaced with “We Mask Together Daegu” in order to continue to promote our solidarity. The solidarity messages (both in English and Hangul) were promoted and professionally displayed at select strategic locations on and off the installation, using banners, posters and with signage on over 40 installation busses that traveled throughout the greater Daegu and Chilgok communities. The latest and current solidarity messaging, “Living Stronger Together Daegu” continues to brightly illuminate the ironclad solidarity and alliance with the local community that we live and work in, while promoting a positive image of 19ESC and 8th Army.

The campaign continues to demonstrate 19ESC’s commitment to the unwavering ROK-U.S. Alliance and the spirit of “katchi-kapshi-dae” not only during time of peace, but as well as during time of uncertainties. Inspired by the year and characteristics of the Ox in 2021, 19ESC COMREL strived to contribute their very best, committed to the 19ESC Commander’s vision with community relations, and aligned with the 19ESC Campaign Plan, particularly with line of effort #3, Enhanced Interoperability. 19ESC COMREL continues to proudly serve within a humble organization that promotes esprit de corps, harmony and unity, and looks forward to making many more achievements together in the year of 2022—ultimately in an effort to support the readiness of the force, while advancing the ROK-U.S. Alliance to greater heights.

It's been an exciting year for 19ESC Public Affairs! We launched the Every Soldier Counts Podcast and have a new podcast studio to boot. Our website shifted over to an official Army CORE page, which has given the 19ESC the ability to produce articles more easily and quickly.

We also had the great opportunity to increase interoperability with our counterparts at 2OC and 5th LSC through a series of meetings that we will never forget. Meeting the fine Soldiers of the ROK Army gave us the unique chance to see how public affairs is conducted in Korea.

As a means of giving back to the unit that has given us so much, we have brought back something that has not been seen in a long time... a year-in-review!

It's been a pleasure working with the 19ESC and I hope you will all have fond memories of your time here in Daegu.

“Every Soldier Counts”

‘We got this’: How a trio from 19th ESC helped evacuate a burning building

Article by Sgt. 1st Class Adam Ross, originally published on 24 Nov 2021

DAEGU, Republic of Korea – Quick thinking and teamwork by a pair of U.S. Army Soldiers and a family member helped 15 Korean civilians safely evacuate an apartment building fire on Nov. 13. For their efforts that day, the trio’s bravery was recognized by the leaders of Daegu emergency services on Nov. 24.

On the afternoon of Nov. 13, most of the people around Camp Walker seemed to be going about their day as usual, with no one yet noticing the billows of black smoke coming from the top floor of the four-story structure.

Azizi Wilkins, the 13-year-old son of Maj. Brandon Wilkins, was riding his skateboard back home when he saw signs of the fire, but no emergency vehicles in the immediate area. Sgt. 1st Class Gisele Schilling was driving toward Camp Walker, as was Maj. Gabriel Bowns, en route to a nearby barbershop. Nearly at once, all three arrived at the scene of the fire to investigate if there was an immediate need for help.

“I knew I had to do something,” said Schilling, Aviation Maintenance Supervisor, Distribution Management Center, 19th Expeditionary Sustainment Command. “Yes, it looked dangerous, but I thought ‘we got this’ and we’re going to make sure everyone can get out of there.”

The three had never met before, but were soon running into the building together and working to help as many people as possible while they still had time. Initially, Schilling went up the stairs toward the fire, while Bowns alerted residents on the ground floor and Wilkins called emergency services. No one in the building was aware it was on fire.

“I was waving my arms, yelling ‘fire’ and a man looked at me, then turned back around,” said Bowns, who heads the G9 interoperability section at 19th ESC. “I had to lift him out of his chair, and move him out of the building.”

Schilling found similar challenges on the upper floors, as residents of the building were either reluctant to leave or didn’t believe that it was on fire. There were some language barrier challenges, but people soon started moving out in rapid succession.

But as their efforts moved towards the top floor, Bowns and Schilling were met with a wall of black smoke, with no part of the floor visible to them.

“I could hear someone screaming, I knew someone was there,” said Schilling. “I crawled up the stairs to the fourth floor, but I still couldn’t see anything.”

That’s when Schilling felt a yank on her Army uniform blouse – it was Bowns stopping her from proceeding into certain danger. The two retreated down the stairs to find city firefighters arriving on the scene in full protective gear, ready to enter the blaze.

Schilling directed rescue personnel to the rear of the building, where the screaming voice she heard before was revealed to be a woman yelling for help from out a window. For her efforts in assisting fire fighters, Schilling was recognized with a certificate of appreciation from Jungbu Fire Station on Nov. 23.

Eventually, everyone inside the building would be brought out to safety. Some were transported to a nearby hospital for treatment, including Schilling. Bowns accompanied Schilling to the hospital and stayed with her until her husband Marcus arrived. The smoke Schilling inhaled on the fourth floor required three days of treatment by hospital staff who praised her as “their hero.”

Schilling and Bowns had military training and experience to fall back on as the dangerous scene unfolded, but Wilkins’ instincts came from somewhere else. As a member of the Scouts BSA Troop 81 in Daegu, Wilkins has been scouting since he was a young Tiger Scout. After calling emergency services, Wilkins assisted with racing through the floors and notifying residents of their danger.

“I’d say it mostly came from scouting,” said Wilkins, an eighth grade student at Daegu Middle-High School on Camp Walker. “The Fire Safety Merit Badge, we learn first aid and emergency preparedness.”

Wilkins’ father, Maj. Wilkins has seen his scouting journey up-close, and currently serves as the Scout Master of Troop 81.

“Honestly, he’s always tried to be that hero kind of kid,” said Maj. Wilkins, who works in the Transportation Operations Branch of the Distribution Management Center, 19th ESC. “He’s always tried to be honorable, and someone who other kids can look up to.”

The Wilkins family gathered with Bowns, Schilling and her husband at the Daegu Metropolitan Police Headquarters on Nov. 24 for their official recognition.

Police Commissioner Jin Pyo Kim awarded each of the rescuers a certificate of recognition and a plaque of appreciation.

“The courage and devotion shown by them at the scene of the fire indicate that U.S. military has already become a member of the local community,” said Kim.

The group also visited with Police Chief Kap Soo Yi, Nam-gu Police District, who updated them on the continued good health of the survivors and the status of the building’s arson suspect, who is currently in custody. Yi thanked the trio for their quick actions, which he thought saved the lives of at least a handful of the residents.

“I’m just glad they all made it out alive,” said Schilling.

The Long Road Back

Article by Sgt. 1st Class Adam Ross, originally published on 5 Aug 2021

CAMP HENRY, Republic of Korea – The puzzled looks and worried questions still come, usually when Master Sgt. Harry Willis III takes an unexpected fall or runs like he’s trotting. There used to be a time where these reactions would bring embarrassment.

“The hardest time for me was understanding the disability and how I can overcome it,” said Willis, who works in the Distribution Management Center, 19th Expeditionary Sustainment Command. “Once I start working through the disability, instead of avoiding it, then I can use that to adapt.”

The reminders of his injury are constant, from a loss of feeling in his toes, to an often unpredictable leg movement. The Purple Heart medal Willis wears on his dress uniform is another reminder of a night in Iraq when everything went dark, and his flourishing Army career was suddenly at a crossroads.

In 2005, nearing the end of his second deployment, Willis was seeing the results of dedicating his 12 months in Iraq to upgrading his physical fitness. Even though Willis was a high-performing wrestler in high school who qualified for the Army Wrestling Team shortly after arriving at Fort Riley, Kansas – on this deployment he took it to another level.

Willis would set personal records on his Army Physical Fitness Test, breaking 11 minutes in the 2-mile run and recording 96 push-ups and 86 sit-ups. Combined with his combat-tested proficiency as a motor transport operator (88M), Willis was promoted to sergeant shortly before his 21st birthday.

On one of the final missions for 2nd Transportation Company, 1st Sustainment Brigade before redeploying, Willis' convoy driving skills may have saved the life of himself and his platoon leader.

"We were doing retrograde operations, going from Balad to Taji," said Willis. "Normally, blackouts happen all the time, but this one was different – the whole grid went dark."

In the middle of a Heavy Expanded Mobility Tactical Truck convoy that was 36 vehicles long, Willis saw fireballs and soon white tracer rounds coming from the tree line. Willis could see the enemy fire was directed at the HEMTT drivers, and turned off his truck's headlamps in response.

Three .50-caliber rounds hit the cab of the truck, two were low and entered the floorboards, but one partially broke through the armored driver's door. The fragments of that bullet perforated Willis' legs, and the bullet tip lodged behind his right knee. A leader's book in his cargo pocket absorbed some of the bullet fragments.

Willis screamed out that he was hit but – overcome with adrenaline and the intense heat of the fragments – the pain quickly subsided.

"It was so hot that my leg went numb, and I started laughing – thinking I had avoided getting hit," said Willis, whose relief soon turned to panic when he saw blood pooling out.

Even with his serious wounds, Willis kept driving. Understanding that a sudden stop in the convoy could have jeopardized other trucks, he pushed through until they reached a safe stopping point more than a mile later. After receiving life-saving attention from an Air Force combat medic, Willis' rehabilitation journey began. His first stop was Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Germany, then Walter Reed Army National Military Medical Center outside Washington, D.C., and finally Brooke Army Medical Center on Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Before leaving Iraq, Willis was awarded the Purple Heart with his unit and brigade leadership by his side. He remembered learning about the Purple Heart in high school from one of his teachers who received it during the Vietnam War.

"Never in a million years did I think I would earn the Purple Heart," said Willis. Throughout his medical travels, Willis endured many surgeries to prevent infections in his wounds, and allow him to someday walk again.

"Reality started to set in," said Willis, whose weight dropped from 210 pounds to 160 in the weeks after the attack. "The same legs that got me a 10:38 2-mile now just don't work."

Reality also meant a rehabilitation that depended just as much on Willis' perseverance than medical treatment. At first, Willis had little interest in eating, much less rehab. A medical discharge from the Army was one possibility, but Willis was determined to continue his service as a young NCO.

One of his doctors at BAMC could see the potential Willis still held as an NCO, and one day gave him a wake-up call that would start his road back to walking and running.

"He said to me 'are you going to let this define you? You say you want to stay in, but you're not showing progress.'" said Willis. "That's when I got off the pity wagon."

With a newfound urgency, Willis went from bed-ridden, to a walker, to a walker with wheels, to walking with a cane in a matter of months. His rehabilitation at BAMC also included a visit from President George W. Bush, who chatted candidly with Willis and encouraged his recovery.

Even though he still could not wiggle his toes, Willis had started to adapt to his injuries and get back into physical fitness.

While his days of running a 10:38 2-mile were probably behind him for good, his time of "only" 13 minutes was still far above average.

By 2007 he was deploying with 1st Sustainment Brigade, 1st Infantry Division again, and this time he brought a new outlook on leadership. Willis recalls once feeling indifferent to the frequent combat convoy training that focused on safely egressing after a rollover.

"In 2012, my convoy got hit with a 700-pound bomb, and I started calmly directing everyone on their roles," said Willis. "It reminded me, this is why we do so much training."

Willis has used his combat experience to help teach the next generation of Army transporters, first as an instructor at the Army Transportation School, and now at the DMC where he helps coordinate all military transportation throughout Korea, as the Transportation Operations Branch NCOIC.

Since 2012, Willis has been active member of the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club, a volunteer organization that promotes excellence in the noncommissioned officer corps. Willis brought his passion for SAMC to Korea, where he helped revive the Area IV chapter.

"It didn't really take off until he came, he's been carrying the torch," said Sgt. Maj. Andy Lee Hardy, DMC Sergeant Major. "His accomplishments are a testament to his leadership."

While at DMC, Willis also assisted Hardy in mentoring Soldiers who attend the Basic Leader's Course on Camp Henry. Though his career has since accelerated and his body has recovered, Willis never forgets the pain and journey from that night in September 2005.

"I remember it like it was yesterday, I never take it for granted," said Willis. "Any pain I go through I compare it to that night, and if it doesn't equate to it, I suck it up and I push through."

From Korean Special Forces to U.S. Army Chaplain

Article by Sgt. 1st Class Adam Ross, originally published on 28 July 2021

CAMP HENRY, Republic of Korea –
“Impossible Makes Possible.”

It’s a motto that Ch. (Lt. Col.) Hyokchan Kim learned early in his first military career, and carried with him as he felt the call to become a U.S. Army Chaplain at the near-disqualifying age of 40.

“I have had some tough experiences, and whenever I have a challenge I can think of that,” said Kim, 19th Expeditionary Sustainment Command command chaplain.

He learned the phrase as a young officer in the Korean Army shortly after he volunteered for Special Forces training. The official motto of Korean Special Forces, “Impossible Makes Possible” means there is always an alternative to quitting.

After finishing his military service in Korea, which included over 100 airborne jumps as an instructor, Kim headed to Las Vegas, Nevada, to earn his master’s degree and hopefully begin a career in hotel management. But as his studies drew to a close, he felt conflicted about beginning the next phase of life.

“Even though I accomplished that goal, my life was not satisfying,” said Kim. “That’s why I kept asking, ‘what can I do for my entire life?’ I felt God’s calling as a minister.”

Kim answered that calling, and spent more than a decade as a minister in Las Vegas. And though he had put down roots in the city, and started raising a family, he again felt like the next chapter in his life was a question mark.

“I was soon to be 40, and would ask God ‘what’s your plan for my life?’” said Kim. “God called to me and wanted me to be a U.S. Army Chaplain.”

The path on his new journey included memories of counseling Korean Soldiers during his time as an airborne instructor. In between training sessions at the four week-long course, then-1st Lt. Kim would strike up conversations with his airborne trainees and often find them breaking down in tears once they let their guard down.

“When I would touch the Soldiers and talk to them, they would cry,” said Kim. “They never had that connection.” This ability to form connections with Soldiers gave Kim the confidence he needed to be an Army Chaplain, even though he was nearing the candidate age limit of 40.

One fortuitous circumstance gave Kim’s journey toward chaplain a boost: the regional chaplain recruiting headquarters was located down the street from Kim’s chapel. Soon he was meeting face-to-face with the recruiter who would help make him a chaplain.

“I was very nervous,” said Kim. “To start a new journey, there’s a lot of risk and fear, but he believed in me.”

Kim’s confidence in his calling led to him succeeding at the Chaplain Basic Officer Leadership Course, and selected to become an active duty chaplain. Now as a senior chaplain with several assignments behind him, Kim is watching his children succeed in their early military careers. Kim’s daughter and two sons are all graduates of the U.S. Air Force Academy and are active duty Air Force officers.

A common face around Camp Henry, Kim makes the effort to personally meet each and every member of 19th ESC HHC to give them a thought-provoking quote and verse of the day in order to ensure he is there when most needed.

“He aspires to provide guidance and leadership to every member of his immediate and subordinate Unit Ministry Teams, while providing excellent religious support to the 19th ESC community,” said Ch. (Maj.) Curtis Sutherland, 19th ESC chaplain.

Thanks to Kim’s unique life experiences, he is able to counsel Soldiers who feel out of place in a Korea. Having spent several years in Korea as an Army chaplain, Kim has many times found himself talking to a young Soldier who is having difficulty adjusting to service far away from home or struggling to find meaning in a new environment. In these interactions, Kim believes the best remedy is reminding a Soldier of their historic purpose in Korea.

“Even though you are a private or a first term Soldier, what you are doing is very important in keeping peace in Korea,” said Kim. “That gives them pride when they see how important their job is here.”

Peterson Soldiers make Korea a family affair

Article by Sgt. 1st Class Adam Ross, originally published on 15 June 2021

CAMP HENRY, Republic of Korea – One of the challenges of being stationed in Korea can be the long distances between a Soldier and their friends and family. For Spc. Justin Peterson, he knew an assignment in Korea would mean making new friends and working in a different environment, but he was counting on one familiar face being there: his father, Staff Sgt. Galen Peterson.

“When I found out he was coming to Korea too, I said ‘see you there!’” said Staff Sgt. Peterson, an ammunition NCO for the Distribution Management Center, 19th Expeditionary Sustainment Command.

Since late 2020, the father and son have both been stationed in Korea, and both serving in units that fall under 19th Expeditionary Sustainment Command.

The duo recently embraced after Spc. Peterson graduated from the Basic Leadership Course on Camp Henry. The graduation ceremony marked the latest chapter in a story of an Army family that began in 2009.

Before he stepped into an Army recruiting station, the elder Peterson had spent most of his life in Lehigh Acres, Florida, and was anxious for a change. But before speaking to a recruiter, he assumed he was ineligible for enlistment.

“I always thought I was too old,” said Staff Sgt. Peterson, who was 40 at the time. “When I found out it was 42, I thought ‘let’s do this!’”

A thirst to see the world was soon answered when the Peterson family moved to Bamberg, Germany for his first assignment. The younger Peterson was 11 at the time, and soon began to imagine himself in an Army uniform.

“I was able to see how the Army works, and all the good things the Army can offer you,” said Spc. Peterson, a Religious Affairs Specialist with 94th Military Police Battalion. “As I was growing up, I thought this is exactly what I wanted to do.”

When Spc. Peterson shipped to Basic Combat Training in 2018, he knew it was the start of seeing less of his family. This separation would not last very long.

In 2020, while stationed at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, Spc. Peterson saw an opportunity to serve in Korea, where his father had been stationed for several months.

Their first meeting in Korea happened while Spc. Peterson was completing quarantine at Camp Humphreys. Although they had to observe the strict 6-foot social distancing, the reunion was special.

“I spent Christmas in the quarantine yard with him,” said Staff Sgt. Peterson. “When I quarantined I had no one to visit me, so I made sure to drive up every weekend to visit him and make sure he had the necessities.”

While the two Petersons are stationed separately at Camp Humphreys and Camp Henry, they make it a priority to visit each other as much as they can. Every long weekend has meant a bus ride for one of them, bicycle in tow. In Korea they’ve discovered a hobby they never explored together: long bike rides.

“We’re constantly together,” said Staff Sgt. Peterson. “People will see us on our bikes and assume we’re best friends.” The pair will have more time to spend together, as Staff Sgt. Peterson recently extended his tour and hopes to become an instructor at the Noncommissioned Officer Academy on Camp Walker. “I think he would be an awesome instructor,” said Spc. Peterson. “He was able to shape me, I would love to see him shape future leaders.” Looking toward the future of their Army careers, Staff Sgt. Peterson has a goal for his son.

“Every parent wants their child to be more successful than them,” said Staff Sgt. Peterson. “I want to stand at parade rest in front of him.”

Memorial march carries a personal connection to history

Article by Sgt. 1st Class Adam Ross, originally published on 30 April 2021

CAMP HENRY, REPUBLIC OF KOREA – The sense of relief was fleeting among the Soldiers who crossed the finish line on Camp Henry, underneath a spray of water from a fire hose, after completing the 26.2 mile-long Bataan Memorial Death March.

Although they had accomplished a remarkable feat together as a team, they knew any pain they felt was insignificant compared to what the American and Philippine Soldiers experienced during the actual Bataan Death March in April 1942.

“In comparison to marching 70 miles, I can’t even fathom what they went through,” said Capt. Mario Jones, Distribution Management Center, 19th

Expeditionary Sustainment Command. “The threat of falling off pace and getting shot, it’s just humbling.”

Honoring the memory and sacrifice of the Bataan Death March has inspired thousands of people to endure the memorial version of the March, held annually since 1989 at White Sands Missile Range, N.M. Due to the pandemic, this was the first time the Bataan Memorial Death March was held virtually, with dozens of organized marches taking place around the world. The Daegu march was organized by Capt. Cathy Reyes from 19th ESC, whose grandfather survived the Bataan Death March.

As a 2nd Lieutenant serving in the United States Army Forces in the Far East – a command created to incorporate the Philippine Armed Forces into the allied fight in the Pacific – Ernesto Guzman not only made it through the horror of the Bataan Death March, but stayed in the Army through the rank of Colonel before retiring.

“He’s been an inspiration to me, he’s the reason I joined the Army,” said Reyes, whom serves as the 19th ESC Schools and Training Officer in Charge. “His grit, his determination to push through is what pushes me now. His memory helps me every day.”

Reyes had previously honored her grandfather’s service by visiting the Philippine memorial in Bataan and seeing the actual route he and other Soldiers marched. But with the virtual march she saw an opportunity for a memorable team building event.

The Bataan Death March of 1941 began with the Japanese Imperial Army invasion of the Philippines, at the time a territory of the United States. After the vastly outnumbered U.S. and Philippine forces surrendered to the Japanese, the prisoners of war were forcibly moved from Bataan to Camp O’Donnell. Denied nearly any food and water during the march, the march was characterized by executions and torture; it is estimated nearly 600 Americans and over 15,000 Filipinos died before reaching Camp O’Donnell.

Starting in February, Reyes was joined by several other Soldiers to train for the long march, and the participation grew to include more than two dozen 19th ESC Soldiers.

“It’s led my team to become more unified to get to know each other,” said Reyes. “And knowing we’re going through this all together makes it all worth it.”

The Daegu march began with a safety briefing at 0500 on Camp Henry’s Victory Field, before a motivational speech from Reyes and Command Sgt. Maj. Walter Tagalicud, Command Sergeant Major, United States Forces Korea.

Tagalicud had heard about the Daegu march, and like Reyes, shared a link to the Bataan Death March as a Filipino-American serving in the Army. Marching with Tagalicud were Soldiers from the Philippine Armed Forces whom serve within United Nations Command.

“One thing that really inspired me was the people who had the drive to live, the effort to help one another survive and not be killed,” said Tagalicud. “We have each other as a team to help accomplish the mission. It’s important to remember their hardships and their sacrifice to their country.”

Setting out from Camp Henry, the teams of marchers followed the path of the Sincheon River in Daegu on a crisp spring day. Water points were set up every few miles, and participants often found themselves cheered on by Korean passersby on the trail.

It was a stark contrast from the White Sands version of the Bataan Memorial Death March.

“That was definitely a more grueling challenge walking through the sand, varying terrain and the dry heat,” said

1LT Katherine Kezon, Commanding General Aide de Camp, 19th ESC, whom marched in the event in 2017. “I definitely think it’s a meaningful experience and an amazing opportunity, getting to do this with people I work with and care about.”

The final leg of the long journey brought Soldiers back to Camp Henry, where a crowd was waiting for them and a plume of water from a firehose marked their finish. While the pain from several hours of marching was temporary, the memory of the Bataan Death March endures.

“Being able to celebrate that memory and do it with my brothers and sisters in arms is an honor,” said Jones.

“Remembering your history makes you a better Soldier, better teammate and better person.”
