Dangers of cocaine more than physical

'Recreational users,' addicts both at risk

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of four stories on cocaine and crack abuse. In last week's issue of the Camp Lejeune Globe, a Marine convicted of use and distribution of cocaine explained how he became psychologically and physically addicted to the drug. This week his story continues to unfold as The Globe explores the dangers of cocaine and crack.

By Sgt. Rick D. Spaulding and
Cpl. Brenda Donnell

Pvt. Jerry Hughes is a cocaine addict and convicted distributor currently serving a three-year sentence in the MCB brig. He abused cocaine almost non-stop from the age of 15 until he was caught five years later, while on active duty at Camp Lejeune. At the time of his arrest, Hughes was using in excess of 39 grams of cocaine a month, at a cost of more than $2,800.

"It's amazing he's lived to see 20," exclaimed Navy Cmdr. William R. Hambidge, head of the Alcohol Rehabilitation Department here, upon hearing Hughes' story.

The doctor's surprise about Hughes' case stems from his extensive knowledge of the dangers of using powdered cocaine and crack. They range from coldlike symptoms to violent seizures to death, depending on how much and how often the drug is used.

Frequent cocaine use can quickly lead to dependence. Many people addicted to crack get "hooked" the very first time they try it. Addicts suffer a greater range of physical symptoms and disorders than "recreational users," but one doesn't have to be an addict to suffer the consequences. People have died from using cocaine just once.

According to data collected on the 800-COCAINE hot line, 65 percent of nationwide users reported chest congestion, 40 percent had a chronic cough, 7 percent brain seizures with loss of consciousness and 85 percent reported severe depression.

An additional 8 percent had irritability, 65 percent felt paranoia, 58 percent had loss of sexual desire, 40 percent experienced memory lapses, 31 percent had violent behavior and 18 percent attempted suicide.

These figures are reflected in Hughes' case. His extended abuse had him on the brink of physical burnout at the time of his arrest.

Hughes made an attempt to quit shortly before his arrest, but his addiction flexed its claws. "I would wake up in the night with stomach and leg cramps that would last four or five hours. I would hurt everywhere," he said.

Eventually, unable to cope with withdrawal, he began using again. At that stage, Hughes had passed the point of no return. He was fully addicted to cocaine.

But Hughes said he felt he was addicted from the very first time he used cocaine. In fact, many, including Hughes, love the initial "high" so much that re-experiencing it becomes a powerful obsession.

Within a few minutes of using cocaine, (and almost instantly with crack), the user feels a sense of euphoria, well-being, confidence and exhilaration. The effects of powdered cocaine last from 15 to 30 minutes.

Safety stressed during National Safe Boating Week

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Services

This week is the 31st annual National Safe Boating Week. Since 1958, when the week was first proclaimed, the number of recreational boats nationwide has grown from 5 million to 17 million.

According to the National Transportation Safety Board, some 1,036 people died in 1987 while boating—more than the combined annual fatalities from airline accidents, commercial shipping and rail accidents.

The National Safe Boating Council hopes to reduce the number of boating fatalities by educating the public on safe boating practices. Hunt Anderson, who heads the Coast Guard's Boating Education Branch and is the council's secretary, said the council is giving special attention this year to "nontraditional boaters"—people who use a boat for sport fishing, water skiing or hunting. Such users probably make up as much as 90 percent of the boating population, but do not think of themselves as boaters.

Because they don't think of themselves as boaters, they're unlikely to take a safe boating course.

"Know Before You Go," is the theme for the safety week. According to Anderson, boat users need to know their craft and safety equipment; weather and water conditions; the boating "rules of the road," and their personal limitations.

To help people with this, the Coast Guard has a consumer hotline

(1-800-368-5647) to answer questions relating to safety and product recalls.

For information about a safe boating course, contact your installation safety office or call 1-800-336-BOAT

Some points covered in the courses:

- Always wear a Coast Guard-approved personal flotation device—make sure everyone in the boat is wearing one.

- Respect the water, even if it's a small lake. The two major causes of fatal accidents are capsizing and falls overboard. Most happen in small boats on small inland bodies of water.

- Be alert to weather conditions. Out on the water a thunderstorm can be more than an inconvenience.

- Don't overload your boat. The small utility boats people use for fishing, hunting and day cruising tend to be unstable and can easily swamp or capsize.

- Load your boat properly. A person sitting on the gunwale, seat back or bow of a small boat not only puts the boat out of trim, making it harder to maneuver, but he is in danger of falling overboard.

- Booze and boats don't mix. Alcohol reduces muscle coordination and balance, which increases the chances of falling overboard or capsizing a boat. In addition, marine conditions—the motion and noise of the boat combined with sun, wind and glare—compound the effects of alcohol. If you want to serve alcohol on your boat, use the designated driver concept. But remember, intoxicated passengers are also at risk on the water.

TO HONOR OUR VETS— As Congressman Martin Lancaster looks on, Maj. Gen. Donald R. Gardner, CG, MCB, turns over the deed of 50 acres of land to Governor James Martin May 26. The land, across from the Beruit Memorial, will be used as a state cemetery for veterans.

Camp Lejeune turns over land for state veteran cemetery

Pvt. David J. Ferrier

The National Veterans Cemetery in New Bern will run out of plots by the year 1991. Where will the men and women who gave the ultimate sacrifice then have their final resting place?

Camp Lejeune has the answer.

Fifty acres of property was transferred from Camp Lejeune to the state of North Carolina in a ceremony May 26. Maj. Gen. Donald R. Gardner, CG, MCB, presented the deed to Governor James Martin.

The site is adjacent to the Camp Lejeune Cemetery. Congress authorized the donation of land for a state veterans cemetery there.

"The true owners of this land are the brave men and women who will eventually find rest there," said Martin.

Martin called the veterans of the past, present and future patriots since they fought for the land.

"It is theirs by right," Martin said. "They have earned a place of honor."

Cisneros case

Lance Cpl. Ernest F. Cisneros, 23, of HQ Bn., 2nd MarDiv., has requested that the United States Attorney's Office in Raleigh petition the federal court to have his case removed from the state court to the federal court.

This request on Cisneros' part is a right provided by congressional statute to any individual member of the military when charged with offenses allegedly committed while in the performance of official duties. Cisneros has also requested that the Department of Justice provide him legal representation, which is also his right.

The Marine Corps is required to forward these requests through the appropriate channels to the Department of Justice. The Department of Justice, not the Marine Corps, is the agency which determines whether representation shall be provided and whether removal of a case from state to federal court should be pursued.

Approval for removal from a state to federal court does not preclude trial in federal court or trial by court-martial. A Marine can still be prosecuted in federal court by the state using state substantive law if there are no procedural or jurisdictional defenses applicable to the individual or the U.S. Government that would result in dismissal of the case.

Marines can be prosecuted at courts-martial for crimes committed off-base, to include vehicular crimes. Thus, if a case is dismissed by the federal court, a Marine's commanding officer may still be able to refer the case to trial by court-martial, if appropriate. However, in Cisneros' case, the commanding officer is precluded by Department of the Navy regulations from referring the case to a court-martial until the state/federal court issues are resolved.

Vehicle safety is a paramount concern of the Marine Corps Commanders at Camp Lejeune. The Marine Corps on a daily basis has hundreds of vehicles on the roads all over the state and our overall safety record is excellent. Nonetheless, Camp Lejeune officials will continue to make every effort to improve, monitor, and supervise military traffic on the public highways and on Camp Lejeune.

The speed of all tactical vehicles travelling on or off base has been limited to 45 miles an hour or the posted speed whichever is slower.

Also, a message has been sent to all Camp Lejeune units re-emphasizing the requirement for strict adherence and enforcement of existing regulations, and additional signs have been posted on base reminding tactical vehicle drivers to drive carefully.

The Provost Marshal's Office here is continuing to work closely with local law enforcement authorities to monitor and report off-base military vehicle safety violations.

Pre-retirement seminar

A pre-retirement/separation seminar will be held today at Marston Pavilion beginning at 8 a.m. Spouses are encouraged to attend.

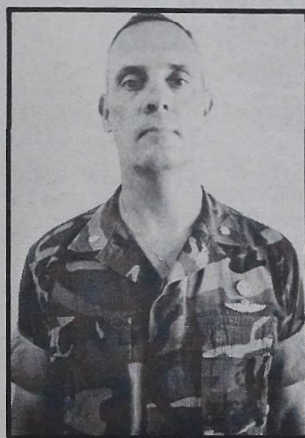

Police testing

Chesterfield Virginia City Police Department will be testing at the Family Service Center on Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. All interested military personnel must register, complete application forms and return the applications to the Employment Resource Center no later than Tuesday at noon. For more information call 451-5927.

Recon screening test

The next Reconnaissance Screening Test will be given at 6 a.m. June 17 at the former 2nd Recon Bn., area at Onslow Beach.

Interested personnel should call 451-1370/1451.

Lt. Col. S. A. Robnick

Lt. Col. S. J. Busum

Lt. Col. S. J. Busum will relinquish command of 3rd Bn., 6th Marines to Lt. Col. S. A. Robnick in a ceremony at 10:30 a.m. Friday at Camp Geiger's Landing Zone 15.

Busum will report to Command Staff College in Quantico, Va.

Uniform for the ceremony is utilities. A reception will follow the ceremony at the Camp Geiger SNCO Club.

The American Red Cross will offer a Basic Life Support CPR Course at the Naval Hospital on June 15 from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. in classroom A.

For more information call 451-2173/2182.

Dependent Dental Plan

Servicemembers currently enrolled in the active duty Dependent Dental Plan are now required to complete a DD Form 2294 to cover their children under four years of age.

The current plan offers dependent coverage depending on the type of treatment requested. The current available plans are for family coverage, (a spouse and children older than four years of age), children under four years of age and for remotely located children.

The current underwriter of the Dependent Dental Plan has advised that they will no longer liquidate claims for children under four years of age unless the service member has specifically requested the coverage.

More than 27,000 Navy servicemembers currently enrolled in the dental plan have children under four years old, but have not selected the new coverage yet. These servicemembers must complete a DD Form 2494 with their personnel office before June 14 to ensure claims for their children under four years old are covered within the guidelines of the plan.

There is no difference in premium cost between family coverage ($7.86) and family coverage with children under four years old.

Graduation ceremony

Midway Park Child Development Center will hold two graduation ceremonies for pre-school children on Friday. The morning ceremony will take place at 10 a.m. and the afternoon ceremony will take place at 2 p.m. For more information call 451-5106.

Navy Relief helps with money management

EDITOR'S NOTE— The annual Navy Relief Society fund drive has begun. This story is part of a series outlining the various programs provided by Navy Relief to Marines, Sailors and their families aboard Camp Lejeune.

By Cpl. Dave Mundy

Most Marines and Sailors are aware that Navy Relief is an organization that can lend a helping hand in time of need.

What many don't realize is that Navy Relief also helps plan ahead to prevent problems from arising.

One way in which the Society helps Marines, Sailors and their families plan ahead is through a budget counseling service. Victoria Green, budget counselor, said she not only provides advice for those with money problems, but also those who "just want to make sure there aren't any problems."

"A number of people I counsel come to Navy Relief because they are in trouble over money," Green said, "but there are also a large number of people I work with who simply want to be smart and plan ahead. You don't have to be in a bind to need financial counseling. It may be something as simple as working out a savings plan to set aside money for buying a home."

Green said the number one cause of money problems was irresponsible spending habits.

"Many people who come to see me have a money management problem," she said. "I see a lot of irresponsible spending. Some people can't distinguish between what they want and what they need. Some people can't even tell me who their creditors are."

Making the distinction between needs and wants is something Green said she tries to stress.

"Jacksonville is the home of 100 percent financing," Green said. "To a lot of young couples, that means whatever they want is what they need. A couple needs a dinette set, but they don't need a $3,000 dining room set."

"Try to convince them they must live within their means," she said. "They grew up in Mom and Dad's nice home and think theirs should be just as nice. What most of them don't realize is that Mom and Dad had to start from scratch, too."

Green said young families are a particular concern.

"A new baby can change everything," she said. "That's particularly true in the case of the young private or Pfc. They don't realize the expenses involved in getting married and having a baby."

"I love to see single guys before they get married, because we can sit down and work up a hypothetical list of the expenses they can expect," she said. "It makes them realize they have to plan and save."

Even the family that has been in the military for some time can find itself in a bind, Green said.

"Permanent change of station orders can shoot a family's budget in the foot," she said. "They get to Camp Lejeune and the wife can't find a job and it cuts their income tremendously. A good rule of thumb is to not make any major purchases based on two incomes. I'm married to a Marine myself, and we don't figure on my income when making a purchase."

Green said she can sometimes help those people with real credit problems.

"I can call some of the creditors and explain 'this person has come to us for help and we're trying to make things right.' Many times we are able to work out a new payment schedule that puts them back on track and makes the creditor happy," she said.

"I also work hand in hand with the base legal department when someone is considering filing for bankruptcy," she said. "We try to avoid filing, because that's something that stays on your record for at least 10 years, sometimes longer than that. We try to put together a plan that will work."

Green said what makes her job worthwhile is when one of those she has counseled returns with a success story.

"Just a couple of weeks ago I had a young Marine who came in to work out a budget to buy a new car," she said. "He wanted this '89 Mustang, 8-cylinder, that would cost him over $300 a month. We sat down and figured out what he made and what he could expect to have to pay. The insurance alone was astronomical."

The young Marine was a little disappointed, but determined to "get some wheels."

"When we finished, he had a budget and a price range he could afford," Green said. "He called me a couple of weeks later and brought his new car by. It was a used Volkswagen, and I think he was just as proud of that car as if it were that new Mustang. It gave me a good feeling to know I helped someone get what he needed, rather than what he wanted."

Cocaine—

Crack creates a "high" lasting only five to seven minutes. However, the intense sensations produced, although short-lived, are thought to be equal to or greater than the sensation of mainlining cocaine into the body's bloodstream.

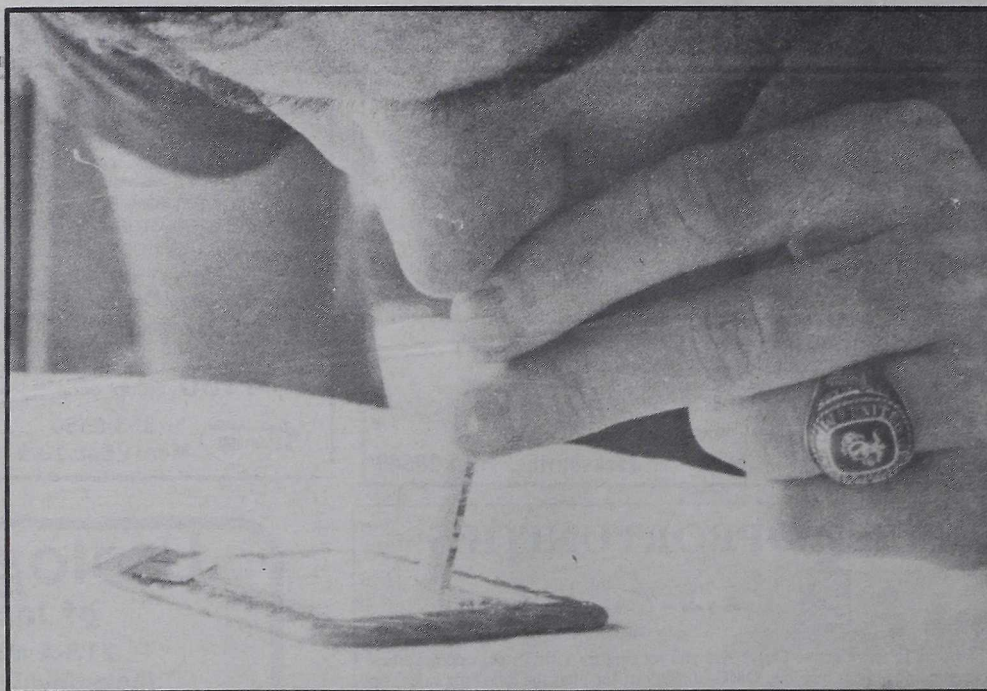

The main reason users become dependent on cocaine is they can't "just say no." They repeatedly abuse the drug until they are addicted. Dependency starts as psychological and later becomes physical, according to Gunnery Sgt. Patrick M. Dalton, substance abuse counselor, at the Consolidated Drug and Alcohol Center here.

"Cocaine affects the brain and its pleasure centers," Dalton said. "There is no other way to get that high, except to use cocaine again." The need to constantly use cocaine leads to psychological addiction.

Hughes can attest to the lure of the drug. "There's nothing in the world that I've ever experienced that feels like cocaine," he said. "If you could do it once and quit, it would be the best feeling you've ever had."

But very few people have the ability to stop after the initial use. They continue abusing the drug until they are "hooked."

Cocaine addicts experience serious cravings for cocaine and crack that can cause real pain if the high is not obtained, Dalton explained. Specialists in the

Cpl. Brenda Donnell

KILLER COCAINE— Cocaine, the "drug of the 1980s," is used by many socioeconomic groups. Because of this, most people don't associate it with dirty needles and shooting galleries common to other drugs. But, it can be just as addicting, and in high doses, any form of cocaine can cause death.

field say cocaine withdrawal can actually kill you, he added.

One thing a majority of addicts have in common is they are unable to deal with life. Hughes said his life was so out of control during the worst part of his addiction that he's just getting caught up. His obsession to use cocaine caused him to lose sight of his goals.

"Inability to cope with life can lead to loss of self-esteem for the user. After they are addicted, everything deteriorates," Dalton said. "They lose their self-respect, dignity and honor."

Certain people seem to be more susceptible to addiction than others. Some researchers are convinced these people have "addictive personalities." Hambidge, on the other hand, thinks other factors are involved in addiction.

"The basic problem with these people is their inability to face life on its own terms," Hambidge said. "I don't believe there is an addictive personality, but there are underlying personality and genetic traits that can cause them to become addicted more easily than others."

These factors may have had a bearing on Hughes' case. Several of his relatives are currently serving time in prisons for cocaine-related incidents. Other family members are dependent on alcohol.

Beyond the psychological and physical addiction, and its causes, lies the most horrible tragedy of cocaine: the destruction of the family unit.

"Addicts have problems with relationships, because they can't trust others," Dalton said. "It would be very difficult to maintain an addiction and a family, because the family is destroyed through the addiction process. Addicts become spiritually, emotionally, physically and financially bankrupt."

According to a study of 500 cocaine users, 45 percent said they had stolen money from their employers, family and friends. More than 50 percent reported they had used up at least half of their savings; half were in debt and 42 percent had wiped out all their worldly assets. In addition, 26 percent had divorced or lost a lover because of cocaine abuse and another 28 percent were being threatened with separation or divorce.

The only thing addicts really care about is getting "high" again. An addict will spend the family's entire savings on cocaine. Everything is sacrificed to feed the "habit."

"The family becomes destitute trying to support the user," Hambidge said, "and eventually they all go down the tubes."

Hughes was lucky he wasn't married, but his addiction cost him his parents' respect. He also lost his fiancée and his chance for a Marine Corps career. In the end, cocaine cost him everything he ever cared about.

"This is going to be on my conscience all my life," Hughes said. "It's nothing I want to smile about. People found it hard to believe I was using and selling drugs. Everyone I knew had me on a pedestal and I just stabbed them all in the back."

Tactical vehicle drivers training emphasizes safety

Sgt. Jim Fitzgibbons

Across the nation, statistics show an ever increasing number of traffic accidents and fatalities. As more vehicles are crammed onto already crowded highways, hardly a day goes by without the evening news providing reminders of how dangerous driving can be.

In-depth training courses and constant emphasis on safe operation of vehicles does, however, make Marine Corps drivers keenly aware of their vehicle's capabilities, which helps them reduce the possibility of becoming another statistic.

"Regardless of the training a person receives, accidents are going to happen," said Capt. T. A. Rademann, 2nd MarDiv., Motor Transport Officer. "They're going to happen to military drivers as well as to civilians. What we hope to do by training drivers and enforcing the rules of the road is make that less likely."

The training seems to minimize the number of accidents involving Camp Lejeune Marines.

According to the annual North Carolina Traffic Accident Facts, nearly 62,000 truck accidents were investigated in the state in 1987. Of those, 4,468 involved military vehicles, and based on records from the base safety office here, only 32 of those off-base accidents involved Camp Lejeune vehicles. In 1988 similar statistics were reported with slightly more than 65,000 truck accidents statewide. Of 4,310 military vehicle accidents statewide, 33 were Camp Lejeune vehicles.

Another way the Marine Corps emphasizes safety is by thoroughly familiarizing the drivers with the vehicles they drive. The design and size of most tactical vehicles is different from other vehicles on the road but Rademann doesn't feel that is a factor in any of the Camp Lejeune accidents.

The number of vehicles on the road these days has also increased over the years.

"There are at least three times as many military vehicles on the road today as there were 17 years ago when I joined the Marine Corps," Rademann added.

Efforts to increase safety and reduce the number of accidents are being checked and studied for feasibility.

"At one time all government vehicles had yellow lettering painted on the chassis, but because of our mission and the type of paint we use today, the cost of painting the lettering on and then repainting if we were to mobilize would be astronomical," Rademann said. "We are looking at the possibility of attaching a visible placard to each vehicle with the unit and phone number on it so people who see our vehicles operating recklessly can let us know. In addition, the Marine Corps has reduced the speed limit for all tactical vehicles to 45 mph or the posted speed limit, whichever is slower."

Rademann believes it is the responsibility of every vehicle operator to ensure government vehicles are operating as safely as possible. To help ensure Marine drivers are living up to that standard, 2nd MarDiv. and other units aboard Camp Lejeune have roadmasters whose responsibility is to oversee the safe operation of government vehicles on- and off-base.

Roadmasters act with military and civilian authorities to get reckless drivers off the road and help the smooth flow of convoys carrying military personnel and equipment.

"We coordinate with roadmasters from Marine Corps Base and 2nd FSSG to make spot checks of government vehicles and to stop operators who are driving our vehicles recklessly," said Gunnery Sgt. John F. Hagerman, roadmaster, 2nd MarDiv. "We plan the proposed routes of convoys through local communities with the civilian police." Whether or not the convoy is escorted by a roadmaster depends on several factors. Size, time, destination and the materials being transported are all factors used to determine whether a roadmaster will travel with the convoy.

Safety is the roadmaster's number one concern and speeding is the single most common violation the roadmasters see, according to Hagerman.

"Speeding is a factor in almost every accident recorded, so it's safe to assume if we can reduce the speeding, accidents will also decrease," Hagerman concluded.

Marines who violate vehicle laws or safe operating practices can face stiff penalties.

Next week . . . The consequences.

REFLECTION OF TROUBLE TO COME—Gunnery Sgt. Joseph C. Godfrey, MCSSS roadmaster, moves toward the cab of a 5-ton truck. Vehicle operators who see a roadmaster with lights flashing in their rearview mirror can usually expect a ticket.

24th MEU Correspondent

Two pair of squinting eyes peered through scrub pine and a sea of sweat for enemy movement. The scouts remained motionless while a hungry hoard of sand fleas feasted on their ears, necks and arms. A couple of hundred meters to their front a flock of seagulls scooped their breakfast from the surface of French Creek.

One of the Marines picked up the flight of a butterfly moving past a direction arrow he had dug in the sand moments earlier with his well-worn boot heel. Sweat sucked their cammies closer to their backs while they waited — and waited. Then it happened.

Six Light Armored Vehicle diesels roared to life during a "combat start" sending a deafening signal across the bay on a westerly breeze.

The scouts leaned forward watching the first LAV race across the opening and splash into the water while its 25mm chain gun scanned 360 degrees. Before the waves subsided, another LAV variant, capable of firing a Tube-launched, Optically-tracked, Wire-guided missile, straddled the arrow and cooled its steel skin. The sixth and last vehicle stopped for the scouts who ran for the two back hatches. Within seconds the engine ferociously spun all eight wheels spitting sand into the pines before joining its brothers afloat.

With the help of a hydraulic trim vane on the LAV's nose, 28,000 pounds of floating steel settled into a mundane hum at 10 mph. But this "swimming" exercise was anything but boring for the 50 LAV Marines attached to the 24th MEU.

According to Platoon Commander Lt. Jack Monaghan, neither he nor his 43 Marines have ever swam an LAV before. Normally, that much inexperience in a reinforced platoon would be grounds for instant gray hair. So why is Monaghan smiling? Because he has a no-nonsense platoon sergeant by the name of Paul Connors, a Marine staff sergeant from "the old school," to teach this group of hungry water warriors.

Connor's game plan is simple: Everyone will attend his version of "Basic LAV 101." He's talking about intense training and cross training on weapons systems, maintenance, driving, scouting and communications. Just because the "book" says a combat-loaded LAV is self-sustaining for three days (with fuel resupply), he takes nothing for granted.

While many team members were exchanging swimming experiences back on the beach, Connors' bark interrupted the premature celebration. Monaghan was still smiling.

"Scouts took too long to pass the word back to move out! And when they did, LAVs pinched up at the beach. Keep the vehicles moving ... some of you even looked scared."

So much for the new experience. They all learned their platoon sergeant had a photographic memory as he spewed out critiques faster than a bilge pump draining an LAV. No one escaped unscathed, and they learned the next few months would be a tough education with no time wasted.

Throughout the afternoon, crew members sweated through swim drills, hasty maintenance checks, comm procedures, towing and more bare-bones

Squad wins by fractions of point in competition

Lance Cpl. F. E. Charles

A fraction of a point separated the three infantry squads in the overall score of the three day, 2nd MarDiv. Rifle Squad Competition, May 22-25.

But it was Marines from Golf Co., 2nd Bn., 4th Marines, attached to 8th Marines, who edged out the stiff competition from 2nd Marines and 6th Marines. For their hard work, each member of 8th Marine's squad received handsome and much coveted, silver-plated bayonets.

In the eyes of Maj. Gen. O. K. Steele, CG, 2nd MarDiv., all competing squads were winners. "The only loser is the adversaries you may come up against," he told the Marines during the awards ceremony.

Division Schools managed the event, with the help of the Stone Bay Rifle Range, 2nd LAI Bn., 2nd Recon. Bn. and Marine Light Attack Helicopter Squadron-269 and Heavy Marine Helicopter Squadron-464 from MCAS, New River.

Even with this extra help, the course was demanding for competitors and instructors alike.

The competition focused on identifying the finest rifle squad in each division and recognizing the squad for its accomplishments. To find the best squad was no easy task for the instructors/evaluators of Division Schools, who were also helped by three senior instructors from SOI's Squad Leaders Course.

To ensure all events were graded fairly and accurately, check lists set the grading criteria to the smallest detail, according to Gunnery Sgt. Burdette Chapel, Staff NCOIC, Tactics, Division Schools.

"Each evaluator ensures every squad has identical scenarios," he said. "While each squad may do it differently, the problem can be graded equally."

To accomplish this the evaluators referred to various infantry manuals for "by-the-book" standards.

Going by the book meant lengthy and exhaustive check lists at times, said Sgt. Clayton Trowbridge, an evaluator on the offensive and defensive portion of the competition. "The checklist we used to grade the squads during this part is about STRAIN OF BATTLE—Fatigue and concentration betray the face of Cpl. Michael Hubbard. The team leader of Golf Co., 2/4, took command of 8th Marines after its squad leader was wounded.

38 pages long," he said. "We've put in some very long hours grading this event."

The evaluators weren't the only ones putting in long hours. The 14-member squads, including corpsmen, began each day early and ended it late. They were kept on the move performing patrols, land navigation, offensive/defensive tactics, weapons shoots, endurance runs and paddling rubber boats.

After all this, the squads awoke the last morning to face a grueling three-hour written exam.

Leading up to the division competition, each of the squads had to win at their battalion and regimental levels. To Pfc. Patrick McGinley, an assistant automatic rifleman with the 6th Marine's squad, this competition was a learning experience. "Everything is non-stop, and evaluated more severely than the others we've been through," he said. "But if it weren't for this competition, I wouldn't know half this stuff."

For the young McGinley, learning more about his profession is an obvious advantage. By having the squad competition, Division Schools also learns more about the state of infantry in 2nd MarDiv.

Through this, the school can evaluate and determine the strengths and weaknesses of training infantrymen here, according to Chapel.

Chapel also said that from the critiques of these three squads, regimental commanders can determine what aspects of training they need to concentrate on more.

With infantry training a priority now in today's Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Steele urged the squads and their commanding officers not to "sit back on our laurels," but continue to improve on them.

For Golf 2/4, their laurels were the silver bayonet and an opportunity to compete against squads from the other divisions this fall.

"Working together got us here," said a jubilant Petty Officer 3rd Class Chris Kahle, 8th Marines corpsman, after the awards ceremony and receiving his bayonet.

For the other squads, the expressions of fatigue ingrained on their faces for the past three days, were replaced by feint disappointment.

"We're more than ready for a good night's sleep," said Cpl. Eric Riley, 2nd team leader of 2nd Marine's squad.

Yet each Marine felt his squad was the best, right up to the end.

"We worked too hard to get third place," said one 6th Marine squad member.

But his squad's placing carries the distinction of being one of the three best rifle squads in 2nd MarDiv.

During the three day trials, each squad earned their bragging rights and should be proud of it, according to Maj. Gen. Steele. "There's no better accolade than to say you are all damn good infantrymen."

SANDMAN HITS MARINE—Mr. Sandman tirelessly pursued this member of 6th Marines squad through three days of stamina-sapping competition until finally catching him.

Corpsmen play role in squad competition

Lance Cpl. F. E. Charles

While clearing away debris left over from the 2nd MarDiv. Rifle Squad Competition, there were a few odd crumbs lingering from the three-day event.

Among these were the special relationships which developed between each Navy corpsman and his Marine squad.

The corpsmen were the Marines' best friend, but they didn't necessarily lead a dog's life during the competition. They were at times, their strongest supporters and cheerleaders.

Right alongside their Marine buddies, the corpsmen encouraged and reassured them every step of the way — even when the way was especially tough going.

Three corpsmen, Petty Officer 3rd Class Chris Kahle, 8th Marines; Seaman David Hausner, 6th Marines; and Seaman Apprentice Darin Shirley, 2nd Marines, weren't there to only provide moral support.

They figured into the competition with the squad and were graded on their medical skills accordingly, said Petty Officer 1st Class Paul Adams, chief medical education instructor, Division Schools.

"The written and practical test is current with the best emergency medicine going," he said. "The corpsmen needed at least 80 percent to pass."

The test, Adams said, is viewed as unfair by some, because it may be advanced beyond the training the corpsmen receive in school.

However, Camp Lejeune has one of the best continuing medical education programs in the service, according to Adams. It includes advanced treatment courses like national Emergency Medical Technician certification.

"We encourage our corpsmen to take advantage of it," Adams said.

Perhaps this training, coupled with going through the same rigors as Marines, fosters the corpsman/Marine relationship.

The corpsman takes care of his Marines, and in turn said Kahle, "they take care of us."

During the competition, the corpsmen also proved to be a catalyst of inspiration to their squads.

Pfc. Derick Jackson, a rifleman from 1st Bn., 6th Marines, attributes much of the high motivation level of his squad to their corpsman, Hausner. "He kept us going," Jackson said. "He's hard-core."

When 8th Marine's squad participated in the attack portion of the competition, Kahle went into action, and made quick work of patching up simulated wounds on a squad member and squad leader.

"Part of our job is to reassure the patient and tell him everything will be all right," said Kahle, while tending to one of the wounded Marines.

The trust in the corpsman/Marine relationship runs deep, according to Kahle. This is most evident when a unit loses its corpsman. It mourns the loss, said Kahle. "Often their morale will drop."

Training like the Division Squad Competition bolsters the respect and confidence each Marine has for his corpsman.

Each corpsman involved in the competition, gained a new respect for the job his Marine squad does.

But when it came right down to it, Kahle said, "it was working together as a team, which won us the competition."

Summer Fun Program gives kids things to do

By Helen F. Pratt

"There's nothing to do here." How many parents have heard those words from their children as summer begins? Fun in the sun isn't always easy to find.

But this summer, Camp Lejeune will offer a variety of programs for youths of all ages. Dependents of active duty, retired military or Department of Defense civilian personnel are eligible to attend these activities.

A Summer Fun Program for children ages six to 12 years old will be held June 16 to Aug. 28 from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily. "It's purpose is to provide organized leisure time activities for children requiring all day care," said Wanda Jenkins, child care coordinator for Human Services. The program provides supervised care by adults trained in child development, first aid and CPR. Activities include skating, swimming, miniature golf, arts and crafts and bowling. The program consists of age appropriate activities which are developmental, but it's not structured like a school according to Jenkins. "This is their summer and we want them to have fun," she said. Registration for the program will continue until June 16. To register call 451-5981/5458.

For children in grades two through eight, the Youth Summer Program will run from July 10 to Aug. 4 daily from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The program, sponsored by Special Services, will have activities like recreational swimming, ceramics, crafts, and field trips.

"The main objectives of our Youth Summer Program (and programs throughout the year) is to provide organized and instructional activities," said Shirley Landrum, family recreation coordinator.

Registration for the program will begin June 15-17. To register for the Youth Summer Program call 451-2253/5052.

Teenagers can also expect to find activities and events aboard base to keep them busy. The Youth Center on Stone Street will be open Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 7:30-11 p.m. On Fridays and Saturdays, teens can meet at the Waterfront Club located at Marston Pavilion. The hours are from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. Events include pool parties, concerts and trips to surrounding theme parks. For more information call 451-2253/1521.

So the next time you hear, "Mom, there's nothing to do this summer" tell them, "Yes, there is!"

DANCING THE NIGHT AWAY— Staff Sgt. Gus Daniels Jr. demonstrates a take down movement with the aid of Staff Sgt. T.D. Inniss. Both Marines took first place in their weight class at the All-Marine Judo Championships held recently at MCAS El Toro.

Lejeune Marines claim titles

Lance Cpl. Michael E. McLean

Four of five eastern North Carolina-based Marines took top honors at the All-Marine Judo Championships at MCAS El Toro, May 21-26.

Staff Sgt. Gus Daniels Jr., a third-degree black belt from MSSG-24, demonstrated his skill by taking the crown as Tournament Grand Champion, defeating eight other weight class champions.

Daniels also placed first in the 189-pound division.

Staff Sgt. Ronald P. Heflin, an explosive ordnance technician with 8th Eng.Supt.Bn., 2nd FSSG, neutralized his competitors in the over 209-pound category to take first.

Making an explosive debut was 27-year-old rookie Staff Sgt. Chelston D. Inniss, a third-degree brown belt from 8th Eng.Supt.Bn. Inniss has been practicing the art of judo for only a year, but finished first in the 209-pound and under class.

1st. Lt. Eric Nimba of MCAS Cherry Point, second-degree black belt, also nabbed a first-place title by defeating all his opponents in the 143-pound and under class. It was a nimble Nimba that Daniels had to beat in the final bout for the grand championship.

Finishing third in the 172-pound division was Lance Cpl. A.M. Gutierrez of 2nd MarDiv.

The six-day event was a single-elimination tournament. The 37 Marines that participated were previous regional champions, making the competition extremely challenging.

"The toughest fight I have had was against a Marine Corps captain from MCAS El Toro. He not only was an accomplished judo fighter, but he also was a Greco-Roman wrestler in college," Inniss said. "I was new to this type of competition, but I stuck it out and won," he added.

All of the North Carolina Marine competitors attributed their wins to being part of the Tar Heel Judo Club and instruction from retired Marine Master Gunnery Sgt. Ed Szejter.

According to Daniels, the Tar Heel club has been rated a top 20 judo club by leading martial arts magazines and journals. The club, which meets at MCAS New River, is instructed by Szejter. He has been teaching judo for over 20 years.

The Tar Heel competitors are looking forward to bigger and better things like the North Carolina State Championships and the Olympic trials.

Many of the All-Marine judo champs were preparing themselves for the Interservice Judo Championships, but were disappointed. The championships were cancelled because the Navy and the Air Force lacked teams.

"I practiced very hard and I was looking forward to the Interservice Championships, but it ended up being a big letdown. I'm just going to direct my energies toward the Olympic trials," Inniss said.

Daniels, who has accumulated 118 trophies, nine All-Marine titles and two All-Marine Grand Championships, claims the biggest thrill he gets is teaching others the art.

"Judo has given me a lot, and I try to return all the wealth it has given me to kids and the younger generation. The discipline, strength, dexterity and self-confidence it provides, gives youngsters tools they can use to help them gain a brighter future," Daniels said.

Field House hosts Leonard-Hearns 'war'

Globe Staff Report

Marines spend a lot of their time training for war.

Now, they have the chance to see one.

Almost eight years after their first classic battle, Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas "Hit Man" Hearns will stage a rematch at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas Monday.

The scheduled 12-round bout, billed as "The War," will be shown on closed-circuit television on two large screens at Camp Lejeune's Goettge Memorial Field House. Gates will open at 7 p.m., with preliminaries starting at 9 and the main event at 11.

Advance tickets are on sale now for $10 at the Information, Tours and Travel booth at the Main Exchange and at the field house. Tickets will be $15 at the door.

Leonard, 35-1 with 25 knockouts, last fought Nov. 7, 1988, when he took the WBC super middleweight and light heavyweight crowns from Danny "Golden Boy" Lalonde. Leonard survived a fourth-round knockdown to score a ninth-round TKO.

Hearns, 46-3 with 38 knockouts, took the WBO super middleweight title last Nov. 4, outpointing James "The Heat" Kinchen.

The two fighters share the distinction of being the only men ever to hold world titles in five different weight divisions.

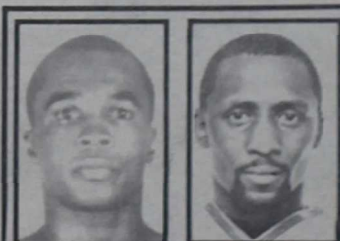

Leonard, 32, won the gold medal in the 1976 Olympics in the light welterweight division. He grabbed his first title belt in November, 1979, by stopping welterweight champ Wilfred Benitez in the 15th round.

The following June, he lost the WBC welterweight title belt to Roberto Duran, but regained it in the memorable "No Mas" rematch five months later.

He claimed his second weight division title in June, 1981, knocking out Ayub Kalule for the WBA junior middleweight crown. Three months later, he stopped Hearns.

Leonard retired because of an eye injury in 1982, then came back for one fight before announcing a second retirement. He returned again in April, 1987, and scored one of boxing's biggest upsets ever with a split-decision win over Marvelous Marvin Hagler to grab the WBC middleweight crown.

Hearns, 30, won his first world title with a devastating second-round KO of WBA welterweight champ Pipino Cuevas in August, 1980. After his loss to Leonard, he earned a 15-round decision over Benitez, then the WBC super welterweight champ. He knocked out Duran in the second round of their fight before being knocked out in the third round by Hagler on April 15, 1985.

Military Policemen carry 'special' torch

CARRY A TORCH— 2nd Lt. Jodi B. Cohen, running with Maj. Martin B. Walker, takes her turn at carrying the torch. PMO Marines and NIS agents from MCAS, New River and Camp Lejeune recently attracted crowds to the Special Olympics fundraising effort by carrying the torch from New Bern to Greenville.

Pfc. B. Scott Jackson

GREENVILLE — Traffic stopped. With a half-eaten burger in hand, a father carried his infant son out of a fast-food restaurant to watch the action. A group of college girls stopped their bikes to take a second look.

"Those are Marines!" one of the girls exclaimed. As the formation of 56 hard bodies ran past, the girls shouted their approval.

"No other leg of the North Carolina Law Enforcement Torch Run for Special Olympics was able to draw a crowd the way the Marines did in Greenville," said New Bern Police Chief Jerry H. Welch.

The theme for this year's Special Olympics Torch Run was "Run A Cop Out of Town," said Welch, a former Marine Corps major and the state chairman for the event. He said the group expected to exceed its goal of raising $25,000 to aid Special Olympics.

Military policemen from the state's three Marine Corps installations played a part in carrying the torch on three legs of its trip through eastern North Carolina.

A group from the Provost Marshal's office of MCAS Cherry Point participated May 16 during the torch's journey from Atlantic Beach to New Bern.

The next day, MPs from MCAS New River and Camp Lejeune teamed up with Naval Investigative Service agents to carry the torch on part of the 38-mile trip from New Bern to Greenville.

The Special Olympics torch was passed for a total of eight days, arriving in Charlotte May 25. It was joined there by similar torches coming from Tennessee and Hickory, N.C.

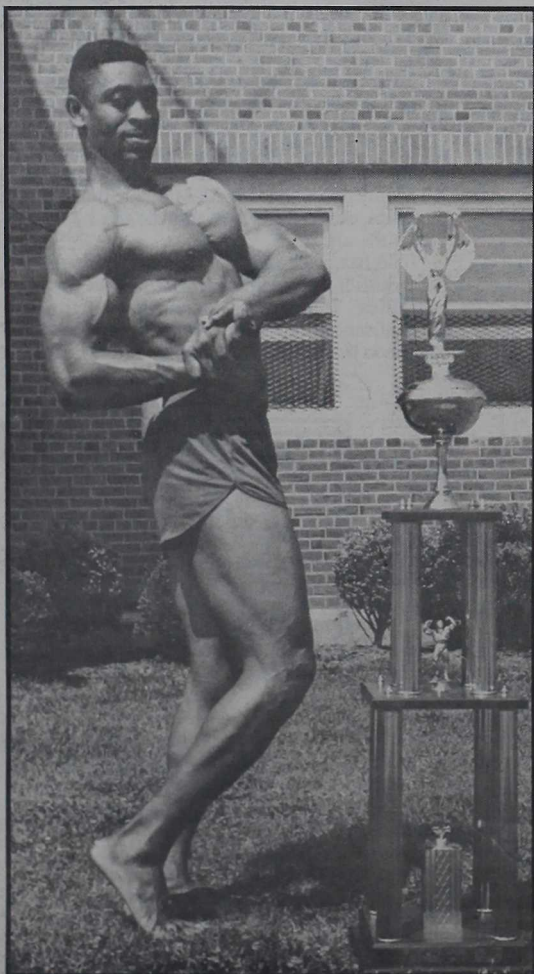

The money raised by participants in the torch run goes to benefit the North Carolina Special Olympics, with a small percentage going to the national Special Olympics fund.

The Marines drew a fair share of attention, particularly in Greenville, where crowds lined the streets and interrupted a day's shopping to see the formation pass by.

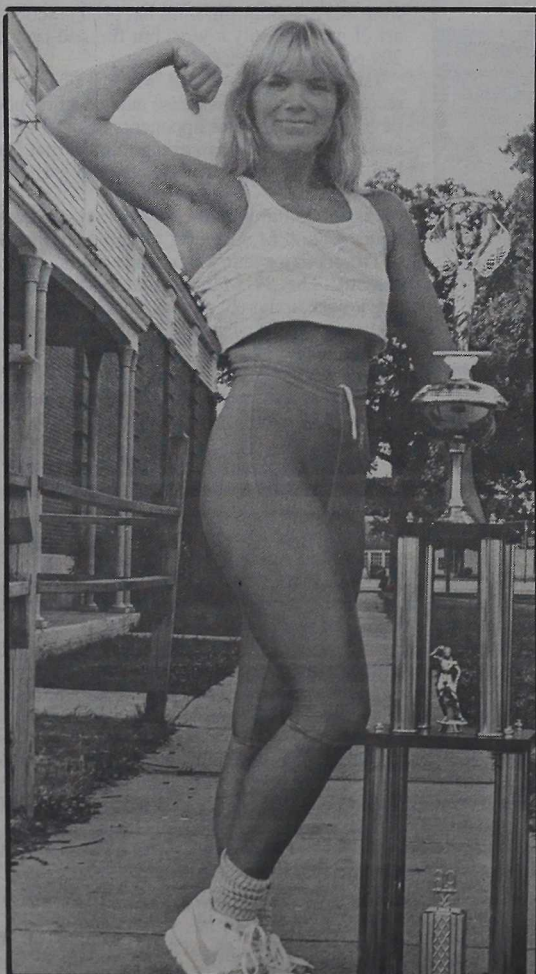

"There are not a lot of things that can compete for attention with a Marine formation run," said Capt. John R. McAlexander of the New Bern Police Dept.

When the formation stopped with Greenville City Hall in view, the Marines passed the torch to Lt. John Ennis, the Greenville Police Dept. watch commander, who thanked the Marines for their participation.

Sacrifices pay off for bodybuilding winners

MR. LEJEUNE— Cpl. William Lattimore won the overall men's competition.

MS. LEJEUNE— Christine Berry, overall winner of the women's competition, displays her trophy.

Story and photos by
Cpl. Philip R. Haring

Christine Berry and Cpl. William Lattimore made a few sacrifices in the last two months to prepare for the bodybuilding titles they now hold.

They were chosen Mr. and Ms. Lejeune May 20, beating 13 other competitors at the base theater.

This was Berry's first body building contest; however, no one would have noticed from her appearance. Not only did she take first place in the overall women's competition, but also won trophies for the best legs, chest muscles and posing routine.

In only six weeks, Berry pumped up and trimmed down by rigorous training and strict dieting.

Berry, the wife of Sgt. Maj. Douglas Berry of 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit, said bodybuilding takes a lot of self-discipline. "Bodybuilding is not a contest between others," she said. "It's a contest against yourself."

Lattimore took first place in the light-heavyweight division, posing, chest muscles, legs and was named the overall mens division winner. This contest wasn't his first.

'Bodybuilding is not a contest between others. It's a contest against yourself.'

Devilfish grab ribbons

Staff Report

RALEIGH — Several members of the Camp Lejeune Devilfish youth swimming team brought home ribbons in the Raleigh "Good Stuff" swim meet May 20-21.

In the boys' 9-10 age group, Curtis Vik brought home gold medals in the 100-yard freestyle and 100-yard breast stroke and finished second in the 50-yard backstroke and took sixth in the 50-yard butterfly. Vik teamed with Erik Vik, Bobby Gomez and Preston Benson for a fourth-place ribbon in the 200-yard team relay. Mike Doyle took a second place in the 50-yard freestyle, while Gomez finished eighth in the 100-yard backstroke.

Laura Goodman also won gold medals in the girls' 9-10 age group, taking first in the 50-yard freestyle and 100 freestyle. She finished second in the 100-yard breast stroke, third in the 50-yard breast stroke and 200 individual medley, and nabbed fifth in the 50-yard backstroke.

In the boys' 11-12 age group, Jeb Walker took seventh in the 200-yard freestyle.

Richard Petty earned gold medals in the boys' 15-18 group with his first-place finishes in the 200- and 500-yard freestyle events, took second in the 100 freestyle, finished third in the 200 individual medley and came in seventh in the 100-yard breast stroke.

The high finishes came as several of the Devilfish bettered the U.S. Swimming "B" times in their events for the first time.

L. ROBERT COXE

ATTORNEYS AT LAW - GENERAL PRACTICE DIVORCE

If you or your spouse have lived in North Carolina for at least six months and have been separated for at least one year and there are no disagreements between you regarding any issues, you can obtain a divorce in 45 days or less. The legal fee is

SEPARATION AGREEMENT

If you and your spouse are not going to live together, you should enter into a separation agreement. Oral promises at the time of separation are hard to prove and enforce, and subjects such as child custody and support, division of property and division of bills should be written down and agreed upon. The legal fee is

$100

DWI

It is unwise to appear for trial (even for a first offense) without legal representation. Even though a conviction may seem likely to you, an attorney can help by (a) possibly reducing your fine; (b) reducing the number of days in jail, and/or community service; (c) having your court date set at a more convenient date for you. The legal fee for first offense is

AUTO ACCIDENT

If you have been injured in an automobile accident, you do not know what your claim is worth. And, you should not be in a hurry to settle your claim. Remember that serious or costly injuries do not always result in immediate pain or bloodshed, and once you settle your claim, you cannot obtain further compensation from the responsible party. You should seek the assistance of any attorney to help you in handling the problems resulting from an accident.

Fee is paid only upon a monetary recovery for you.

COURTS-MARTIAL

If you are pending a special or a general court-martial and interested in retaining a civilian lawyer with 20 years of experience in military law call and ask for an appointment with Hurman R. Sims.

Fees do not include court costs.

How Your Whole Troop Can Fly For Half Fare.

Many airlines offer discount fares for military personnel. But USAir and Piedmont give military dependents equal treatment.

On USAir and Piedmont, your dependents get the same discount you do — 50% off the regular coach fare. And there are virtually no restrictions*.

Our military fares are good on every USAir, Piedmont or Allegheny Commuter flight, every day, to any U.S. destination.

Better still, your dependents fly 1/2 fare whether they're traveling with you or not.

So next time you're taking off on civilian maneuvers, contact your base leisure travel office. Or call USAir toll-free at 1 (800) 428-4322. Or Piedmont toll-free at 1 (800) 251-5720.

And fly the airline that gives special treatment to the people most special to you.

USAIR
PIEDMONT

Subsidiaries of USAir Group, Inc.

*You must present your green active-duty military I.D., or your dependent I.D. marked "active." Discount does not apply to official military travel. Military Fare seating may be limited due to capacity control.
