Marines tackle security mission

Story and photos by
Capt. W.L. Taylor

MARINE FORCES PANAMA — As the first Special Operations Capable Marine Expeditionary Unit, many of them had waited for the call off the coast of Libya in 1986.

As U.S. bombers flew overhead, they sat on ships waiting, but circumstances dictated that they would wait some more. In late March, while part of the 2nd Marine Division's air-alert battalion, India Company, 3rd Battalion, 4th Marines was called to Panama to be part of a joint service security augmentation force. On April 6, they boarded planes from North Carolina and arrived in Panama.

"Before we came down here, air-alert was just another part of the Marine Corps with all the inspections and recalls," said Lance Cpl. Jamie Davis, Weapons Plt., India Co., 3/4. "When they told us we were coming down here, it was like a slap in the face." I expected

Marines lay 'Iron Curtain' for defense

Story and photos by
Cpl. Kevin Doll

PACIFIC OCEAN, off the Ecuadorian Coast — Peering into the seemingly solid blackness of a moonless night, a group of UNITAS XXIX Marines on the flightdeck of the USS Sumter, LST-1181, await rounds, include one mounted M2 .50-caliber machine gun and two M60E3 machine guns. A squad of 13 riflemen stands nearby, their M16A2s locked and loaded.

Suddenly, a starshell mortar flare illuminates the darkness off the starboard bow and the clouds begin to glow a hazy yellow.

Sighting in on a rapidly dropping flare, the Marines receive the order to fire and the stillness of the night is shattered by the staccato burst of gunfire and the red blaze of tracer rounds.

Participating in a joint Navy-Marine Corps exercise enroute from Ecuador to their next training area in Peru, the Marines helped support the Sumter's secondary line of defense in knocking out incoming enemy missiles.

"Our first line of defense is the CIWS, or Close-In Weapons System," said GMC Tom H. Weipert, chief gunner's mate.

"This system electronically locks in on incoming missiles and fires 20-mm rounds, at the rate of 3000 rounds a minute. The secondary line of defense is used in case the CIWS is down and its purpose is to put up a "wall of steel" that the missile must pass through.

"The Sumter's self-defense force consists of 22 Sailors who man four M60s, three .50-calibers, and 15 M14s," he said. "From our side it went real well and we fired a total of 4,000 rounds."

The Marines and Sailors fired at three flares sent up as targets during the exercise, which was dubbed "Operation Iron Curtain."

"It was an experience for me," said Lance Cpl. Bari L. Williams, .50-caliber gunner. "I've never fired off a ship at night while we were underway and rocking."

"It was my first time firing off a ship," said Pfc. Christopher L. Ramirez, M60E3 gunner. "I fired off 200 rounds which was the same for all the guns. It was a definite learning experience for me."

"The light machine guns came closer than I did," said Williams. "I thought it would be impossible to be accurate at night with the rocking of the ship, but

U. S. Navy celebrates anniversary

Hearty congratulations to the officers and Sailors of the United States Navy as you celebrate your 213th Anniversary, October 13.

Since your austere beginnings in 1775 with two small ships, the U.S. Navy has grown to be universally recognized as the premiere naval force in the world today. Your history is filled with countless examples of dedicated professionalism and supreme devotion to duty. And, today, our comrades in blue continue to uphold the highest traditions that have been their hallmark for more than two centuries.

As proud members of the Navy/Marine Corps team, we Marines take great pride in having an inseparable relationship with such an elite seafaring organization. From the Revolutionary War through our current involvement in the Persian Gulf, Sailors and Marines have trained, fought and died side by side. It is this legacy that has forged the most celebrated and powerful military team in history.

The officers and enlisted Marines of FMFLant join me in a special tribute to our shipmates of the United States Navy. Fair wind and following seas. Very respectfully, LtGen. E. T. Cook, Jr.

HALLOWEEN SAFETY TIPS FROM McGRUFF

Halloween is a festive and fun time of the year for kids. But sometimes the fun turns to cruel tricks—like when people tamper with kids' treats. Take a tip from me, McGruff the Crime Dog. Here are 10 things you can do to protect your children and make Halloween a safer and happier time for everyone.

1. Make sure children are accompanied by an adult or responsible teenager when they go door-to-door. Go with them yourself if you can.
2. Instruct children never to eat anything until they are home and the treats have been examined. Cut and wash fruit before eating. Throw away anything unwrapped.
3. Check the wrappers of commercial treats for signs of tampering.
4. Call the police if there are any suspicious treats.
5. Make sure children's costumes fit and they can see well.
6. Tell your children to trick or treat in their own neighborhood and in well lighted streets. Daylight hours are best.
7. If children are going to be out after dark, make sure they carry a flashlight.
8. Teach your children to use the sidewalks if they can. If there are no sidewalks, walk on the left side of the street facing cars.
9. Know which friends your children will be with and which route they are taking.
10. Leave your porch light on so children will know it's ok to visit your home.

IDEA: Have a Halloween party in your home for all the neighborhood kids.

Neighborhood action needed to take a 'bite out of crime'

By Aileen M. Streng

October is the time to "take a bite out of crime." Since its inception in 1983, October has been recognized as National Crime Prevention Month. Over the years, it has grown into a national celebration of the fact that citizens, public officials and law enforcement officers are working together to reduce crime and fear as well as to improve the quality of life in their communities.

The National Crime Prevention Council has declare as its 1988 theme, "Community Action Makes a World of Difference." This positive approach is a means of making the public aware that neighbors working together can accomplish what might otherwise seem impossible to the individual, according to the council.

"The actual process of getting to know each other and of learning to work together helps to build a healthy community and a healthy community is the best crime prevention of all," according to the council.

Probably the most recognized symbol of the council's efforts to make America a safer place to life is its trench-coated spokesman, McGruff. A recent study showed that almost 100 percent of children and more than 90 percent of teens recognize McGruff. Other findings show that McGruff is viewed not simply as a mascot but as the national symbol of crime prevention.

McGruff and his crime prevention messages is making his way to Camp Lejeune. The Provost Marshal Office is in the process of establishing a "McGruff House" program in all family housing areas.

A McGruff House will be that of a safe haven for children. A symbol will be placed on a window of the participating homes to let children know that if they are lost, frightened or in trouble, they have a place to go for help, according to PMO.

Statistics show that many children are often in need of this kind of help. McGruff and his friends estimate that more than 6.5 million crimes are committed each year against people between the ages of 12 and 19. Almost 70 percent of these crimes involve the stealing of property. Also, 1.8 million children are reported missing annually.

The number of assaults against children are also cause for concern. According to the council, more than a million cases of child abuse are reported annually. Nationally, there are also close to 300,000 high school students physically attacked every month while at school.

The Crime Prevention Council urges parents to become involved in school crime prevention by joining parent-teacher organizations, becoming a class parent and mobilizing other parents to become involved in the safety of their children.

More and more schools are also adding personal safety instruction and crime prevention to their school agenda. Teaching children how to play it safe and what to do when they are threatened could be invaluable instruction in cases of emergencies. Oftentimes this information is taught by local law enforcement officials. Children attending schools on base are sure to be familiar with "Officer Friendly" from PMO who works to teach safety.

With Halloween approaching at the end of Crime Prevention Month, the time is right to act on "taking a bite out of crime."

Chief of Staff dies

Lieutenant General Louis H. Buehl III, Chief of Staff at Headquarters Marine Corps since last October, died the evening of Oct. 5 in Bethesda Naval Hospital after suffering a stroke.

General Buehl was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., on Oct. 18, 1932. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps on June 7, 1954, after coming in the NROTC program. After commissioning, he served as a platoon commander and later as staff sergeant with the 1st Marine Division. During his career, General Buehl also served as a recruit series commander, company commander, battalion executive officer, battalion commanding officer and mental commander. His foreign service included two combat tours in Vietnam in addition to duty in Japan and the Mediterranean.

General Buehl's staff assignments included experience in legal affairs, operations, training, logistics, procurement, installations and personnel management. He served as an Aide-de-Camp and Staff Secretary and the Marine Officer Instructor in the University of Michigan's Department of Science.

General Buehl was advanced to the grade of major general April 8, 1982 and assumed duty as commanding general, 1st Marine Brigade, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii. He was advanced to the grade of major general on March 22, 1985, and to lieutenant general Sept. 30, 1987. Assignments as general officer include: Director, Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune; Deputy Chief of Staff for Reserve Affairs; and Senior Military Assistant to the Deputy Secretary of Defense.

General Buehl was a graduate of Miami University, Ohio, and the University of Michigan. He held a Bachelor's Degree in Asian Studies. He attended the Program for Senior Executives in National and International Security, John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University in 1986. He also attended the Air War College.

General Buehl's personal decorations included the Defense Distinguished Service Medal, the Defense Superior Service Medal, the Legion of Merit with Combat "V," the Bronze Star Medal with Combat and the Navy Commendation Medal with Combat "V."

General Buehl is survived by his wife, the former Virginia Warwick of Oxford, Ohio; four daughters, Cecilia Murphy, Heidi, Megan and Jennifer; and granddaughter, Adria.

Funeral services were held at the New Chapel, Ft. Belvoir, Va., on Oct. 10. In lieu of flowers, General Buehl's family requests donations to be made to the Marine Corps Scholarship Foundations, Inc., P.O. Box 3008, Princeton, N.J. 08534; (609) 921-3543.

Navy Enlisted Ball

The Navy Enlisted Personnel on board MCB, Camp Lejeune, and attached Marine units will celebrate 213 years of proud and dedicated service at 6 p.m., Oct. 13, in the 1st Marine Division Marston Pavilion. Service Dress Blue/higher uniform or appropriate civilian attire to be worn. Choices to be made at time of ticket purchase between teamship round or cornish game hen. Ticket information can be obtained from Command Master Sergeant for active duty personnel and HMCM-R Colonel at 347-1795 for retired personnel. There will be a special hour, ceremony, dinner and entertainment. Come on out and help us celebrate our 213th year!

Requests for discharge

Marines who have twice failed selection for promotion to Staff Sgt. may request to be discharged, in accordance with MCO P1900.16C, paragraph 1, for Marine Corps separation and retirement. Marines requesting a discharge may submit an administrative action form to HQMC (MMSR-3). In the request, the Marine must acknowledge that the unearned portion of any reenlistment bonuses will be based on the needs of the Marine Corps. AA forms from Marines serving unaccompanied tours will be looked at on a case-by-case basis.

Sergeants that are approved for discharge under the provision of this order will be assigned RE-3C reenlistment code which requires CMC approval for reenlistment.

Interested Marines should keep in mind that a request will normally be denied if the Marine has: received fully-funded education, or education for which obligated service was incurred; completed advanced technical training; received special compensation during the current enlistment; for has a military occupational speciality which requires retention.

Marines considering a discharge under this provision can call the enlisted counseling section at HQMC for guidance at AV224-1734 or Comm 202-694-1734.

RPV Field Dedicated

The recently completed outlying field at MCAGCC, Twentynine Palms for remotely piloted vehicles (RPV) was named in honor of Capt. Jeb F. Seagle, USMCR (deceased) Sept. 22.

Seagle was awarded the Navy Cross posthumously, for extraordinary heroism while serving with AH-1T (TOW) Cobra attack helicopter Squadron 261, 22nd MEU conducting combat operations on the island of Grenada Oct. 25, 1983. The citation was signed on behalf of the President by John Lehman, then Secretary of the Navy.

While conducting an armed reconnaissance mission in support of ground forces, Seagle's aircraft was hit by multiple anti-aircraft artillery projectiles and forced down behind enemy lines.

Having been knocked out by the blast, Seagle regained consciousness after his fellow pilot, Capt. Tim Howard, commanding officer of the 1st RPV Bn., had flown the aircraft to impact and found that the aircraft was on fire and burning out of control.

Guest speaker needed

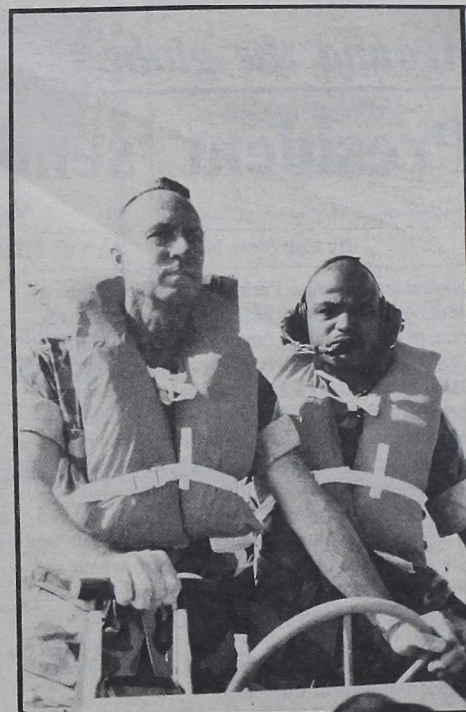

The Highland Springs High School Marine Corps JROTC Unit, Richmond, Va., is looking for former graduates of the school, senior staff noncommissioned officers or officers, to be the guest speaker for its Marine Corps Birthday Ball. Marines interested in participating should contact the Senior Marine Instructor, Lt. Col., Fryrear, at 804-7373-8252 as soon as possible.

Beirut Memorial unveiled

The last phase of the Beirut Memorial, a life-size bronze statue of Marine placed on the monument, has been completed and will be unveiled at a ceremony to be held at 2 p.m., Oct. 22 at the memorial park near the Camp Johnson gate. General A.M. Gray, Commandant of the Marine Corps, will be the keynote speaker for the ceremony. Abbe Godwin, artist of the statue will be in attendance. Marines, family members and friends are invited.

School board meets

Camp Lejeune Dependent Schools' Board of Education will hold its next meeting on Friday, Oct. 21st at the Superintendent's Office, Bldg. 855 at 0830. The meeting is open to the public and anyone desiring to have items placed on the agenda should contact Superintendent's Office prior to the meeting.

1/8 COC

LtCol. Jan Huly will relinquish command of 1st Bn., 8th Mar. to LtCol. Michael W. Hagee at 1400 on Oct. 19th, at W.P.T. Hill Field. Hagee comes from being the executive officer at 8th Marines. Huly will attend a top-level school.

CAO guidance

The 2nd Marine Expeditionary Force will be conducting a Combined Arms Operation from Oct. 17-Nov. 3, designed to test the ability of its units to conduct combat operations over extended distances.

The exercise is designed to provide training opportunities for ground, air and service support elements of the Marine Air-Ground Task Force.

Units from the 2nd Marine Division and 2nd Force Service Support Group, along with those of the 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing, will participate in the operation which involves; a tactical movement from Camp Lejeune to Fort Pickett, Va.; field exercises at Fort Pickett and; a tactical movement back to Camp Lejeune.

Rest and bivouac sites along the designated routes of march between Camp Lejeune and Fort Pickett have been coordinated with local authorities and private citizens.

Marines participating in the exercise are reminded that safety and common sense are primary concerns. Due to the fact that military vehicles will be using local and state roads throughout eastern North Carolina and southern Virginia and private property is being used, Marines should take every precaution, both to protect the public and to avoid any damage to civilian property.

Marines in the field are reminded to notify the nearest Marine civil affairs team if any problems with civilians or private property should arise during the exercise.

Marines who may encounter civilian media along the routes of travel and should have them contact respective G-1 section or the PAO office. Any comments or concerns with regard to the exercise should be referred to the Public Affairs Office, Camp Lejeune at (919) 451-5882

President 'sends in the Marines' to battle fire

By Cpl. Steve Nelson

Yellowstone National Park, Wyo.—When fires at one of our nation's most beautiful national parks ragged out of control, it was time to send in the Marines.

The order came down from President Reagan Sept. 10 that two battalions and a combat service support element from Camp Pendleton were to deploy to Yellowstone National Park to assist firefighters who had been battling the blazes throughout the summer. This marked the first time that a president has ever directed Marines to fight forest fires.

The two battalions that deployed were 1st and 3rd Battalions of the 5th Marine Regiment, which are being supported by Combat Service Support Detachment 12. The two infantry battalions and CSSD-12, along with the command element of 5th Marines, make up Marine Air-Ground Task Force-5, minus the aviation combat element.

In addition to the hard work put into getting ready to deploy, classes were given by the Los Angeles County Fire Department which taught the Marines the basics of firefighting, fire behavior and most importantly, fire safety.

Within two days all of the logistics were taken care of and CSSD-12 had advance party Marines at Yellowstone on the afternoon of Sept. 12.

On the morning of Sept. 13, Marines of 1/5 and CSSD-12 were flown to West Yellowstone, Mont., aboard Air Force transports which lifted off from Norton Air Force Base, Calif.

Ironically, the leathernecks stepped off the aircraft into drizzling rain — the kind of weather which had been hoped for throughout the duration of the fire.

Marine Air-Ground Task Force 5, commanded by Col. Richard B. Rothwell, then used its own ground transportation to carry out its mission with the support element remaining in the rear near the airport while 1/5 rolled into the woods and set up a base camp at Madison Junction, located inside the Wyoming border, about 15 miles into the west side of the park.

Following the establishment of their camp, 1/5 Marines were issued firefighting gear and received further training before heading out to the fire lines.

"One of the major benefits of the deployment is that it gives us an opportunity to stress small unit leadership in a hazardous environment," said Maj. Jack Carter, operations officer for 1/5. "It stresses teamwork because our lives are in danger. And the training we've received from the Los Angeles County Fire Department is invaluable. The whole experience has definitely enhanced the spirit and morale of the battalion."

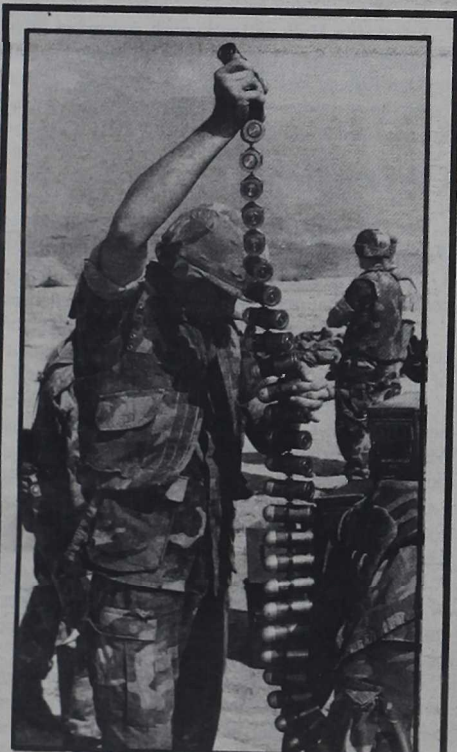

Carter added that he was quite surprised when his battalion was called upon to assist in fighting the fires which have burned over 1.5 million acres of land. "But, this also gives us a chance to show our colors in a civilian community that never sees the Marine Corps in action," he said.

"The civilians are really treating us well," said Lance Cpl. Shawn Weisbacker of 2nd Plt., Bravo Co., 1/5. "The firefighters who trained us and the people out in town have been great to us. They're knocking themselves out for us to give us what we need, when we need it. Fighting the fires is a big job, but because of the treatment we're getting, morale is high, and that makes the job much easier."

Weisbacker is one of the many Marines who have put in 12-hour work days, going out into the brush to do their part in preventing the spread of the fires.

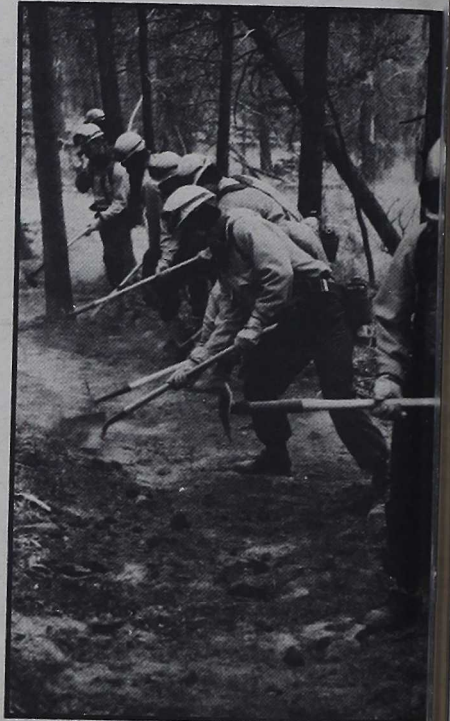

Their work mainly consists of digging fire brakes (cold trailing) and putting out small fires in and around areas which have burned out but might flare up at any instant with the combination of dry weather, low humidity and high winds.

Throughout the week, Camp Pendleton Marines were flown in, with CSSD-12 and 1/5 being the first MAGTF-5 elements on the ground and 3/5 arriving on Sept. 16 to do the same kind of training and work as 1/5, but in a different area.

Cpl. Steve Nelson

A Camp Pendleton Marine handles linked grenades, preparing them for loading into the MK-19 Mod-3 automatic grenade launcher. The launcher, which is slowly making its way into the Marine Corps, was recently fired by Weapons Co., 1/9 at Camp Pendleton. "The weapon is fantastic," said 1st Lt. Willard Buhl, heavy machine gun platoon commander. "It can be used against troops in the open or a mechanized unit in which case it's capable of penetrating two inches of steel at 2,200 meters. The weapon has been around for a while but its fairly new to the Marine Corps, so we're breaking some ground here at 1/9."

Gunnery Sgt. Stan Pedersen

Marines of India Co., 3/5, work on the fireline during mopping up operations on the Wolf Lake fire in the northern part of Yellowstone National Park.

After 3/5 touched down at the airport, they immediately headed into the park and rolled by their counterparts in Madison Junction and proceeded northward to Mammoth Springs where they co-located with the command element which had been there three days prior. The number of Marines in the park was now nearly 1,500 to add to the 7,000-plus firefighters who were there before them.

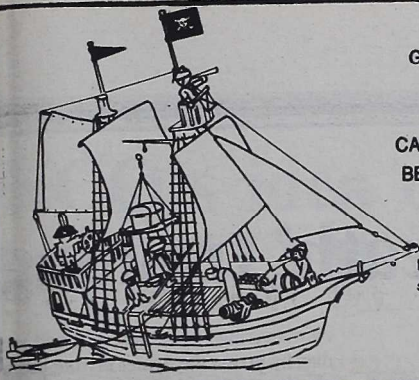

"I've been doing this since 1972 and I've never seen anything come together this fast," said Staff Sgt. Shackleton, a National Park Service ranger and commander of the party which trained the Marines. "And I think the main reason why they were able to reduce training time is because they're safety conscious. They're well disciplined, they communicate well. Teamwork is there and they're physically fit for the job, enabling them to move around well. I wouldn't be putting them out on the line if they didn't have what it takes to fight fires," he said.

Crash crews perform 'life and death' training

Story and photos by
Cpl. Janice M. Hagar

NAS MIRAMAR, Calif. — A tongue of flame skittered across gallons of fuel. Thick black smoke began climbing toward the sky. In seconds, it turned into a raging inferno, as flames shot up 120 feet.

Suddenly, the crash rescue trucks, known as pumbers, raced toward the fire. A blast of water shot out of the water gun. The firefighters, clad in protective gear, began extinguishing the blaze. Within minutes, the flames disappeared.

Fortunately this was not a real crash situation, but a training day for section one of Camp Pendleton's Crash Fire Rescue Crew.

The Marine Corps Air Station crash crew ventured down to Naval Air Station Miramar for some 'life and death' training.

Firefighting is more than just spraying water until the flames are gone. Strategy and teamwork are called for.

Two pumbers were used in the scenarios. When given the signal, the pumbers raced to the edge of the fire and fighters jumped out, grabbed hoses and moved into the fire. Two fighters from each truck went in, one controlling the hose nozzle, the second assisting by maneuvering excess hose line and standing by in case the fighter in front became overheated or tired.

An additional firefighter manned the turret's water gun from the pumber's roof while the driver manned the bumper turret gun to complete the teams. The turret fighter and driver also acted as observers, watching for any danger of flare-ups.

Seven fires were fought, allowing each fighter to perform in a different function. After each fire, the crew was critiqued.

"The practical application in case of real emergency is good for us," said Sg Dwayne Wimbley, assistant section leader. "If anything does happen, we'll be ready for it."

"We constantly train," said Staff Sg T.G. Benton, staff noncommissioned officer-in-charge of training. "Practical application helps us because we can only learn so much in the classroom."

The crash crew consists of two sections of 13 to 16 Marines. They work shifts of one day on, one day off. There are constantly four Marines watching aircraft take-offs and landings. Even after the field is closed, seven crew members remain on duty in the event of an emergency. If a mishap occurs, the whole section would be called back to duty.

NCO's idea develops into SMAW exercise

Story and photos by
Cpl. Kevin Doll

VALDIVA TRAINING AREA, Ecuador — An idea from a Marine NCO developed into an uncommon exercise as part of the training conducted here recently by UNITAS XXIX.

A field-expedient bunker was constructed, and as Ecuadorean Marines looked on, was fired upon and destroyed by a round from the Shoulder-launched Multi-purpose Assault Weapon (SMAW). "The exercise started as an idea I had or training in building a bunker properly in case the situation arose where we needed one," said Cpl. David D. Grise, squad leader, heavy Machine Gun Section, Weapons Plt.. "Our platoon commander made the suggestion to try out the SMAWs power on the bunker.

"The bunker is a basic machine gun bunker, horseshoe shaped and about five feet deep," said Grise. "It was designed for the Mk-19 grenade launcher and has room for a three-man crew. Materials used for the bunker were empty mortar boxes, over 200 sandbags and bamboo stalks. We also set up silhouette targets to see what effect the round would have on them. It took eight men about five hours to construct the bunker," he added.

After construction, the Marines tested the bunker's stopping power by firing 83mm and 5.56 rounds into its walls. No rounds penetrated and the bunker was also deemed safe from grenade and indirect mortar fire.

"The maximum range for the SMAW is 250 meters," said Cpl. Patrick S. Hill, SMAW gunner, Weapons Plt. "For the training exercise, I was between 150 and 200 meters away.

"During a tactical situation, the M60E3 machine guns would draw fire and give me time to fire some spotting rounds to increase first round hit probability. We use 83mm high explosive rounds which are made to penetrate the bunker and then explode," said Hill. "First using the spotting rounds to get where the live round would penetrate, Hill then fires the SMAW, sending the projectile streaking down range, causing the bunker to explode in a cloud of fire and dust.

Amid the yells and congratulations of U.S. and Ecuadorean Marines, the men involved in the exercise moved out to inspect the damage inflicted by the round on the bunker and silhouettes.

"The damage the SMAW did was considerable," said Grise after the inspection. "The round penetrated through the front wall and exploded, causing the left wall and the roof to collapse."

"We rely on our NCO leadership to keep up with innovative training," said 1st Lt. Erik Moe, Jr., weapons platoon commander. "This field-expedient bunker was an example of the training we were looking for and at the same time showed the SMAW's ability as a 'bunker buster' as it was designed for the Marine Corps infantry.

"We found shrapnel that was as big as 4 x 6 inches stuck in the far side of the bunker from the penetration point. All silhouettes were effected by the shrapnel and we estimated that all three men would have been killed and the weapon definitely taken out."

"Since joining UNITAS, the other gunners and myself have fired the SMAW more times than with our previous units," said Hill. "This is the first time that I've fired the SMAW in a role it was intended for. I know that it will do the job it's supposed to do; take out a bunker."

it wasn't hard and it can be done." "This is something you'd never have a chance to do in the fleet and the younger Marines get a chance to run the show."

"Marines very seldom have training to hit moving targets in the air," said Cpl. Dave A. Hoyle, machine gun section leader. "As to the effectiveness of this exercise, if the flare had been an incoming missile, I think it would have been toast."

Hoyle explained the purpose of the individual riflemen was to fire out into the water as the heavy guns fired upon the flare. This was to simulate a defense against hostile enemy patrol boats that might assault the ship.

"We make our machine guns 'talk' or vary their six to eight round burst from gun to gun to keep the enemy from locating our position. We started out at a sustained rate of fire but one of our 60s went down temporarily so the other 60 went to a rapid fire to take up the slack," he added.

"I think it would be a good idea to have this type of training fleet-wide to train Marines in protecting the ships," said Hoyle. "This would be good as part of the pre-deployment, green-water workup for troops."

As evidenced by Operation Iron Curtain, providing the chance for Marines to participate in diverse and unique training in places many Marines never see can be one way to describe the mission of UNITAS XXIX.

maneuvering excess hose line and standing by in case the firefighter in front becomes overheated or tired.

An additional firefighter manned the turret's water gun from the pumper's front while the driver manned the bumper-mounted gun to complete the teams. The turret firefighter and driver also acted as observers, watching for any danger flare-ups.

Seven fires were fought, allowing each firefighter to perform in a different function. After each fire, the crew was critiqued.

"The practical application in case of a real emergency is good for us," said Dwayne Wimbley, assistant section leader. "If anything does happen, we're ready for it."

"We constantly train," said Staff Sgt. T.G. Benton, staff noncommissioned officer-in-charge of training. "Practical application helps us because we can only learn so much in the classroom."

The crash crew consists of two sections of 13 to 16 Marines. They work shifts one day on, one day off. There are constantly four Marines watching aircraft take-offs and landings. Even after the field is closed, seven crew members remain on duty in the event of an emergency. In the event of a mishap, the whole section would be called back to duty.

Story and photos by
Lance Cpl. E.V. Walsh

Since Nov. 10, 1775, the Marine Corps has been making history. A unit aboard Camp Lejeune has recently added their names to the annals of military history.

The 2nd Air Delivery Platoon, 2nd Landing Support Battalion, 2nd FSSG, recently became the first Marine Corps unit on the East Coast to successfully deliver a Low-Altitude-Parachute-Extraction-System (LAPES) load.

On Sept. 21, 2nd Air Delivery Platoon successfully dropped three 500-gallon fuel bladders weighing a total of 13,000 pounds into extraction zone Holland at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Low-Altitude-Parachute-Extraction-System is a method of delivery which uses ring-slotted extraction parachutes to drop palletted loads from cargo aircraft flying five to 10 feet above the ground.

The sequence of the LAPES drop started with countless hours of tedious rigging before the load was put on the aircraft.

"Rigging the loads is the major part of our job," said Gunnery Sgt. Arturo Ortega, NCOIC of the platoon. "We do a lot more than pack parachutes."

The rigging process involved most of the platoon to properly stabilize the fuel bladders onto the platform.

Once the load is properly rigged onto the platform, the aircraft, usually a C-130 "Hercules," secures it into its cargo area which can carry 37,175 pounds. From that point, the aircraft will take off, and make its way to the extraction zone. For a LAPES drop there is no landing zone, just an extraction zone.

'Rigging the loads is the major part of our job. We do a lot more than pack parachutes.'

Gunnery Sgt. Arturo Ortega

Upon visually spotting the extraction zone, the plane descends at a rapid rate to a shocking altitude of a mere five feet at which point the load is released.

Once released, the load's drogue chutes deploy the extraction chutes, which in turn act as air brakes for the load, bringing it gently down to the ground.

"LAPES is a fairly new method of inserting equipment," said Staff Sgt. Rob Roberson, a section head with the platoon. "It enables the load to be dropped and the aircraft to get in and out of the area quickly."

In a combat situation, speed would be a key factor. The platoon always has that on their minds as their mission is to provide emergency re-supply to Marine air/ground forces.

"What you can't get in by land, you have to air drop," said Ortega. "That's what we're here for. Being able to drop equipment via LAPES makes our job a lot easier."

According to Roberson, in a combat situation, the platoon would be capable of dropping 33 1/2 tons each day for 30 days without themselves being resupplied.

Previous Marine Corps attempts on the East Coast for a successful LAPES drop had been cancelled due to inclement weather, but "Mother Nature" couldn't have been any nicer to the platoon on the day of the LAPES.

"It was perfect," said Ortega. "There was no damage to the load at all. It worked perfectly."

Perfect by their standards would describe it the best. The 16-foot long, four-foot high platform landed flawlessly into the 600-yard extraction zone.

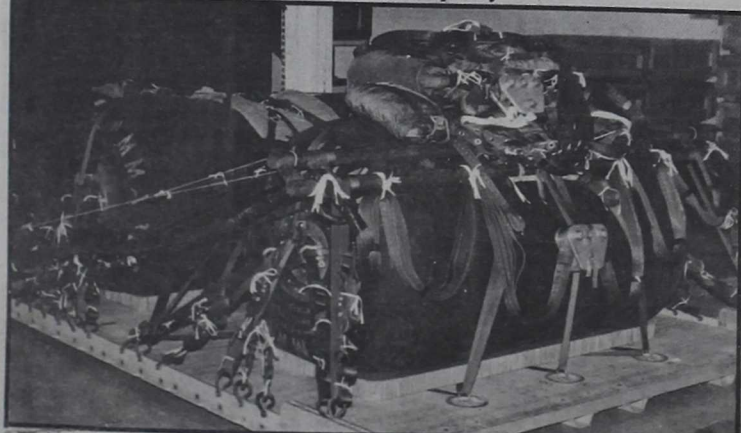

"We're definitely going to try to do more drops like this," said Ortega. "It keeps us proficient in our skills and besides, it's a lot of fun to see your work turn out successfully."

'We're definitely going to try to do more drops like this. It keeps us proficient in our skills and besides, it's a lot of fun to see your work turn out successfully.'

Gunnery Sgt. Arturo Ortega

"It's great to be on the leading edge," said Roberson.

So, just as the C-130 put the LAPES load down, the Marines of 2nd Air Delivery Platoon put their names in the history books as the first East Coast Marine Corps unit to deliver a successful LAPES. Right on target.

Three 500-gallon fuel bladders lay in wait in the 2nd Air Delivery Plt. paraloft before being loaded onto a C-130. The bladders were extracted by the LAPES method.

Base and local courts begin joint processing

Globe Staff Report

Hear ye, hear ye!

There's a new court in session these days at the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, MCB, (Bldg. 66), but it has nothing to do with court-martial or the military justice system.

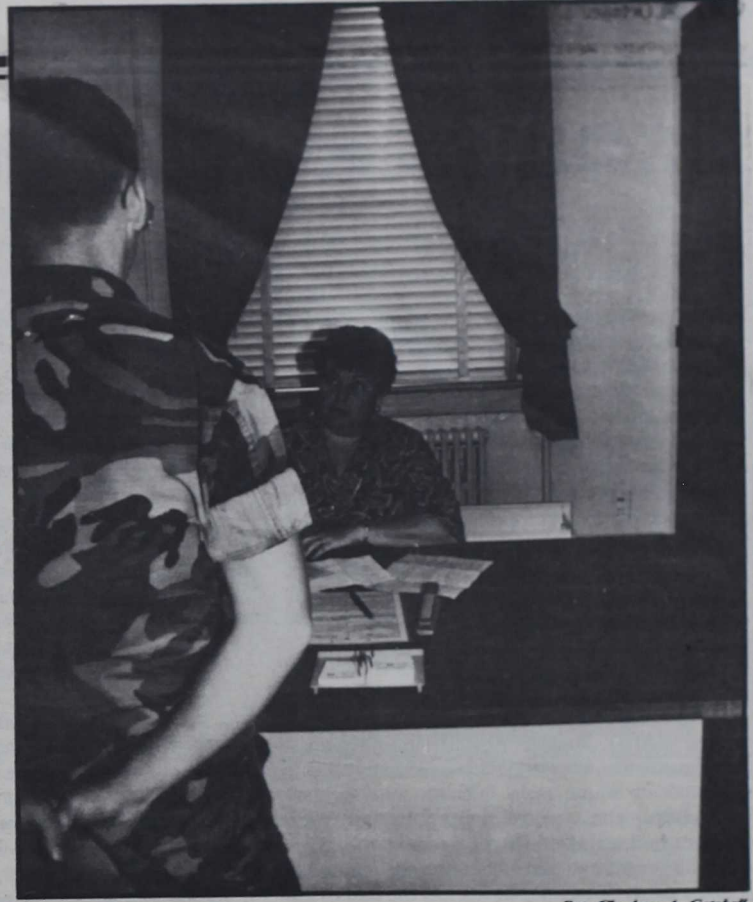

In a program that is being hailed as an outstanding example of cooperation between the local court system and the base, the Honorable Kenneth W. Turner, chief District Court Judge for North Carolina's fourth Judicial District, has authorized local magistrates to conduct judicial proceedings at the Consolidated Civil Process Section on those days when civil process documents such as arrest warrants are served. The Consolidated Civil Process Section is the single point aboard base where military personnel can be arrested by civilian law enforcement agents pursuant to arrest warrants.

In the past, once arrested, military personnel were grouped together and transported downtown to the Onslow County Magistrate's Office for their first appearance. According to the Civil Process Officer, Capt. W. J. Henderson, this often resulted in excessive "down" time for a unit's manpower. Not only did Marines and Sailors spend a good deal of time away from their duties, but usually someone from the unit was dispatched to pick up the arrested personnel upon their release.

Now, once arrested, military personnel appear before the magistrate, who advises them of their rights, and then depending on the nature of the offenses, either "hears" the cases or turns individuals back over to the arresting officer for transport to the County Jail. According to Onslow County Sheriff's Deputy H.O. Purdy, who makes arrests at the base on a regular basis, the magistrate's program has drastically reduced the number of military personnel transported downtown. "If its a minor offense and the individual comes prepared to pay it off or post bond, he can keep himself out of jail," said Deputy Purdy. "Since most of the warrants are for minor bad check passing or similar offenses, and can be disposed of without an appearance in District Court, this new program allows most arrested individuals to settle the matter right here on base by either paying the fine and court costs or posting bond. They can then go right back to their duties," said Henderson.

While the magistrate program at Camp Lejeune is relatively new, officials are optimistic about its future and there

SADD a success at high school

Story and photos by
Lance Cpl. Michael T. Callaghan

Several students gathered in the classroom the morning after a long holiday weekend. As the teacher entered, the conversations ebbed, students took their seats, and when role was taken, only one person didn't answer.

All the students, especially the ones who attended the beer party the night before, knew why the seat was empty.

Billy had many friends, but none had tried to stop him as he left the party after drinking rather heavily. As news of Billy's death spread throughout the school, students wondered if they could have prevented the tragedy that occurred only one block away from his home.

The students at Camp Lejeune Senior High School are finding ways to keep situations like this from happening in their school by participating in a program called "SADD" Students Against Drunk Driving.

The program was started here in 1987 by a group of students whose main interests were in their classmates. They wanted students to have alternatives to drinking on the weekends.

"Our program started with four students and has grown nearly 50 members a year. At the start of this school year our club membership was 100 members," said Ms. Billie G. Summerlin, teacher and advisor at Lejeune High.

The club seeks new members during the first week of each new semester in the months of August and January.

Each new member is required to sign a contract pledging they will not drive after they have been drinking, or get into a car with a drinking driver, get their parents signature on the contract and pay a $1 membership fee.

"We are the largest club in the school," said Summerlin. "We don't condone drinking at all! But, if the students are going to drink, we stress the fact that drinking and driving can be fatal."

"Our club stresses simple facts. If you are going to drink, don't drive! And, if you are driving, don't drink," said Curtis Jones, student and member of SADD.

The student members of SADD have joined together the past two years and sent six people to the state conference, the maximum number of people per school allowed to attend.

The students draw many original ideas for club functions from the conferences, such as BYOB, (Bring Your Own Banana), parties. Each member brings a banana to the party and the club supplies the ice cream and other essential goodies for a banana split.

"We've had a lot more upper classmen involved in our program, but we're trying to get the younger crowd involved too, so our program grows in trend," said Ray Colley, student and membership chairman of the SADD club at Lejeune High.

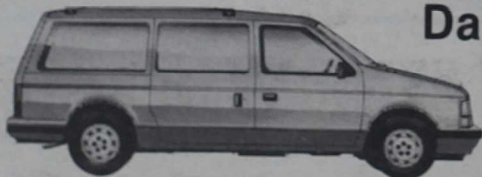

"We're a club that is trying to off-set peer pressure. We know that our classmates want to do the right things and our club can help them realize the danger behind drinking and driving," said Rondarino, student and publicity chairman of SADD at Lejeune High School.

Students at Lejeune High agree that one of the main reasons for the club's success is their advisor, Miss Summerlin.

"She has helped us in every way possible," said Dee Berry, president of the SADD chapter. "We all enjoy working with Miss Summerlin, not only because she can relate very well with us. She's not only a teacher but a true friend as well."

As the SADD chapter at Lejeune High continues to grow strong in leadership and membership, the number of accidents like Billy's are not growing. "It doesn't take courage, guts, or a macho man to drive drunk. It just takes common sense," said the students of the SADD program at Lejeune High School.

Motorists—yield to troops marching

Lance Cpl. Michael T. Callaghan

It's Friday afternoon and working late hasn't made it any easier to get to the bank before it closes.

After battling the traffic and waiting at every red light, only a few minutes remain before the clerk locks the doors and you miss the boat.

Without warning, a massive wall of green, locked in columns and rows, is spotted heading toward the same intersection you are.

Finally, there is a green light, but it doesn't matter anymore. The road guards station themselves, stopping the traffic, so troops can cross the road safely.

Brigadier General Donald R. Gardner, commanding general, MCB, has reinstated the order that vehicles must yield to troops marching along main thoroughfares.

Marine Corps order P5560.J states: "Military formations of marching troops shall have the right-of-way over all traffic except authorized emergency vehicles operating proper warning devices and responding to an emergency call."

The order also emphasizes that when passing any military formation, no person shall operate a motor vehicle in excess of 15 miles per hour. Again, the only exception is authorized emergency vehicles operating proper warning devices and responding to an emergency call." "When it is necessary to march on main roads, troops will march on the right side of the roadway. Traffic guards will be assigned by the person in charge of the formation, and there will be flanks 100 meters in front and behind the formation. It's nothing more than what every Marine has already learned in boot camp," said Gunnery Sgt. George Woodard, noncommissioned officer-in-charge of accident investigation, base provost marshal office.

Marines 'hump' back to French Creek after trudging 20 miles. Marines in formation have the right-of-way over all traffic on base.

However, there are some formations which do not have the right-of-way.

"Physical training formations don't have the right-of-way and must be six feet from the roadway to run along main thoroughfares," the gunny said.

There is also a big safety factor involved in the reinstatement of the base order. "General Gardner is a very safety conscious person, and with the increased emphasis on training, there will be a lot more formation marches throughout Camp Lejeune. With the excessive troop movement, the General is asking the motorists to be more safety conscious as well," Woodard said.

So, it's safe to say the troops have the green light and motorists can take that one to the bank.

the situation to be a lot worse, especially by what we saw in the press when we came down," said Lance Cpl. Peter Szalay.

Instead of arriving in a combat zone, they found themselves in an area with thousands of U.S. citizens and military dependents despite the existing political turmoil. The India Marines quickly learned they were part of a low-intensity conflict, being waged as part of political, economic and informational operation against U.S. interests in the area.

On April 12, just after assuming an area security role in the Arraijan Tank Farm, a vital fuel supply area serving the numerous U.S. bases in the Panama Canal area, the company engaged an estimated force of 30-40 intruders firing and harrasing the India Marines.

The Marines returned fire with sporadic firefights lasting over two hours. The intruders skillfully withdrew, careful to leave few traces of their presence. The following day, Panamanian strong man Gen. Manuel Noriega personally criticized the Marines actions, though denied any involvement by his Panamanian Defense Forces. Headlines around the world discounted the firefight as inexperience on the part of the Marines. The small force of deployed Marines were the target of the ploy.

"When they said we were shooting at palm trees, it was an insult to the company and the Marine Corps," said Lance Cpl. Davis. As other incidents occurred in the area, a pattern by the still unidentified intruders emerged; challenging U.S. forces and immediately withdrawing. "When we were first in the tank farm, they said there was nothing there," Lance Cpl. Davis said. "After a couple weeks they realized there was something out there."

Undaunted, the India Marines realigned their tactics from patrol bases to an overwatch, defensive posture and began digging-in, preparing for the worst. Additionally they increased patrolling as they quickly adapted to the harsh demands of the jungle environment.

When not patrolling, the Marines hardened their positions and waited for nightfall, the time when the intruders traditionally operated. Operating under strict rules of engagement, the India Marines sharpened their skills of detecting the elusive intruders.

Peering through night vision devices the Marines learned the sounds of the jungle. Also, they learned the capabilities of the highly-trained intruders who came to test their skills against the Marines. "Their intent appears to be to gather information and harass the Marine forces," said 1st Lt. Nate Lowrey, 3rd platoon commander.

"They just probed us a lot, trying to see how we react. I was suprised to see how tight these Marines have stayed. They like to patrol," said Staff Sgt. Patrick Woellhof, 2nd platoon sergeant. "They watch us and we watch them. You can't become complacent out there," Woellhof said.

"It's been a learning experience. All the weather and training. I learned that teamwork will get you through anything," said Lance Cpl. John Hunter. "We keep each other going."

"We have all gained a lot of practical experience. You can see a big change in the attitudes of the Marines," said Sgt. Kenneth Shaw, mortar section leader. "We realized all the things we did at Lejeune are for real. There is no doubt in my mind that everyone down here is going to be a better Marine because of this."

"We were excited about coming down. I guess that the last deployment for Marines was Beirut or Grenada. So when somebody goes to do something it is a real experience. You don't get a chance to work with something like this," said Lance Cpl. Szalay.

3/4, await their patrol leader's inspection prior to patrol during security operations in Panama.

Security mission kept Marines three months instead of 2 weeks

Story and photos by
Capt. W.L. Taylor

Marine Forces Panama— On April 6, India Company, 3rd Battalion, 4th Marines left North Carolina on a contingency response to Panama.

Expecting to be gone from two weeks to a month, they returned to Camp Lejeune three months later. Part of a security augmentation force in response to the unstable political situation in Panama, India Co., 3/4, occupied the Arraijan Tank Farm, a vital fuel supply for U.S. military bases in the Panama Canal area. The tank farm is more than 800 acres surrounded by thick jungle. It has a storage capability of more than 2 million barrels of various fuel products stored in subterranean tanks.

After repelling an estimated hostile force of 30-40 intruders the night of April 12, the Marines dug into overwatch positions throughout the tank farm. Enduring the harsh jungle conditions with frequent rains, they lived with few comforts and limited stand-down periods. The India Marines stayed on a heightened alert status while fulfilling their point security mission.

Employing aggressive patrolling techniques, the India Marines operated in a tactical situation which won praise from the many units conducting joint training with them. The tactical savvy in response to the inherent dangers of the mission, especially by the junior Marines, also impressed their leaders.

"Every time you put that gear on and stepped out on the road, something could have happened," said Staff Sgt. John Meyers, 3rd Plt., India Co., 3/4.

"It's been a lot different than training here. Back at Camp Lejeune, they never got too excited about things like digging. But when we got here, they were fighting to get a turn on the shovel. They learned to react. They knew what to do from their training and they did it," Meyers said. "The intruders had a lot of night vision capabilities. They moved around our perimeter a lot. Once in a while they would move into our firebase area.

"I think the intruders got leery of coming in here. When we went into the rainy season, the first night it really rained, they were checking if we were going to be alert or trying to stay dry. When they realized we were alert and waiting, they didn't come back," he said. The Marines have kept their morale high the whole time they were here," said 1st Lt. Nate Lowrey, 3rd platoon commander.

"Patrolling has kept the Marines alert. When intruders appeared, we would send out security patrols. The more the intruders came out, the more the Marines liked it," he said.

"The night we were attacked by sniper rounds, they reacted calmly. They just looked and waited, maintaining their fire discipline. They knew the intruders were trying to get us to reveal our positions. Everyone has learned from being here," Lowrey said. "Around here, you didn't have to tell any of them something twice."

Staff Sgt. T. Nunu leads a patrol during security operations in Panama. India Co., 3/4, deployed to Panama in April and returned in June.

Hungry 'Super Stallions' fed in midair

Story and Photos by
Lance Cpl. Michael T. Callaghan

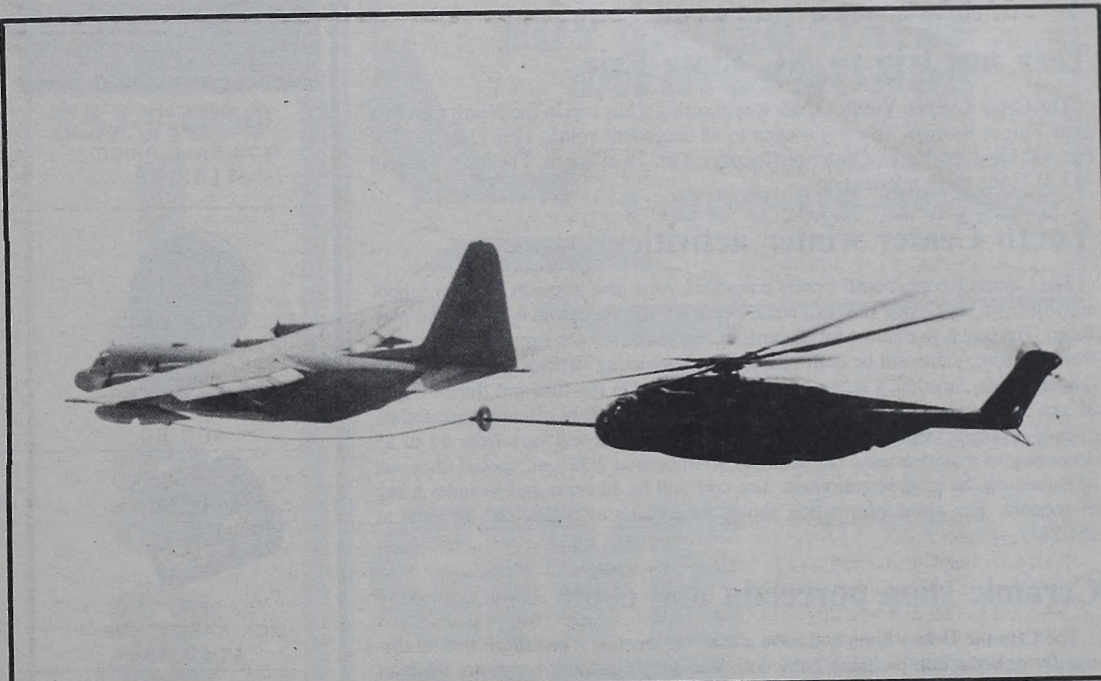

At an altitude of 5,000 feet a tandem CH-53E "Super Stallions," fuel tanks are empty, pull up behind a KC-130. A fueling hose from the tail of the "Hercules", long hose nears the snout of the hovering aircraft. Connection made, the KC-130 replenishes the hungry "Super Stallions," allowing them to continue with their mission.

Refueling helicopters and other fixed-wing aircraft in mid-air is just one of the many jobs the KC-130 "Hercules" aircraft can perform.

A recent refueling operation with the KC-130 and two CH-53E helicopters was part of training designed to maintain pilot proficiency for the CH-53E crews.

"We do the refueling exercises approximately once a month to give the pilots practice," said Maj. Ralph Tice, operations officer, Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron (HMH)-464.

Although it's only a practice exercise, there are still inherent dangers with the operation. The fuel that is being transferred from the KC-130 to the CH-53E helicopter is the biggest concern. "We secure both gunner's doors and the back hatch of the helicopter to keep fuel from being sucked inside if there were any leaks from the cable transferring the fuel," Tice said.

To be refueled, the CH-53E must direct its refueling probe into a basket like refueling device known as a drogue, which is suspended from the KC-130.

the helicopter tries to plug into the refueling cable or it could puncture the cable and send a backlash of fuel towards the 'chopper,'" said Tice.

"The turning rotors and close proximity of the aircraft to each other are some other concerns," the major added.

To avoid these hazards certain safety particular day," said Tice.

"The KC-130 is the only Marine Corps aircraft capable of refueling fixed-wing aircraft and helicopters in flight," said Tice.

The "Super Stallions" mission was two-fold and far from being completed.

After the refueling exercise was complete, the choppers moved on to a second type of training.

Crew members, who also serve as gunners aboard the CH-53E's, riddled targets at the BT-11 range on Piney Island with rounds from the M2 .50 caliber machine gun.

"The gunners have to maintain maximum efficiency with the weapons systems of the aircraft, so they practice mounting, firing and breaking down the .50 cal.," said Tice.

When the firing exercises were complete the choppers flew tactically back to Marine Corps Air Station, New River to prepare for more exercises, maybe not refueling with KC-130s and maybe not live-firing but certainly develop proficiency.

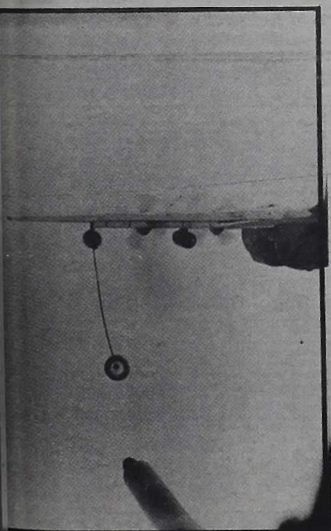

'This time, there was no actual fuel transferred in the operations we did but even with dry plugs, there are safety considerations. The pilot has to watch how fast and hard the helicopter tries to plug into the refueling cable or it could puncture the cable and send a backlash of fuel towards the 'chopper''

Major Ralph Tice

"This time, there was no actual fuel transferred in the operations we did because we had dry plugs, but even with dry plugs there are safety considerations. The pilot has to watch how fast and hard precautions are taken.

"We have a number of safety briefs before we go out on the flight line. Everyone who is going to be on the flight must attend the briefs so they can fly that

The refueling process will begin as soon as the probe from the CH-53E is inserted into the cable leading from the KC-130.

Teen bus trip to NC State Fair

The Camp Lejeune Youth Center is sponsoring a bus trip to the North Carolina State Fair in Raleigh. This trip is open to all dependent youth, ages 13 to 19. The bus will leave the Youth Center on Tuesday, Oct. 18 at 3 p.m. The fee is $6. Call 451-2177 for more information.

Youth Center winter activities

The Camp Lejeune Youth Center has added some new program for after-school activities. Six- to 12-year-olds can come out every Monday from 4-5 p.m. and play Bingo. The cost is five games for 25 cents or five cents for each game. On Thursday, from 5-6 p.m., there will be craft classes on constructing various handmade items taught by Ms. Strother. Classes cost 25 cents each. On the first and third Fridays of each month. Ms. Murphy, the Ceramic Shop manager, will be teaching basic techniques of ceramics from 3:30-5 p.m. Fees for these classes will vary from $3 to $5 depending on materials used. On Saturday afternoons at 2:30 p.m., special films will be shown on the large screen video. The cost will be 50 cents and includes a bag of popcorn. For more information about the center's activities, call Mr. Hill at 451-2177.

Ceramic shop porcelain doll class

The Ceramic Hobby Shop will have a class on creating a beautiful, turn-of-the-century reproduction porcelain baby doll. The doll's head and hands are made of porcelain and when completed, the doll is worth more than $100. The fee for the class is $35 and will be held at the shop on Saturday, Oct. 22 at 1:30 p.m. Class size is limited so sign up early. For more information or to register, call Ms. Murphy 451-2077.

Free motorboat class

One-hour of small craft safety and navigation classes are going to be held at Gottschalk and Courthouse Bay marinas every Saturday at 9 a.m. Motorboats may be checked out to authorized personnel who have attended this class and have qualified as competent operators. Call either marina, Gottschalk 451-7386, Courthouse Bay 451-8307 for more information.

Tickets and Tours Update

For more information on the following trips and tours, call 451-3535.

Upcoming trips:

Atlanta Shopping Spree—the trip will be held Friday through Sunday, Oct. 28-30 and the cost is $89 per person which includes transportation and two nights lodging. Enjoy a tour of Neiman Marcus. Also, shop at one of the best outlet malls in the southeast. Night life too!

Atlantic City, N.J. trip—the trip will be held Dec. 6-8. The cost, $109.95, includes transportation on deluxe motor coach, two nights lodging at Trump Plaza as well as $10 in coins.

Bluegrass '88:

An evening of Bluegrass music will be held at the Market Place, at the corner of Rt. 17 and Western Boulevard on Saturday, Oct. 15 at 7 p.m. ITT has tickets on sale. General admission is $5, 16 and under, $3 for those 60 and over. Stop at the main office in the field house or in the annex at the Main Exchange.

74 attack streets during half-marathon

Story and photos by
Lance Cpl. M.E. McLean

Camp Lejeune Special Services hosted the 5th Annual Half-Marathon Saturday Oct. 1.

One hundred and seventy-four runners participated in the scenic 13.1 mile run around mainside Camp Lejeune. Special Services promoted the mini-marathon as a certified flat and fast course, and they were not kidding. Many of the runners cruised the Lejeune streets with confidence and speed.

To take care of the runners' liquid needs, water and Gator-ade were provided every three miles.

The half-marathon also took care of the runners' needs to practice their running techniques and to compete in preparation for the upcoming Marine Corps Marathon. "The main reason we hold the race is so that athletes that are planning to run in the Marine Corps Marathon can gain confidence and use it as a tool to prepare them," Assistant Director of Special Services Athletics, Paul Nielson said. "We were very pleased at how smoothly everything ran and at the positive response we received from all the runners," he added.

The humidity and the heat didn't stop 2nd Lt. Paul Kline, an aviator from Polk Air Force Base from shaving 3 minutes off his best time and arriving across the finish line first in a time of 1 hour 10 minutes and 25 seconds.

"I really enjoyed myself. This run was hard and fast but had plenty of scenic and interesting sights to view," Kline said.

The overall winners of the Fifth Annual Half-Marathon are as follows:

Overall Winners

- Men
First: 2nd Lt. Paul Kline, USAF-1:10:25
Second: Capt. Mark Clark, USMC — 1:15:43
Third: Kevin McCoy — 1:17:20
- Women
First: WO Vickie McGuire, USMC — 1:32:08
Second: Lindy Burkhart — 1:32:58
Third Place: Lisa Bailey — 1:33:45

Demonstrating his running prowess, 2nd Lt. Paul Kline, U.S. Air Force, strides across the finish line to place first in the Half-Marathon.

Staff Sgt. Timothy Whalen sits back and relaxes as he waits for more runners to cross the finishline. The time on the clock is the winning time for the Half-Marathon.

To these runners, the Half-Marathon was more fun than it was grueling. Many of the runners, however, used this as a training tool for the Marine Corps Marathon.

A Support Bn. defensive lineman is about to crush Headquarters Bn. quarterback Cpl. Karl Hallard late in the second quarter.

Support Bn. edges Hq. Bn. 12-8

Story and photos by
Lance Cpl. M.E. McLean

A screaming 30-yard bomb late in the third quarter gave Support Battalion, MCB, the edge and win over Hq. Bn., MCB by a score of 12-8 in intramural football Monday night, Oct. 3.

Ideal football weather was present at Liversedge Memorial Field, a cool breeze carrying in faint drizzle, brushing across the faces of the padded warriors as they prepared for battle.

Support kicked the pigskin high and long to the awaiting MCB team. Not wasting any time, MCB started the game with a barrage of drives by Lance Cpl. Anthony Brown whose crushing rushes resembled that of a runaway warhorse.

With 2 and 10 to go at Support's 20, MCB's quarterback Cpl. Karl Hallard, having no open receivers, flanked to the right in a aerobic rush to score a touchdown. Lining up again at the three-yard line, a determined MCB offense bowled over the Support defense to score a two point conversion making the score 8-0 at the end of the first quarter.

The second quarter started with several incomplete passes by the Support team.

Sloppy passes and drives on the part of both teams resulted in a rash of turnovers. It wasn't until late in the quarter that any visible action took place.

Support running-back Lance Cpl. Junior

(Action) Jackson covered some turf as he steam rolled over the MCB defense to score a touchdown and bring his team back into the ball game. Attempting a two point conversion, Support drew a blank leaving the score hanging at 8-6.

Seesawing up and down the field, both teams started the second half in what seemed like an exert from "Football Follies." They also spent a lot of time in mass pile-ups of human flesh, plastic and padding. Going to the air, Support quarterback Lance Cpl. Robert Holmes threw a 30-yard bomb to receiver Pfc. C.E. Reynolds, who danced around MCB's safeties and down the sideline into the end zone to score the winning touchdown.

MCB spent the remainder of the game trying to regain some points but were consistently denied any yardage by the Support defense.

"Our defense is a lot better than our offense. You can only hold a good team

Colliding like butting rams, linemen from both teams come together for a mid-play test of strength and dexterity.

"Our defense is a lot better than our offense," MCB lineman Lance Cpl. E. Gilbert exclaimed. Support Bn. edged past Headquarters BN. 12-8.

The players from both teams stand around in amazement that the play ended so quickly. There was a rash of turnovers throughout the game.

Basketball season begins

The Jacksonville Recreation and Parks Department announces the following meetings to organize leagues for the 1988-89 Adult Basketball Season. A women's Open League Oct. 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the Jack Amyette Recreation Center in New River and Men's Open League for adult males 16 and older Oct. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Jack Amyette Recreation Center in New River. To be eligible to play, a participant must meet the respective league requirements and be a city resident or pay the non-city user's fee of $10. For more information call Michael Liquori at 2600 ext. 261, weekdays between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Invitational roadrace slated

Entries are now being accepted for the 5th Annual Paradise Point Bixby-Wunsch Memorial Invitational Road Race Nov. 26. Race Format: distance announced at start time. Between 5-10 miles. Dict your time—no watches can be used. Entry is $7 and is open to all military, DOD employees, dependents. Registration Forms available at Physical Fitness Center, BLDG 200 or Goettge Field House. For more info call Ken Zitz, 353-6622.

New fitness center hours

Effective Monday, Oct. 2, the Fitness Center will be open from 5:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., Mon-Fri for a 90-day trial period. On Dec. 20, permanent change of Fitness Center hours will be considered based on patron usage during the trial period.

Darts tournament scheduled

The 1988 Darts Tournament is slated for Dec. 1, 2 p.m. at the Goettge Memorial Field House. Units are limited to five players. Units may enter any teams as desired. For more information, contact Special Services Athletic Director.

Adult basketball meeting set

There will be an organizational meeting for intramural basketball at noon Oct. 18 at the Goettge Memorial Field House. Leagues begin play Oct. 24. Organizations are permitted one team per league, with a 12-player limit.

Cross country championship

The Marine Corps is putting together a team for the Armed Forces Cross Country Championships at the Presidio in San Francisco, Calif. Jan. 13-15, 1989.

The Marine team will consist of seven men and five women. The men will run a 12-kilometer course and the women a five-kilometer course.

Male Marines should submit results from their best 10K race between Oct. 1, 1987-Oct. 1, 1988 to qualify for the team, while women must send their best 5K or 3-mile race results from the same period.

Applications should be sent per MCO 1710.21C to MWRSPACT (MWD), Quantico, Va.

Basketball officials sought

Basketball officials are needed for the upcoming season at the interservice, junior-high and high-school levels. For more information, contact Les Boone at 347-3580 or Deb McCormack at 326-1512.

Karate classes available

The Jacksonville Recreation and Parks Department is offering fall classes in Karate on Thursdays from 6:30-8 p.m. Classes will run through Nov. 7.

For more information and advance registration, contact Jean Cole at 455-2600, ext. 262.

Sports Trivia

The GLOBE is sponsoring a new weekly contest called 'Sports Trivia.' A prize will be awarded to the first person to call Lance Cpl. M.E. McLean at 451-5655 with the correct answers to all five questions. The winner's name and unit will be printed in the following edition.

The questions are as follows:

What non-mechanical sport attained the highest speed of 185 mph?

Who holds the NBA free-three record?

What team did Hank Aaron play for when he hit his 715th homer?

Who won the 1978 Indy 500?

Who amassed the greatest fortune in sports history?

Good Luck!

Last weeks winner was:

The Globe stumped all trivia buffs. There was no winner last week.

WE PROVIDE MILITARY AID FASTER THAN CONGRESS.

At HFC, we understand military people and their financial needs.

And once you qualify, we're ready to respond. Quickly and positively. With personal loans up to $10,000 in just one day.*

Money for leave. For school. For clearing up debts. In fact, for any good reason.

Transferring? No problem. We're nationwide. With convenient offices near most bases. So if you transfer, the loan transfers with you.

Of course, some qualifications apply — like a $15,000 annual family income.

So if you're in a hurry for money, hurry in to Household Finance.

We're always prepared to help the military.

UNITED NEGRO COLLEGE FUND INC.

DESIGNATE #0876

The United Negro College Fund represents a consortium of 42 predominantly black colleges and universities. All are private and fully-accredited. These UNCF universities provide a quality education for some 45,000 men and women. Doing this job today requires more money than ever before. That's why the UNCF exists: to raise operating money for its member schools so that they can maintain the highest academic standards and prepare their graduates for demanding professions and careers. Won't you lend a hand in this important effort?

Give higher-education a boost. CHOOSE UNCF as your donor-option for the Combined Federal Campaign.
