Hickam Elementary School hosted a Sept. 11 remembrance commemoration assembly and march to honor the victims who perished 13 years ago during the terrorist attacks on the Twin Towers in New York City, the Pentagon and Flight 93 in a field in Pennsylvania.

The event included remarks from Rory Vierra, Hickam Elementary School principal, a performance of the Star Spangled Banner and state song of Hawaii from the Royal Hawaiian Band, and a moment of silence honoring the victims of Sept. 11.

The event continued with a march from Manzelman Circle to Eighth and Ninth Avenues and concluded with a return to Hickam Elementary School.

Hickam Elementary faculty, students, the Royal Hawaiian Band, Radford

High School Band and JROTC color guard, representatives from Mokulele Elementary School, the Federal Fire Department and JBPHH Security Forces participated in the march.

Approximately 700 participants were in attendance at the event and march, including more than 630 students.

"To move forward does not mean we will forget," Vierra said.

"Today we honor the sacrifices of the men and women who protect us every day—the military, the police and fire departments alike. We need continue to remember and honor their sacrifices and to remember what it means to be an American," he said.

As the students and march participants looped back toward Hickam Elementary School to finish the parade, both spectators and participants alike could be overheard sharing their stories of where they were that day and how they will always remember it.

"We can easily remember what happened 13 seconds ago," said Vierra. "We can also recall what happened 13 minutes ago. Thirteen hours ago, we were probably eating dinner with our families. But as time goes on to 13 days, 13 months, our memories start to fade. But 13 years ago, we will never forget."

Military service members based in Hawaii reenlisted during a mass reenlistment ceremony held Sept. 11 under turret one on the Battleship Missouri Memorial on Ford Island.

More than 30 service members took the oath of enlistment on the 13th anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks, paying tribute to the victims as well as commemorating their past and future service.

Navy Rear Adm. Alma Grocki, director for fleet maintenance, commander, U.S. Pacific Fleet, presided over the ceremony and was reenlisting officer. Command Master Chief Patricia Roebuck, Naval Surface Group Middle Pacific, served as master of ceremonies, and Lt. James Ragain, a chaplain attached to Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam, offered an invocation.

"It is amazing to have all the services together—

Army, Navy and Air Force—all in such a historic place and on such a meaningful day as today, Sept. 11," said Grocki. "It is a fantastic feeling to see all the people, these good Americans, come together and be willing to give more years of their lives to the country."

She stressed the importance of today's military, and servicemen and women who chose to continue to defend their nation. Grocki also gave advice to members of armed services who serve and will be serving in the future.

"There are probably things that you don't like about what you do or how things work [in the military], but you need to stay in the system and work in order to make a change," said Grocki. "Look for the opportunities to better your service for yourself and [improve it] for the people who are behind you and, by staying in, by reenlisting, you have a great chance to do that."

Commands, detachments and units, mentors, families and friends attended the ceremony in support of their Sailors, Soldiers and Airmen, covering the entire bow of the battleship.

Upon completing her address to the military members, Grocki raised her right hand and read the oath of enlistment as service members repeated after her in unison.

"I am proud to be able to do this, on this important day, Sept. 11, very honored that I can continue to serve for the next six years," said Chief Fire Controlman Clifford Emerson, stationed aboard the guided-missile cruiser USS Port Royal (CG 73).

"It is a major event, to reenlist on Missouri on anniversary of Sept. 11 attacks, and it brought everyone in the military together," Emerson said.

Chief selectees, stationed aboard USS Port Royal, came to the ceremony in support of their chief and were on hand to congratulate him and commemorate his future service.

USS La Jolla returns from its final deployment

The fast attack submarine USS La Jolla (SSN 701) returned home to Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam Sept. 3 following its final regularly scheduled deployment.

Cmdr. Kevin Roach, the Los Angeles-class submarine's commanding officer, said the crew was outstanding during their deployment to the western Pacific.

"I am honored to have sailed with them. I am inspired by their hard work and dedication they put in day in and day out," said Roach of his crew's performance. "They are motivated about doing the mission and doing what our country needs of us."

During the deployment, La Jolla's crew steamed more than 35,000 nautical miles. Theater security cooperation and friendship mission port visits were conducted in Okinawa and Yokosuka, Japan; Sattahip, Thailand, Singapore; and Sepangar, Malaysia.

"We had the opportunity to do some things with the Malaysian submarine force," said Roach. "There is not a more professional group of men and women I have met in the submarine force."

Master Chief Fire Control Technician Edward Brennan, La Jolla's chief of the boat, said he was proud of his Sailors' performance during the different missions conducted in support of national security.

"The crew maintained the ship at sea and fought through all the ups and downs of being on deployment," said Brennan.

La Jolla was underway for 150 of the 180 days deployed.

"My favorite memory of La Jolla is going to be the two western Pacific deployments and the hundreds of Sailors I have seen grow into submarine force leaders," said Brennan.

Over the course of the deployment, 35 Sailors became submarine-qualified and are now able to wear their submarine warfare insignia, or "dolphins," along with more than 30 Sailors moving up in rank, including three selections for chief petty officer, one for senior chief petty officer, and one master chief petty officer.

La Jolla is scheduled for decommissioning later this year and subsequently will be converted to a moored training ship (MTS) that will be permanently placed at Nuclear Power Training Unit, Charleston, S.C.

Roach said he is proud of the second life La Jolla will have as an MTS.

"Most Los Angeles-class submarines will get decommissioned, and that's part of the life of a ship, but La Jolla will live on as a training ship," said Roach. "Well past 20, 30, maybe 40 years from now, she'll still be doing a mission—training students, and that's a great thing to be part of."

Families and friends showed off signs, banners and lei as the submarine came into view in the harbor. Lisa Cortez was particularly excited about the return of her husband, Machinist's Mate 1st Class Nicholas Cortez, and looking forward to some quality time together with their children, including a new baby who is expected any day.

"I missed him terribly,"

Cmdr. Albert Alarcon relieved Cmdr. David Youtt as commanding officer of USS Columbus (SSN 762) during a change of command ceremony Aug. 26 at the submarine piers at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam.

Youtt expressed how proud he is that he had the opportunity to be in command of the Los Angeles-class fast attack submarine and working with some of the best Sailors in the submarine force.

“Thank you for your professionalism, thank you to the Columbus families for your sacrifice and support, and thank you to the crew of the USS Columbus for your hard work and dedication over the past three years,” said Youtt.

In command for more than two years, Youtt maintained his ship and crew to the highest level of combat readiness. During Youtt’s tenure in command of Columbus, more than 115 new submariners earned their warfare qualifications, or “dolphins,” the team executed more than 550 days at sea, and steamed more than 115,000 nautical miles. Youtt deployed to the western Pacific twice and conducted several missions vital to national security.

The ceremony’s guest speaker, Rear Adm. William Merz, commander of Naval Mine and Anti-Submarine Warfare Command, praised Youtt for an amazing job in command.

“Dave, you have clearly done a superb job,” said Merz.

Merz said he looks forward to seeing him in his next assignment as submarine operations officer for Task Force 74 at Yokosuka, Japan. “I could not imagine a more perfect leader for this incredibly important position,” Merz said.

During the ceremony, Youtt was awarded a Legion of Merit for his successes in command of Columbus from September 2011 to August 2014.

As Alarcon assumed command of Columbus, he thanked Youtt for turning over a capable ship and a highly loyal crew.

“Columbus has sustained superior performance under Capt. Youtt’s leadership, and I am truly honored to share in our ship’s legacy of excellence,” said Alarcon.

Alarcon addressed the crew on their future under his command.

“Our job is to always be ready to answer our nation’s calling,” said Alarcon.

“Somewhere across the ocean, there is another crew waiting for the opportunity to compromise our freedom and our way of life. But little do they know that the bus will always be ready to respond. Gentlemen, we have work to do. Let’s make our country proud,” he added.

USS Columbus is the 51st Los Angeles-class submarine and the 12th improved version of this class, which includes a vertical launch system for Tomahawk cruise missiles and an improved hull design for under-ice operations. The ship completed a post-shipyard availability in June 1994 in Groton, Conn. after initial construction and shakedown operations.

In September 1994, the ship conducted an inter-fleet transfer to Pearl Harbor, Hawaii and joined the U.S. Pacific Fleet Submarine Force.

Gen. Hawk Carlisle, Pacific Air Forces commander, presented the Air Force Aerial Achievement Medal to Capt. Michael Hank and Edward Sutton, 535th Airlift Squadron, for their contributions to Operation Damayan during a medal presentation Sept. 9 at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam.

“I can’t say it enough. Thank you for what you do, and thank you for stepping up for this mission and being absolutely incredible,” Carlisle said. “Your whole crew did an amazing job, and you have a lot to be proud of.”

Hank and Sutton were members of two C-17 Globemaster III crews who flew humanitarian sorties in and out of the Tacloban region of the Philippines, after Typhoon Haiyan devastated the area, killing more than 6,000 people.

Lt. Col. Gregg Johnson, 535th AS commander, presented the Air Force Aerial Achievement Medal to five other crew members at the presentation: Capt. Jason Birdsall, 1st Lt. Gavin Walter, Tech. Sgt. Robert Wyman, Staff Sgt. Dylan Porras, and Senior Airman

“It was amazing today to have our crews get the Aerial Achievement Medal,” Hank said. “It’s the result of the hard work everyone put into completing the mission and helping others.”

Their crews were the first U.S. C-17s to land at Clark Air Base, Philippines, to provide humanitarian relief for the operation.

“What an honor and a humbling experience to be presented the Aerial Achievement Medal,” Sutton said. “Sometimes it just feels like it’s another day in the office, but then you look back and see the impact your work had on the overall mission and on helping others—it’s amazing.”

When the crews arrived, more than 20,000 people were waiting for humanitarian aid and evacuation, many grieving due to missing family members and the devastation in the area.

“The moment that stands out for me was when we had that first load of 674 passengers,” Walter said. “To see these people finally having a little hope on the plane after going days without food and water is something I’ll never forget. We were able to take them to safety and that was an amazing feeling.”

The 674-passenger sortie set a record for the most number of passengers on a single C-17 sortie.

In all, the two crews airlifted more than 2.5 million pounds of life-saving cargo and rescued more than 2,000 people.

Navy Community Service Awards deadline Sept. 18

Navy Region Hawaii Public Affairs

The Navy Community Service Program is currently open for nominations from commands in Navy Region Hawaii.

All Navy commands that have demonstrated significant volunteer participation from July 1, 2013 to June 30, 2014 are invited to submit nomination packages to the geographic region coordinator (GRC) for the awards.

The five flagships to submit separate packages for are: Personal Excellence Partnership Flagship; Health, Fitness and Safety Flagship; Campaign Drug-Free Flagship; Project Good Neighbor Flagship; and Environmental Stewardship Flagship.

Any command submitting nomination packages to three or more of these flagships can also submit a package for the USS Bainbridge (CGN 25) Award for Overall Excellence. A fillable PDF submission data sheet and guidelines are available through the GRC.

Nominations cannot exceed 10 pages in length and must include the commanding officer’s letter of endorsement. The deadline for submissions is Sept. 18 to Lt. j.g. Eric Galassi. For more information and to submit nominations, contact the GRC at eric.galassi@navy.mil or 473-0660.

Commentary

The role of chief: Backbone of our Navy, providing leadership

Rear Adm. Rick Williams

Commander, Navy Region Hawaii and Naval Surface Group Middle Pacific

Last year at around this time, I shared some thoughts in a commentary about the hard work, perseverance and strong commitment it takes to become a chief petty officer.

Some of those thoughts are worth repeating and expanding upon this week as chief-selectees participated in “phase II” and the Legacy Academy.

We saw—and often heard—groups of Sailors running in formation, training and communicating. Chief-selectees also received intense mentoring about leadership and teamwork at the next level.

Rear Adm. Rick Williams

Pearl Harbor is rightly one of the sites for the Legacy Academy, where enlisted leaders learn about the history and heritage of our Navy. Other Legacy Academy sites include aboard USS Constitution in Boston and aboard the USS Midway (CV 41) Museum in San Diego, among others.

Here in Pearl Harbor, Sailors learn about cornerstone history of our Navy. They visit USS Arizona Memorial, which represents the beginning and end of World War II in the Pacific. And they learn aboard Battleship Missouri Memorial. “Mighty Mo” was the location for the signing of the Instruments of Surrender on Sept. 2, 1945.

Through phase II and the Legacy Academy, Sailors turn into leaders and find the passion to make the Navy a career.

To paraphrase President John F. Kennedy, who was a Navy veteran who served in World War II, now is the time Sailors stop thinking about what the Navy can do for them and instead think about what they can do for the Navy.

The good news is our chiefs and selectees want this challenge. It defines them. It is their calling. There is no longer a transactional relationship of bonuses or duty station assignments. It is instead transformational.

This year’s Legacy Academy in Pearl Harbor included participants from MSC Far East in Singapore and the American Embassy in Fiji. Here in Hawaii, Sailors who are selected to become chief petty officers learn about the importance of our mission as part of the rebalance to Asia-Pacific. Perhaps they learn a little about themselves, too.

In the Legacy Academy, chiefs-to-be learn from other chiefs and former enlisted leaders—Navy veterans—about teamwork and placing others over self. They learn that becoming a chief is not the end but another beginning. We all count on our chiefs as the backbone of our Navy.

When I think of the importance of our chiefs, I am reminded of the famous quote by Adm. William “Bull” Halsey, namesake of our guided-missile destroyer USS Halsey (DDG 97) now deployed forward in the western Pacific.

Adm. Halsey once spoke to a journalist about the importance of chief petty officers to the development of his own career and the careers of all Sailors. “You see those battleships sitting there, and you think they float on the water, don’t you? You are wrong,” Halsey said. “They are carried to sea on the backs of those chief petty officers.”

Master Chief Petty Officer of the Navy MCPON Stevens talks about how chiefs are passing on their legacy—not only through Phase I and II and the Legacy Academy but also through CPO 365, Navy Ethos and Navy Core Values as well as CNO’s tenets of warfighting first, operate forward and be ready.

Stevens said, “This is your success story, brought to life by creatively blending ... prominent tradition with a passionate commitment to provide the leadership our Sailors demand and should expect from the chief petty officers’ mess.”

These last few weeks – and especially next week’s pinning ceremony – should be a reminder to the rest of us of the importance of our Navy and the “Goat Locker” where Sailor life is truly defined and where the legacy continues.

Service members, civilians discuss way ahead for education at JVEF meeting

Service members and civilians attended the 13th Joint Venture Education Forum (JVEF) annual meeting held Aug. 28 at the Salvation Army: Ray and Joan Kroc Corps Community Center at Ewa Beach.

The JVEF provides continuous coordination through partnerships and open dialogue in order to promote understanding and implement initiatives toward the needs of military children and families.

They also facilitate educational support for military-connected public schools within the Hawaii public school system.

Air Force Col. Jaimie Pease, director of manpower and personnel at Headquarters Pacific Command (PACOM), provided opening remarks during the event.

“This year our theme is ‘dedicated partners in education,’” Pease said. “It is that dedication that keeps us united in our common goal of providing the best educational opportunities for our children.”

Dennis Drake, JVEF military co-chair, explained how partnerships have increased within the military and education have increased this year.

“For the last three years, communicating messages to our education community and our military have been really challenging,” Drake said.

“We’re very excited that this year the board recreated the strategic communi-

Education representatives from the Army, Marines, Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard, National Guard and students spoke about the volunteer opportunities that service members and their families are offered in Hawaii to help bolster education quality. The forum was also an opportunity to thank those who had already committed time to volunteer work.

“Today we are here to recognize and thank our volunteer honorees,” Pease said. “These are military men and women who devoted their time and effort to mentor, read to our children, and volunteer in numerous ways to make our schools a better place.”

Air Force Maj. Gen. John Dolan, PACOM chief of staff, and Kathryn Matayoshi, Hawaii Superintendent of Education, presented coins to 11 Airmen, 30 Soldiers, 16 Marines, 44 Sailors and six National Guardsmen who distinguished themselves in their volunteer work toward advancing the education quality in Hawaii.

“The real reward lies in the difference you have made in each of these children’s lives,” Pease said. “When you lead by example, young eyes take notice.”

Hawaii CPO selectees take on Kaneohe's FMF Challenge

MC3 Amber Porter

U.S. Pacific Fleet Public Affairs

"Are you a lifter or are you a leaner?"

These were the words Command Master Chief Christopher Aldis, U.S. Marine Corps Forces, Pacific, bellowed at hundreds of eager chief petty officer (CPO) selectees the morning of Aug. 28, setting the tone for the 14th Annual Fleet Marine Force (FMF) Challenge in Kaneohe, Hawaii.

Aldis' words resonated a thought that left the chief selects ponder whether they were a "lifter," a take-charge leader that can impact the Navy and the mess, or a "leaner," unreliable and only looking out for oneself.

Chief selectees are first class petty officers who have been selected for promotion to CPO but not yet actually promoted or "pinned." This challenge is designed to build companionship and teamwork for the chief selectees and to help integrate them into the Chiefs Mess, referred to as the Goat Locker.

The challenge is based on the physical fitness and tactical proficiency FMF corpsmen must have to embed with Marine platoons.

"The FMF Challenge started 14 years ago as a way to show what Sailors training with the Marine Corps experience," said Senior Chief Hospital Corpsman Lorenzo Branch, a coordinator of the FMF Challenge.

"Corpsmen stationed here are passed along the heritage of hosting and creating this event. We take a lot of pride in what we do and we want the selectees to feel proud of themselves after the experience."

Each team shouted marching commands and hoisted its guidon as the

U.S. Navy photos by MC1 Amanda Dunford

Chief petty officer selectees participate in team-building events during the Fleet Marine Force Challenge on Marine Corps Base Hawaii Kaneohe Bay.

Sailors maneuvered themselves on Landing Zone Boondocker's Field for warm-ups before a 3.5-mile run.

"This is an island-wide event," said Branch. "Other commands have different events but the FMF Challenge is specific to Kaneohe Bay. The course is designed as a teambuilding experience. One of the primary focuses is for the selectees to learn how to work through problems."

An average of 220 Sailors stationed in Hawaii are tested on the course each year, competing in events such as an obstacle course, an endurance course, tug-of-war, and a memory portion.

Eleven teams competed this year with the ultimate goal of conquering the obstacles in the shortest time, relying on strategy and trusting their teammates to finish as a group.

"Teamwork is imperative to the completion of the course, enabling individuals to come together as a unit," said Command Master Chief William Reed, Patrol and Reconnaissance Wing 2.

"Everyone has weaknesses and strengths, and just like the obstacle course, you have to make it over obstacles in your job and obstacles in your life. The selectees have to be able to recognize their weaknesses and then capitalize on everyone's strengths so everyone finishes together."

"You test yourself while providing support to your teammates at the same time," said Chief (select) Legalman Erica Keels, Defense Service Office Pacific. "Before today, we discussed each other's strengths and weaknesses and made a plan on how we would compensate or who would be better for certain events."

Chief selectees participate in coordinated events like the FMF Challenge during the CPO 365 Phase II portion that tests them physically and mentally, urging them to apply what they learned in Phase I as a first class petty officer (FCPO).

"Phase I and II of CPO 365 challenges the FCPOs and, after the CPO selection results are published, continues to challenge the chief selects both physically and intellectually and teaches them to develop their teamwork ability to confront any task that they are presented with," said Reed. "Events like this challenge the CPO selectees in the same way that camaraderie team events during Phase I challenge all FCPOs."

"I think this helped bond us together," said Chief (select) Intelligence Specialist Ryan George, a member of the Navy Information Operations Command/U.S. Pacific Command winning team.

"It feels good to win, but more importantly, it was a good opportunity to get out here and meet other chiefs from different commands. It was less about competition and more about networking and working together and having fun. I didn't want to let my teammates down and that helped with staying strong and doing well."

As the challenge courses came to a close and lunch was served, chief selectees carried their CPO charge books and sat with chiefs to receive written entries and words of wisdom. With each animated story, little-by-little, the inclusion of the chief selectees into the Chiefs Mess developed.

"Events like these challenges build a sense of camaraderie, unity and teamwork that nothing else we do in the Navy has done," said Chief Naval Aircrewman (Mechanical) Matthew Meadows, U.S. Pacific Fleet's 2014 Sailor of the Year, who was meritoriously promoted to E-7 in May.

"The true idea of leadership is not sitting behind a desk and listening to someone speak. Leadership, in my opinion, is going out on the deck plates, or field in this case, and helping each other over obstacles like you would in real life. The FMF Challenge is unlike any other leadership course I've seen in my career."

For the final event of the day, the tug-of-war, chief selectees showcased friendly competitive teamwork, pulling the line to enthusiastic and rhythmic shouts of "heave ... heave ... heave." Losing teams were inevitably pulled into a puddle of muddy water. But those Sailors didn't seem to care, and, in fact, seemed to embrace the brief moment to splash mud on their fellow chief selectees.

15th Wing hosts Caring for People Forum at joint base

The child development centers (CDC) were the focus of the Caring for People Forum that took place Aug. 28 at the Earhart Community Center at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam (JBPHH).

During the forum, members of the community had an opportunity to voice their opinions and talk directly to CDC leadership and subject matter experts about issues which directly impact their families.

Dr. Kimberly Moore, child and youth programs (CYP) regional manager, said the goal of the forum was to make sure parents are ultimately happy with the quality of service their children receive from the CYP.

“Our mission is to make sure your children are safe so you can focus on and do your mission. That's why we're here,” Moore said.

“We're here to make sure parents have peace of mind when they go to work. If they are worried about their children or what's going on at the CDC or with their family, they won't be able to put 110 percent of themselves into their job,” she said.

Now that the forum is over, the top six issues will be channeled up through the CDC, 15th Wing and JBPHH leadership for resolution.

“I hope attendees walked away from the forum today with questions answered and myths dispelled and that our staff walked away with new ideas for programs and services,” Moore said.

She explained that larger issues brought up during the discussions could result in policy changes, Air Force instruction changes or even Congressional consideration, hearings and new legislation.

“I think that this forum is so helpful and different than other grievance processes because of its structure,” she said.

“It's a guided discussion, has tangible results, and a positive focus which really allows us to look at what people really need and want.”

According to Moore, another benefit of the CFP Forum is that it could give parents answers to questions they may not have known they had.

“This is a chance for us to educate our parents,” she said. “Someone may ask a personal question that gives someone else information also. The forum allows for a behind the scenes look at the program which may not be apparent to some people when they're just dropping off and picking up their children.”

Tiffany Dailey, one of the forum attendees, said she found having the CDC leadership present for the discussion to be particularly beneficial.

“People were actually here to listen to our issues and ask our opinion,” she said. “It was different than just voicing our concerns into a dead end process because people who work at the CDC were actually here to hear them and answer questions ... [it] makes me feel like my concerns matter.”

NIOC to host CPO Pride Day today

Navy Region Hawaii Public Affairs

“Navy Chief, Navy Pride!” will echo across Pier Foxtrot-5, where the Battleship Missouri Memorial is berthed, as hundreds of chief petty officers (CPOs) and newly selected Navy chiefs gather today from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. to participate in the second annual CPO Pride Day.

The event, hosted by Navy Information Operations Command (NIOC) Hawaii, is expected to include participation from seven CPO messes and approximately 300 to 500 active duty and retired chiefs in attendance.

CPO Pride Day is a time-honored tradition that will assemble chief selectees from across the island and give them the opportunity to showcase the skills they've learned during their Navy and chiefs' heritage training. Chiefs and selectees from across the region will come together to build camaraderie, share knowledge, and inspire one another to share the CPO's legacy and Navy's heritage with the world.

“It's an honor to bring back the Hawaii Chief Petty Officers' Pride Day for a second year in a row,” said Toby Ruiz, NIOC Hawaii command master chief.

“While our goal for this event is for chief selectees to show off what they've learned in their Navy and chiefs' heritage training during their CPO 365 seasons, it's also an opportunity for chiefs and selectees to assemble and come together to build camaraderie, share ideas with and motivate each other, which are some of the true strengths of the CPO mess,” Ruiz said.

He added, “It's also very important to remember that all chiefs remain the keepers of our CPO legacy and our Navy's heritage, so the Hawaii CPO Pride Day allows us the chance to demonstrate that for all, and where better a place to do that than at the USS Missouri Memorial on Ford Island.”

The day's exercises will include a pride drill competition, which calls for the demonstration of spirit, pride, skill and creativity through marching and cadence. Modern maneuvers not specifically listed in the official drill manual are permitted during this competition, allowing naval humor and antics to shine through in these performances.

An additional competition during the day is centered on the guidon, which is a military standard flag used as a form of mess identification. Each group of CPO selectees carries a guidon that they have crafted to represent themselves and their respective chief messes. One CPO selectee is required to explain the significance of their guidon to a panel of judges.

JBPHH ‘Feds Feed Families’ campaign collects food for local community

Hickam Public Affairs

The ‘Feds Feed Families’ program has wrapped up its two-month campaign throughout the islands of Hawaii.

Feds Feed Families is a charitable campaign led by the United States Department of Agriculture that collects canned goods and nonperishable food items for those in need. The campaign began in June and ran through the end of August.

Since the campaign be-

gan in 2009, military service members and federal workers have donated and collected 24.1 million pounds of food and other non-perishable items to support families across America. Nearly 9 million pounds of food were collected in 2014 alone.

Navy Chief Religious Program Specialist (SW/AW) Kimberly Bell was the coordinator for Feds Feed Families at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam and said military bases stationed throughout the islands of Hawaii donated approximately 30,000 pounds.

“We are very fortunate,” she said. “I am, along with many other servicemembers, are lucky enough to have a steady income. However, who am I to not share what I can and help those less fortunate than me? I would hope that if I were in the same situation as some of these individuals, there would be people willing to do the same thing.”

Bell said one of the main goals of the program was to help struggling people and families in the local community. Hawaii has more than 6,000 homeless individuals, according to a 2013 U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development study.

“We didn’t want to just donate and provide to service members,” she said. “A Sailor, Airman, Marine, Soldier or Coast Guardsman usually have plenty of options and plenty of people looking out for them. There are various assistance programs within the military to help a service member out. In the civilian world, unfortunately, it is not the same scenario. Many people go to bed every night with their stomachs growling, and you see it here a lot in Hawaii.”

Although this is not a permanent solution to the issues of homelessness and hunger, Bell said she hopes the program will leave a few more stomachs full and a few more people happy.

Although the Feds Feed Families campaign is over, the Hawaii Food Bank accepts donations all year. For more information, visit www.hawaiiifoodbank.org. The campaign is slated to return next year in June.

missile destroyer USS Michael Murphy (DDG 112), shared Emerson’s excitement and pride.

White was stationed aboard the guided missile destroyer USS Gonzalez (DDG 66) in Portsmouth, England when the attacks on America occurred, and his ship was almost immediately recalled for support. Today he wanted to commemorate the anniversary of Sept. 11 with his continued service to the nation.

“It’s chilling; it really gets you down deep inside to stand on Missouri today. I was really happy that Rear Adm. Grocki was able to do this ceremony. It’s not very common to have an admiral to reenlist you,” said White.

“The falling of the towers, the attacks on the Pentagon, and fallen commercial aircraft—it is something that is going to stay with me for the rest of my life. And through the memories of my family, fallen shipmates and comrades throughout the armed forces who were affected by those events is what made me want to reenlist on this day and will take me to my 20-year mark,” White said.

Upon completion of the ceremony, members of the armed forces were invited to raise their flags aboard the Missouri to commemorate their service.

Laura Dillard flew from Oklahoma to surprise her son, Chief Electronics Technician Shaun Blouin.

“His service is unbelievable. No mother has been more proud of her son than I am for him,” said Dillard, choking back tears. “Going a year without seeing him has been rough. He is a rock star.”

Surprised by his mom and surrounded by family, Blouin said he is looking forward to spending time with them in Hawaii before La Jolla leaves permanently.

USS La Jolla is named for La Jolla, Calif. and is the first warship named after the township. Commissioned Oct. 24, 1981, La Jolla is the 14th ship of the Los Angeles-class, fast attack submarines. The submarine is 360-feet long, displaces 6,900 tons, and can be armed with sophisticated Mark-48 ADCAP anti-submarine torpedoes and Tomahawk guided cruise missiles.

Halsey warriors lead healthy lifestyles in ‘Sail into Shape’ challenge

PHILIPPINE SEA — Maintaining a physically fit lifestyle for Sailors aboard a deployed U.S. Navy warship can be challenging. For Sailors aboard the Arleigh Burke-class, guided-missile destroyer USS Halsey (DDG 97), participation in the command-wide “Sail into Shape” weight management challenge program encourages wholesome eating, healthy lifestyle choices and solid exercising habits.

The more than 70 Sailors participating in the weight loss challenge choose teams, and an assistant command fitness leader serves as their coach to assist them in safely meeting weight loss goals. During the competition, participants are encouraged to track caloric intake, log their workouts, and record their workout progress. The challenge lasts a total of 90 days with weigh-ins conducted every two weeks.

“My goal as a coach is to make fitness a lifestyle, not just a 90-day challenge,” said Operations Specialist 1st Class Darius Mitchell.

“I will show them the science behind burning fat while, at the same time, showing them how to eat healthy and make good food decisions. Teams should be having fun with fitness,” he said.

The program is designed for recreation and enjoyment but also plays an important role in helping maintain Navy physical fitness standards to ensure the command’s overall mission readiness.

Chief Operations Specialist Marcus Allen, Halsey’s command fitness leader, said focusing and understanding healthy eating habits is the key to success in maintaining a fit and active life.

“We’re hoping to change lifestyles, build self-confidence, and give people healthier habits they can use for the rest of their lives,” said Allen. “Keeping good health is important in performing your job and carrying out your duties as a Sailor.”

The fitness teams have come up with motivating and interesting ways to stay in shape. From running laps around Halsey’s gun deck to group exercises on the aft missile deck, Halsey Sailors are determined to keep a fit and active routine during deployment.

“My personal goal is to lose 23 pounds and being part of a team really builds the camaraderie and motivation I need to lose weight,” said Yeoman 1st Class Margaret Royal, who has already lost six pounds.

“I can’t wait to do our next weigh-ins. Overall, this program encourages teamwork and based on the 17 teams we have, it’s awesome that the command is coming together to achieve their goals,” Royal added.

On Nov. 10, the competition ends, and closing ceremonies will be held at which time winners will be announced. The winning team will receive special liberty and fitness equipment prizes, courtesy of the ship’s morale, welfare and recreation program.

Cmdr. Linda Seymour, Halsey’s commanding officer, said the “Sail into Shape” program is a great morale booster and motivator for Sailors during deployment.

“Achieving physical fitness helps us maintain our mental and spiritual fitness, making us sharper warfighters,” said Seymour. “I am amazed at the enthusiasm for the competition and inspired by the innovative workouts our teams do at sea every day to stay fit to fight.”

Halsey is deployed in the U.S. 7th Fleet area of operations, supporting security and stability in the Indo-Asia-Pacific region.

JPAC to host national POW/MIA Recognition Day ceremony Sept. 19

Joint POW/MIA Accounting Command

The Joint POW/MIA Accounting Command will host a commemoration of National POW/MIA Recognition Day beginning at 10 a.m. Sept. 19 at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific (Punchbowl).

The ceremony is free and open to the public. Appropriate attire for the event is military class B or service equivalent, or civilian casual or aloha wear.

The keynote speaker, former Navy Captain (Ret.) James Hickerson, was a prisoner of war during the Vietnam War. A member of the first A-7 squadron to go into combat, Hickerson was the first A-7 pilot to be shot down on Dec. 22, 1967. After enduring five years of torture and deprivation, he was ultimately released as part of Operation Homecoming in 1973.

Other ceremony highlights will include wreath presentations by veterans’ groups and a reading of former missing in action service members whose remains were identified in the last year. Organizations are welcome to participate in the floral presentations by laying a wreath or flowers.

The ashes of Chief Radioman John Kelley Click, a survivor of the Dec. 7, 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor, were scattered in the waters near the USS Utah Memorial on Ford Island during a ceremony held Sept. 11.

Among those in attendance were Click's daughter, Peggy, her family, and Cmdr. Timothy Wilkie, commanding officer, Afloat Training Group (ATG) Middle Pacific (MIDPAC). Chaplain Lt. Daniel Clark, Pearl Harbor Memorial Chapel, presided over the services. Also in attendance were more than 30 Navy chiefs and chief selectees.

"Today would have been John's birthday," said Jim Taylor, Pearl Harbor survivor liaison, who spoke at the event. "He was born Sept. 11, 1921 in Farlee, Texas. After his schooling, he joined the Navy June 11 of 1940 and became a member of the West Virginia's crew in December of that year. One year later, his life would change forever."

On the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, Click was serving as a radio operator aboard the West Virginia. The radio room was below the third deck, on the left side of the ship. During the attack, torpedoes struck the West Virginia both in front of him and behind him. Soon water was flooding the ship from all angles. Click made for the main deck.

"He managed to walk to the back of the ship by holding on to railings," said Taylor. "He was a very scared young man! Amongst other things, he was worried about the magazine where all the ammunition was stored possibly blowing up. To make matters worse, he had to dodge bullets from the incoming planes strafing them with their machine guns."

Eventually the order was given to abandon ship, and Click dove into the harbor, swimming away from the burning oil. A motorboat rescued him.

Throughout the rest of World War II, Click served on destroyers. He was honorably discharged in 1946, leaving the Navy as a chief petty officer.

Upon re-entering civilian life, Click worked for the U.S. Postal Service before transferring to the Federal Aviation Administration. He got married, and he and his wife Viola were together for more than 60 years. Click retired in 1976 and moved to Arizona in 1996, where he and Viola lived for the rest of his life.

He passed away in May of this year.

"John Click was an American hero," said Taylor. "He never wavered in faith or spirit, not on the morning of Dec. 7, nor in the remaining years to come. It is this type of bravery and selflessness all our Pearl Harbor survivors share. His story describes very humbly the dedication of his generation."

Peggy Termer described her father as a gentle man and a caring father. She was very pleased by the ceremony held in his honor.

"I can't even think of the words," she said. "My dad deserved this."

Peggy Termer said the ceremony honoring her father was "excellent."

Asheville stops point-after for win as time expires

USS Asheville (SSN 758) used a torrid pass rush to turn back USS Hopper (DDG 70) Spartans and then preserve a 7-6 victory on Sept. 13 in an Afloat Division flag football season-opening game at Ward Field, Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam.

After giving up a touchdown in the final minute of play, the Asheville defense kept Hopper from going ahead by sacking quarterback Sonar Technician (Surface) 3rd Class Austin Conwell on the two-point attempt.

The Asheville starts off the season at 1-0, while the Spartans will have to wait for week two to go after their first win.

“We’ll be a force throughout the season,” promised Asheville QB Electrician’s Mate 2nd Class Michael Fajardo. “As long as we get guys to the games, practice enough and work hard we’ll be a force to be reckoned with.”

In the first series of the game, the Asheville defense gave the Spartans a glimpse of what was to come by forcing Hopper to give up the ball at the Asheville 26-yard line.

With the ball in his hands, Fajardo went out on a keeper and rushed out to the 40-yard line on Asheville’s first play from scrimmage.

Then after completing two passes to put the football on the Spartans’ 20, Fajardo got back and scrambled to the nine before taking it to the house on the very next play to give Asheville a 6-0 lead.

Asheville converted their point after touchdown to take a 7-0 advantage early in the first half.

Hopper was forced to punt the football away on their next set of downs to give the ball back to Asheville at their own 23.

An incomplete pass, followed by a sack and false-start penalty, put the ball back to the 14, but Fajardo connected on an over-the-top-pass to Sonar Technician (Submarine) Seaman Aaron Murphy for a long gainer that set the Asheville up at the Spartans’ 10-yard line.

However, on the very next play, Hopper came up with a huge stop when Lt. j.g. Dustin Reid intercepted the ball to stop the threat.

Hopper was able to move the ball from their own 20 out to the Asheville 30, but a sack of Conwell ended the drive and sent the teams into halftime with Asheville clinging to a 7-0 advantage.

Hopper got the ball to start off the second half, but turned the ball over to give Asheville good field position at the Spartans’ 20-yard line.

Fajardo completed a pass to Murphy on the first play for a first-and-goal on the Hopper one-yard line, but for the second time in the game, Asheville couldn’t convert on their red-zone opportunity and were forced to turn the ball over on downs.

“There is no preseason for us, so we can’t really work out the kinks,” Fajardo explained about the red zone failures. “I believe we’ll be there once we work out the edges. We’ll be fine.”

After Hopper was stopped on the Asheville eight-yard line with only 1:45 remaining on the clock, it appeared that the game was all but done.

Instead, Reid came up with his second pick of the game to give Hopper one more chance from the Asheville 21.

Three plays later, Conwell found receiver Ship’s Serviceman 2nd Class Montrell Thomas in the right corner of the end zone for a touchdown.

The Spartans went for the win by going for the two-point conversion, but Conwell couldn’t get the pass off before being sacked in the backfield to end the game.

“They (Asheville defense) answered the call,” Fajardo said. “They got us the win.”

Asheville defensive lineman Machinist’s Mate 1st Class Timothy Hill said that right from the start, the team’s big “D” wanted to press the action.

“Our plan was to make the quarterback throw the ball quick, so the linebackers could do their job, our safeties can spy the quarterback and to get as many sacks as we can,” Hill said. “If they ran the ball, we were all right with that. We didn’t want anything deep.”

While the defense seems to be on track, Fajardo admitted that the offense is a bit behind.

Once the offense catches up with the defense, Fajardo said that they would be tough to beat.

“We’re definitely looking to win,” he said. “We take it one game at a time. Playoffs are online, but the next game is our next challenge.”

MiCare: bridging the gap between military patients and providers

Capt. Louis Edwards

15th Medical Group

The 15th Medical Group (MGD) at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam has been using MiCare, the military’s online confidential secure messaging service, for nearly a year and patients are responding positively.

In fact, 15th MDG patients are sending messages to their health care team at a higher rate than any other medical facility in the Pacific.

MiCare has been shown to significantly reduce the number of phone calls between patients and providers, increase patient satisfaction and save time for the medical office staff and the patient, so the clinic aims to continue to enroll as many patients as possible into MiCare.

Secure messaging has become a primary form of communication between patients and their healthcare teams.

In MiCare, patients can request appointments with their healthcare providers, get test results, request prescription refills or ask their healthcare team non-urgent medical questions via a secure electronic message that bypasses phone-trees, voicemail and having to play phone tag.

The goal for the clinic is to respond to each patient message as quickly as possible. Messages are flagged for immediate response if not answered within 72 hours.

Those who have not already registered can sign up for MiCare. Patients can visit the 15th MDG to initiate the face-to-face registration process at any clinic front desk. Patients will need to show their military identification card and provide basic information such as name, social security number, birthday and email address.

An email will be sent to finish enrollment and confidential messaging may begin. As a note, patients should check their junk mail box as well. The invite email may be filtered there.

Hawaii team reaches finals of military world cup

Randy Dela Cruz

Sports Editor, Ho'okele

Described as the military's version of the World Cup, the 10th annual Defender's Cup Military Soccer Tournament was held over the Labor Day weekend in San Antonio, Texas with a slightly different look from previous competitions.

For the first time since its inaugural event, a squad from Hawaii participated in the tournament.

While the caliber of local soccer may have been a question mark to the 37 other teams competing in the tourney, the Armed Forces Hawaii Futbol Club (AFHFC) left with an emphatic answer once it was over.

Led by team captains All-Navy soccer players Electrician's Mate 1st Class Luis Zamora, USS Chafee (DDG 90), and Information Systems Technician 1st Class Jay Reynard, Naval Computer and Telecommunications Area Master Station Pacific (NCTAMS PAC), the AFHFC easily made it to the knockout rounds as the No. 8 seed and went on to square off for the tournament's championship title against the Fort Irwin soccer team.

Although team Hawaii dropped a heartbreaking 1-0 game against the team from California, AFHFC left no doubt about the level of soccer played throughout the military bases on the islands.

"I don't think people realized how many skillful players are here in Hawaii," Zamora said. "We definitely made an impression up there."

After getting past the team's first game with a win, Zamora said that AFHFC entered a much tougher part of the schedule with multiple matches over the next couple of days.

Once AFHFC made it out of the round-robin brackets, Zamora said that the team was ready to rumble.

"There was 10 groups total with four teams in each," said Zamora about the round-robin schedule. "We ended up qualifying number eight out of the 38 teams. From there, we moved on to the knockout round, which was single-game eliminations, and we just took off from there."

Despite having only a limited time to trim the tryouts from 100 down to 18 players and then gain familiarity with team members from Joint Base Hawaii Pearl Harbor-Hickam, Schofield Barracks, Marine Corps Base Hawaii and United States Coast Guard Base Honolulu, Zamora said he went up to San Antonio feeling confident.

"The work that we put in here, practices twice a week, and then just getting that cohesion with the players, I think that helped out a lot. Even though we've been only playing since August, it looked like we've been playing (together) for a while. We were well structured and we were blowing teams out of the water."

Senior Airman Jeremy Reding, 93rd Intelligence Squadron, led all team Hawaii scorers with seven goals at the tournament.

Reding, who has played in the tournament before, said that he also felt AFHFC would do well after departing Hawaii and heading off to Texas.

"I didn't dream of a second-place finish, but I knew we would do well," he admitted. "Everyone had a great background in the game. There was a whole lot of experience from all of the players that we had. Add some good training beforehand and our team jelled really quickly."

Reding said that after coming so close this year, he couldn't wait to go back with the same bunch of guys in 2015.

Currently, AFHFC is playing in the Major Island Soccer Organization season and plans for another attempt at the Defender's Cup next year.

"This is definitely one of the top experiences," he stated. "To be able to have the opportunity to represent the military and the island of Oahu and go play the game we love is definitely up there."

Zamora said that to place second among the nation's top military soccer teams is a huge boost to the team's confidence.

The hardest thing that the team now faces is that they won't be able to sneak up on the other squads the next time around.

"We went up and represented Hawaii very well, but the hardest thing is going to be maintaining that," he noted. "We're definitely looking forward to continuing the tradition."

Navy Suicide Prevention Month: 'Every Sailor, Every Day'

Rear Adm. Rick Snyder

Director, 21st Century Sailor Office

September is Navy Suicide Prevention Month and the launch pad for year-long engagement across the Navy, ultimately fostering sustainable efforts that support open communication, resilience and seeking help as a sign of strength. We're all in this together.

Suicide affects everyone, and suicide prevention is an all hands effort—all of the time. We can make a difference through our everyday actions. In September, we join the global community to highlight suicide prevention.

Last September, we focused on what we can do as communities to support and help our shipmates. This year, we'll zero in on what we can do as individuals, on a daily basis, to continue that support.

The 2014 Navy Suicide Prevention Month theme is "Every Sailor, Every Day."

We are encouraging every member of our Navy team, from shipmates, to leaders, to civilian employees, to family and friends, to set a positive example, reach out and engage with one another.

Building resilience and preventing suicide require all of us to actively communicate with each other, and not just when we think someone is in immediate danger.

Everyday actions, that foster trust and build meaningful connections, can start or continue conversations so we can more effectively intervene when we see signs of a shipmate in distress. By actively communicating and staying engaged, we may be more likely to notice small signs of distress in our shipmates and intervene early, before a crisis occurs.

I challenge you to be there for "Every Sailor, Every Day," through meaningful, intentional actions.

Take time to ask others how they are doing—and actively listen. As Vice Adm. Nathan, Navy Surgeon General, reminds us, we must especially connect with those who are transitioning from one job to another, experiencing career setbacks or some sort of loss, or going through relationship troubles. Start a dialogue to support each other during stressful times. Share strategies to navigate challenges, including speaking up and seeking help. We are a Navy team, and none of us are ever alone.

Another way you can support "Every Sailor, Every Day" is by pledging to ACT (Ask, Care, Treat). It's a voluntary commitment to yourself and others, and one of the many ways we can be there for every Sailor, every day, by every Sailor, every day. Visit <http://ow.ly/BFdYi> to "Pledge to ACT" today, and urge your shipmates to do the same.

I encourage commands to highlight Suicide Prevention Month in their own way. Talk about bystander intervention, peer support and the many ways each of us can lead by example when it comes to physical and psychological health, showing that it's okay to speak up when you're down.

Resources will be released on www.suicide.navy.mil throughout the month to support your efforts. Each day, we have an opportunity to make a difference—and those opportunities may end up saving lives.

For more information and various resources for Navy Suicide Prevention Month, visit www.suicide.navy.mil.

If you or someone you know is in immediate danger, call 911. If you or someone you know is in crisis, help is just a call or click away. Call the Military Crisis Line at 1-800-273-TALK (option 1) or visit www.vetcranscrisisline.net.

Sailor sets his sights on gold at Wounded Warrior Games

SrA Christopher Stoltz

Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam Public Affairs

Roel Espino is a hospital corpsman (HM2) at the Directorate for health services, located at Naval Health Clinic Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay. He is also a wounded warrior athlete.

Espino, along with approximately 200 other athletes, are slated to participate in the Fifth Annual Wounded Warrior Games, which will be held Sept. 28 through Oct. 4 in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Although Espino usually assists and provides care to patients during his work as a hospital corpsman, he found himself on the receiving end of care after an incident in March that left him dealing with a traumatic brain injury.

"I suffered from a TBI in March of 2014. While I look pretty normal on the outside, I still suffer from memory loss, difficulty writing, motor issues and a few other ailments," Espino said.

Espino said he started with the Navy's wounded warrior program in March 2014 following his injury. This September will be the first time he will participate in the Wounded Warrior Games.

"I tried out at the Navy trials in Virginia Beach in May of 2014," he said. "While there, I competed against 60 of the Navy's wounded warriors in all the events I could, from track and field to wheelchair basketball."

Track and field, along with wheelchair basketball, proved to not be Espino's destiny, as he was not selected for either of those events. However, he demonstrated skill and was selected to compete in the prone rifle shooting and compound archery events.

"When the trials for the team finished in May, I didn't think I would get selected," said Espino. "The next thing you know, my name is on the roster, and I'm hopping all over the country attending training camps and preparing with my teammates. I don't think I have prepared more for anything in life than to bring my best to these games," he said.

Espino said preparing for the games and participating in the events give wounded warriors purpose and help them overcome whatever ailment they may be facing. He also said the event gives the opportunity for people to see the athletes demonstrate their capabilities, not their disabilities.

Espino said while each day is a challenge, he has a great support network including friends, both old and new, his doctors, members of his command, and the Navy Safe Harbor Program, which is the Navy's organization for coordinating the non-medical care of seriously wounded, ill and injured Sailors and Coast Guardsmen.

"Being part of the program has extended and enhanced the recovery experience by twenty," he said. "I never would have seen an amputee teach an able bodied person how to swim more effectively, and I most definitely would have never been able to meet the fine group of men and women I am honored to call my teammates today, if it wasn't for the Navy Safe Harbor Program."

"In my short but brief time with the Navy Safe Harbor program, I will never forget the words I overheard one of the returning athletes say to one of the new athletes. "He said, 'You can sit around and be the life of your own pity party, or you can do something about it.' And that's exactly what I plan on doing."

Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam Morale, Welfare and Recreation

The Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam Library will host its free finale of four documentary and film discussions for the “Created Equal” series beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The series, documenting the civil rights struggle in America, has been sponsored by the Hawaii Council for the Humanities and featured a guest speaker for each film. The film shown tomorrow will be “The Abolitionists,” and the discussion will be led by Mitch Yamasaki of Chaminade University.

“The Abolitionists” captures the struggles of the men and women who led the battle to end slavery, which began in 1830. The video uses reenactments and narration to describe the lives and feelings of Lloyd Garrison, an England newspaper editor; Frederick Douglass, a former slave, author and activist; Angelina Grimke, the daughter of a rich South Carolina slaveholder; Harriet Beecher Stowe, the author of “Uncle Tom’s Cabin”; and “John Brown”, who was executed for his armed seizure of the federal arsenal at Harpers Ferry.

Phyllis Frenzel, head librarian, said that regardless of a person’s ethnicity or race, watching this series will be an eye-opener.

Yamasaki is currently a professor of history and director of applied humanities research and grants at Chaminade University of Honolulu.

He has been a part of many organizations, such as the Hawaii Council for the Humanities, the National Endowment for the Humanities and Hawaii Council for History Education.

Yamasaki has also worked on publications focusing on America’s civil rights movement. He will lend insight during the viewing and will lead a discussion of the film after its conclusion.

Full-length versions of the four documentaries in the series will also be available for borrowing. For more information, call the library at 449-8299.

will be “autumn colors.” FMI: 449-8299.

Defy Gravity: Lift Your Body in Stages class will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Sept. 25 at the Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam Fitness Center. This class will include meditation and a warm-up sequence. It will be followed by a fluid series of yoga postures, emphasizing arm balances. Class will end with a muscle awareness cool-down and deep relaxation. The cost is $5. FMI: 471-2019.

Mongolian Barbecue will be offered from 5:30 to 8 p.m. Sept. 25 on the lanai of the Historic Hickam Officers' Club. A variety of meats, vegetables and sauces will be available for 85 cents per ounce. Rice, noodles, soup, beverages and fortune cookies are included. FMI: 448-4608.

MWR’s Information, Tickets & Travel (ITT) is now offering rides aboard the “Holo Holo” trolley to a monthly food truck and street food rally, Eat the Street Hawaii in Honolulu. The next one is scheduled for Sept. 26 and will have an Oktoberfest theme. There will be entertainment and special events for children. Interested patrons can sign up with ITT for $7 per person and children under age 5 on an adult’s lap will be admitted free. Reservations can be made at any ITT location. FMI: Fleet Store at 473-0792, Hickam at 448-2295, NEX at 422-2757, Barbers Point at 682-2019 or Wahiawa at 564-4445/4446.

COMSUBPAC Wolfpack beats back NIOC HI X-Div

Randy Dela Cruz

Sports Editor, Ho’okele

Down by six points early in the second half, Commander Submarine Force U.S. Pacific Fleet (COMSUBPAC) Wolfpack stormed back to post two touchdowns and gain a 21-13 win over Navy Information Operations Command (NIOC) Hawaii X-Div on Sept. 16 in a Red Division intramural flag football game at Ward Field, Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam.

The win evened out the Wolfpack’s record at 1-1, while X-Div lost their first game of the season after starting off last week with a lopsided victory.

“We knew we were going to have to score more touchdowns because they could put up points and they got a good quarterback,” said Wolfpack QB Fire Controlman 2nd Class Frank Lofton.

Realizing that NIOC had the potential to light up the scoreboard, Lofton got the Wolfpack out of the gates quickly by breaking the goal line on the team’s very first drive of the game.

Starting at his team’s own 15, Lofton made two clutch passes to Information Systems Technician 2nd Class Matthew Johnson to place the ball on the NIOC 13-yard line before the QB rushed for a three-yard gain and then connected with Electronics Technician 2nd Class Jesse Gauf on a 10-yard scoring pass.

The converted extra point gave the Wolfpack a quick 7-0 lead.

While Lofton hardly broke a sweat in putting his team ahead, X-Div quarterback Commander Submarine Force U.S. Pacific Fleet (COMSUBPAC) Wolfpack quarterback Fire Controlman 2nd Class Frank Lofton breaks away from a pass rush in a Red Division showdown against Navy Information Operations Command (NIOC) Hawaii X-Div.

Cryptologic Technician (Maintenance) 3rd Class Michael Quash make things look just as easy by directing a six-play, 65-yard drive that led to a 7-7 tie.

Quash picked up three consecutive first downs and then followed up on a 10-yard scoring pass to Cryptologic Technician (Collection) 2nd Class Jeremy Duty three plays later.

The X-Div had a golden opportunity to take the lead going into halftime but couldn’t cash in after driving the ball all the way down to the Wolfpack two-yard line.

After intermission, NIOC made up for the missed chance by going on an impressive 11-play, 65-yard-scoring drive to take a 13-7 lead.

The drive ended on a clutch 20-yard touchdown toss from Quash to Cryptologic Technician (Interpretive) 3rd Class Doran Martin on fourth down.

With the expected shootout in full swing, Lofton knew he had to keep up with NIOC and on the very next drive he delivered.

The Wolfpack QB needed only four plays to move the ball 65 yards before connecting with Electronics Technician 2nd Class Jerrell Clemmons for the game-tying touchdown.

Lofton then converted the point-after on a keeper to put the Wolfpack up by a point at 14-13.

With time running out, Quash tried to put X-Div back in the driver’s seat, but on the very first play from the line of scrimmage, the NIOC QB made a big mistake when his pass was picked off by Information Systems Technician 2nd Class Logan Hawkins to give the Wolfpack the ball at the NIOC 37.

Sensing the win, Lofton went in for the kill and got it when he connected with Gauf once again for a touchdown.

“That was big,” said Lofton about the pick by Hawkins. “Once we got that one, it was it. We needed that interception. It sealed the game.”

While the Wolfpack got beat in their first game, a win over a solid team like NIOC is a good indication of where the team is headed for in 2014.

Lofton said that if the team stays on track, he believes that this could be the year.

“Once we get that chemistry down, we’re going to be like the Seahawks,” he said. “I think we can win it all with this team.”

NAVSUP announces 2014 holiday season mailing deadlines

NAVSUP Office of Corporate Communications
