Rat Patrol' takes to the beach

Story by Sgt. Rodney Germain

Armed jeeps, effective for the 'Rat Patrol' of WW II because of speed and maneuverability, continued to dominate the battle scene during a CAO-87 pre-war assault at Onslow Beach recently.

Leading the way in the advance was the 6th Marines' TOW (Tube-launched optically-tracked Wire-guided command-linked missile) Platoon with a group of jeeps with plenty of firepower still needed.

"The TOW is an awesome weapon," said Lance Corporal Todd Smith, first squad gunner. "Sometimes we're not used correctly, but that's only because the other units don't understand what we can do for them."

The battle tactics assigned to the three-jep 'Team Ninja' was to search out and destroy the enemy; the ideal strategy for TOWs, according to team leader, Sergeant Gerald Herring.

"When we can operate ahead of the main unit, independently, we can be passive and ready to send that round down range," he said. "We have the advantage over armor because we're small and maneuverable. We're at our best when we can operate like that."

Herring gave the order to mount up, and 'Team Ninja' was on its way to confront the advancing Orange forces' tanks on the move.

Able to knock out a tank at more than 3,000 meters, TOW rounds can pierce through seven inches of steel.

"TOW missiles are the most deadly rounds known to armor crews," said Smith. "The Soviets will completely wipe out an entire grid square if they know of a TOW jeep in the area. That's how afraid they are of us."

After arriving at Checkpoint-7, the first jeep crew stopped and listened, while the others went to their waiting areas.

A half-hour later, the rolling thunder of tracks came from the distant treeline as the amphibious assault vehicles stormed onto the landing zone.

The TOWs concealed themselves in the surrounding brush, anxiously awaiting the Orange forces' tanks.

Over the radio, Herring let the others know the tanks were about to come into range.

"Light 'em up," ordered Herring. "Hit 'em and let me know when they're dead."

The TOWs simulated knocking out five tanks during this encounter, and demonstrated their ability to support the combat mission.

CFC surpasses campaign goal

Story by Sgt. Burt Carey

Combined Federal Campaign officials collected more than $594,000 in contributions for the 1987 drive from contributors throughout the Camp Lejeune/Onslow County area.

Drive chairman Lieutenant Colonel Penny Fryrear said the campaign reached $94,118.55 during the last day of collecting donations. The drive was held between Oct. 15 and Nov. 26.

The total easily surpassed the 1985 record of $503,000 and all major commands aboard Camp Lejeune attained more than 100 percent of the monetary goal set before the drive began.

"We tried a few different things this year that haven't been done in the past," said Fryrear. "First of all, we tried to insure that all potential contributors were informed about what the contributions actually went toward. That, coupled with the tremendous efforts of our unit representatives and keymen and our goal of 100 percent contact of personnel, I think, were the keys to our success."

The campaign's overall totals took a dramatic jump during the final two weeks of collecting as the 22d Marine Amphibious Unit, on a Mediterranean deployment, reported collecting $32,556 from its 1,700 Marines and sailors; 192 percent of the unit's goal.

Other units reporting high percentage finishes were the II Marine Amphibious Force Headquarters (288 percent) and Dental (202 percent).

Monetarily, the 2d Marine Division doanted $208,450 to CFC charities, followed by the 2d Force Service Support Group's $114,081.95 and Marine Corps Base's $110,194.25.

Another new concept tried by Fryrear this year was the collection of donations from federal civilian employees. Instead of having civilians donate through their Marine Corps chain of command, the Civilian Personnel Office received its own graph on the CFC read board along with other major commands.

The 3,000 civilians working aboard Camp Lejeune and with the United States Postal Service contributed $31,254.68, 104 percent of its $30,000 goal.

As the 1987 drive proceeded, funds were transferred to the Principal Campaign Fund Handling Organization (PCFO). With assistance from the Onslow County United Way, PCFO will determine which of the charities will receive funds.

"If a contribution were given to an individual charity that was not on the CFC list, the PCFO will check that charity out and, if it meets certain criteria, it will be sent the funds. If not, the money will go back into the general fund," said Fryrear.

All charitable organizations, about 150 of them, which were listed in CFC drive literature have already been recognized by PCFO.

The groups of charities receiving funds from CFC are the United Way, the American Red Cross, the National Health Agencies, International Service Agencies and the National Service Agencies.

Bringing gifts to needy children

Globe Staff Report

Every year, while less fortunate children lie dreaming of sugar plums and new toys to be delivered by Santa, their parents lie awake wondering how to explain the lack of gifts under the tree.

The Marine Corps Reserve's Toys for Tots program eases the worry somewhat by providing needy families with new toys donated by the community.

This year, as last, Camp Lejeune's Military Police Company, Headquarters and Service Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group, under the command of First Lieutenant Rich Martindell, has volunteered to help the reserves in their efforts, according to company spokesman Gunnery Sergeant Grigg.

Grigg urges area residents to donate new or used toys in workable condition.

"We prefer workable toys because we don't have time to fix broken ones. Besides, if these kids were yours, would you want them to get a broken, old, used toy for Christmas? They like new things, too," Grigg said.

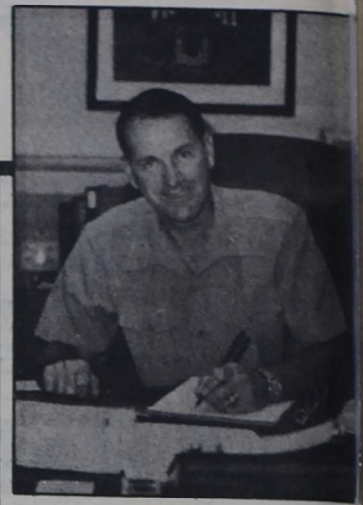

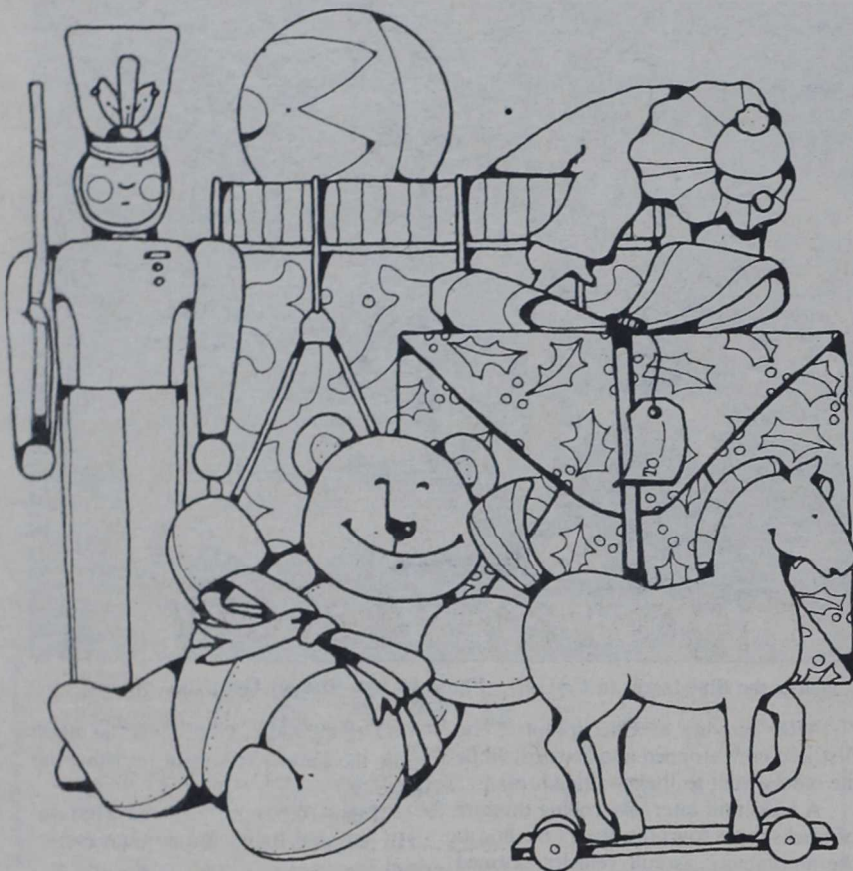

Toys may be dropped off at several area locations until Dec. 19th, including: the Visitor Center at Camp Lejeune, the Marine Corps Exchange, the Base Library, Tarawa Terrace Commissary, Hadnot Point Commissary, Bldg. 102 at Onslow Beach (HQ, 2d ReconBn.), and Bldg. FC-565 (MPCo., HQ).

Several activities benefiting Toys for Tots are planned for this month.

There will be a Toys-for-Tots Dance Dec. 17 at Marston Pavilion, from 6:30-9:30 p.m. It's open to the public, ages five-19. There is a $2 admission fee that will be used to purchase toys.

Working with the Department of Social Services, the reservists will determine to whom the toys will be distributed.

Local radio stations are giving information on future events. For further information, contact GySgt. Grigg at Military Police Company, 451-2155 or 451-3377.

CG'S CORNER

I would like to know why base facilities that handle personal checks require the writer mark his ID card number on the check. Since the ID card may have been issued by an command around the globe or even by sister services, the ID card number is virtually untraceable. In addition to the ID card number, the commissary requires that active duty personnel list both home and unit addresses on the check. It seems to me that name, rank, SSN, unit address and unit phone would be more than sufficient for identification purposes.

A previous study of North Carolina law indicated that a serialized number was required from either an ID card or a NC driver's license to prosecute civilians in Federal Court for writing dishonored checks. A more detailed study showed the ID card number was not necessary and the Base Order will be changed to delete the requirement for the ID card number on checks.

Base Order 5300.7 requires that all personnel provide both organizational and home addresses on personal checks written aboard Camp Lejeune. The commissary has been in compliance with this order; the Marine Corps Exchange has only been requiring the unit address.

The reason for the order was to make it simple to quickly contact the check writer when a check is returned for insufficient funds. The penalty for writing a dishonored check is an immediate suspension of check cashing privileges aboard base until the check is redeemed. If it is not redeemed in seven days an automatic suspension of privileges for six months, plus probation for one year, occurs. If it is redeemed within seven days, only the one year probation occurs.

Since the Exchange's policy of requiring only the unit address has proved successful, the order is being rewritten to require only the unit address for active-duty military. Dependents and non-active duty members will still be required to provide both home address and unit address of their sponsor.

All questions should include full name and unit and should be mailed or brought to the Joint Public Affairs Office.

Muscle and bone injuries

Story by Lt. Paul M. Blose, Jr., USN

There are many types of muscle and bone injuries. All are uncomfortable and some require medical intervention, but only a few are really life- or limb-threatening. Unless there is deformity, significant swelling or inability to use the affected limb, a trip to the Emergency Room is usually not necessary.

Muscle strains are caused by putting too much tension on any given muscle or muscle group, usually by lifting more weight than one can normally handle. These injuries respond well to rest and application of moist heat, such as a warm, wet towel wrapped in a waterproof plastic bag. Painkillers, such as Tylenol or aspirin, assist in reducing the discomfort.

A sprain is an injury to the connecting ligaments which surround a joint and is caused by a wrenching or twisting motion of the joint. Pain and rapid swelling are often present due to rupture of several small blood vessels. Movement of the joint becomes quite painful. X-rays are recommended to eliminate the possibility of a fracture. The treatment for a sprain includes ice packs for the first 24-48 hours, rest, elevation, and support with some sort of elastic wrap.

A dislocation is a condition in which the surfaces of the bones forming the joint are no longer in normal contact. The symptoms of such a disruption are: any change in the outline of the joint, change in the length of the extremity, loss of mobility, or the appearance that the bone has been twisted. X-rays should be taken since many of the dislocations are associated with fractures. These injuries should be splinted without changing the joint position and medical attention sought for proper reduction of the dislocated joint. Improper first aid could result in pinching the nerves or blood vessels, causing a more serious injury.

The most significant injuries are fractures of bones. Any bone in the body can be broken. Signs of fractures include swelling, pain, and evidence of damage to the nerves and blood supply to any part of the body below the injured site. All fractures need to be put into alignment by someone trained in such procedures. If you think you have a fractured bone, have someone splint the limb to keep the fracture immobilized until you can get medical attention. Ice on the fracture site reduces some of the swelling and pain. Keeping the affected limb elevated also helps with the swelling and serves as a reminder not to use the extremity.

With another season of basketball and volleyball upon us, it is important to know how to treat sports injuries. For those who have had prior sprains, an ace wrap before playing helps support any weakened ligaments.

Dec. 14-20 proclaimed as National Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week

by Staff Report

President Ronald Reagan has proclaimed Dec. 14-20 as National Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week and local commanders are urging all sea service personnel to recognize the program and show concern for their fellow Marines and sailors.

Camp Lejeune's traffic and holiday safety programs were conducted Dec. 1-5, urging Marines and sailors stationed here a fresh reminder to that popular slogan: If you drink, don't drive; If you drive, don't drink.

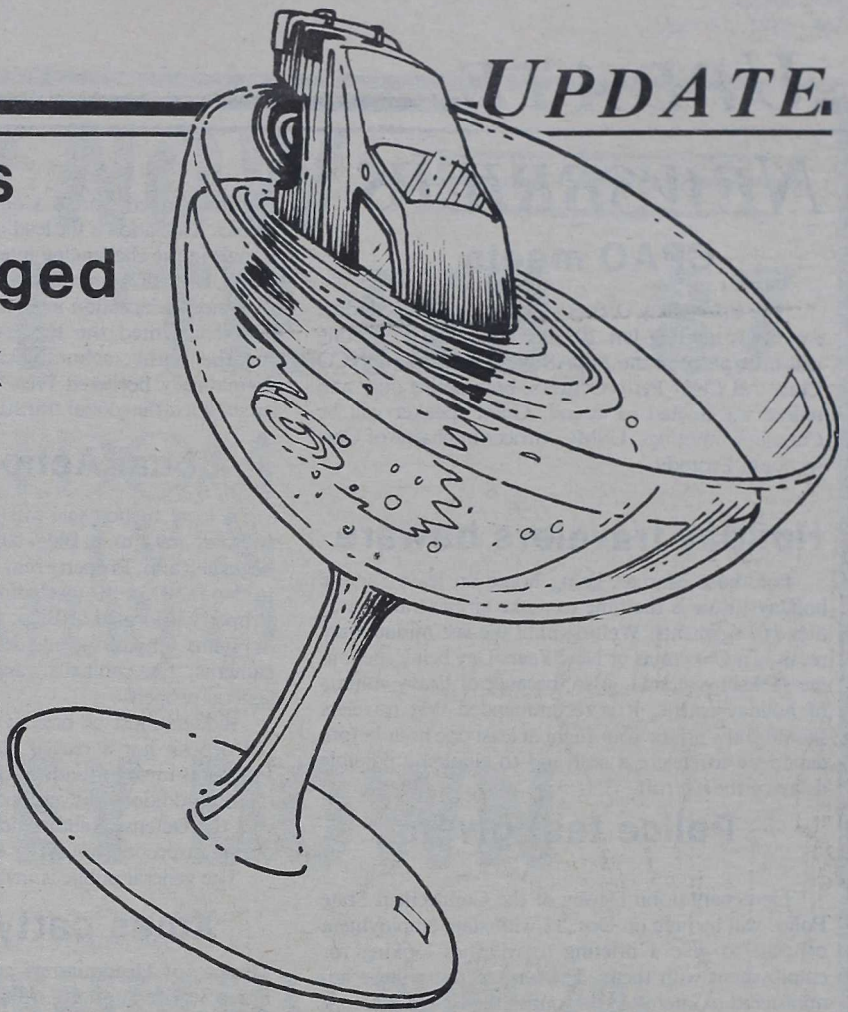

The Department of Defense reported 1,000 motor vehicle deaths this year, most of them involving alcohol as a leading cause of the accident, according to the Naval Safety Center in Norfolk, Va. Of those deaths, 109 were in privately owned vehicles and another 61 involved motorcycles.

Although holiday safety programs for Camp Lejeune have concluded for this Christmas season, local commanders can still take advantage of a few suggestions from the safety office.

They include: promoting the Designated Driver Program in base clubs and off-base; re-emphasizing the importance of using safety devices, such as helmets while riding motorcycles and seatbelts in automobiles and in four-wheel-drive vehicles; teaching defensive driving skills that include occupant protection, fatigue, weather and road conditions; and re-emphasizing common sense as an ally during pre-holiday planning.

Just using a few of those tips could help local Marines and sailors enjoy a happy holiday season with a safe return after the New Year.

Traffic laws improve highway safety

by Staff Report

Highway deaths have been cut in half in the 20 years since Congress adopted federal auto safety legislation, according to a study released by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

When President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the Motor Vehicle Safety and Highway Safety acts in 1966, he said that the Vietnam conflict had claimed 29 American lives during that year's Labor Day weekend, while the nation's highways had taken 614.

In 1966, more than 53,000 people died on the highways—a rate of 5.72 deaths per 100 million vehicle-miles traveled. In 1985, 43,555 people died on the highway. Since the number of drivers and miles traveled has increased, the rate of deaths per million miles traveled has dropped more dramatically than is apparent from numbers alone—2.47 deaths per million miles in 1985, a 57 percent decline since 1966.

Had the death rate continued at the 1966 level, there would have been more than 100,000 deaths last year.

What are some of the laws and standards that have saved so many lives?

Seat belts, child seating systems and lowered speed limits have played important roles. For example, highway deaths dropped 16 percent the first year the 55 mile per hour limit was instituted, which the National Research Council estimates now saves 2,000 to 4,000 lives a year.

But there are other factors. Among them:

- Highways themselves are safer. Unsafe curves on roads that receive federal funds must be widened and banked, if possible, and substandard guardrails replaced. Crash cushions—such as cans filled with sand—are a common sight on highways and are believed to have saved a lot of lives.

- Motorcycle helmet laws have saved lives and reduced the severity of injuries.
- Some $200 million has been spent on experimental safety vehicles, helping to develop prototype cars that perform better in crashes.
- Stricter federal safety standards resulted in numerous design changes, such as padded dashboards, head restraints, windshield defoggers and safety glass which make vehicles safer.
- Anti-drunk driving education campaigns and stepped-up enforcement of drunk driving laws—including aggressive efforts throughout the Department of Defense—have reduced alcohol-related accidents.

Hospital serious about 'No Parking' zones

by Sgt. Ray D. Adams

Parking is fast becoming a major problem for the Security Section of the Naval Hospital.

"No matter how many parking tickets are handed out, people keep parking in 'no parking' areas," said Petty Officer Second Class John H. Thompson of the security office.

On the average, 30 parking tickets are issued each day according to Senior Chief Petty Officer Larry Shaffette, Chief of the security section.

"The reason we're so serious about parking violations is to prevent handicapped patients from walking any further than they have to," said Thompson.

Another reason for increased parking tickets being issued at the hospital is for unlawful parking in the emergency approach lane.

"When people arrive here by ambulance it's normally a life or death situation and ambulance drivers don't need to be dodging cars to get in," said Thompson. "We have those cars towed away . . . as a matter of fact we had five towed away in one day."

When a car is towed from the hospital by a representative of the Provost Marshal's Office, it's put in an impound lot. There isn't a charge for the tow but a warning ticket will be issued, said Corporal Dennis J. Buckner, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Provost Marshal's Office Traffic Court.

A first offense for a parking violation results in a warning ticket. A second offense, occurring within one year of first offense, can result in a 15-day suspension of driving privileges aboard base.

"Repeat offenders are at the mercy of the judge," said Buckner. "If a person gets four or more violations the judge can suspend his base driving privileges for six months which would result in his base decal being scraped from his car."

According to Thompson, all of these punishments can be avoided. "If people would just abide by the posted signs we wouldn't have any problems," he said.

Holiday travelers beware

For those Marines going home on leave for the holidays, now is the time to make airline transportation arrangements. Waiting until the last minute may result in a Christmas or New Years Day being spent in the Jacksonville area. Also, because of heavy volume of holiday traffic, it is recommended that travelers should show up for your flight at least one hour before departure to ensure a seat and to eliminate possible delay of the aircraft.

Panama's Perils

2/4 braves nature's deadly animals, insects during three-week exercise

Story by Sgt. Burt Carey

FT. SHERMAN, Panama—When the Marines of the 2d Battalion, 4th Marines arrived in Panama for three weeks of intense jungle warfare instruction and training they weren't scared of anything.

But when Sergeant Felipe Lerida calmly told the grunts about the three toxins found in just one snake, the Fer de Lance, their eyes opened wide and a general uneasiness filled the air. Sometimes the Fer de Lance can kill within 12 hours; sometimes its venom will take days to slowly eat flesh from bone. But the fact that the Central American jungle can be deadly remained in the heads of these Marines.

Because the Isthmus of Panama has been known for its infestations of mosquitoes, Americans from the Northern Hemisphere have known to dose themselves with malaria tablets before, during and after visits there. Yet the tiny mosquito and its malaria is but one of many dangers posing a threat to those who romp through the jungles.

Lerida taught a flashy, one-hour class that immediately captured every Marine's attention—what with the talk of Fer de Lances, bushmasters, vipers, vampire bats and a peculiar infection called Leptospirosis.

"The jungle is abundant with wildlife, parts of which all of you will see at one time or another while you're out here," Lerida told the Camp Lejeune-based Marines. "Not only are the animals and insects dangerous, but the area itself can be, too. The Atlantic side of Panama can get up to 200 inches of rain each year. East of us is the Chagres River; a very swift river that feeds into the Caribbean Sea. At the mouth of that river is the largest breeding ground in the world for hammerhead sharks."

In the dampness of an obsolete, underground defense battery, the Marines kept looking overhead for the signs of vampire or fruit bats. The musty smell wasn't needed for the Marines to know they were in a strange place with even stranger creatures.

Lerida swiftly talked about the jungle's darkest sides, starting with the familiar heat casualty victims (heat cramps, heat exhaustion, heat stroke) and ending with the world's fastest-moving snake—the Fer de Lance.

"The five F's are simply disease transmitters—five ways that diseases can be passed along," he said. "They are: feces, flies, foods, fingers and fluids."

He listed familiar bugs and spiders: mosquitoes (but with malaria and four other diseases); fire, Colorado and army ants; bees (to include the killer African King bees); wasps; scorpions; centipedes; caterpillars; sand flies; chiggers, ticks; tarantulas, and black widow spiders. His list even included the green toad (it can grow to eight inches in length, five pounds in weight and carry a very toxic poison).

But enough of the familiar bugs and pests North Americans already know about: Lerida moved to something a bit more harsh: a disease called leishmaniasis (tropical sores) that can be caused from the bites of sand flies, mosquitoes, chiggers and ticks. He also talked about pesky mosquitoes, the malaria, yellow fever, dengue, filarisis and encephalitis they carry.

Leptospirosis is a disease many of the Jungle Operation Training Center instructors include in their classes. It's a disease that comes from drinking water from streams, ponds and swamps. Lerida said that all water in Panama has some form of leptospirosis, but that using water purification tablets in each quart of water they drink will prevent the Marines from catching the disease.

With the assistance of some incredibly graphic slides projected against a cement wall, the instructor showed the bite of a possibly rabid vampire bat, but also how to avoid being bitten. And, before he spoke of snakes, he told the Marines about a not-so-cute frog, a golden frog or poison arrowhead frog—the most poisonous of frogs in the world. He said its bite carries a venom many times the strength of strychnine poison—with no cure known to man.

The bushmaster is the second largest poisonous snake in the world, largest, behind the King Cobra, yet it is the most powerful. Its upper jaw literally crush whatever the snake strikes, human bones included. A bite victim has between four and eight hours to reach medical help before the venom will cause death.

The bushmaster joins several other slithering snakes in the Central America jungles: the eyelash, palm and hard-nose pit vipers; coral snake; sea snake; and the dreaded Fer de Lance.

Growing to about nine feet in length the Fer de Lance can strike at least twice its length away and bite its victim two to three times per second. It carries three types of venoms—all that will cause death without medical attention.

As Lerida's astonished class of Marines departed the dark room, he showed them a simple mosquito-netted jungle bed, sprayed it with bug juice ("lots and lots of bug juice") and announced that he was protected for a good night's sleep in the jungle. A poncho attached to string and two slender poles served as a small room and protection from rain.

And while the Marines left Lerida with a sigh of relief because of the simplicity of protection from these creatures, they cast a leery eye toward the jungle's edge and cautiously talked about their next three weeks of jungle training.

Air Delivery Platoon Marines/Air Force complete successful drop of gear

Story by LCpl. K. J. Vaughan

Wearing green jungle fatigues and maroon berets, two airmen consult with one another in the center of Drop Zone Falcon. One measures the angle and velocity of the wind; the other notes the readings on a map of the area.

"Airman First Class Agolli and I are at Lejeune assisting Air Delivery Platoon, Beach and Port Company, 2d Landing Support Battalion with an air drop mission," said Air Force Staff Sergeant Brian Shreeves. "Using our wind measurements from here, the crew on the C-141 aircraft will compensate for wind and accurately drop the gear into the DZ."

This drop, consisting of three jeeps and trailers and 250 81mm mortar rounds, was in support of a 3rd Battalion, 6th Marines field exercise.

"This is a joint mission involving the Marines and the Air Force. We supply the gear and they supply the birds," Major Jack Parker, commanding officer, Beach and Port Company said. "The mission is excellent training for both. In addition to individual training, it also gives us an opportunity to complete an interservice mission."

Although the Air Force drops the gear, Air Delivery Platoon deals with the gear being dropped before and after the actual delivery. Before the drop, the unit brings air delivery equipment to be rigged at the paraloft. After the equipment hits the DZ, recovery teams de-rig the gear and turn it over to the unit.

With the gear de-rigged, it's ready for action. The jeeps have full fuel tanks and are ready to be loaded with the 81mm mortar rounds and driven away. This would be a re-supply mission in combat.

"We're dropping the real stuff today," Parker said. "The 81mm mortars are potential dangerous because they have intact fuses, just as they would be in combat. Such explosive ammunition must be packed with caution and precision," Parker said.

As the birds flew over the DZ, parachutes streamed from the back as the gear became airborne. The gear descended into the DZ. An accurate drop and a safe landing.

"The loads came down well with no problems and everything is on the DZ," said Parker. "This was a successful drop where the Marines and Air Force worked together in support of a Marine Corps infantry unit. Together we all did a great job accomplishing our mission."

His wind angle and velocity measurements allowed the C-141s to accurately drop the gear into the DZ. (Photos by LCpl. K. J. Vaughan)

Marine lieutenant pipes up while carrying on a family tradition

Story by Cpl. Eva Snyder

He's carrying on two family traditions.

A self-proclaimed Marine Corps brat, First Lieutenant Robert J. Toth, 2d Remotely Piloted Vehicle Company, Headquarters Battalion, 2d Marine Division, carries on a unique family tradition as well as Marine Corps traditions.

Toth plays the bagpipes. "My dad plays and he introduced me to the pipes when I was 10. At the time we were living in Hawaii and we found a Scottish lady who gave me lessons," Toth said. (His father is Colonel James Toth, National War College, Washington, D.C.)

At first, he admits, he didn't like playing, as would any child who must practice an instrument inside while the sun is shining outside. He eventually gave up the instrument.

"Years later, I heard someone playing and it sparked my interest again. The bagpipes I'm using now are called McDougles and they're over 100 years old. Periodically, I do maintenance on them. As a matter of fact some sections are held together with beeswax and bits of thread," he said.

Age doesn't have anything to do with the instrument. The quality and craftsmanship are what distinguish one instrument from another.

"The most difficult thing about playing the bagpipes is the coordination needed between your arms, hands and lungs, and you're also supposed to march while you play," he said.

Warming up the bagpipes can take as long as 30 minutes, because they are sensitive to temperature and humidity.

Toth has never played for an audience but does enjoy practicing during his lunch hour.

"I play for enjoyment: It kind of reminds me of home," he said.

When Toth is home, (most of his family are in D.C.) a group of five family members and friends get together and play.

"One thing about the bagpipes is that you can't tell whether a person is playing well or not. Either you love them or you hate them. There are no in-betweens with this instrument," Toth said.

Toth finds several devout fans wherever he plays. Birds and dogs seem to have a natural attraction to him.

"When I start playing, seagulls will land and dogs will come running. It's the funniest thing you can imagine, I guess the wind carries the sound," he said.

Along with his interest in playing, Toth is interested in the history of bagpipes.

In England and Scotland bagpipes are considered a military instrument. Toth even sports a music book with selections such as, 'Officers and NCOs-taking post,' as well as a 'Happy Birthday' tune. "There are songs for any occasion," he said.

Does Toth plan to carry the tradition further? "If I have kids some day, sure I'll force them to play," he said, forgetting momentarily that the shoe will be on the other foot, and he'll be forced to listen.

CHILDREN'S COLORING CONTEST
DRAW and COLOR
ANY VOLKSWAGON

Many traditions trace their origins to folklore, or a mythical event. The Fourth Annual Children's Coloring Contest is fast becoming a tradition of a different type, having its origins in creativity, youthful enthusiasm, and artistic originality. Growing on both the number of entries and prizes available, the Children's Coloring Contest tests the ingenuity of children in competition with children on a local level, and awards prizes for First Second and Third Place in three separate age groups.

Cars Incorporated is proud to announce the beginning of its Fourth Annual Coloring Contest at this time and hopes that many local children will participate.
The artwork will be displayed upon its arrival at Cars Incorporated in the main showroom and remain on display until January 3, 1987. Pictures will be judged by representatives from the Onslow County Arts Council on December 19, 1986.

Entries will be judged by age groups and prizes will be awarded separately to each group.

- Group 1 - Ages 7 to 9
- Group 2 - Ages 10 to 12
- Group 3 - Ages 13 to 15

Prizes for each group are as follows:
1st Place - $100 U.S. Savings Bond
2nd Place - $50 U.S. Savings Bond
3rd Place - $25 U.S. Savings Bond

No special entry forms or purchase is necessary;
the children just need to draw and color a picture of any Volkswagen in any setting, any model or year on a blank sheet of paper no larger than 8 1/2" x 11".
Please title the picture on the bottom of your drawing.
On the back of the picture include full name, age, ad-

Floating bridges keep traffic moving during CAO-87

Story by LCpl. K. J. Vaughan

How does a 56-ton main battle tank cross a waterway?

It floats across.

Just ask the Marines of Bridge Company, 8th Engineer Support Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group.

"Our floating rafts will float any rolling stock, including vehicles, artillery and tanks, across any waterway," said Gunner Sergeant Earl Jones, construction chief for Bridge Co. "The floating raft provides the Marine Corps with the only wet gap capabilities it has, as far as river crossings. It can operate in waters as shallow as 40 inches, areas that larger craft such as LCU's can't get into. It is also ideal for night operations because the boats which propel the raft are very quiet and no running lights are needed."

Bridge Co.'s floating rafts were used during the 6th Marine Amphibious Brigade's Combined Arms Operation-87 here recently. The rafts transported equipment across the New River, a distance of nearly two miles. Jones said the rafts made a round trip crossing in 35 to 45 minutes.

The raft, which floats on six large pontoons, can be constructed by 20 Marines in four hours. It is assembled in stages by three separate crews, and all Marines are cross-trained in all positions. First, the erection crew blows up the pontoons and puts the metal framework together. Then it's into the drink where the deck crew completes the final assembly and secures the 45-foot loading ramp.

"In the morning when the wind is blowing and we're still dry it's hard to plunge in," said Lance Corporal David Elder of Bridge Co. "You can feel that cold water seep into your boots. It's bad in the morning. But we accept the conditions. Once we're in the water and used to it there isn't too much we can't do."

The rafts are entirely hand assembled at the site. This involves a lot of heavy lifting and hauling, in addition to the time spent in the water.

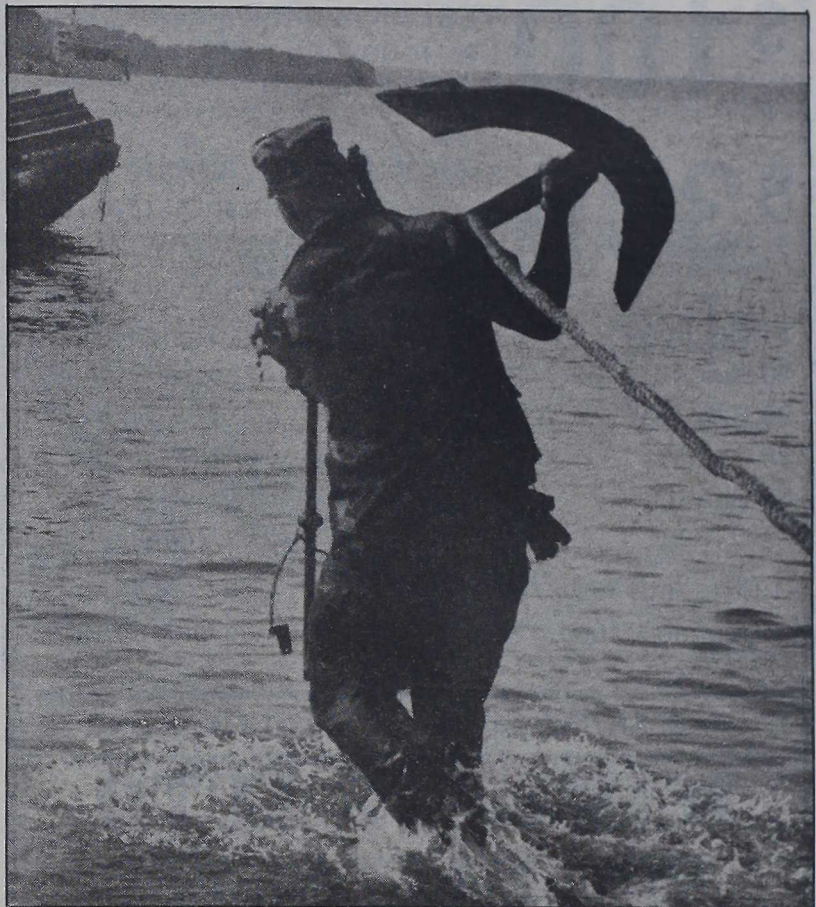

"It's a lot of strenuous work. Building a raft is like PT-ing all day long. . . we're in pretty good shape. Because of my size, I'm pretty much the crane around here," said the 6-foot-6, 250-pounder Elder as he hoisted a 275-pound anchor on his shoulder and waded into the water.

Being up to your neck in water may be refreshing in warmer weather, but when it's 45 degrees outside the situation changes. Not only is it cold, it's also dangerous.

"Hypothermia can easily set in if you're not very careful. It's just one of the hazards of working in winter weather. If you are in the water you are going to get cold. We take the crews out of the water, get them into some dry cammies and make sure they get plenty of water to avoid hypothermia," Jones said.

Despite difficult conditions and a lot of tough work, the Marines of Bridge Company got the mission accomplished.

"What we do is hard, but we do it as a team. Putting things together can be fun. Once we start, we don't stop until we get it done. It is a great feeling when the raft is finally assembled, in the water, and making the crossing with equipment."

Christmas ceremony

Festivities entertain young during lighting of base Christmas tree

Story by Cpl. T. A. Carr

More than 500 children, Marines and sailors gathered on Holcomb Boulevard to see the annual Camp Lejeune Christmas Tree Lighting Parade and Ceremony Saturday.

The Christmas parade featured floats from the 2d Force Service Support Group, Marine Corps Base, Special Services and from volunteer workers of Red Cross, United Services Organization and others.

Also featured in the parade was the 2d Marine Division Band, a color guard, the Boy Scouts of America, the Girl Scouts of America, Youth Sports Program Cheerleaders, the Lejeune High School Band, and McGruff, along with many other attractions.

As the parade wound down at Building 1, the people gathered around the Camp Lejeune tree and listened to Christmas songs performed by the 2d Marine Division Band, Brewster Junior High School Bell Choir and the Lejeune High School Band.

The crowd gathered around the Christmas tree and watched the base flag detail lower the national ensign at evening colors.

Immediately following colors, Colonel Myron Harrington, Chief of Staff, Marine Corps Base, with the help of many children, threw the switch and Lejeune's Christmas Tree lights brightened the evening skies, ending this year's ceremony.

Camp Lejeune All-Stars declaw Wildcats

Roman Holliday, 2d Maintenance Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group, breaks for five of his afternoon's 75 yards. (Photo by Cpl. Val Bode)

Story by Cpl. Val Bode

The Camp Lejeune all-star football team traveled to Parris Island to play the island's best team, the Recruit Training Regiment Wildcats Dec. 5. In front of more than 2,000 recruits and spectators, Camp Lejeune beat the Wildcats in an outstanding performance of defense, 14-6.

Parris Island got on the board first in the second quarter when Wildcat Gregg Fisher broke loose for a 70-yard touchdown run. Parris Island led 6-0 until the third quarter.

Deep in its own territory, Parris Island failed to hold onto a bad snap and Patrick Hanes, 2d Supply Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group, recovered it in the end zone for the score. Mario Caputi, Headquarters Battalion, Marine Corps Base, kicked the extra point to give Lejeune the lead 7-6.

Hanes setup Lejeune's next touchdown by recovering another Parris Island fumble at their three-yard line early in the fourth quarter. Roman Holliday, 2d Maintenance Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group, plowed over the top for the score and Lejeune led 14-6 with Caputi's extra point.

Defense dominated the game with five interceptions and three recovered Parris Island fumbles.

"Considering we didn't have an offensive coach, we did all right. Defense turned the ball over to the offense five times inside the 30-yard line but we were only able to capitalize on two of them," said Lejeune's Conditioning Coach Chester Evans, 2d, Combat Engineer Battalion, 2d FSSG.

"Our defense was our strong point. Our problem came in executing our offense. We had too many chiefs and not enough Indians," said Offensive Coordinator Joe Teachey, 2d Landing Support Battalion, 2d FSSG.

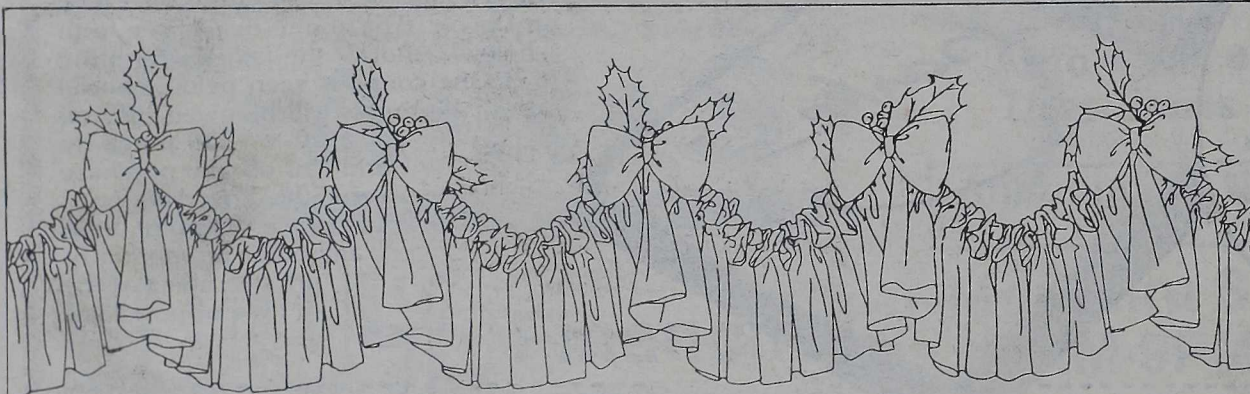

Most valuable player of the game was Patrick Hanes, who dislocated his shoulder in the beginning of the second quarter and came back to score and set another touchdown by recovering a fumble at the three-yard line.

"The actual opportunity to participate in athletics is what the Corps is all about. If you haven't squared off in competition you haven't been a Marine. I've never seen a good athlete who wasn't a good Marine," said Major General Har Glasgow, Commanding General, Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island.

Running back Leon White, 4th Regiment, 10th Marines, 2d Marine Division, breaks three tackles to get into the end zone. The touchdown was recalled because of a Camp Lejeune off-sides penalty. (Photo by Cpl. Val Bode)

All-Stars assist accident victims

by Cpl. Val Bode

The Marines weren't landing or lifting a beach this weekend. Instead, Marines unloaded a bus full of 30 all-star football players from Camp Lejeune to assist four victims involved in a two-car accident.

With the knowledge they obtained from a few Marine Corps first-aid courses, the team was able to rescue three people out of a wrecked car and treat all people involved until the ambulances and highway patrol arrived 15 minutes later.

The all-star team was returning to Camp Lejeune after playing a game in Parris Island, S.C. when they approached a two-car accident five miles south of Parris Beach, S.C. on Highway 17.

The team arrived seconds after the accident to find that a white station wagon was heading southbound had crossed the divider and hit a small four-door Toyota Corolla head-on. The wagon was right side up in the ditch and the car was upside down in the ditch, leaking gas, after somersaulting over the divider.

The bus immediately emptied. Three accident victims were still trapped in the station wagon and the driver of the wagon had crawled out to the side of the road.

The six-foot, one-inch, 240-pound running back Darryl Young, a corpsman at the Naval Hospital took control of the situation by coordinating the team in lifting the car and rescuing the trapped victims.

"I only responded to the call and treated the victims in the best way I knew how. Luckily it was good enough to keep them stable until emergency personnel arrived," said Young.

While most of the team was working on the car, the rest were attending to the wagon's driver who was suffering from several facial lacerations and a possible broken leg. The team also directed backed up traffic.

"The first thing that came to my mind was the 'four life-saving steps'—restore the breathing, stop the bleeding, protect the wound, and treat for shock," said linebacker Patrick Hanes, 2d Supply Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group.

Inside the car, the team found a six-year-old boy pinned under two women who were later identified as being the mother and sister of the boy.

The team gave medical treatment, as well as soothing the victims to prevent shock until the ambulances arrived 15 minutes later. The boy had deep lacerations to the face and forehead while the mother and sister suffered compound leg fractures, facial lacerations and possible broken necks.

"There are no heroes here, just 31 Marines and a corpsman," said quarterback Jo Teachey, 2d Landing Support Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group.

These 31 Marines and a corpsman, representing 11 different units and three commands, handled the task and more by helping the victims involved in this tragic accident.

Story by Cpl. Val Bode

Cheers of excitement and spirit fill the air Nov. 29 as the Fourth Annual Pop Warner Cheerleading Competition takes place at Camp Lejeune's Goettge Memorial Field House, featuring the best squads between the ages of 8 and 14 in Onslow County.

The Junior Midget Chargers and Senior Midget Chargers represent Camp Lejeune. Other groups included Bobcats from Richlands and the Greenbacks from Jacksonville.

The rules were simple. The teams had four minutes to perform their routine with chants and cheers. Teams were judged on the spirit and projection, smile organization, cheer motions, jumps, appearance, voice control, crowd communication and general execution.

The competition was judged by Physical Education instructor James Miller from Jacksonville Middle School with 19 years of cheerleading experience; Val Wind, a modeling instructor from Jacksonville's Studio One; and Richard Oldhand, University of North Carolina Wilmington cheerleader.

Camp Lejeune took both competitions when the final tally came in with the Junior Midget Chargers, coached by Johnnie Seward, outmaneuvered the Richland Bobcats, 300-245. The Senior Midget Chargers, coached by Candi Haddad, dazzled the crowd with their formations and beat the Greenbacks 255-210.

SPORTSMAN OF THE WEEK

Camp Lejeune All-Star linebacker Patrick Hanes, 2d Supply Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group, was selected as the most valuable player in the grudge match against the Parris Island Recruit Training Regiment team in Parris Island, S.C. last weekend. (Photo by Cpl. Val Bode)

All-Star defeats Parris Island to score TD

Story by Cpl. Val Bode

Many times in a football game the only people who stick out or get recognition are the quarterbacks, running backs, and wide receivers.

Linebacker Patrick Hanes, 2d Supply Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group, broke those rules by being selected as the Most Valuable Player for the 1986 Parris Island Grudge Match against the Camp Lejeune All-Stars last weekend. Lejeune beat Parris Island 14-6.

Hanes distinguished himself by scoring one touchdown by recovering a Parris Island fumble in the end zone and then turning around to recover another forced fumble at the Parris Island three-yard line.

What made his accomplishment so much more noteworthy was that Hanes completely dislocated his shoulder early in the second quarter and was sidelined. Doc Odom, team trainer, snapped it back into place and iced it through the remaining minutes of the quarter and half-time break. Hanes came back and scored the touchdown in the opening minutes of the third quarter and recovered the second fumble to set up another Lejeune touchdown in the fourth quarter while only taking aspirin for the pain.

"I didn't worry about the pain. I only concentrated on the game and my first priority to defend against the run," said Hanes.

The Charlotte, N.C. native made All-

County three years in high school and he played on the Lejeune all-star team for the past two years. He plans on becoming county policeman when he gets out of the Corps.

Hanes was unable to play for the battalion team because of work obligation and had an individual try-out for the all-star team.

10th Marines honor patron saint

Story by Sgt. Burt Carey

The 10th Marine Regiment and the United States Field Artillery Association honored 12 of its members Dec. 5-6 during the annual celebration of St. Barbara's Day.

Artillerymen recognize St. Barbara as their patron saint because of her selfless sacrifice and dignified service to Christianity, a belief that cost her her life at the end of her father's sword. After beheading Barbara, Dioscorus was struck by a lightning bolt. Artillerymen from the 17th Century believed that by venerating Barbara they would be protected against accidents and explosions common with primitive guns.
