Cherry Point to host women's volleyball championship

Pfc. SAMANTHA H. ARRINGTON
MCAS CHERRY POINT

Cherry Point will be the host installation for the International Military Sports Council 31st World Women's Volleyball Championship at the newly renovated Marine Dome next to the air station's pool, May 24 through June 2.

The Conseil International Du Sport Militaire, or CISM, hosts annual events where teams comprised of military members worldwide compete in more than 25 sporting events, including basketball, boxing, parachuting, skiing and cycling. The United States is one of the many countries that compete in the CISM sporting events. Teams are made up of members from the different military branches of service.

The council's motto is "friendship through sport," a fitting motto as CISM brings together service members from all over the world for a little healthy competition.

"The Marine Corps is hosting two events for CISM," said Steven A. Dinote, the athletic director for Headquarters Marine Corps, Marine Corps Base Quantico, Va. "Boxing will be held at Camp Lejeune and volleyball at Cherry Point."

"It's been almost 10 years since the Marine Corps has hosted a CISM event," said Dinote. "We are very excited about this opportunity."

Brazilian Army colonel and president of the CISM volleyball committee, Col. Gorge L. Ribero, and retired Brazilian Air Force Lt. Col. Suba Saty, the chief of armed forces sports, visited Cherry Point Feb. 1, to inspect the air station's facilities for the upcoming world military volleyball championship.

"I was very confident and satisfied with my visit to Cherry Point, and I know this will be a successful event," said Saty.

Ribero said scheduling and planning to make Cherry Point the home for the volleyball championship began in September 2009.

The volleyball teams will be staying at the Transient Enlisted Quarters aboard the air station during the games.

"Lodging for the teams and the athletic facilities for the event are excellent," said Ribero. "They will be perfect for the championship."

"I am very impressed with Cherry Point," Ribero

Onslow Memorial Hospital paramedics and nurses visited Cherry Point Jan. 26 to learn how Marine Transportation Squadron 1's HH-46E helicopters and equipment operate during flight missions.

In addition to VMR-1's military search and rescue support, the squadron also serves the local community with its medical evacuation capabilities. Any person flying with VMR-1 must undergo training prior to flight due to the squadron's direct support of the local community.

"We can't have a nurse or a paramedic ride with the patient if they do not have any idea what is going on in the helicopter," said Norman Bryson, Onslow Memorial Hospital's deputy director of emergency services.

"Onslow Memorial Hospital and VMR-1 has conducted this training together for about five years," said Bryson.

Petty Officer 3rd Class Tyler R. Welch, a VMR-1 search and rescue medical technician, said the training went really well and he feels VMR-1 and the personnel at Onslow Memorial will have a better working relationship due to

Marines maintain flight line readiness

Pfc. SAMANTHA H. ARRINGTON
MCAS CHERRY POINT

As the sun slowly introduces itself to the Carolina sky, Cherry Point Marines stand on line together, walking along the air station's flight line, picking up potentially hazardous debris as part of a monthly air station foreign object debris walk.

Feb. 1, more than 1,000 Marines stood at one end of the flight line, ready to cover every square inch of asphalt. For the Marines, the FOD walk is an all-hands effort.

"Each command has a different part of the runway," said Gunnery Sgt. Joshua E. Mock, a quality assurance representative for Marine Attack Squadron 542. "The monthly walks usually last a couple of hours."

According to Mock, FOD walks happen the first Monday of every month, in an effort to keep the air station's flight lines clear of debris that could cause aircraft failure or damage. Frequent FOD walks are protocol for Marines serving in the aviation community.

FOD walks are not limited to picking up rocks and sticks. Many unusual objects have been found on the flight line.

There is one time in particular, the flight line sees more traffic than any other time ... the Cherry Point Air Show, where

MACS-2 receives certification

LANCE CPL. AMY A. TRAIL
MCAS CHERRY POINT

As a result of a recent recertification, Marine Air Control Squadron 2 has once again become the eyes of Marine Corps aviation.

MACS-2's mission is to detect, identify and control the intercept of hostile aircraft and missiles and to remove potential problems from air traffic.

"In 2006, MACS-2 lost its certification to control aircraft over the water," said 1st Lt. Andrew Glanz, MACS-2 operations officer in charge. "We lost it because we were busy with deployments and training."

When MACS-2 returned from Iraq in 2009, the squadron set a course to become certified to control aircraft over water once again.

Before this can happen, the Fleet Area Control Facility in Virginia Beach, Va, call sign Giant Killer, must come evaluate MACS-2.

"In order for MACS-2 to get this certification back, we had to make sure we had everyone we needed and all of the equipment," said Glantz. "Then the next step was getting Giant Killer to test MACS-2."

Giant Killer's mission is to provide

What is our purpose in life?

LT. JAMES RAGAIN
MALS-14

From the very beginning we were hooked. My wife and I finally watched the much-talked-about television show “Lost.” Now, admittedly we jumped on the band-wagon late. We began our journey after the first two seasons were available on DVD.

This may not sound like a big deal, but when the premieres for “Lost” aired I knew I wasn’t interested. I thought it would be about a group of people stranded on a Jurassic Park-type island, trying to escape becoming a dinosaur’s lunch. How could that type of show receive so many accolades?

My wife and I gave it a chance and were instantly captivated by the storyline, the action and mystery of it all. I think we watched two entire seasons-worth in three days.

The day has come ... “Lost” ... the final season, Feb. 2. Finally, we’re going to receive answers to questions we’ve been longing to know. ... After five long seasons, the time has come.

Two of the pressing questions for the characters in “Lost,” are questions that many of us wonder about. What is our purpose? What is our destiny? Well my friends, good questions! It seems that there are seasons in life when we feel that we’re fulfilling our purpose and our destiny.

Then, there are those seasons when we throw our hands up in frustration and cry out to God, “What is the meaning of all this?” I’ll be honest with you, I can’t answer ‘why’ or ‘why not.’ What I can tell you is this: you do have a purpose. You will never know how much God values you and how much he desires to embrace a personal relationship with you through Jesus Christ.

There’s a well-known statement from church history that states: “... the chief end of man is to glorify God and enjoy him forever.” What an amazing statement! It’s exciting to know that not only can we know God, but we can experience a joyful relationship with him for all eternity.

Psalms 16:11 says, “You have made known to me the path of life; you will fill me with joy in your presence, with eternal pleasures at your right hand.”

Knowing this gives me real hope for my destiny ... my destiny with Jesus Christ. What about you?

Taxpayers can get help through IRS

SPECIAL TO THE WINDSOCK
IRS.GOV

The Internal Revenue Service can help those who are facing financial difficulties and struggling to meet tax obligations.

As the 2009 tax filing season begins, in addition to new credits, deductions and exclusions, the IRS is taking steps to help people who owe back taxes.

Here are some areas where the IRS can help:

- Added Flexibility for Missed Payments: The IRS is allowing more flexibility for individuals with existing installment agreements who have difficulty making payments because of layoffs or other financial hardship.

Depending on the situation, the IRS may allow a skipped payment or a reduced monthly payment amount. Taxpayers in this situation should contact the IRS.

- Additional Review for Offers in Compromise on Home Values: an offer in compromise, an agreement between a taxpayer and the IRS that settles the taxpayer’s tax debt for less than the full amount owed, may be a viable option for taxpayers experiencing economic difficulties.

However, the equity taxpayers have in real property can be a barrier to an OIC being accepted.

With the uncertainty in the housing market, the IRS recognizes that the real-estate valuations used to assess ability to pay are not necessarily accurate.

- Prevention of Offer in Compromise Defaults: taxpayers who are unable to meet the periodic payment terms of an accepted OIC will be able to contact the IRS office handling the offer for available options to help them avoid default.
- Postponement of Collection Actions: IRS employees will have greater authority to suspend collection actions in hardship cases where taxpayers are unable to pay.

If an individual has recently encountered a job loss or other financial problem, the IRS may be able to suspend collection in some situations without documentation to minimize burden on the taxpayer.

When calling, taxpayers requesting a levy release due to hardship should be prepared to provide the IRS with the fax number of the bank or employer processing the levy.

If an individual is behind on tax payments there could be additional help available if unusual hardship situations exist.

More information is available on the official Web site of the IRS at <http://www.irs.gov>.

Marines have a long tradition of answering a call to service. For Sgt. Stephanie S. Toomey, answering the call comes naturally.

Havelock’s Chamber of Commerce and the Military Affairs Committee recognized Toomey and her family Jan. 26 as their Marine family of the quarter at Carolina Grill in Havelock, N.C.

Toomey and her family were recognized for their countless contributions, unselfishness and dedication of personal time and effort to those in need.

“For me it’s a personal calling,” said Toomey, Marine Air Support Squadron 1’s training chief. “I think it should be a standard. If you have spare time, you should use it unselfishly.”

Toomey donates her time to organizations like a hospice, the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation and the National Cancer Society for breast cancer awareness.

“When my mom passed away, I saw how great her hospice was,” said Toomey. Her quest to find a cure for juvenile diabetes is another cause that hits close to home. “My cousin is diagnosed with type 1 diabetes, and we will keep walking until we find a cure,” Toomey said.

Toomey added that when she has time, whether it’s five minutes or an hour, as long as it’s quality time, she feels it’s important to share that time with others.

Jobs program seeks to put veterans to work

SUE BOOK
NEW BERN SUN JOURNAL

About two dozen veterans in local community college programs are studying for new or enhanced careers, and others have been placed in new jobs through the Veterans Initiative Program.

“The program came between school terms,” said Joy Hudson, who heads the Employment Security Commission’s JobLink Program serving Craven, Pamlico and Jones counties.

The V.I.P. program aims to help veterans and military spouses train for high-demand jobs in the area.

It was announced in September by the N.C. Department of Commerce’s Eastern Division Workforce Development Board and N.C. Eastern Region Military Growth Task Force.

Funded through a $900,000 federal stimulus grant to the state, it pays for an employment specialist at Coastal Carolina Community college in Jacksonville and two specialists at ESC JobLink centers serving nine counties in the region around Camp Lejeune, Cherry Point and New River air stations, and Seymour Johnson Air Force Base.

“We want to put 75 veterans in school or in jobs as quickly as possible,” said Hudson, who pointed to Cynthia Rodriguez as the New Bern ESC’s go-to person. Contact her directly for appointments.”

Hudson said the program offers a mixed bag of opportunities and includes training grants from $500 for some skills training to as much as $2,500 a year for full community college tuition and books for a year.

Short-term training for jobs in the aviation industry are available at Craven Community College through the What’s your job?

I am responsible for maintenance of the CH-53E helicopter, and in charge of troubleshooting problems with the aircraft. In combat environments, I am a .50-caliber machine gunner.

What’s your favorite part?

My favorite part of the job is flying.

What’s the most challenging part?

The hardest part is trying to learn every aspect of my job.

How do you support the missions of 2nd MAW and MCAS Cherry Point?

I am responsible for ensuring the aircraft is always ready when it is needed.

How does your job in garrison differ from your job in the field?

It does not differ very much since we train like we fight.

thousands of people crowd the flight line over one weekend.

"After the air show, it takes a really long time to clean the flight line up to make sure it is mission ready and safe," said Sgt. John M. Thomas, a powerline shop supervisor for VMA-542.

Any foreign objects can cause damage to an aircraft.

"If something as little as a ball bearing gets sucked into the intake of an aircraft, it can create complications and possibly bring the bird down," said Thomas.

As a precaution, flight line personnel are allowed only to take necessary gear on the flight line. Rank insignias, rings and any loose items are removed prior to stepping foot on the flight line.

"Marine Attack Squadron 542 holds local FOD walks daily," said Thomas. "If the flight line is clear of debris, we can stay mission ready."

traffic operating on the eastern seaboard. The facility also coordinates the Department of Defense's usage of oceanic airspace from the Azores to the Gulf of Mexico.

Cpl. Clinton Schroeder, a MACS-2 system configuration coordinator, said when Giant Killer tests a unit, the facility is looking to ensure the unit is within safety regulations and has the manpower and equipment to support controlling aircraft over the water.

Glanz said once MACS-2 passed the certification evaluation, Giant Killer leased the squadron coastal airspace from the North Carolina-Virginia border to Wilmington, N.C. This enabled MACS-2 to control Cherry Point's aircraft.

"This certification enables the squadron to train stateside without leaving garrison," said Schroeder. "It's very important. Our job requires a lot of experience and having this certification gives us that."

Schroeder said having this certification produces better operators in the fleet and prepares MACS-2 Marines better for deployments.

Schroeder said MACS-2 provides Marine Air Control Group 28 a second pair of eyes in the sky during missions.

"This certification enables flying squadrons to train with MACS-2," said Schroeder. "It's a big part of our defense capability and it's a great experience for the pilots and MACS-2 Marines."

this training.

The feeling was shared by a fellow SAR member.

"The training we conducted went great," said Staff Sgt. Ryan C. Smith, VMR-1 search and rescue staff noncommissioned officer in charge. "It helps familiarize all of the emergency medical technicians and nurses with the aircraft in a controlled environment, so when there is an actual emergency their primary focus can be on the patients' care."

Bryson said the training is also important due to the number of accidents and collisions that require an air lift to a hospital regardless of the weather.

"Time is what people need," said Toomey. "You never know what your time can do for someone."

Time, she said, is invaluable. Giving one's time can do more than simply writing a check.

Toomey and her family received many gifts at the banquet – ranging from a rocking chair to coupons for free oil changes.

"I was shocked," said Toomey when speaking about receiving the award. "I don't think what we do is out of the normal. I don't think I do enough."

Toomey said she felt overwhelmed receiving the award, and she immediately started thinking of those who

"It was completely flattering," said Toomey. "The Military Affairs Committee is very nice, and I am honored that they recognized me."

Toomey's husband, Sgt. Herbert Barber said it was an honor to be thought of like that, and he believes his wife is well-deserving of the award.

NPDES Permit Numbers NC0021253, NC0078131

WHERE DOES THE WATER GO WHEN IT LEAVES YOUR HOUSE?

After you wash dishes, take a shower, brush your teeth, or wash a load of clothes, the used water travels through a system of pipes to Havelock's wastewater treatment plant where impurities are removed before returning the water to the environment. The City of Havelock has some of the most stringent wastewater discharge limits in the state. During 2009, more than 99% of the biochemical oxygen demand (BOD is a measure of the strength of the wastewater), and solids were removed from the wastewater as well as approximately 88% of nitrogen and 91% of phosphorous. The following chart indicates the quality of the water returned to Slocum Creek during calendar year 2009.

How HAVELOCK's WASTEWATER Is TREATED

The City's wastewater collection system consists of approximately 73 miles of sewer lines, some as deep as 25 feet below ground. The system collects used water from the homes and businesses throughout the City and transports it by gravity lines, pump stations, and force mains to the wastewater treatment plant on Jackson Drive. Once at the treatment plant the wastewater enters a bar screen and grit removal system where rags, sticks, large organic particles, and grit are removed to prevent interference and excessive wear on other process equipment. The wastewater then is pumped up to the complete mix aeration basins for BOD (biological oxygen demand) removal, and then flows to three second-stage aeration basins where nitrification (conversion of ammonia to nitrate nitrogen) occurs. Next, the treated wastewater flows into two final clarifiers where biosolids settle to the bottom, and the clear treated water flows off the top of the clarifiers and travels to a set of three denitrification filters, which provide tertiary treatment (effluent polishing). As the water travels through the filters, any remaining fine particles are removed, and nitrate nitrogen is converted to nitrogen gas. The clean water or effluent from the denitrification filters subsequently flows to the ultraviolet disinfection facility for the destruction of harmful microorganisms and then into a final reaeration basin for oxygenation. The flow is next measured and sampled by an automatic sampler which collects the treated water 24 hours a day, at a rate proportional to the flow, as the clean water returns to the environment entering the east prong of Slocum Creek.

Is It Safe For The Environment?

The City has taken a very proactive approach in its protection of the water environment. The overall performance of the Havelock Utilities Department was excellent, maintaining compliance with permit limits except for the following exclusions.

Month	Violation	Summary	Environmental Impact	Corrective Action
Aug. 12 th	Sewage spill (2000 gals)	Manhole overflowed at intersection of Webb Blvd. & HWY 70	No known impact	Any debris was cleaned up; area washed down and vacuumed; lime spread to disinfect the area
Nov. 12 th -13 th	Sewage spill (5,000 gals)	Manhole overflowed at end of Shore Dr.	No known impact	Any debris was cleaned up; area washed down and vacuumed; lime spread to disinfect the area
Calendar year of 2009	Exceeded permitted limit of pounds of nitrogen discharged	High volume of rain with Inflow/Infiltration in collection system increased plant flows causing excessive difficulties in nitrogen removal	No known impact	Aggressive investigation and repair of problem areas in collection system to reduce and control Inflow/Infiltration

WHAT CAN I DO TO HELP PROTECT MY WATER ENVIRONMENT?

- Limit your personal use of pesticides and fertilizers. Also, use and dispose of toxic chemicals properly. Take used motor oil to a recycling center.
- Prevent sanitary sewer overflows. Dispose of cooking oil and grease as a solid waste in your home garbage container. Never pour oil or grease into sink drains, garbage disposals, or toilets.
- Repair broken clean-outs and replace broken clean-out caps on your household sewer line as they occur. Make sure that none of your household gutters is transporting rainwater into the sewer system. Treating rainwater adds to every customer's cost.
- Dispose of solid wastes such as disposable diapers, paper towels, and personal hygiene products in your home garbage container.
- Use water wisely. Repair leaks in household plumbing promptly. Irrigate your lawn or garden only in the early morning or late evening hours. Do not let water continue to run while shaving or brushing your teeth.

Two Marines begin an aircraft training exercise with a KC-130J Hercules flight simulator aboard Marine Corps Air Station Cherry Point as part of the necessary training hours pilots need prior to flying the actual aircraft, Feb. 5. Pilots also use the simulator for sustainment training.

Simulation training heightens pilots’ skills

PFC. SAMANTHA H. ARRINGTON
MCAS CHERRY POINT

The man-made sky is clear, and the digital sun shines on a pilot as he grips the handles of the Harrier’s yoke and prepares to land the aircraft.

The pilot steps out of the simulator after landing the aircraft. This simulation training was just one of many a pilot completes a week prior to flying an actual aircraft.

The AV-8B Harrier aircraft simulator is a fully functional cockpit and reacts exactly the same way as the actual aircraft, said Maj. Antonio DeMarco, the Marine Aviation Training Systems Site officer in charge aboard Cherry Point.

The simulator is a windowless white structure that sits alone in a building adjacent to the squadron. Next to the structure is a station where the pilots actions are monitored by simulator technicians.

“Many different flying hazards can be programmed into the simulator from the monitoring station, such as bad weather, low visibility, mechanical failure or even hitting a bird,” said Gunnery Sgt. Christopher C. Phelps, operations chief for MATSS.

DeMarco said even though the simulator is a great training tool, it does not fully compare to an actual aircraft flight.

“Training is absolutely necessary, and simulators help us keep training,” said DeMarco.

DeMarco said not only is a simulator an essential piece of equipment for pilots, it is also cost effective for the air station and the Marine Corps.

“Aircraft simulator training is cost effective and safe,” said DeMarco. “It’s about $6,000 an hour to train with an aircraft compared to about $200 an hour with a simulator.”

Training is so crucial, said DeMarco. The advantage of using a simulator is that it mitigates any risk of losing a pilot or aircraft.

Cherry Point is home to 24 aircraft simulators. Fourteen of those are deployable and often accompany squadrons when they are forward deployed.

“Whether refreshing skills or pushing the aircraft to its limits, the simulators provide essential training without any danger,” said Phelps. “By presenting pilots with malfunction scenarios, the simulator helps their reaction to emergencies to become second nature.”

A glimpse into the future: Marines view prototypes of gear

A miniature military checkpoint is displayed with action figures during the 2010 Marine West Exposition at Camp Pendleton, Calif., Jan. 27.

SGT. DARHONDA V. RODELA
MARINE CORPS BASE CAMP PENDLETON

MARINE CORPS BASE CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. – If the Marine Corps had a time machine to observe future weapons and equipment, the Marine West Exposition would be its destination.

More than 170 vendors gathered at Camp Pendleton to introduce a variety of new technological prototypes designed specifically for the Marine Corps during the 15th annual Marine West Exposition, Jan. 27-28.

"Technology continues to empower our Marines in the field," said Maj. Gen. Richard P. Mills, commanding general, 1st Marine Division, during the exposition's opening remarks.

"Everything here translates to victory on the battlefield," Mills said.

Improvements on weapon capabilities, such as weapons that would allow troops to shoot around corners of buildings, caught Marines' eyes.

"You can see around corners without exposing your body," said Pvt. Juan Soto, base facilities, assistant chief of operations, Marine Corps Base Camp Pendleton. "These advancements in technology give Marines a tactical advantage."

Other prototypes included remote-controlled robots equipped to apply non-lethal tactics, such as projecting loud noises to lethal capabilities, like firing 400 rounds of 7.62 mm ammunition. The robots can also be used to X-ray suspicious packages, inspect vehicles, sweep an area for mines, and lift projectiles weighing up to 39 pounds.

New equipment is useless without a thinking Marine to use it. Educational booths from online and campus universities were among myriad technological prototypes, which allowed Marines to observe and gather information to further their education.

"I laugh when people tell me that I'm facing a smart enemy ... I say, if he knew what he was facing – he would surrender today," Mills said.

In addition to the Marine West Exposition, a Marine South Exposition is held at Marine Corps Base Camp Lejeune, N.C., and the Modern Day Marine Exposition at Marine Corps Base Quantico, Va.

MOVIE SYNOPSIS

 The true story of how Nelson Mandela joined forces with the captain of South Africa's rugby team, Francois Pienaar, to help unite their country. Newly elected President Mandela knows his nation remains racially and economically divided in the wake of apartheid. Believing he can bring his people together through the universal language of sport, Mandela rallies South Africa's underdog rugby team as they make an unlikely run to the 1995 World Cup Championship match.

Alvin and the Chipmunks: The Squeakquel - (animated) Starring the voices of: Jason Lee, Zachary Levy, Anjelah Jones and Wendie Malick, Justin Long. Pop sensations Alvin, Simon and Theodore end up in the care of Dave Seville's twenty-something nephew Toby. The boys must put aside music superstardom to return to school, and are tasked with saving the school's music program by winning the $25,000 prize in a battle of the bands.

Avatar - Starring: Sam Worthington, Zoe Saldana, Sigourney Weaver, Stephen Lang, Michelle Rodriguez. When his brother is killed in a robbery, paraplegic Marine Jake Sully decides to take his place in a mission on the distant world of Pandora. There he learns of greedy corporate figurehead Parker Selfridge's intentions of driving off the native humanoid "Na'vi" in order to mine for the precious material scattered throughout the rich woodland. In exchange for the spinal surgery that will fix his legs, Jake gathers intel for the cooperating military unit spearheaded by gung-ho Colonel Quaritch, while simultaneously attempting to infiltrate the Na'vi people and the use of an "avatar" identity.

Yuma Marines train with Corps' newest ATC gear

LANCE CPL. JAKOB SCHULZ
MARINE CORPS AIR STATION YUMA

MARINE CORPS AIR STATION YUMA, Ariz. – Marine Air Control Squadron 1's newest detachment at Marine Corps Air Station Yuma, Ariz., now has the latest mobile air traffic control equipment in the Corps.

LANCE CPL. JAKOB SCHULZ

Marines from Detachment D, Marine Air Control Squadron 1 check the Diablos' new Army Navy/Transportable Navigational Aid Air Traffic Navigation, Integration and Coordination System Feb. 1, at the Cannon Air Defense Complex, east of Marine Corps Air Station Yuma, Ariz.

The gear will allow the Marines to embrace the Corps' constant quest toward mobile warfare.

While the gear is more compact – it packs up into three humvees – its official name is anything but. The Army Navy/Transportable Navigational Aid Air Traffic Navigation, Integration and Coordination System, consists of a radar dish, communications and control system, navigational aid equipment and a command module.

Using the radar and communications systems in one humvee, the Marines can track aircraft movement while keeping in contact with pilots. They can also guide aircraft using the navigational equipment in another humvee. All these operations are controlled from the command module attached to the back of the third humvee.

Since the equipment is so new to the Corps, MACS-1, also affectionately known as the Diablos, received the second AN/TPN-31A issued to a Marine unit and the first in Yuma. The other system is currently in Afghanistan.

"Before, it would take a detachment of Marines eight hours to set up our equipment," said Gunnery Sgt. Jeremy Scarbrough, detachment maintenance and material officer. "With the new equipment, it takes six Marines four hours to set up."

In addition to the small scale, the equipment is more mobile, overcoming the reliance on heavy equipment, like 7-ton trucks and cranes, to transport and a bit of set up.

With the increased mobility however, the Diablos have sacrificed ATC coverage.

"The new gear can only cover 25 nautical miles with primary and secondary radar," said Scarbrough. "While that's less than the old equipment, we don't normally need any more than that."

After receiving the gear Jan. 19, the Diablos went to work getting their Marines qualified to use it.

During a six-week course, the Marines learned everything about the equipment, including delivery, use, repair and maintenance, said Charles Dowdy, a civilian instructor.

"Everyone in the detachment will know his job when it comes to its maintenance and use," said Scarbrough.

The Diablos are slated to deploy to Afghanistan later this year as part of a Marine air control group where they will likely use the gear.

National Groundhog Shadow Day inspires students in career paths

LANCE CPL. RASHAUN X. JAMES
MCAS CHERRY POINT

Local high school students visited Cherry Point as part of National Groundhog Job Shadow Day, Feb. 2.

According to the organization's Web site, <http://www.jobshadow.org>, the program is intended to give students across America the opportunity to "shadow" workplace mentors as they go through a normal day on the job. The program also invites students to see firsthand how skills they learn in school can relate to the workplace.

More than 30 students from Havelock, New Bern and Pamlico high schools toured the air station and shadowed various Marines and civilians from different work sections, such as the Cherry Point Naval Health Clinic, Provost Marshal's Office and the rifle range. The objective behind the visit was to give students a broader perspective of military careers at Cherry Point.

The air station's commanding officer, Col. Douglas A. Denn, greeted the students at the headquarters building and explained to the students the workings of the installation and what they could expect while participating in National Groundhog Job Shadow Day.

"Ask plenty of questions, about even the smallest things," said Denn. "That's the reason we are all here, to show you what it is we all do."

Travis Harris, Echo Williams and Douglas Maisonet, local high school students, spent their day shadowing the Marines and civilians at the air station's combat camera office. During their visit, the students learned basic fundamentals of photography, graphics production and videography.

"I gave the students a crash-course on how we use photography studio techniques, such as lighting and taking portraits," said Lance Cpl. Robert A. Mauer, a photographer with station combat camera. "I really enjoyed teaching them about photography. Life is about experience, and the more experience you accumulate the more wisdom you'll have."

Havelock High School senior Echo Williams, who plans on becoming either a broadcast or print journalist, considered her visit to combat camera to be a fruitful one.

"I learned a lot of new things about video broadcasting," said Williams. "I'm also a photographer, so learning the different functions of a camera was helpful."

Cpl. Timothy Chesnavage, a videographer at station combat camera, helped teach the students the basic fundamentals of videography.

"Telling the students about my job makes me feel good," said Chesnavage. "It's flattering that someone wants to see what I do."

At the end of their visit, the students engaged in a mock television interview with combat camera information technology specialist Kevin Morris. Morris asked the students questions about their interests and plans for the future.

"I liked the interview the best," said Maisonet. "I loved being in front of the camera. The Marines here do a great job, and it's good seeing them have fun while they're doing it."

Marines, families receive free online tutoring

LANCE CPL. AMY A. TRAIL

MCAS Cherry Point

The Department of Defense recently partnered with the Web site <http://www.tutor.com>.

This partnership will allow military service members and their dependents to work with a professional, certified tutor online 24-7. The Web site offers help with homework, studying, test preparation, resume writing and more. The service is available to students of any age, from kindergartners to adult learners, to get the one-on-one help they need in subjects like math, English, science and social studies.

This program is provided by the defense department as a benefit to all active-duty service members, deployed reservists, active-duty National Guard personnel in a deployed status, DoD civilians in a deployed status and their dependents.

“The core part of this service is the one-on-one training from a qualified educator,” said Suzanne Shell, Cherry Point’s library director. “The tutors are qualified in specific subjects for a particular age range.”

The Web site’s network of more than 1,800 professional tutors and career specialists have delivered more than five million one-on-one tutoring and career sessions since 2001. Each tutor is certified through the Web site and has completed a third-party background check.

“Everything on this Web site is anonymous,” said Shell. “Most parents worry about predators on the internet. With this program, there is no worry. Everything is monitored and anonymous. The DoD didn’t want to take any chances with children.”

Online homework help and career assistance is available at all military installation libraries. Assistance is also available online at <http://www.tutor.com/military>.

Shell said interested members need to register through their local Marine Corps library. If they already have a library account, all they have to do is call. The library will take the information it needs to set up an account on the Web site. If someone does not have a library account, they should visit their base’s library and set up an account.

“This is a fantastic service,” said Shell. “It’s a big help in reducing the stressors of homework in families, especially if a service member is deployed. Adults can also use it to get back up to speed for continuing education classes or for other services the Web site offers.”

Some children aboard Cherry Point who’ve used the program, said it’s a wonderful tool and helps them with their homework questions. It’s especially nice that help is free.

Elite-to-Elite extends Corps to College program deadline

CPL. KATIE DENSMORE

MCB Camp Lejeune

Military members who are North Carolina residents may have thought about applying for the Elite-to-Elite Program, which guarantees seats at North Carolina State colleges to qualified applicants. However, they may have been discouraged by the Feb. 1 deadline.

Fortunately, the program has had its deadline extended from Feb. 1 to March 15. The extension allows applicants to complete several of the time-consuming requirements, such as acquiring college and high school transcripts and taking the scholastic aptitude test.

Military members wanting to apply for the program should plan to attend the upcoming fall semester.

“Next year we are looking at having the program open for both a fall and spring semester,” said David Schock, the regional school liaison for Marine Corps Installations-East.

Adding the spring semester would help military members who have an end-of-active-duty-service date that falls outside of the program’s deadline.

The program’s main benefit is to help military members return to an academic environment that they may have not been ready for straight out of high school.

“If you were an average student or if you did poorly on your SATs, the program can really help,” Schock said. “It is meant for those who served their country, matured and decided they wanted to return to school.”

The program helps Marines who would otherwise have a solid career in the Corps but choose instead to pursue their education, he said.

“We know most Marines are not going to stay in,” Schock said. “It is a pyramid organization, and really good Marines often decide to get out and we understand that. We want to help them after they have left the service.”

For those who are getting out in a year and a half, Schock recommends starting online courses to help guarantee in-state tuition and make the process easier.

With the program in its second year, it shows no signs of slowing down because everyone wants it, says Schock.

“Everybody benefits from military members going to school,” Schock said. “We are providing the state with quality, educated leaders.”

Finding help for male sexual assault

SPECIAL TO THE WINDSOCK

SAPR.MIL

Male victims of sexual assault are an often forgotten population – unseen, neglected, and underserved. The following information has been put together so that this population of victims can be better understood and supported.

Stereotypes and Myths

There are various stereotypes and myths that impact male victims’ ability to face their sexual assault. These include:

- Men are immune to victimization.
- Men should be able to fight off attacks.
- Men shouldn’t express emotion.
- Male survivors are more likely to become sexual predators.

These stereotypes and myths can then lead to certain outcomes for male victims of sexual assault, including:

- Loss of self-esteem and belief in their masculinity
- Exaggerated self-blame
- Feelings of shame, guilt, anger
- Feelings of powerlessness, apprehension, withdrawal and embarrassment
- Fear that they won’t be able to protect and support their families
- Symptoms of rape trauma syndrome
- Sexual difficulties, such as self-destructive behavior (drinking, drugs, aggression)

Barriers

Male victims of sexual assault may also experience certain barriers to seeking support or services, either from friends and family or from organizations and institutions.

Support

- It can be difficult for men to seek help for fear of how others will judge them.
- Responses from friends and family can be damaging or unsupportive.

Safety

- Threats to the victim of a sexual assault or his family may have been made by the perpetrator. This may cause him to keep silent.
- In institutions, he may be forced to keep silent through implied and real threats both by the perpetrator and/or by others within the institution.

Privacy

- He may resist reporting the sexual assault due to the need to repeat the story over and over again to police, prosecutors and in court.
- He may be unwilling to share details of the assault in order to protect his family from societal judgment.

Self-blame

- He may blame himself for the attack because he was not able to fight the aggressor off.
- He may think that the assault was not rape because he became sexually aroused during the attack.

Outcomes

Male victims of sexual assault may experience a variety of outcomes that have an impact on their well-being.

Psychological

- Sense of self and concept of “reality” are disrupted
- Profound anxiety, depression, fearfulness and identity confusion
- Development of phobias related to the assault setting
- Hypochondriacal symptoms (imaginary ailments)
- Paranoia of bodily harm
- Withdrawal from interpersonal contact and a heightened sense of alienation
- Stress-induced psycho-physiological reactions
- Psychological outcomes can be severe for men because men are socialized to believe that they are immune to sexual assault and because societal reactions to these assaults can be more isolating and stigmatizing.

Relationships

- Relationships may be disrupted by the assault.
- Relationships may be disrupted by other’s reactions to the assault such as a lack of belief/support.
- Relationships may also be disrupted by the victim’s reactions to the assault.

Emotional

- Anger about the assault can lead to hostility.
- Similarly, the overwhelming emotions that come with surviving a sexual assault can lead to emotional withdrawal.

Semper Fi bear

SST. LISA R. STRICKLAND

Lt. Col. Alan Solter, community plans director, poses with New Bern Airport’s newest member, Semper Fi. He isn’t quite like the other newly painted bears placed around the city in honor of New Bern’s 300th anniversary. Semper Fi is painted in the Marine Corps dress blue uniform. The artist, Vicki Vitale-Farrow, also painted two other bears around the city this year.

“I think here is a great place because we have many Marines, families and other service members coming in and out of the airport, and we want them to know how much we appreciate what they’ve done for us,” said retired Marine Corps Maj. Gen. Tom Braaten, Coastal Regional Airport director.

Cherry Point benefits community in 2009

LANCE CPL. SANTIAGO G. COLON JR.

MCAS Cherry Point

Since 1942, Cherry Point has been a major part of the economic stability of eastern North Carolina by providing jobs for thousands over the past 68 years. The air station’s Fiscal Year 2009 Economic Impact Statement details the effect Cherry Point has had on the surrounding communities.

During the Fiscal Year 2009:

- The total salaries of Cherry Point personnel were $1.43 billion. Nearly $680 million were paid to active duty military, nearly $150 million were paid to retirees, more than $400 million were paid to appropriated retired civilians, and almost $200 million were paid to nonappropriated fund civilian employees.

Nonappropriated fund, or NAF, civilian employees work for organizations aboard the air station that are not funded by the Department of Defense. As an example, a mechanic at the auto care center would be a NAF employee.

- The total Cherry Point workforce for FY09 was more than 15,000 employees. Almost 10,000 were active-duty military, nearly 5,000 were civilian employees, and almost 600 were NAF civilian employees.
- The total amount of construction, maintenance and service contracts totaled to nearly $160 million.
- The total amount for education, training and travel was almost $17 million.
- The total overall economic impact of Cherry Point was $2.18 billion.

For more information or for a copy of the FY09 Economic Impact Statement visit the Web site at <http://www.marines.mil/unit/mcascherrypoint/Pages/default.aspx>. The link for the statement is 2009 Economic Impact.

The Windsock

The Windsock Free Classifieds*How to Place a Windsock Free Classified Ad

Active duty, retired military personnel and their dependents may place classified ads in The Windsock at no charge. You must go to the Joint Public Affairs Office in Bldg. 4817 and fill out an ad request form.

There is a 20-word limit on military free ads and a two-ad (separate category) per household maximum per week.

Policy for Free Classified Ads

Providing free advertising for business ventures is prohibited by government printing regulations and conflicts with the civilian publisher's advertising (which pays for the entire Windsock.) Therefore, as stated on the free ad request form, free classified ads "...must not be of a commercial or business nature."

This includes baby-sitting, property for rent, and yard work. Such advertisements may only be run as paid ads. Likewise, ads promoting fund raising activities sponsored by any organization, or events for which a fee is charged, are also not authorized under the free ad provision.

The Windsock will only publish free ads for animals which the owner is giving away. Real estate for sale must be exclusively "By Owner."

Failure of an ad to appear in The Windsock usually indicates the submission did not meet the criteria for free publication.

- Deadline for submitting free classified ads is noon, Monday ◄
- When Monday is a Federal holiday, ads must be submitted by noon, Friday ◄
- To re-run, free ads must be resubmitted ◄
