Historic landmark reconstructed as heritage museum

For some people, the idea of building a house is a simple one. Hire an architect, choose and approve plans and then hire someone to build it. The tricky part comes when a house is no longer needed, particularly if it's more than a hundred years old and has historic and cultural value. For Commander, Fleet Activities Yokosuka (CFAY), this was an actual scenario at the turn of the 21st century.

Located on a hill directly across from Afloat Training Group Western Pacific and behind the CPO Club stood a house built at the inception of the naval base itself. A sizable house by Japanese standards, the wood frame structure was constructed in 1869 for deputy director Jules César Claude Thibaudier, a 29-year-old French maritime engineer. Thibaudier had been hired to assist François Léonce Verny, also a maritime engineer, in the building of the Yokosuka Iron Works, which would later become CFAY when it was turned over to the U.S. Navy in 1945.

Yokosuka City holds the opening ceremony of Modern Heritage Museum Thibaudier Residence. Phillip Setton, French Ambassador to Japan, gave a congratulatory greeting in French for the opening ceremony of Modern Heritage Museum Thibaudier Residence.

Coming to Japan at 29 years old, he stayed for nine years to oversee such projects as the building of Dry Dock 1, finished in 1871, and Dry Dock 3, finished in 1874. While Verny traveled back and forth to France, Thibaudier took the lead for the French engineers, according to Tsutomu Shinno, assistant chief of the Cultural Promotion Division, Sports, and Culture for the City of Yokosuka.

"[The house] was specifically built for Thibaudier," said Shinno. "Once Thibaudier left Japan, the Japanese Imperial Navy used the house. After that, from one to another, [the house had] different purposes, such as a meeting place ... and a [U.S. Navy] church" said Shinno. The building was finally used as a meeting place for the Freemason's according to Shinno.

From 1878 to 2003, the house was used until the added outbuildings developed termites.

"[The] U.S. Navy understood the importance of this as a historical building, so the U.S. Navy paid money to deconstruct the building for future reconstruction," said Kyoko Sugita, community relations specialist for CFAY.

When the house was first constructed in 1869, there were no existing architectural plans, so before the house was taken down in 2003, new plans were drawn to help with reconstruction.

The staff at the Thibaudier House Tourist Center and Museum demonstrate an electronic touch panel display showcasing various sites of historical and cultural significance in Yokosuka to Commander, Fleet Activities Yokosuka public affairs office and community relations office personnel. Jules César Claude Thibaudier, the museum's namesake, was a French naval engineer and deputy chief administrator of the Yokosuka Iron Works in the 1860s and 1870s.

These plans would assist the city of Yokosuka in rebuilding the house on the edge of Verny Park. Dismantled piece-by-piece, the project took four months and was officially given to the city in March 2004. The entire disassembled building has been stored in a Yokosuka city high school since it was turned over.

In rebuilding, the city of Yokosuka reconstructed the outside of Thibaudier's house employing modern techniques and utilizing some of the original materials. The inside of the house, however, was reimagined to allow for its modern application as a museum and visitor's center. The trestle beams and some of the original elements were used inside the structure but, a newer, more open layout, lends modern visitors a touch of the past mixed with current Japanese technology.

“This floor plan was actually added when the building was deconstructed. Museum staff tried to draw [the floor plan] because the original floor plan [did not have] enough information” said Shinno. Located closer to the Coaska Mall, the new house was strategically placed in Verny Park directly across Yokosuka Cove from where the original house once stood. The hill now sits empty across from Afloat Training Group West, but acts as a watch stander for what was the location of the original Thibaudier house for 134 years.

On May 29, the City of Yokosuka opened the Yokosuka

Modern Heritage Museum Thibaudier Residence.

Included as part of the museum is a mock-up of one of the rooms from Thibaudier's house, complete with a table, chairs, plates, and a fireplace. Additionally, the new museum showcases a historical movie highlighting Japan's modern heritage, an interactive map showing the area as it used to be, and more historical information about Yokosuka.

For individuals interested in more information, the city will provide four museum staff members who speak English. The museum is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission fee but it does cost 200 yen per person to watch the historical movie.

MANAGING YOUR RISK

ALCOHOL SAFETY

NAVALSAFETYCENTER.NAVY.MIL

In the past five fiscal years, 4 percent of off-duty mishaps involved alcohol, while 22 percent of fatalities resulting from off-duty mishaps involved alcohol.

NAVALSAFETYCENTER.NAVY.MIL

AFLOAT DRINKING

The CDC reports that alcohol is involved in 70% of deaths related to water recreation. It's not a risk worth taking!

Did you know?

- A boat operator is likely to become impaired quicker than a driver.
- The penalties for Boating Under the Influence (BUI) can include significant fines, revocation of operator privileges and severe jail terms.
- The use of alcohol is involved in about a third of all recreational boating fatalities.

Do Not Mix Sun and Alcohol

Both alcohol and the sun can cause dehydration. The sun causes your body to sweat to stay cool, and if those fluids aren't replaced, your body will undergo adverse reactions. You may feel extremely thirsty, dizzy or fatigued. When people drink they tend to become more lackadaisical and reckless, which can have dangerous implications when water recreation or water sports are involved. In fact, up to 70% of all water recreation deaths of teens and adults involve alcohol consumption. If you are drinking in or near a body of water be aware that you may lack the dexterity needed to stay afloat, which can increase your risk of drowning (the third leading cause of unintentional injury and death worldwide and fifth in the United States). Sun and heat exposure only amplify this risk. In addition, the physical exertion of swimming on a hot day paired with alcohol consumption can lead to overheating—a risk factor for heat syncope (fainting), which can have deadly consequences.

Boating Accidents Due to Alcohol Consumption

According to the Boat US Foundation: "Stressors, such as exposure to noise, vibration, sun, glare, wind, and the motion of the water, affect boat operators and passengers. Thus drinking while boating is even more dangerous than drinking and driving."

Research shows that hours of exposure to boating stressors produces a kind of fatigue or "boater's hypnosis," which slows reaction time almost as much as if you were legally drunk. Adding alcohol or drugs to boating stress factors intensifies their effects each drink multiplies your accident risk."

That's why boaters should never drink when operating a boat. Every state has strict drinking and boating laws—you can be arrested on the water. Yes, you can get a BUI punishable using the same criteria as Driving Under the Influence (DUI).
