Chaplain's Corner: The intersections of faith

The Intersection of Jewish and Protestant Celebrations: Rosh Hashanah, Sukkot, and Reformation Day

In the October period, a fascinating confluence of significant religious observances occurs, particularly within Judaism and Protestant Christianity. Among Jewish traditions, Rosh Hashanah and Sukkot stand out as foundational holidays, heralding the Jewish New Year and the harvest season, respectively. Meanwhile, October 31 marks Reformation Day for Protestants, commemorating Martin Luther's pivotal role in the Reformation. Each of these occasions embodies unique spiritual themes and practices, yet they also offer a lens through which the diverse connections between faith communities can be appreciated.

Rosh Hashanah: The Jewish New Year

Rosh Hashanah, typically celebrated in late September or early October, marks the beginning of the Jewish New Year. This solemn yet joyous holiday is observed for two days and is steeped in traditions emphasizing reflection, repentance, and renewal.

During Rosh Hashanah, the shofar, a ram's horn, is blown in synagogues to awaken the spirit and invite worshippers to introspection. Traditional foods such as apples dipped in honey symbolize the hope for a sweet year ahead. The holiday also initiates the Ten Days of Repentance, culminating in Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, where individuals seek forgiveness and reconciliation.

The themes of Rosh Hashanah resonate deeply within the Jewish faith, calling for spiritual awakening and the establishment of a meaningful relationship with God and community. This is a time for personal reflection, familial gatherings, and a renewed commitment to live a righteous life.

Sukkot: The Feast of Tabernacles

Following Rosh Hashanah, Sukkot, also known as the Feast of Tabernacles, is celebrated five days later. This week-long festival commemorates the Israelites' journey through the wilderness and their reliance on God for sustenance and protection.

During Sukkot, families construct temporary shelters, or sukkahs, adorned with branches and fruits, where they dine and sometimes sleep to remember their ancestors' nomadic lifestyle. The holiday emphasizes gratitude for the harvest and God's providence, featuring rituals such as the waving of the Four Species: the etrog, lulav, Hadas, and Arbah.

Sukkot is characterized by joy and abundance, a stark contrast to the somber reflections of Rosh Hashanah. It serves as a reminder of the importance of community, hospitality, and the fragility of life.

Reformation Day: A Protestant Commemoration

On October 31, Protestant Christians celebrate Reformation Day, marking the anniversary of Martin Luther's 95 theses in 1517, which catalyzed a movement for reform within the Roman Catholic Church. This day represents a significant shift in Christian history, promoting the principles of sola scriptura

4 (Scripture alone) and salvation through faith alone.

Reformation Day is often observed with church services, teachings, and discussions focused on the implications of Luther's actions and the ongoing relevance of reforming practices and beliefs.

The day is not just a historical commemoration but also an opportunity for Protestant communities to reflect on their faith's evolution and the importance of returning to foundational biblical teachings.

Divergent Themes and Shared Connections

While Rosh Hashanah, Sukkot, and Reformation Day emerge from distinct religious traditions, they also highlight meaningful themes that resonate across faith communities.

**Reflection and Renewal**: Both Rosh Hashanah and Reformation Day emphasize introspection and the importance of turning towards God for guidance. Jews reflect on their past year and seek to improve, while Protestants consider the reforms necessary for their spiritual journey.

**Community and Celebration**: Sukkot celebrates community and gratitude, paralleling the communal aspects of Reformation Day, where congregations gather to honor their shared beliefs. Both holidays foster a sense of belonging and collective worship.

**Harvest and Abundance**: Sukkot's focus on the harvest reflects a deep appreciation for God's provisions, a sentiment that resonates with Protestant teachings about gratitude and stewardship over God's creation.

**Legacy and Tradition**: Each celebration carries a rich history and tradition, reminding participants of their heritage and the importance of passing down beliefs and practices to future generations.

The intertwining of Rosh Hashanah, Sukkot, and Reformation Day in October invites us to explore the richness of religious traditions and the diverse connections that weave through our shared human experience. Through reflection, celebration, and community, these observances not only honor the past but also inspire individuals to seek deeper connections with their faith and each other, fostering a spirit of understanding and respect among diverse cultures and beliefs. As these holidays unfold, they remind us of the beauty and complexity of spirituality, encouraging a journey of discovery and growth in our own lives.

NDEAM - Access to Good Jobs for All

Story by: Laurie Pearson
COMMSTRAT Officer

October is National Disability Employment Awareness Month

and aboard Marine Corps Logistics Base Barstow, it is an opportunity to reaffirm its commitment to ensuring equal opportunity in employment, for all citizens.

“The observation of National Disability Employment Awareness Month is established by Public Law and Presidential Proclamation,” said Perry Reed, Equal Employment Opportunity deputy director, Regional EEO Office, Marine Corps Installations West, aboard Marine Corps Base Camp Pendleton. “Base personnel should recognize the awareness to commemorate the many contributions of people with disabilities to MCLB Barstow’s workplaces and the local economy.”

The focus this year is “Access To Good Jobs for ALL.” One of the ways that employers can assist those with disabilities is by providing accommodations.

“Any employee or applicant who is having difficulties with one or more of their essential functions, should see one of the EEO specialists and request a Reasonable Accommodation,” Reed said. “The same goes for any applicant who needs an

Reed explained that the Department of Defense put out a Memorandum for Senior Pentagon Leadership, stating “At least 14.6 percent of DoD civilian employees are individuals with disabilities and 2.6 percent are Individuals With Targeted Disabilities who often encounter significant barriers to employment. I encourage each of you to renew your efforts to provide a workplace that is both accessible and inclusive for such workers. To assess and advance current accessibility measures, take advantage of DoD’s many accessibility programs and resources, including those in the Department’s Computer/Electronics Accommodation Program (<https://www.cap.mil>). Finally, I challenge leaders to actively promote opportunities to employ qualified individuals with disabilities.”

The staff from the EEO office encourage all personal to take advantage of the resources available, which include:

“Although we celebrate the value and talent that workers with disabilities add to our workplace each October, we can continue to raise awareness throughout the entire year,” Reed said.

One of the things that everyone can do to support others is to practice inclusion when dealing with all employees regardless if they have a disability or not, he clarified. Most of the time
