182ND FIELD HOSPITAL, OMAHA,
TRAIN WITH CAMP MCCOY MEDICS

U.S. Army Reserve medical officers, nurses and technicians of Omaha, Neb., this week were working alongside Active Army counterparts at the Camp McCoy Hospital as part of their annual active duty training.

The 82nd Field Hospital, commanded by Col. Henry E. Davidson of Omaha is training to operate a field hospital under canvas in a combat zone. The hospital has a staff of 26 officers and 58 enlisted technicians.

Army Nurse Corps Captains Grace Deardon and Rose Torgeson and WAC Medical Specialist Vesta M. Hinelin are members of the unit.

After spending the first week of training in refresher training and a trip to the field to set up a tent hospital, the officers and men of the 82nd returned to indoor hospital work Monday, joining the regular hospital staff in wards, treatment rooms and laboratories of the hospital at the eastern end of the cantonment area.

The 1960 summer training period is the first for the Omaha Reserve unit, which was organized in October of 1959 with its Headquarters in Omaha and Detachments in Lincoln and Grand Island, Neb.

But They Face The Problems

PROBLEMS AT USAR SCHOOL HERE

Kansas City Reservists Conduct
Summer Camp C&GS Sessions;
Part of Five-Year Program

The presence of a half dozen or more generals at this Reserve Forces Training Center is not unusual.

The 5039th U. S. Army Reserve School out in the hospital area has 174 "generals" — what amounts to an entire company.

The quotation remarks are necessary because the 174 students wear no stars. They just cope with the same problems which normally confront generals in combat.

Students are here from every part of the United States in the current session of the Command and General Staff course, an extension of the Fort Leavenworth, Kan., resident course, which provides field grade Reservists with a study program to prepare them for higher staff and command positions. The 5039th school staff, all from the Kansas City area, is under the command of Col. Theodoric C. Bland of Kansas City. There are 19 officers and 16 enlisted men. Most of the 31 faculty members are also from the Kansas City Area, but some come from other parts of the Fifth U. S. Army.

The Reserve Officers attending this session in classrooms in the hospital area are at varying levels of the five-year program. They study in weekly drills and during summer schools like this one.

TRANSPORTATION UNITS DODGE "ATOMIC BOMBS" IN CLIMAX OF HAULER III

The big M-52 troop and cargo carrying semi-trailer rigs of the 425th Highway Transportation Command rumbled over Camp McCoy roads this week, dodging "atomic bombs" of the Aggressor.

Subordinate commanders and their staffs, under Brigadier General Franklin M. Krosl, issued orders moving supply depots and other logistics installations across a front of hundreds of miles in the simulated "play" of Exercise Hauler III. On the Camp McCoy hilly roads and trails, however, the action was very real for transportation officers, truckmasters, drivers, mechanics and communications men.

About 2,000 men of the Active Army and U. S. Army Reserve were involved in the training test, which is an extension of logistics command post and field exercises which have been held here for three successive years.

Milwaukee Unit Wrote "Script"

Following a scenario prepared by the 32nd Logistical Command of Milwaukee, commanded by Colonel Nathan Boruszak, Whitefish Bay, Transportation Corps units were charged with the support of nearly a million men of two U. S. Field Armies, repelling an air and sea-borne attack against the North Central United States.

In a fast moving situation, the "script" called for atomic bomb attacks which meant wide dispersal of supply installations, re-routing of truck convoys, and displacement of depots to dodge the nuclear attacks of the enemy. The situation was complicated by guerrilla action provided by a real "enemy" the green-uniformed Aggressor troops of the 1st Battalion, 339th Regiment, an Eastern Wisconsin unit of the 84th U.S. Army Reserve Training Division.

Active Army, USAR Truckers Team

Also much involved in the on-the-ground operations were trucker teams from both the Active Army and the Reserve Forces. The 531st Transportation Company of Fort Riley, Kan., is here in full strength with 60 of the big tractor-trailer M-52 "rigs" which are rated at 12-ton capacity, and the 336th Transportation Group, U.S. Army Reserve unit with headquarters in Oak Park, Ill., near Chicago has 15 of the M-52 units in action.

* * * * * RESERVE FORCES SIGNAL CORPS UNITS TO BEGIN WIG WAG II HERE MONDAY

U. S. Army Signal Corps Reserve units of the Midwest will swing into field operations Monday in Exercise Wig Wag II, a "replay" of the communications problem conducted here two weeks ago under the supervision of Fifth U. S. Army Signal Section. The operation involves establishing a communications network—telephone, radio and teletype, for a Field Army across a wide front and in depth.

ARMY SALUTES TRANSPORTATION, MEDICAL, JA, CHAPLAINS CORPS BIRTHDAYS

* * * * *

The U. S. Army this month salutes four service branches which observe anniversaries in July. The three oldest—Medical, Chaplains and Judge Advocate Corps -- are observing their 185th Anniversaries next week. The Transportation Corps will mark its 18th birthday. Congratulatory messages from Lt. Gen. William H. Arnold, commanding general of Fifth U.S. Army to each of the services follows:

Army Medical Corps

Over the span of the history of the Army, the Medical Corps has provided services of vital importance to the American fighting man. Whether combating the ravages of illness or caring for the wounded on the battlefield, members of the Corps have never failed to meet the challenge. Through its constant research activities, the Corps has been responsible for many significant medical advances which not only increased the effectiveness of the Army but greatly contributed to the overall health of the nation.

Corps of Chaplains

Since its inception, the Corps faithfully served the spiritual needs of the American Soldiers of all faiths. The deeds of heroism and self-sacrifice of individual members of the Corps are reflected throughout the official records of the Army. Today, as in the past, the Army Chaplain continues to bring to the American Fighting Man the moral strength that can come only from faith—so essential in the present day struggle to maintain our Nation's freedom.

Judge Advocate General's Corps

For 185 years, the Judge Advocate General's Corps faithfully served both the Army and the individual soldier, ever maintaining the highest standards of military law and the American precepts of justice. As a result, the United States Army has attained a notable state of discipline and personal conduct, unique in military history.

Transportation Corps

During the Corps's short but significant history, it has played a key role in the successful accomplishment of the Army's mission in two major conflicts. Through its extensive program of research and development, the Corps continually provides new techniques and equipment with which to meet the formidable challenge of mobility on the modern atomic battlefield. Of particular importance have been the advances made in Army Aviation, an essential element of the Modern Army's fighting team.

To all four services, General Arnold concluded: "The men and women of Fifth U.S. Army join me in extending best wishes for continued success."

Religion Today

WORK AND PRAY FOR PEACE

By Chaplain (Lt.Col.) O.W.Olsen

Peace is a crucial problem today. It towers above most all others for our attention.

After one of the many heart-breaking battles fought in the South Pacific during World War II, an American soldier had been fatally burned by an enemy flame thrower. He was receiving spiritual comfort from a Chaplain who knelt at his side.

From the dying soldier came this profound, whispered observation: "I guess we have too much chemistry and not enough Christ."

I am not sure we have too much physics, too much engineering, too much science, but I do know we do not have enough of the spirit of Christ.

If we are concerned about lasting peace, we must be concerned enough about it to work for it. Among other things, these four are suggested as necessary as we work and pray for peace: (1) We should be informed citizens; (2) We should have a concern for the state of the world; (3) We Should Pray; and (4) We should live our faith.

peak population for the summer training season, with the arrival of the "Ozark" men of the 102nd Division.

In addition to the Missouri and Illinois men assigned to the "Pentomic" 102nd, the Division is to be "beefed up" by an anticipated 1,000 or more "obligors" attached for the summer encampment.

Veterans of the "Ozark" Division includes some old timers who have attended every summer camp since the outfit was activated as a USAR element in 1947.

The Division's World War II combat record was highlighted by a spectacular dash from the Roer to the Rhine rivers in the early spring of 1945 in which "Ozark" men took 86 towns. The Division was engaged in mopping up operations in the vicinity of the Elbe River.

General Harrison served as a staff officer in the European Theater of Operations during the War, becoming G-4 of U. S. Third Army under General Patton with the grade of colonel. He became Chief of Staff in 1948, assumed command of the 102nd Division Artillery in 1952, and was assigned to command the Division in February, 1958.

The Division has Infantry Battle Groups based in Fairfield, Danville, and Quincy, Ill., Kansas City and St. Louis, Mo. The 102nd Division Artillery has its headquarters in St. Louis.

Major General John S. Guthrie, commanding general of XIV U.S. Army Corps.

The five generals visited organizations of special interest to them. General Mead was here to observe "Operation Dry Run," a command post exercise involving units of the 363rd Civil Affairs Area Headquarters.

Generals Canham, Griffin and Guthrie were looking over training activities of units of their respective Corps.

General Parker's interest was in troops of Fort Riley and the 1st Infantry Division which are here this summer in support of the Reserve Forces summer training.

84TH DIV. RAILSPLITTERS
REAL GUZZLERS--OF MILK

This one isn't hard to figure.

The outfit which drank more milk than any other at Camp Mc Coy last week was the 84th Division. The Railsplitter Division Food Service Section said the men of the 84th swallowed 63,000 quarts during the first week of their summer encampment.

It's easy to figure out because, of course, the 3,500 cadremen of the USAR training outfit are all from Wisconsin. The Badger State is famed as "America's Dairyland." The young men of the 84th know what's a good thing for their bones and muscles.

Some 3,500 Reserve "obligors" are attached to the 84th this year for training. They come from all over the Fifth Army area, but they "got the word."

"Drink your milk buddy, it's good for you." All 63,000 quarts.

"Searchlight" Extended

Operation "Searchlight", the U.S. Army's cash-for-ideas proposition which is saving millions for the government and putting a lot of thousands of dollars in soldiers' pockets has been extended until the end of December. If you have a bright idea of how to do it better, quicker, more economically, see your Operation "Searchlight" Officer.

General Kreml Invites Veteran,
Near Retirement, to Review
425th Highway Command Troops

Col. Nathan Boruszak of Whitefish Bay, near Milwaukee, commanding officer of the 323rd Logistical Command, was given pre-retirement honors last Saturday.

Col. Boruszak, who will end a military career of nearly four decades at the end of July, was at the head of his Milwaukee Logistical Command troops for a review with other units of the 425th Highway Transportation Command, prepared to march past his CG, Brig. Gen. Franklin M. Kreml.

Gen. Kreml had other ideas. The famed Chicago transportation and traffic authority called Col. Boruszak to his side, explained to the assembled troops that the veteran Reservist was near retirement, and placed his subordinate unit commander at the position of honor on the right. From there Col. Boruszak, who was commissioned in 1923, saw his last command march in review for perhaps the last time.

Earlier Saturday, the 323rd, organized only a little more than a year, had received its official unit colors, sent from the Department of the Army Quartermaster's Heraldry Section in time for the review.

This week the 323rd, with the other units attached to the 425th Highway Command, has spent all of its time in the field taking part in Exercise "Hauler III."
