THUMBS UP

To Riley Lescalleet for turning in money found in front of Kwaj Lodge where there were bikes parked for the Veterans Day ceremony Nov. 11. Good job!

To tree trimmers who worked last weekend carefully trimming coconuts and palm fronds around potted plants and fences. They also did a great job at stacking the trimmings in a tidy way. — New housing resident

Kwajalein Range Services holds appreciation day for employees

Article and photos by Sheila Bigelow
Managing Editor

Kwajalein Range Services values all their employees and to show their appreciation, they held a combination Employee Appreciation Day and Safety Day for all KRS employees Nov. 13 at Emon Beach.

In usual Kwaj-fashion, the day started with a nice torrential downpour. By 2 p.m. it finally died down and employees were able to take part in all the exciting activities lined up for the day.

Numerous booths were set up along the beach with safety and information stations from various departments on island. The Small Boat Marina held their Safety Stand Down for those with B-boat licenses. Anyone with a boat license has to take the safety class before they can go out on the water. KRS Environmental department was informing employees about protected species in Kwajalein Atoll, with a focus on turtles. Beth Wiggins manned the Kwajalein Police Department booth, going over Regulation 190-5 about bicycle safety. She handed out bicycle safety checklists in both English and Marshallese to employees. Torrey Landers from the little steps...BIG DIFFERENCE Wellness Program encouraged employees to sign a recipe pledge where they vowed to prepare one healthy recipe from the handout at least one time per week for one month. Human Resources was passing out information about FCE Benefits and Open Enrollment that is ongoing. Marion Ruffing was in attendance distributing information about her smoking cessation classes, alcohol awareness and various brochures about family and personal health. Kinley Goodman from KRS Food Safety gave all employees a valuable tip on how to prevent food sickness – wash your hands frequently. The Kwajalein Dental Office handed out lip balm with SPF and chewing gum that helps keep your teeth strong. Nurses from the Kwajalein Hospital were taking employees' blood pressure. Sherry Olsen from the Kwajalein Fire Department gave a safety briefing on fire extinguisher safety and then participants got a chance to put out an actual fire with an extinguisher. Scott Phillips, Supervisor of Explosive Ordnance Disposal, displayed examples of unexploded ordnance, informing employees on what to look out for and how to handle UXO if found. Phillips also showcased the Andros mini-robot that can get into tight spaces for remote operations.

All KRS employees that participated in the day's events got a stamp at each station. Once their stamp card was full it was entered into a drawing for prizes to be awarded at the end of the day. Also,

KRS employees had the opportunity to attend a safety briefing on fire extinguishers and then got to practice putting out a controlled fire.

YYWC basket auction raises money to assist outer islands

Article and photos by Sheila Bigelow

The Yokwe Yuk Women's Club Silent Basket Auction has been a tradition on Kwajalein for years and years and for a good reason. All proceeds from the auction go to benefit the Outer Island Christmas which too has become a Kwajalein tradition looked forward to by many. This year was no different.

The Silent Basket Auction was held Monday in the Davye Davis Multi-purpose room at Kwajalein High School. Kwajalein residents donated baskets of goods or services to be auctioned off for charity. Guests began arriving around 7 p.m. and the silent auction was officially kicked off at 7:30 p.m. But first, YYWC president Ruth Quigley took the stage to welcome everyone to the event.

Quigley welcomed everyone, especially those that were there for the first time, like her. "I'd like to thank you for supporting the YYWC

Participants at the YYWC Silent Basket Auction bid on baskets in the MP Room Monday evening.

Live auction items included a beautifully handcrafted 'Kwajalein T-shirt Quilt' made by Cindy Westhoff that ended up being sold for $1,000. Kwajalein clubs donated their t-shirts for the cause. There was also a Valentine's Day 2011 dinner donated by Charles Harjo and Norm Sablas. The dinner sold for $950.

and the Christmas Drop, which is our chance to deliver supplies to some of the outer islands that don't have as much access as some of the other islands." A slideshow was set up so those participating in the auction could see photos of previous Christmas Drops; it's important to see that your donation makes a difference. Quigley thanked the chairperson for the Christmas Drop, Lisa Ansley, for all her hard work in organizing the purchase and delivery of the supplies. "I love that people from all over the community contributed items. It's really nice to see such a great showing from Kwajalein. You guys are some creative, talented people."

Quigley introduced Al Robinson as the auctioneer. Robinson went over the timeline of events for the evening and some rules for bidding.

There was a lot of variety in the baskets this year. A lot of them were geared toward food and included items such as olives, cheesecake, tea, coffee, beer, sushi, cupcakes and chocolate. There were also sports baskets including golf, fishing, tumbling and SCUBA. There were plenty of entertainment baskets like the 'Movie Lovers.' There were baskets filled with goods from places around the world like Hawaii, Bali and Micronesia. There were some first-timer baskets like 'Pillowcases for a Year' donated by Jennifer Nelson. Judy Shimamoto donated her ever-popular 'Healthy Smiles' baskets with all sorts of dental goodies. When it comes to the basket auction, it's all about presentation and the ladies of the YYWC clearly have experience with it. The baskets looked amazing; it was hard not to bid on all of them, although I'm pretty sure some people did. Robinson continued to give tips on bidding throughout the evening, encouraging couples to team up and come up with a plan of attack. But he also cautioned that when finished bidding, "please step away from the tables and give your enemies a chance to bid." Luckily, bidders remained civil and the evening was fun, social and whimsical.

Ansley took the stage to give some detail on what exactly the Outer Island Christmas is and what the money collected that evening goes toward. Ansley explained that logistically, the Outer Island Christmas is difficult to plan and carry out. The islands of Ebaddon and Majetto are two of the more populated islands in Kwajalein Atoll but are not resupplied on a regular basis; the islands are mostly self-sufficient. But each year, the donated items the YYWC brings to each island help immensely. The YYWC takes the money donated at the Silent Basket Auction each year and use that money toward supplies for the Christmas Drop the following year; the supplies are purchased and assembled over the summer. Supplies given are environmentally-friendly cloth backpacks with school supplies, flip flops, underwear, personal hygiene items and toys. There are a few wonderful women that live on Kwajalein that hand-make cloth baby bags with baby supplies inside. Besides the backpacks, community items are also supplied. This year, they gave 12-foot fishing nets for each island, medical supplies, cloth and other items that can be put to good use. Ansley thanked USAKA for their continued support and thanked all the volunteers who donated items or services to be auctioned off; finally, she thanked everyone for spending their money and giving for such a special cause.

Besides the silent auction, the live auction was an exciting part of the evening. The first live auction item was a beautifully handcrafted 'Kwajalein T-shirt Quilt' made by Cindy Westhoff. It was a King-size quilt showcasing twenty t-shirts by Kwaj organizations surrounded by a flip-flop border from Australia. All Kwaj organizations graciously donated t-shirts to Westhoff for the quilt. Bidding started off a little slow but Robinson quickly got the crowd into it. Numerous hands popped up into the air to bid and slowly it dwindled down to the same two or three battling it out for the win. At $800 it seemed like it was over but Mark Long threw in a last-minute bid of $850. But in the end, Melissa Heilman won the quilt with a bid of $1,000.

Next was the 'Valentine's Day Dinner' donated by Charles Harjo and Norm Sablas. It was for a romantic evening on Valentines' Day 2011 for up to six people. The meal will be specially prepared by certified chef and pastry chef Harjo with assistance from Sablas. The bidding started off quickly and it made you wonder if they only fed you cheese, fruit and bread so that when you bid on the dinner auction item, you may be willing to spend a little more; it's like going grocery shopping on an empty stomach. Robinson encouraged the bidding war and in the end Michael Quigley snagged the dinner for $950.

Quigley once again took the stage to give thanks. She thanked KRS Retail Services for providing the cheese, fruit, bread, spreads and beverages, even in the midst of their bakery renovation. Quigley thanked Robinson for being the auctioneer and keeping the evening on schedule. Finally, she thanked those that donated a basket. "Some of the baskets are honestly stunning. I read through the pamphlet before I came here, but when I actually saw some of the things, it exceeded my expectations." She thanked everyone for coming out and supporting the YYWC and the Outer Island Christmas.

Finally, the basket winners were announced. The room filled with anticipation; some hoped that their planning, plotting, scheming and last minute bids were enough to win. Others hoped to get lucky with the raffle prizes. First, the raffle winners were picked. The raffle prizes this year were amazing; Jayne Cavendar donated 'Island Stained Glass' which was won by Gary Duff. Song Banducci had bought so many raffle tickets she almost lost her chance to claim her prize when she won the 'Island Batik' donated by Denise Dorn. But she wasn't the only one; some people bought so many raffle tickets they wore them around their necks as an accessory to their outfit. Finally, the beautiful 'Island Photo' donated by John Breen was won by Susannah Hall.

Next, Robinson read aloud who won the baskets and for how much. While some baskets only went for less than $100, there were a few baskets that were so popular that night they went for a couple hundred. The basket raking in the most dough of the evening was the 'Chicken on Sunday Basket' donated by Kris Kovas which was won for $750. The next highest basket of the evening was the Deep Sea Fishing Trip for up to four people donated by Les Czinege; hand-lines and lures were donated by Joe Theriault and Billy Traweck. The third highest basket of the evening was the 'One Year Supply of Dark Chocolate' donated by Kevin Skinner. That was won by Dave Norwood who quickly commented that, "My wife loves chocolate and I love my wife!"

The event was a success, just as it has been in previous years. In the end, the evening raised over $11,000. A million thank you's to everyone that donated or purchased a basket. Also, thank you to the auction volunteers who were Peggy Basset, Karen Brady, Adrienne Chavis, Jennifer Cossey, Paula Eggert, Donna Grimes, DeDe Hall, Kris Kovas, Heather Mayer, Jennifer Nelson, Dave and Jenny Norwood, AnnElise Peterson, Ruth Quigley, Marc and Cynthia Rivera, Al Robinson, Jane Russell, Jane Seelye, Dick Shields, Sarah Stepchew, Nona Stephens, Lauren Traweck, Tonya Thompson and Jennifer Yezek.

U.S. Ambassador to the Republic of the Marshall Islands, the honorable Martha Campbell, unveils the 'Democracy in the Marshall Islands' historical display at the Marshallese Cultural Center Nov. 12.

Ambassador Martha Campbell visits Kwajalein, Carlos, Ebeye

U.S. Ambassador to the Republic of the Marshall Islands, the honorable Martha Campbell, visited Kwajalein Atoll last week and accomplished numerous endeavors during her visit.

Campbell served as the guest keynote speaker for the Veterans Day ceremony Nov. 11. That afternoon, she and several USAKA staff members visited the island of Carlos. That was Campbell's first visit to that island. Accompanied by COL Joseph Gaines and some members of the USAKA staff, Ambassador Campbell was met at the Carlos pier by residents of Carlos. The party was presented with leis. They headed for a tour of the Carlos power plant. From there, they visited the Carlos Elementary school where they were greeted by the students and teachers of the school. Campbell spoke briefly to the community thanking them for welcoming her to Carlos. The party was treated to fresh coconuts. A brief tour of the village ensued with stops at some of the residences where Gaines showed Campbell some of the water catchment systems that had been installed by the RMI government. The party departed Carlos Island with a brief stop at the Prinz Eugen before heading to Kwajalein.

While on Kwajalein, Campbell took the time to unveil the 'Democracy in the Marshall Islands' historical display democracy posters. The display was donated by the U.S. Embassy in Majuro through a group called Mission Pacific. The poster display illustrates some of the history of democracy in the Marshall Islands and it will be utilized for educational purposes here on Kwajalein. Joining Campbell for the unveiling were Newton Lajuan from the Alele Museum in Majuro, Herbert Alfred, the vice-president of the Marshallese Cultural Society and staff of the RMI

Liaison Office, Jabkol Harry.

Campbell thanked the employees who volunteered at the Marshallese Cultural Center who were in attendance that day.

"This is a great museum up here," Campbell boasted. She explained that there were several goals to this project. "One was to try to preserve some of the historical documents and fantastic photos that tell the very rich story of the development of democratic government in the Marshall Islands." Another goal was to make the pictures and documents available for the education of Kwajalein and Marshallese residents and "to celebrate this young and thriving democracy that is the Marshall Islands," Campbell continued.

Many of the photos and documents in the Marshallese Cultural Center are priceless and irreplaceable. The volunteers work very hard to catalogue and maintain as many historical documents that they can; they work to preserve them, protect them and try to restore many of them to their original condition. Another goal of this project was to inspire and renew the appreciation for the democratic heritage of the Marshall Islands and in turn, hopefully inspire people to bring more photographs and documents forward, which need to be preserved and digitized.

At that, Campbell unveiled the democracy posters and the group in attendance took some time to look it over carefully and closely.

Campbell also visited Ebeye Nov. 10 to visit with Mela Langibelang, who is teaching an American Sign Language class to Marshallese students and their parents. Langibelang's class is funded by a grant from the U.S. Embassy in Majuro. Langibelang was born on Ebeye and developed hearing loss at a young age. She attended Galudet University in Washington, D.C. and is now back on Ebeye teaching the four-month long class. Campbell visited her class of about 20-25 students while on Ebeye.

The 'Democracy in the Marshall Islands' historical display was unveiled Nov. 12 at the Marshallese Cultural Center on Kwajalein.

while taking in the information at each booth, participants had the chance to sign up for individual prizes that were donated by various KRS employees. Prizes included a dental hygiene kit, gift certificates for various Scuba or snorkel gear, a hand-made ceramic mug, gift certificate for a fitness class, gift certificate for the hobby shop, Buckminster and Friends greeting cards, beaded Christmas earrings, Scuba Club t-shirts and Sassy Artist jewelry.

KRS kicked it up a notch with some fun and games. A basketball competition was held by the Namo Weto Youth Center. Participants got to shoot 'around the world,' with five basketballs at five different stations. The four participants with the most baskets made at the end of the day won a brand-new basketball. One of the other exciting events was the 'Barrel Push' organized by the Kwajalein Fire Department. Teams of three faced off, dressed in fire jackets, helmets and face shields. A bright blue barrel was attached to a cable that ran above the contestants. The objective was to push the barrel to the opposing team's marker first and fast using the streaming water from the fire hose. To make it fair, each team switched sides for round number two; there seemed to be one lucky side for most competitors.

Dave Norwood, KRS president, also handed out 36 $25 AAFES gift certificates, 10 $50 AAFES gift certificates, five $75 AAFES gift certificates and four $100 gift certificates. At the very end of the day, Norwood announced the winners of the grand prizes. All KRS employees were eligible and did not need to be present to win. Jeremy Navarre, of the San Leandro office, was the winner of a Nintendo Wii gaming system and Kamea Konne was the winner of a brand-new Sun bicycle. Elaine Kibbon was the lucky winner of the day, scoring some Christmas cards, an AAFES gift card and a gift certificate for Scuba gear.

To wrap up the day, Norwood thanked all the employees for attending and for working so hard. "Thanks for coming today. We do appreciate you."

Scott Phillips, Supervisor of Explosive Ordnance Disposal, displays examples of unexploded ordnance, informing employees on what to look out for and how to handle UXO if found.
