Shaving Cream Social one of the oldest traditions on Kwajalein

Article and photos by Sheila Bigelow
Managing Editor

Kwajalein is known for its unique and long-practiced traditions. The Shaving Cream Social is one of them, and also happens to be one of the oldest; it is even older than the Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony.

The Shaving Cream Social is usually the kick-off for Halloween celebrations. This year the social was directed by Mandie Morris, Recreation Manager, who dressed in her skull t-shirt and funky purple wig, really getting the kids into the Halloween spirit. Halloween and dance music was also played to keep the momentum of the event in high gear.

This year over 250 Kwajalein youths came out in their bathing suits, rash guards, goggles and hats, ready to be covered from head to toe in white, frothy lather.

Each grade or age group was given 10 to 20 minutes to play in what is now known as the "Rich Ravine." The little ones, in pre-school, were accompanied by a parent and their children made sure that they got in on the fun too. Some parents welcomed the attack of wet children covered in shaving cream while others tried their best to dodge their attempts to smear them with the white stuff, most not succeeding.

The next group up was Kindergarten through second grade, followed by third grade through sixth grade, and finally all junior and senior high school students. It seemed no matter the age, and no matter the grade, each group had just as much fun as the one before it.

Lifeguards were present in the water at all times to be sure all kids behaved and were safe; Carrie West sat at the edge of the ravine with a fire hose, spraying it up in the air so the kids could rinse their faces and bodies off when their turn was over. Some enjoyed this aspect as much as the shaving cream.

Most kids were carefree — running, splashing, laughing and enjoying the 20 minutes of wild freedom as they tried to smear as much shaving cream on their friends as they could. Others were a little more timid and stayed toward the edges of the ravine, running wildly when a classmate came toward them, can in hand, ready to push the trigger. But there were also some kids that loved the shaving cream so much they even smeared it on their own heads and bodies until they could barely see out of their goggles.

What a great event to have on Kwaj, where your ride home is your bicycle and if it gets covered in shaving cream on the way home, rest assured a rain shower is not too far off in the distance to rinse off your ride.

As always, the event was a fun-filled kick-off for the Halloween weekend; one that kids, parents and friends all enjoyed, either by participating or spectating.

Youth Center haunted house a fright for Kwajalein youngsters

By Sheila Bigelow
Managing Editor

Skeletons, ghosts and ghouls, knights and pirates fighting duels, werewolves rising from their tombs, witches on their magic brooms. That and more could be found at the Namo Weto Youth Center Sunday afternoon during the annual Haunted House and Carnival put on by the Kwajalein High School Keystone Club.

High school students dressed up in their scariest and silliest costumes this weekend to throw the fun party for the younger kids on Kwajalein.

If the haunted house was too scary for you, there was plenty more to keep you occupied and more importantly, having fun. There were numerous different games and crafts. Bobbing for Apples is a Halloween past time, but not for this generation. No, they tried a newer version — Dangling Donuts. Donuts were hung from a string; the kids laid down underneath them and tried to gobble them off the string without using their hands. It was fun for the kids and for those spectating.

Later in the afternoon, after all the games and fun, the annual Costume Parade was held outside in front of the youth center. Parents, siblings and friends lined the building as the kids made their way in a large circle, showing off their best get-ups this year. Attending was Scooby Doo, Superman, Darth Vader, Princess Leia, Thomas the Train, princesses and many more.

Tyler Stepchew gets into the Halloween-scaring-spirit at the Youth Center haunted house Sunday.

The costume parade is the most fun part of the afternoon.

John Sholar and Alexis Nelson read Halloween tales to Kwajalein youths at the teen center.

Scooby, Batman and Superman are just some of the characters in this year's Costume Parade.

Hannah Finley is ready to set sail on the high seas.

Malkie Loeak is ready to attend his ghoulish wedding. The orange wig adds a nice touch.

Alakai Chavana, Jenna Gray and Dominic Leines are hungry for dangling donuts.

Shaving Cream Madness

What shaving cream on my head?

Alex Crawford carefully rations out his shaving cream; he has a lot of friends to smear it on.

Somebody was a smart cookie for wearing a hat to protect his head against shaving cream attacks.

Dad lends a helping hand.

Is she running away from a shaving cream attacker or running to cream a friend? Either way, she looks happy doing it.

These two girls are ready to battle it out with shaving cream as their weapons.

Kwajalein/Roi Veterans

The Hourglass wants to honor your service to America. We would like to take your photo and get your branch of service, years that you served and last rank held. Your photo will be published in our Veterans Day issue. Please stop by our office in the AFN studio (upstairs next to the library) in Building 805. Our hours are 7:30-11:30 a.m. and 12:30-4:30 p.m. If you participated last year and would like to use the same information and photo, please send an e-mail stating so to hourglass@smdck.smdc.army.mil. Once again, thank you for your service.
